Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and his name will be called Immanuel. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse evil and choose the good. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, both Israel and Judah shall be forsaken of both her kings. And his preaching shall bring light to the land of Zebulun and Naphtali; and there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch (the Righteous Branch) shall grow out of his roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, even the spirit of wisdom and understanding, of counsel and might, of knowledge and the fear of the Lord. And he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the world with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. And in that day the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And in that day the root of Jesse shall stand for an ensign of the people; to him shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious. And in that day the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people from Assyria, and Egypt and Pathios and Cush; and from Elam and Shinar and Hamath; and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble and gather together the outcasts of Israel, and the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. And the envy of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. And in that day, the voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, saying, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places smooth (plain). And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it. Behold, thus saith the Lord, Behold my servant, whom I uphold, mine elect, in whom my Soul delighteth, I shall put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgement to the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up his voice, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street. A bruised reed shall he not break, and a smoking flax shall he not quench; he shall bring forth judgement unto truth. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he hath set judgement in the earth; and the nations of the isles shall wait for his law. Moreover, he shall grow up as a tender plant, as a root out of a dry ground; and when men shall see him, it is not for his appearance that they should desire him (but for his Spirit). He shall be despised and rejected of men — a man of sorrows, acquainted with afflictions and grief; and as it were, men would hide their faces from him; men shall despise him, and esteem him not; for surely he shall bear their griefs, and carry their sorrows, yet they would esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. Wounded of their transgressions, such men in the past were bruised for their iniquities; by their chastisement men were comforted, and by whose stripes they were healed. For all like sheep have gone astray, they have turned every one to his own way, the Lord laid on them the iniquity of all men. Such men were oppressed, and they were afflicted, yet they opened not their mouth concerning this thing. They were as it were lambs to the slaughter, as sheep before their shearer are dumb. They were taken from prison and from judgement, and who can declare their procreation? For they were cut off from the world of the living, and for the transgressions of the people were they stricken. They made their grave with the wicked when they lived, and with the rich upon their death; because they had done no violence against God, neither was there any deceit in their mouth. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise them, to put them to grief. And when ye shall make his soul an offering for sin, your seed shall be blessed, he shall prolong their days; and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. He shall see the travail of their soul, and shall be satisfied. And by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities, saith the Lord; therefore, will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong. And because he didst pour out his Soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors, he didst bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

Moreover, Isaiah the prophet of the Lord was blessed with the Holy Spirit, because the Lord hath anointed him to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and to open the prisons to them that are bound; to comfort all that mourn; and to appoint unto them their portion that mourn in Zion; to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; and also to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, of the vengeance of our God; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified. The Lord God hath given him the tongue of the learned, that he should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary. Isaiah was not rebellious, but meek and humble, for he gave his back to the smiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off his hair; nor did he hide his face with shame, when they spit upon his face. Now, this is an abridgement of the words of Isaiah the prophet, who served under four kings of Judah:

WORDS OF ISAIAH

(Prophet of the Lord, during the reigns of Uzziah or Azariah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah)

The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for the Lord hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me. The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. Ah, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters! They have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward.

Why should ye be stricken any more? Ye will revolt more and more; the whole head is sick, the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, bruises, and putrefying sores; which have not been closed, neither bound nor mollified with ointment. Your country is desolate, your cities are burned with fire; your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, overthrown by strangers. And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city. Except the Lord of Hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom and as Gomorrah. Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah. To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord; I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and fat of the fed beasts; but I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he-goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot abide with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. With your new moons and your appointed feasts my Soul is vexed; they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear; for your hands are full of blood.

Wash yourselves, make ye clean; put away your evil doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil, learn to do good; seek judgement, relieve the oppressed; plead the cause of the widow and the orphan. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be scarlet, they shall be made as white as snow; though they be as red as crimson, they shall be made as wool. If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.

And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord. Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty. The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be brought down; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the idols he shall utterly abolish. And they shall hide themselves into the holes of the rocks, into the caves of the earth; for the fear of the Lord shall come upon them, and the glory of his majesty shall shake terribly the earth, when he ariseth. In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver and gold which he made for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats. Therefore trust not in the arm of flesh, and cease to depend on any mortal man; for he is of little power compared to God. For, behold, the Lord, the Lord of Hosts, doth take away from Jerusalem and Judah the stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread and water; the mighty man, and the man of war, the judge, the prophet, the prudent, and the ancient; the captain of fifty and the honorable man, the counsellor, the cunning artificer, and the eloquent orator.

And I will give children to be their princes, and the servants shall rule their masters. The people shall be oppressed, every one by another, and every one by his neighbor; the child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient, and the base against the honorable. When a man shall take hold of a brother of his tribe, saying, Thou hast clothing, be thou our ruler, and let this ruin be under thy hand; in that day shall he swear, saying, I will not be a binder up (of your wounds); for in my house is neither bread nor clothing, make me not a ruler of the people. For Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen, because their tongue and their doings were against the Lord, and they provoked him to his wrath and fury.

Yea, the shew of their countenance doth witness against them; and they declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not. Woe unto their soul!

For they reward evil unto themselves. Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him, for they shall eat the fruit of their doings (deeds). Woe unto the wicked! It shall be ill with him, for the thorns and thistles shall prick his soul. As for my people, children are their oppressors and women rule over them. O my people, those that lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths. The Lord standeth up to plead, and to judge the people. The Lord will enter into judgement with the ancients of his people, and their princes; for ye have eaten up the vineyard, the spoil of the poor is in your houses. What mean ye that ye beat my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor? saith the Lord God of Hosts.

Moreover the Lord saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks, and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet; therefore he will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the Lord will discover their secret parts. In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments, their cauls, and their crescent moons; their chains, bracelets and mufflers; their bonnets, the headbands, the tablets, the earrings, the hand rings, and leg rings, and nose jewels; their resplendent garments and mantles, their whimples and crisping pins; their glasses and fine linen, the hoods and vails. And it shall come to pass, that instead of a sweet smell, there shall be stink; instead of a girdle, rags; instead of well set hair, lice and baldness; instead of a robe, a sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty. Thy men shall fall by the sword, and thy mighty in the war; her gates shall lament and mourn, and she being desolate shall sit upon the ground.

And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach. In that day shall the Branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem. When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgement, and by the spirit of burning, the Lord will create upon every dwelling place of mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day and a pillar of fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defense.

In the year that Uzziah (or Azariah) died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim; each one had six wings -- with twain he covered his face, with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, saying, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hosts, the whole earth is full of his glory! And the posts of the door shook at the voice that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. Then said I, Woe is me! For I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, that dwelleth in the midst of a people of unclean lips; and now mine own eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts.

Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with tongs from off the altar; and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sins purged. Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I (Isaiah), Here am I, send me. And he said, Go, and tell this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand ye not; and see ye indeed, but perceive ye not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, hear with their ears, understand with their mind; and repent with their heart, and be healed. Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitants, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate; until the Lord have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land. But yet in it shall be a tenth, and it shall return; as a lime tree, and as an oak, whose substance remaineth in them, although they cast their leaves; so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof; the rest shall be eaten or cast away.

And it came to pass in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it. And it was told the king of Judah that Syria is confederate with Ephraim. And the heart of Ahaz was troubled, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

Then said the Lord unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and Shearjashub thy son, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field. And say unto him, Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither be faint-hearted, for the two tails of these smoking fire-brands, for the fierce anger of Rezin the Syrian and the son of Remaliah. Because Syria, and Ephraim, even the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, Let us go up against Judah, and vex it; and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal. But it shall not come to pass, nor shall it stand, saith the Lord; for the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin, three score and five years shall not pass away that Ephraim shall be broken, that it be not a people; for the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. And if ye shall not believe, surely ye shall not be established.

Moreover, the Lord spake unto Ahaz, saying, Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in depth, or height, or across. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David, Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary thy God also? Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign. Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and call his name Immanuel (meaning the Faithful of God). Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings.

Moreover, the Lord said unto me, Take thee a large scroll, and write in it with man's pen concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz. And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, Uriah the priest and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah. And I went unto the prophetess; and she conceived, and bare a son. Then said the Lord to me, Call his name Maher-shalal-hash-baz; for before the child shall have learned to say, My father, and my mother, the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away by the king of Assyria.

The Lord spake also unto me again, saying, The people that once walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined. They have multiplied the nation, and not increased the joy; their joy is according to the joy in harvest, and they rejoice as men when they divide the spoil. And for they have broken the yoke of the Lord, and the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his just chastisement, as in the day of the Midian, every battle is with tumult and confusion, and garments rolled in blood; but this one shall be with burning and fuel of fire.

Behold, unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of Judah, and upon his eternal kingdom; to put it in order, to establish it with judgement and with justice; from henceforth, and forever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform it.

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, even the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord. And it shall make him of quick understanding in the works of the Lord; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor; and reprove with equity the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and Faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

And in that day the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox; the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp; and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. Yet shall they not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall become full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. And, in that day, the root of Jesse shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious. And in that day thou shalt say, O Lord, I will praise thee; though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me. Behold, God is my salvation. I will trust and not be afraid; for the LORD JEHOVAH (Adhonai Yahweh) is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. And in that day shall ye say, Praise the Lord, call upon his name; declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted. Sing unto the Lord, for he hath done excellent things, and this is known in all the earth. Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion, for great is the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.

Come near; ye nations, to hear; and hearken, ye people; let the earth hear, and all that is therein. For the indignation of the Lord is upon all nations, and his fury upon all their armies; he hath ordained for them utter destruction, and hath delivered them to the slaughter. Their slain shall rot in the fields, and their stink shall come up out of their carcasses; and the mountains shall be covered with blood. And the hosts of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; and their hosts shall fall down, as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a fallen fig from the fig-tree. For my sword shall be bathed in heaven; behold, it shall come down upon Idumea (the land of the Edomites) and the people of my curse, to judgement. The sword of the Lord is filled with blood, it is made fat with fatness, with the blood of lambs and goats, and with the fat of the kidneys of rams; for the Lord hath a sacrifice at Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.

The wild ox shall come down with them, and the bullocks with the bulls; and their land shall be soaked with blood, and their dust made fat with fatness. For it is the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompense for the controversy of Zion. And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up forever, from generation to generation it shall lie waste, none shall ever pass through it. The cormorant and the heron (bittern) shall possess it; the owl and the raven shall dwell in it; and the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness shall stretch out upon it. They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none of their princes shall be left to come. And thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof; and it shall become the habitation of dragons, and the court for owls. The wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with the wild beasts of the island, and the Satyr shall cry to his fellow (in his riotous merriment and lasciviousness); the screech-owl also shall rest there, and find for herself a place of rest. There the great-owl shall make her nest, and lay, hatch, and gather under her shadow; and vultures also shall be gathered there, every one with her mate.

Therefore, seek ye nations out of the book of the Lord, and read; for no one of these things shall fail. The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose; it shall blossom abundantly, and shall rejoice with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon and the excellency of Carmel and Sharon shall be given unto it; and they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. Strengthen ye the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not; behold, your God will come with vengeance, and also with a recompense; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped; then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing. For in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams shall flow in the desert. And the parched ground shall be made a pool, and a thirsty land springs of water. In the habitations of the dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes. And an Highway shall be there, and a Way, and it shall be called, The Way of holiness and righteousness; the unclean shall not pass over it; no lion shall dwell there, nor any ravenous beast shall fly up there; it shall not be found. But the redeemed shall walk there; and the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein. And the ransomed of the Lord shall dwell in Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain peace, love, joy, compassion, and gladness; sorrow and woe shall flee away.

Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished; that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God. Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places smooth. And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. And a voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is like the grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as that of the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, and the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; surely the people is likened to the grass; for as the grass, it withereth and fadeth away; but the Word of our God shall stand forever. O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain. O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid. Say unto the cities of Judah, Behold, your God, even the Lord God, will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. He shall feed his flock like a shepherd; he shall gather the lambs with his arms; and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young.

Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance? Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellor hath taught him? With whom took he counsel, and who instructed him, and taught him the Path of righteousness and judgement, and taught him knowledge, and shewed him the Way of understanding? Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance; behold, he taketh up the isles as a very little thing. And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for burnt offering. All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing; for they are lusts, vanities, delusions, deaths, and sufferings. To whom then will ye liken our God? Or what likeness will ye compare unto him? The workman casteth a graven image, and the goldsmith covereth it with gold-leaf, and casteth silver chains. He that is so impoverished that he hath no oblation chooseth a tree that will not rot; he seeketh unto him a cunning workman to prepare a graven image that shall not be moved. Have ye not known? Have ye not heard? Hath it not been told you from the beginning? Have ye not understood from the foundations of the earth? It is he that sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers; that stretcheth out the heavens as a curtain, and spreadeth them out as a tent to dwell in; he that bringeth princes to nothing; and maketh the judges of the earth as vanity. Yea, they shall not be planted; yea, they shall not be sown; yea, their stock shall not take root in the earth; and he shall blow upon them, and they shall wither, and the whirlwind shall take them away as stubble. To whom then will ye liken me, or shall I be equal? saith the Holy One. Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number; he calleth them all by names, by the greatness of his might; for he is strong in power, and not one faileth.

Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, My way is hid from the Lord, and my judgement is passed over from my God? Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, nor is weary? There is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint, to the humble, and to the meek. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fail; but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.

Keep silence before me, O islands, and let the people renew their strength; let them come near, then let them speak; let us come near together to judgement. Who raised up the righteous man from the east (meaning the king of Assyria and Babylonia); called him to his foot, and gave the nations before him, and made him rule over the kings? He gave them as the dust to his sword, and as driven stubble to his bow. He pursued them, and passed safely, even by the way that he had not gone with his feet. Who hath wrought and done it, calling generation upon generation, from the beginning? I the Lord, the first and the last, I am he. Yea, the isles saw it, and feared; the ends of the earth were afraid; they drew near, and came; they helped every one his neighbor. And each said unto his brother, Be of good courage. So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smoothest with the hammer, him that smote the anvil, saying, It is ready for soldering! And he fastened it with nails, that it should not be moved.

But thou, O Israel, art my servant (not fastened with nails); the seed of Jacob whom I have chosen, the seed of Abraham my friend. Thou whom I have taken from the ends of the earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and said unto thee, Thou art my servant; I have chosen thee, and not cast thee away. Therefore fear thou not; for I am with thee; be thou not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, and help thee; and will uphold thee with my righteous and omnipotent hand.

Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus (Khosrau, Kurush; progenitor of Cyrus I of the Hakhamanish kings of Persia); whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates, and the gates shall not be shut. I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron. And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places; that thou mayest know that I, the Lord, which called thee by thy name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect; I have even called thee by thy name, and have surnamed thee, although thou knewest it not, nor knewest me.

I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me; I girded thee, though thou hast not known me, that they may know from the east to west, that there is none besides me. I am the Lord of Hosts, and there is none else. I form the light, and create darkness; I make peace, and create evil; I the Lord do all these things. Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness; let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the Lord have created it.

Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth. Shall the clay say unto him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? Or thy work, He hath no hands? Woe unto him that saith unto his father, What begettest thou? Or to the woman, What bringeth forth thou? Thus saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me. I have made the earth, and created man upon it. I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded. I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways; he shall build my city, and he shall let go my captives, not for price nor reward, saith the Lord of Hosts.

Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city; for soon there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Therefore shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down, O Jerusalem; loose thyself from the bands of thy neck, O captive daughter of Zion. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that brings glad tidings of salvation and enlightenment; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice, and with one voice shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Break forth into joy, rejoice together, ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord. For ye shall not go out with haste, nor by flight; for the Lord will go before you, and the God of Israel behind you.

Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the living waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; vintage wine, and choice milk, and spicy meat, eat and drink it all without price, and without stint. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not food nor drink? And labor for that which satisfieth not, but keeps you hungry and thirsty. Therefore hearken diligently unto my words, eat ye that which is good, and let your Soul delight in its richness. Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people. Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and the nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

Seek ye the Lord, that he may be found of you; call upon him while he is yet near. Let the wicked forsake his ways, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let each return unto the Lord; and he will have mercy upon him; yea, let him return unto our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

For my thoughts are not as your thoughts, nor are my ways as your ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and the same returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater, so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you in singing, and the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle-tree. And it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off.

Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy lights and truths, and the kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see; all they gather themselves together, they come to thee; thy sons shall come from afar, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then shalt thou see, and flow together; and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged, because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of Gentiles shall come unto thee. The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah. And people from Sheba shall bring gold and incense, and sing praises to the Lord, and rejoice with their instruments of music. The flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, and the rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee. They shall come up with offerings on my altar, and I will accept their sacrifices, and glorify the house of my glory.

Who are these that fly as clouds, and as pigeons to their windows? Surely the isles shall wait for thee, and the ships of Tarshish shall be first to bring thy sons from afar, with their silver and gold; and unto the name of the Lord thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel shall they consecrate their gains, for he hath exalted them. And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee. For in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee. Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day or night; that men may bring unto thee the forces of Gentiles, and that their kings be brought therein. For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine-tree, and box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary. And I will make the place of my feet glorious. The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee The City of the Lord, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel. Whereas thou hast forsaken and hated, so that no man went through thee, I will make thee an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations. Thou shall also suck the milk of the Gentile, and the breast of kings, and thou shalt know that I the Lord am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob. Yea, for brass will I bring gold, and for iron silver; and for wood shall I bring brass, and for stones iron. I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, nor waste and destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise.

The sun shall no more be thy light by day, nor the brightness of moon in the night; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people shall abide in righteousness; they shall inherit the land for ever, the Branch of my planting, the work of mine hands, that they might glorify the Lord their God. And a little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation; I the Lord will hasten it in mine own due time.

The Spirit of the Lord God (יהוה) is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and to open the prisons to them that are bound. To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion their portion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified.

And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, desolations of many generations. And the strangers shall attend and feed your flocks, the sons of the aliens shall be your plowmen and vinedressers. But ye shall be named the Priests of the Lord; men shall call you Ministers of our God; ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye rejoice and boast yourselves. For your shame and humility ye shall have double, for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion; therefore in the land of the strangers they shall possess the double, and everlasting joy shall be unto them. For I the Lord love judgement, I hate robbery for burnt offering; and I will direct their work in truth; and I will again add to my everlasting covenant, which I made with them. And their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people; all that see them shall acknowledge them as the blessed seed of the Lord, saith the Lord God.

I (Isaiah) will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, and hath covered me with the robe of righteousness; as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with jewels. For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in to spring forth, so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations. For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest; until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and salvation as a lamp that burneth. And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory; and thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name. Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall their land any more be called Desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzi-bah, and thy land Beulah; for the Lord delighted in thee, and thy land shall be married (unto him). For as a young man marrieth a virgin, shall thy son marry thee; and as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee.

I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day or night; ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give him no rest, till he establish, and make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

The Lord hath sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength, Surely I will no more give thy corn to be meat for thine enemies; and the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine, for the which thou hast labored. But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the Lord; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness. Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. And they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the Lord; and thou shalt be called Sought out, a City not forsaken.

Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? Glorious in its apparel, travelling in the greatness of its strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-vat? I have trodden the winepress alone, and of the people there was none with me; now I will tread them in my wrath, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and all my raiment shall be stained. For the day of judgement is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come. And I looked about all the earth, and there was none to help, and none to uphold; yea, but mine own arm brought salvation unto me, even my right arm; and my fury, it upheld me. Now the time is come that I will tread down nations in my fury, and will make them drunk in my wrath, and I will bring down their strength to the earth, saith the Lord.

Now I (Isaiah) will mention the lovingkindness of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord; according to all that he hath bestowed on us, and his great goodness toward the house of Israel; which he hath bestowed on them according to his tender mercies and boundless compassion. For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie; so he was their Savior. In all their afflictions he was afflicted, and the angels of his presence saved them; in his love and pity he redeemed them, he bare them, and carried them. But they rebelled, and vexed his Holy Spirit; therefore he was turned to be their enemy, and he fought against them. Then he remembered the days of old, Moses and his people, and how he brought them out of the land of Egypt, out of the bondage of misery and woe, and brought them out of the sea and across the Jordan, as a shepherd bringeth forth his flocks and herds, and how he put his Holy Spirit into them. Yea, then he remembered, how he led them by the right hand of Moses, and how by the power of his righteous and omnipotent hand divided the waters before them, and led them through the deep, as an horse in the wilderness, that they should not stumble; and that his glorious and mighty works be remembered for ever.

Look down, O Lord, from heaven, and behold from the habitation of thy holiness; for we seek thy zeal and thy strength; the sounding of thy bowels, and of thy mercies toward us; or hast thou altogether forsaken us? Doubtless thou our Father, through Abraham, canst thou be ignorant of us and Israel, and acknowledge us not. Thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer; thy name is from everlasting. O Lord, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our hearts from thy fear? Return for thy servants' sake, the tribes of thine inheritance. The people of thine holiness have possessed it but a little while; our adversaries have trod down the treasures of thy sanctuary; we are thine; and thou art of thy covenant people forever; but thou barest not rule over them, nor are they called by thy name.

Oh! that thou wouldest rend the heavens; that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might melt down at thy presence, as the melting fire burneth and causeth the waters to boil; that thy name be made known to thine adversaries; that the nations may tremble at thy presence! When thou didst terrible things, which we looked not for; thou camest down, and the mountains melted at thy presence. For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O Lord, beside thee, what recompense thou prepareth for him that waiteth for thee. Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness, that remembers thee and thy ways and in such is continuance, and such are saved. But, behold, thou art wroth, for we have sinned. We are all as unclean vessels, and all our righteousness as filthy rags; and we all do fade away as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind have blown us away from the path of righteousness. And there is none that calleth upon thy name in meekness, and in humility, in long-suffering and patience, in truth and righteousness; for thou hast hid thy face from us, and hast forsaken us.

But now, O Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou art our Potter; and we all are the work of thine hand. Be not wroth very sore, O Lord, neither remember our iniquity for ever; behold, we beseech thee, thine ancient people. For without thy grace and mercy, O Lord, the holy cities and Zion are but a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation. For without thy Divine presence, our holy and beautiful house (temple), where our fathers praised thee, is burned up with the fire of thine indignation, and all our pleasant things are laid waste. Wilt thou refrain thyself for these, O Lord? Wilt thou hearken to our plea and hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

I am sought of them that asked not for me; I am found of them that sought me not, I said; Behold me, behold me, unto a nation that was not called by any name. I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, that walketh into wrong pastures, after their own thoughts; a people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon the altars of hewn stones; and who sit among the graves, and lodge in the monuments and shrines; who eat swine's flesh, and broth of abominable things. Who say, Stand by thyself, come not near me; for I am holier than thou.

These are a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day. Behold it is written of old, I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even into their bosom. Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together have caused the incense to be burnt upon the mountains, and my name to be blasphemed upon the hills; therefore I will measure their former work into their bosom, saith the Lord. And thus saith the Lord, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it; so will I do for my servants' sake, that I may not destroy them all. I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains; and mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there. And Sharon shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

But ye are they that have forsaken the Lord their God, and have forgotten my holy mountain; ye that prepare a table for troop, Gad the idol of fortune, and furnish the drink offering unto, number, even Meni (an idol of fate). Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter; because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that which I abhorred and despised. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry; behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty; behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed; my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for vexation of spirit. And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen; for the Lord God shall slay thee, and his servants by another name; that he who invokes blessings in his own behalf, shall bless himself in the God of truth; and he that makes covenants, shall do so in the God of truth. For the former troubles are forgotten, and are hid from mine eyes. Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former sins and transgressions shall not be remembered, nor brought to attention. Be ye glad and rejoice for ever that which I create; for, behold, I create a new Jerusalem to rejoice, and her people to enjoy. I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people; and the voice of woe and misery shall no more be heard in her. There shall no more be death of the infant, nor of the old man, who has not fulfilled all his days; for the child shall live to be an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed.

And my people shall build houses to dwell in; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof. They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat; for as the days of a tree are the days of my people; and mine elect shall long enjoy the fruit of their labors. They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they and their seed are the blessed of the Lord. And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock; and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord.

Thus saith the Lord, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool. Where is the house that ye build unto me? And where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the Lord. But to the poor and the meek, the man of a contrite spirit and a humble heart, behold, to him will I look. He that killeth an ox in Jacob is as if he slew a man; he that sacrificeth a lamb, as if he cut off a dog's neck; he that offereth an oblation, as if he offered swine's blood; he that burneth incense, as if he worshipped an idol. Yea, they have chosen their own ways, and their soul delighteth in their abominations. I also will choose their delusions, and bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear; but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.

Hear the word of the Lord, ye that tremble at his word, Your brethren that hated you, that cast you out for my name's sake, saying, Let thy God be glorified! But thine humility shall be turned into joy, and they shall be ashamed. A voice in the midst of the noise of the city, a voice from the temple, a voice of the Lord doth render recompense to his enemies. Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child. Who hath heard such a thing? Who has seen such things? Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? Or a nation be born at once? For as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth. Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the Lord. Shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.

Rejoice ye with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that love her; rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her; that ye may suck, and be satisfied with the breasts of her consolations; that ye may milk out, and be delighted with the abundance of her glory. For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river,and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream; then shall ye suck; and shall be borne upon her sides, and be dandled upon her knees. As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bones shall flourish like an herb; and the hand of the Lord shall be known toward his servants, and his indignation toward his enemies.

For, behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his wrath and fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and by his sword will all flesh be judged by the Lord, and the slain of the Lord shall be many. They that sanctify and purify themselves in the gardens, behind one tree in the midst, eating swine's flesh, the mouse, and other abominations, shall be consumed together, saith the Lord. For I know their works and their thoughts.

And it shall come to pass, that I will gather all nations and tongues; and they shall together see my glory. And I will set an ensign among them; and send those that escape of them unto the nations, to Tarshish (Spain), Pul (Assyria), Lud (Luddu, or Lydia, of southwest Asia Minor); and that draw the bow, to Tubal (Meshech or Mushku) and Javan (or Yawan, Greece), to the isles afar off, that have not heard my name, nor have seen my glory; and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles. And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots, in litters and upon mules, and upon swift beasts to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the Lord; as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the Lord. And I will also take them for priests and Levites (the Al-Levi), saith the Lord.

For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the Lord, so shall your seed and your name remain. And it shall come to pass, that from one moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh worship before me, saith the Lord. And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of men that have transgressed my commandments; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.

Now, after the king of Assyria Shalmaneser V (Enemessar) shut Hoshea king of Israel in prison for his conspiracy and nonpayment of annual tribute; he came up throughout the land, and to Samaria and besieged it three years. In the seventh year of Hoshea king of Israel and in the fourth year of Hezekiah king of Judah, Shalmaneser V came to Samaria. And in the sixth year of Hezekiah, that is the ninth year of Hoshea, Samaria was taken (in 740 B.C.). And the king of Assyria carried away Israel unto Assyria; and planted them in Nineveh, Halah (Hallahu), Habor (Abhar, in northwest Iran), by the river Gozan, and in other cities of Media and Persia; and the most righteous of the Lord were taken to Azerbaijan, around Lake Urmia, the center of Azerbaijan, which provided the richest conditions for livelihood on the plateau. Azerbaijan was on trade routes over the Caucasus as well as on the east-west route to the Black Sea. Armies marched over this route as well as migrating tribes, and unity was hard to organize. The extensive eastern province called Khorasan was later divided into three parts: the center with Herat on the Hari-Rud river, the eastern part of Bactria with its capital at Balk (or Alk), now called Mazaar-I-Sharif; and the western part from the Caspian Gates located to the east of modern Tehran, eastward to Meshhad. Later other Jews of Judah and Jerusalem were also taken to be settled in Babylonia, Assyria, Armenia, Media, Persia, and Ind (India). And in the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah (732 B.C.) did Sennacherib (son of Shalmaneser) king of Assyria come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and carried their righteous away.

And when Shalmaneser V king of Assyria and his son Sennacherib carried away Israel from Samaria and from all their dwellings; and Judah from all their fenced (fortified) cities; and they were planted not only in the cities and villages of Assyria, Media, Armenia, and Babylon; but many were resettled as far to the east as the river Indus of Ind (or India). This was the entire organized world then, the region between the river Nile in the west to river Indus in the east. And many colonies of Shemitic and Japhethic people dwelt in peace and comfort beyond the five rivers (Punjab), in the enchanted land of Ind. A line of poet-kings, or Kavis, of eastern Iran settled and ruled in the regions of Merv, Herat, and Bactria; before the establishment of the Achaemenid (Hakhamanish) empire of Persia. And until the last poet-king of the ancient Order of the Fire Worshippers, namely, Vishtaspa or Gushtasp (612-522 B.C.), eight Kavis or poet-kings ruled eastern Iran. They were: Kavi Kavata, Kavi Apivahu, Kavi Usadan, Kavi Arshan, Kavi Pishinah, Kavi Byarshan, Kavi Syavarshan, and Kavi Hausravah. Kavi Vishtaspa or Gushtasp was the ninth and last of this dynasty. These Kavis were called the Karapans or the "mumblers," and were opposed to the teaching of the later prophet, and the mouth and tongue of the Lord, Zoroaster (Zarathushtra); for these poet-kings and priests adhered to the ancient practices of fire worship, rituals and ceremonies; and would not allow the essence of the ancient religion to disturb their established ways of existence, and threaten to destroy their secular power, which was built upon false beliefs and intrigue.

The tribe of Issachar dwelt with the Medes and Persians, among the fire worshippers. Zebulun dwelt with them also, but many returned to dwell in the mountains of Paran, and engaged in trade and commerce; and they dwelt in tents of hairy skins, brought from Armenia. The tribe of Reuben chose to dwell near their brethren Zebulun, behind mount Paran, although many dwelt in Kabul, Zabul, and Ind; and became bands of robbers and plunderers, that attacked the wayfarers and caravans, and divided the booty among themselves. Every sabbath they would expound the Torah, and the reasons for the commandments in the holy tongue; and explanations were given in the Persian language.

A remnant of the tribe of Ephraim and half-tribe of Manasseh returned to dwell in the mountains of Nejd, the city of Mecca (Becca), among their Ishmaelite brethren. They also attacked the wayfarers, and were cruel possessors of horses.

The tribe of Simeon and the other half-tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land of the Chaldeans, six months journey from the temple in Jerusalem; they were more numerous than all others there, and collected tribute from twenty-five kingdoms, including some Ishmaelites.

And this account of the children of Dan is passed on from generation to generation:

> At first we were in the land of Israel, dwelling in the tents. And there was not among all the tribes of Israel brave warriors like us. When Jeroboam son of Nebat, who caused all Israel to sin, and made two golden calves, rebelled so that the kingdom of David was divided; thereupon the tribes gathered together and said, Arise and make war against Rehoboam and against Jerusalem!

But the children of Dan replied: Why should we fight against our brethren and against the son of our lord, David, king of Israel and Judah? Far be it, far be it from us! And the elders of Israel said, There are no mighty men among all the tribes of Israel like the tribe of Dan; wherefore, Arise and make battle against Judah. But they replied, By the life of the head of Dan our father, we shall not make war with our brethren, and we shall not shed their blood! Whereupon, the children of Dan took their swords and spears and bows, and prepared themselves to depart from the land of Israel, for they saw that it was impossible to remain there. So they decided to find a resting-place, lest they be destroyed. And they took counsel among themselves, and decided to go to Egypt, to lay it waste, and destroy its inhabitants. But our princes said, It is written, Ye shall return to Egypt no more for ever; how can ye prosper, when the land is cursed by the Lord?

Then they said, Let us go against Amalek, or against Edom, or Ammon or Moab, and destroy them, that we may dwell in their place. But the princes replied, It is written in the Torah that the Holy One restrained the Israelites to return to their land to live; yet one may pass through their borders some other way. So they decided to go to Egypt, but not by the way our forefathers had gone, nor to lay it waste, but in order to pass to river Pishon, to the land of Cush. And it came to pass, when they drew near to Egypt, that trembling seized hold upon the Egyptians. And they sent the word to us, saying, Are ye for war or peace? We replied, For peace; we shall pass through your land to the river Pishon, for there we shall find a resting-place. But the Egyptians did not believe us; and they stood on their watch until we had passed through their land, and reached the land of Cush; which we found to be very good and fertile, having fields, vineyards, gardens, and parks. The inhabitants of Cush did not prevent the children of Dan from dwelling with them, for we took the land by force. And they made the inhabitants their tributaries, and killed the wicked and rebellious. There they became fruitful and multiplied exceedingly.

The remnants of the tribes of Gad and Asher were scattered throughout Babylon and Assyria along with Judah and Benjamin. (But of Judah and Benjamin that remained in their land of inheritance, they later dwelt among the Romans who destroyed the temple, and among the Greeks and Ishmaelites.) Thus the tribes of Israel and Judah were taken captive by the kings Shalmaneser of Assyria and his son Sennacherib, in 740 B.C., and 732 B.C. respectively.

Now one of the captives named Tobit, son of Tobiel, was also carried to Nineveh (Nineve) by Shalmaneser (or Enemessar) king of Assyria; a record of his words is abridged:

WORDS OF TOBIT

(of the tribe of Naphthali, who was carried captive to Nineveh by Shalmaneser king of Assyria, in 740 B.C.)

The book of the words of Tobit, son of Tobiel, the son of Ananiel, the son of Aduel, the son of Gabael, of the seed of Asael, of the tribe of Naphtali; who in the time of Enemessar (Shalmaneser) king of the Assyrians was led captive out of Thisbe, which is at the right hand of the city Nephthaliin Galilee, above Aser (Asher).

I Tobit have walked all the days of my life in the way of truth and justice, and I did many alms-deeds to my brethren, and my nation (of Israel) who came with me to Nineveh (Nineve) into the land of the Assyrians. And when I was in my own country, in the land of Israel, being but young, all the tribe of Naphthali my father fell from the house of Jerusalem, which was chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, that all the tribes should sacrifice there, where the temple of the habitation of the Most High was consecrated and built for all ages. Now all the tribes which together revolted, and the house of my father Naphthali, sacrificed unto the heifer Baal. But I alone went often to Jerusalem at the feasts, as it was ordained unto all the people of Israel by an everlasting decree; having the first-fruits, and the tenths of increase (in tithes) with that which was first shorn; and them gave I at the altar to the priests the children of Aaron. The first tenth part of all increase I gave to the sons of Aaron, who ministered at Jerusalem; and another tenth part I sold away, and went, and spent it every year at Jerusalem; and the third I gave unto them to whom it was meet, as Debora my father's mother had commanded me, because I was left orphan by my father.

Furthermore, when I was come to the age of man, I married Anna of mine own kindred, and of her I begat Tobias my son. And when we were carried away captives to Nineveh (Nineve), all my brethren and those that were of my kindred did eat of the bread (food) of the Gentiles. But I kept myself from eating; because I remembered God with all mine heart. And the Most High gave me grace and favor before Shalmaneser (Enemessar) so that I was his purveyor (procurer and provider of supplies and services to the royal crown). Now that Shalmaneser is dead Sennacherib his son reigns in his stead.

And in the time of Shalmaneser I gave many alms to my brethren, and gave my bread to the hungry, and my clothes to the naked. And if I saw any of my nation dead, or cast about the walls of Nineveh, I buried him. And if the king Sennacherib had slain any, when he was come, and fled from Judea, I buried him privily; for in his wrath he killed many; but the bodies were not found, when they were sought for the king. When one of the Ninevites went and complained of me to the king, that I buried them, and hid myself; understanding that I was sought for to be put to death, I withdrew myself for fear. Then all my goods were forcibly taken away, neither was there anything left me, besides my wife Anna and my son Tobias.

And there passed not five and fifty days before two of his sons killed him; and they fled into the mountains of Ararat (Ararath); and Sarchedonus his son reigned in his stead, who appointed over his father's accounts, and over all his affairs, Achiacharus my brother Anael's son. And Achiacharus entreating for me, I returned to Nineveh. Now Achiacharus was cup-bearer, and keeper of the signet, and steward and overseer of the accounts. And Sarchedonus appointed him next unto himself; and he was my brother's son.

Now when I was come home again, and my wife Anna was restored unto me, with my son Tobias, in the feast of Pentecost, which is the holy feast of the seven weeks, there was a good dinner prepared me, which I sat down to eat. And when I saw abundance of meat, I said to my son, Go and bring what poor man soever thou shalt find amongst our brethren, who is mindful of the Lord; and lo, I tarry for thee. Soon he returned, and said, Father, one of our nation (tribe) is strangled, and cast out in the market place. Then before I had tasted of any meat, I went and brought him into a room, and remained until the going down of the sun. Then I returned, and washed myself, and ate my meat in heaviness; remembering the prophecy of Amos, that your feasts shall be turned into mourning, and all your mirth into lamentation. Therefore I wept, and after the going down of the sun I went and made a grave, and buried him. But my neighbors mocked me, and said, This man is not yet afraid to be put to death for this thing; who fled away, and yet lo, he burieth the dead again.

The same night also I returned from the burial, and slept by the wall of my courtyard, being polluted, and my face was uncovered; and I knew not that there were sparrows in the wall; and mine eyes being open, the sparrow muted warm dung into mine eyes; and a whiteness came over mine eyes. And I went to the physicians, but they helped me not; moreover, Achiacharus did nourish me, until I went into Elymais. And my wife Anna did take women's work to do; and when she received her wages, they also gave her a kid, besides her wages. When it was in mine house, and began to cry, I said unto Anna, From whence is this kid? Is it not stolen? But she replied, Upon me, it was given for a gift more than wages. Howbeit I did not believe her, but bade her render it to the owners; and I was abashed at her. But she replied, Upon me, where are thine alms and thy righteous deeds? Behold, thou and thy works are known.

Then I being grieved did weep, and in my sorrow prayed, saying, O Lord, thou art just, and all thy works and all thy ways are mercy and truth, and thou judgest truly and justly for ever. Remember me, and look on me, punish me not for my sins of ignorance, and sins of my fathers, who have sinned before thee. Now therefore deal with me as seemeth best unto thee, and command my spirit to be taken from me, that I may be dissolved, and become earth; for it is profitable for me to die rather than to live, because I have heard false reproaches, and have much sorrow. Command therefore that I may now be delivered out of this distress, and go into the everlasting place; turn not thy face from me, O Lord.

And it came to pass the same day, that in Ecbatana (Ecbatane) a city of Media, Sara the daughter of Raguel was also reproached by her father's maids; because she was given into marriage to seven husbands, whom Ashmodai (Asmodeus), the evil spirit of the demons, had killed before any of them had lain with her; mockingly saying unto her, Dost thou not know, say they, that thou hast strangled thy husbands? Thou hast had already seven husbands, neither wast thou named after any of them; wherefore dost thou beat us for them? If they be dead, go thy ways after them, let us never see of thee either son or daughter.

When Sara the daughter of Raguel heard these things, she was very sorrowful, so that she thought to have strangled herself; and she said, I am the only daughter of my father, and if I do this, it shall be a reproach unto him, and I shall bring his old age with sorrow to the grave. Then she turned her face towards the window (Jerusalem), and said, Blessed art thou, O Lord my God, and thy holy and glorious name is blessed and honorable for ever; let all thy works praise thee for ever. And now, O Lord, I set mine eyes and my face toward thee, and say, Take me out of the earth, that I may hear no more reproach. Thou knowest, O Lord, I am pure from all sin with man, and that I never polluted my name, nor the name of my father, in the land of my captivity. I am the only daughter of my father, neither hath he any child to be his heir, neither any near kinsman, nor any son of his alive to whom I may keep myself for a wife. My seven husbands are already dead, and why should I live? But if it please not thee that I should die, command some regard to be had of me, and pity taken of me, that I hear no more reproach.

So the prayers of them both were heard before the majesty of the Great God, and Raphael the archangel was sent to heal them both; that is to scale away the whiteness of Tobit's eye, and to give Sara the daughter of Raguel for a wife to Tobias the son of Tobit; and to bind Ashmodai the head of the demons; because she belonged to Tobias by right of inheritance. About the same time came Tobit home, and entered into the house, and Sara the daughter of Raguel came down from her upper chamber.

And when Tobit had called Tobias, for conferring upon him the blessings of the firstborn, he said: My son, when I am dead, bury me; and despise not thy mother, but honor her all the days of thy life; and do that which shall please her, grieve her not. Remember, my son, that she saw many dangers for thee, when thou wast in her womb; and when she is dead bury her in a grave by me. My son be mindful of the Lord our God all thy days, and let not thy will be set to sin, or to transgress his commandments; do uprightly all thy life long, and follow not the ways of unrighteousness. For if thou deal truly, thy doings shall prosperously succeed to thee, and to all them that live justly. Give alms of thy substance; and when thou givest alms, let not thine eye be envious, neither turn thy face from any poor; and the face of God shall not be turned away from thee. If thou hast abundance, give alms accordingly; if thou have but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little; for thou layest up a good treasure for thyself against the day of necessity. Because that alms do deliver from death, and suffereth not to come into darkness. For alms is a good gift unto all that give it in the sight of the Most High.

Beware of all whoredom, my son, and chiefly take a wife of the seed of thy fathers, take not an unbelieving woman to wife, which is not of thy father's tribe; for we are the children of the prophets, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Remember, my son, that our fathers from the beginning, even that they all married wives of their own kindred; and were blessed in their children, and their seed shall inherit the land. Now, therefore, my son, love thy brethren, and despise not in thine heart thy brethren, the sons and daughters of thy people, in not taking a wife of them. For in pride is destruction and much trouble; and in lewdness is much decay and unquenchable want of thirst, and lewdness is the mother of famine (of the Spirit).

Let not wages of any man, which hath wrought for thee, tarry with thee, but give him it out of hand. For if thou serve God, he will also repay thee. Be circumspect, my son, in all things thou doest, and be wise in all thy conversation. Do to no man that which thou hatest; drink not wine to make thee slothful, nor let drunkenness go with thee in thy journey. Give of thy bread to the hungry, and of thy garments to them that are naked; and according to thine abundance give alms, without a stint. Pour out thy substance on the burial of the just, but give nothing to the wicked. Ask counsel of all that are wise and holy; and despise not any counsel which is profitable. Bless the Lord thy God always, and desire of him that thy ways may be directed; and thy paths and counsels may prosper. For every nation hath not counsel, but the Lord himself giveth all good things; and he humbleth whom he will, as he will. Now therefore, my son, remember my guidance; neither let it be put out of thy mind. Fear not, my son, that we are made poor; for thou hast much wealth and riches, if thou fear God; depart from all sin, and do that which is pleasing in his sight. Amen.

Now, after Shalmaneser V king of Assyria had carried away captive Israel from the land of its inheritance (in 740 B.C.); then in 732 B.C., Sennacherib son of Shalmaneser V carried away Judah from all their fenced cities, and Hezekiah king of Judah was come under tribute to the king of Assyria. And the annual tribute appointed unto Hezekiah was three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold; moreover Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasure of the king's house; besides, he cut off the gold from the doors of the temple which Solomon built, and from the pillars which Hezekiah had overlaid, and gave it to the king of Assyria. And the king of Assyria sent Tartan, Rabsaris and Rab-shakeh, from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a great host against Jerusalem. And they arrived at Jerusalem, and stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the fuller's field. And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder. And Rab-shakeh said unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trustest? Thou sayest, Behold, they are but vain words, I have counsel and strength for war; now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me? Now, behold, thou trustest upon the staff of this bruised reed, even upon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it; so is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust him. But if ye say unto me, We trust the Lord our God; is not that he, whose high places and altars Hezekiah hath taken away; and said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

Now therefore, I pray thee, give pledges to my lord the king of Assyria, and I will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them. How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust in Egypt for chariots and for horsemen? Am I now come up without the Lord against this place to destroy it? The Lord said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it. Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Assyrian language; for we understand it, and talk not with us in Jews' language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall. But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? Hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you? Then Rab-shakeh stood up and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria — Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand; neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the Lord, saying, The Lord will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria. Hearken not to Hezekiah, for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me; then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of the cistern. Until I return, and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of olive oil and of honey; that ye may live and not die; and hearken not to Hezekiah, when he persuadeth you, saying, The Lord will deliver us! Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? Where are the gods of Hamath and Arpad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah? Have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand? But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word; for the king's commandment was to answer him not. Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, who was over the king's household, along with Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

And it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, he too rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord. And he sent Eliakim, Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz. And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is the day of trouble, of rebuke and blaspheme; for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth. It may be the Lord thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will reprove the words which the Lord thy God hath heard; wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left.

And Isaiah the prophet said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the Lord, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumor, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land. And Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah; for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish. And when he heard of Tir-hakah king of Ethiophia, saying, Behold Hezekiah is come out to fight against thee; he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, Let not thy God in whom thou trusteth deceive thee, saying Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria; behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly, to subjugate them under their sway; and shalt thou be delivered? Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, as Gozan, Haran, and Rezpah; and the children of Eden (Aden), which were in Thelasar? Where is the king of Hamath, and king of Arpad, and the king of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?

And Hezekiah received the letter of the hands of the messengers, and read it; then he went up into the house of the Lord, and spread it before the Lord. And Hezekiah prayed before the Lord, and said, O Lord God of Israel, which dwelleth between the cherubim; thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth. Lord, bow down thine ear, and hear; open, Lord, thine eyes, and see; and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God. Of a truth, Lord, the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands, and have cast their gods into the fire; for they were no gods, but the work of men's hand, wood and stone; therefore they have destroyed them. Now therefore, O Lord our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hands, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the Lord God, even thou only.

A. This scene (right) is engraved on a large slab of alabaster which, with many others, adorned the palace of Sennacherib at Nineveh. The inscription over the vizier's head reads: Sennacherib king of the world, king of Assyria, seated himself upon a throne, while the Hebrew captives of Lachish pass before him. The artist, attempting to sketch the stony hills of southern Palestine, has made the surface of the ground look like scales. The king of Assyria is seated on a throne; while advancing up the hill is a group of Assyrian soldiers headed by grand vizier, who stands before the king, announcing the coming of the Hebrew captives.

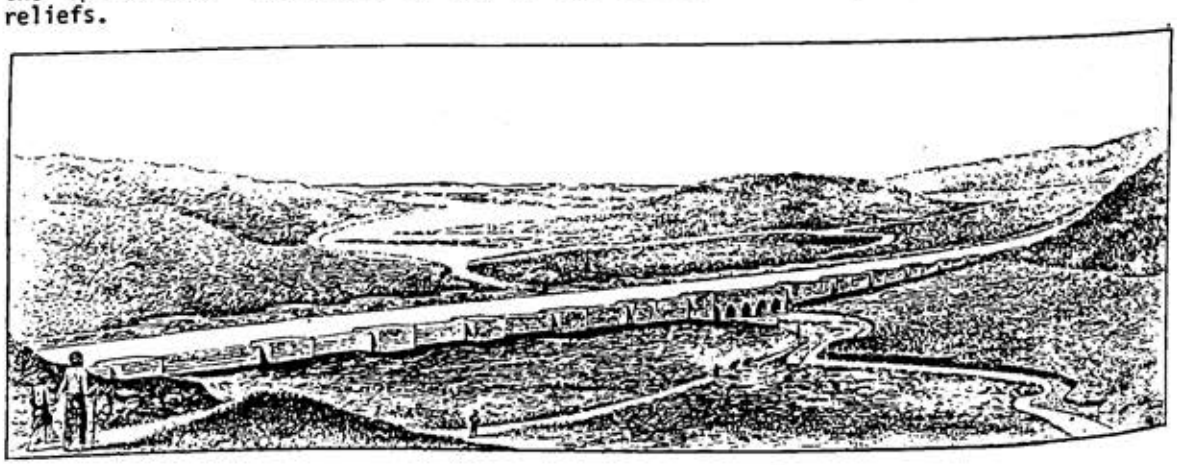
B. Assyrian palace relief (ninth century B.C.)

This relief shows that the Assyrians used siege machinery, to smash holes into the fortified city walls; sun-dried bricks were used to build massive walls and fortifications. The defending archers on the wall are trying to drive away a huge Assyrian battering ram mounted on wheels. This machine is an ancient "tank," with its front protected by metal armor plate. It carried a fighting tower as high as the city wall. Within the tank unseen men worked the heavy beam of the ram, which was capped with metal to smash the wall. An observation tower with metal-covered dome and peep-holes shielded the officer in command, as he directed the operations. This scene is one of the earliest surviving Assyrian palace reliefs.



C. The oldest known aqueduct, constructed by Sennacherib.

This aqueduct was a part of Sennacherib's great irrigation project for conveying water from the northern mountains thirty miles away to the fields around Nineveh. Finding that they must carry the water across a small river, the Assyrian engineers constructed a large stone-masonry channel nearly 1000 feet long and almost 20 feet wide, along which the water flowed between parapets 9 feet wide. The water was thus carried not only across the little river, as if on a bridge, but also across the river valley about 1000 feet wide. (After Breasted and Seton Lloyd)

Then Isaiah the prophet, son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria I have heard. This is the word that the Lord hath spoken concerning him, The virgin the daughter of Zion hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee. Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? And against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? Even against the Holy One of Israel. By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar trees thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof; and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into the forest of his Carmel. I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places.

Hast thou not heard long ago how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? Now have I brought to pass, that thou shouldest lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps. Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb; as the grass on the house, and as corn blasted before it be grown up. But now I know thy abode, and thy going out, and coming in, and thy rage against me. Because thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips; and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest. And this shall be a sign unto thee, ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves; and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap; and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof. And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion; the zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall do this. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it. By the way that he shall come, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into the city, saith the Lord; for I will defend this city, to save it for mine own sake, and David's sake. And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the Lord went out,and smote in the camp of the Assyrians one hundred and eighty-five thousand; and when they arose early in the morning, behold, were all dead corpses. So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and returned to Nineveh, and dwelt there. And it came to pass, that as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer, his sons, smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of Armenia. And Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

In those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet, son of Amoz came to him, and said, Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order, for thou wilt die, and not live. Then Hezekiah turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord, saying: I beseech thee, O Lord, remember now how I have walked before thee in truth and with perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight; and he wept sore. And as Isaiah was gone out into the middle court, the word of the Lord came to him, saying, Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the Lord, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears; behold, I will heal thee. On the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the Lord; and I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for the sake of my word to David. So Isaiah returned to the chamber of Hezekiah, and said, Take a lump of figs, and lay it on the boil; and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered. And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the Lord will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the Lord the third day? And Isaiah replied, This sign shalt thou have of the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing that he hath spoken; shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees; nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. And Isaiah the prophet called upon the Lord God of Israel; and he didst bring the shadow ten degrees backward on the sun-dial which was built by Ahaz (Yauhazi), father of Hezekiah.

At that time Merodach-baldan (Berodach-baldan, or Marduka-plaiddin), king of Babylonia, sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah; for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick. And Hezekiah opened up unto them, and shewed them all the house of his precious things, the silver and gold, spices and precious ointments, his house of armour; and all his treasury and the treasury of the house of the Lord; there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not. Then came Isaiah the prophet son of Amoz unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and said: What said these men? And from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah replied, They are come from a far country, from Babylonia. And he asked, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All that in mine house is, have they seen; there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

Then Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the words of the Lord, Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers had laid up in store unto this day,shall be carried into Babylon; nothing shall be left, saith the Lord. And thy sons that issue from thee, which thou shall beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken; and is it not good if peace and truth be in my days? And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his works, how he made a pool, and a conduit; and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And Hezekiah slept with his fathers; and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Hephzibah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, after the abominations of the heathen, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel. For he built up again the high places which his father Hezekiah had destroyed; and he reared up an altar for Baal; and made a grove, to worship wood and stone, as did Ahab king of Israel; and worshipped the demon-gods, and all the luminaries, and served them. And he built altars in the house of the Lord, of which the Lord said, In Jerusalem will I put my name. And in the two courts of the house of the Lord, he built altars for all the host of heaven and demon-gods. And he made his sons pass through the fire; and used enchantments and divination, and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards; he wrought much wickedness in the sight of the Lord, and provoked him to anger. And Manasseh did more evil than did the nations whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel; and he seduced the inhabitants to do yet more evil.

And the Lord spake by his servants the prophets, saying, Because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all the Amorites and the heathen nations; and also hath made Judah to sin with his idols; therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Behold, I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle; and I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab; and I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down. And I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; that they may become a prey and a spoil to their enemies; because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger; since the time their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day. Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another; besides making Judah to sin, and to do evil in the sight of God. Therefore, the Lord brought upon Manasseh and Jerusalem the captains of the host of the king of Assyria; and they took him among the thorns, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon. In his affliction Manasseh besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly. Thereupon the Lord forgave him, and brought him back to Jerusalem. Then he feared the Lord; and also built a wall outside the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley by the entrance of the fish gate; and raised up Ophel to a great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah. And it came to pass that Manasseh slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own house, in the garden of Uzzah; and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

Amon was twenty-two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem; his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah. He did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as did his father Manasseh; and served the idols of his father, and worshipped them. He forsook the Lord God of Israel, and walked not in the way of the Lord. And it came to pass, that the servants of Amon conspired against him, and slew him in his own house. But the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against Amon king of Judah; and they made Josiah his son king in his stead.

Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem thirty-one years. And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father; and declined neither to the right hand, nor to the left. In the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David; and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, carved and molten images; and burnt the bones of their priests upon their altars; and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem; and so did he in the cities of Manasseh, Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks round about.

In the eighteenth year of his reign, when Josiah had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphon the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the Lord his God. And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was kept in the treasury of the Lord, of which the Levites kept charge. And when they brought out the money, Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of Moses. And Hilkiah said unto Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord; and Hilkiah delivered the book to him. And Shaphan carried the book to the king; and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they do. And Shaphan the scribe read the book in front of the king. When the king had heard the word of the law, he rent his clothes; and he commanded Hilkiah, Ahikam the son of Shaphan, Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah his counsellor, and said: Go inquire of the Lord for me, and for them that are left in Israel and Judah, concerning the words of the book; for great is the wrath of the Lord that is poured out upon us, because our fathers kept not the word of the Lord, to do after all that is written in this book. So they left his presence, and went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the keeper of the wardrobe. She dwelt in Jerusalem in the second section, and they spoke to her about the prophecies in that book. And she answered them, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you hither, thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book, which they have read before the king of Judah. Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto false gods, to provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched. And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the Lord, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard. Because thine heart was softened, and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words in this book, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the Lord. Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace; neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and its inhabitants. So the five brought the word back to Josiah the king of Judah. Then the king gathered all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem; and went up to the house of the Lord; and the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem, the priests and the Levites, all the people great and small of Judah and Benjamin assembled themselves in the courtyard of the temple; and Josiah read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the treasury of the house of the Lord.

And the king stood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord; to keep his commandments, statutes, judgements, and testimonies; with all his heart and soul; and to perform all that which is written in this book. And he caused all that were present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to abide by it, and they did; and all his days they departed not from following the Lord, the God of their fathers. Moreover Josiah kept a passover unto the Lord in Jerusalem, on the fourteenth day of the first month. And he set priests in their charges, and encouraged them to the service of the house of the Lord. And he said unto the Al-Levi (Levites) that taught all Israel, for they were holy unto the Lord, to put the Ark of the Covenant in the house which Solomon son of David did build; and to establish again the courses for the priests and the singers, as it used to be in the days of David and Solomon.

And Josiah king of Judah gave to all that were present at the assembly, about thirty thousand people; of the flock, lambs and kids, and three thousand bullocks. And his princes gave willingly to the people, priests and Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, rulers of the house of the Lord, gave unto the sons of Aaron for passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen. Moreover Conaniah, the chief of the Levites, and his brethren, Nethaneel, Hashabiah, Jeil, and Jozabad, gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen. So the service was prepared, and the priests stood in their place, and Levites their course, according to the king's commandment. They killed the passover, and the priests sprinkled the blood, and the Levites skinned them. And the singers, the sons of Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun (the king's seer) praised the Lord with hymns and music. The porters (guards) at every gate, took their places which their brethren the Levites assigned for them. And all those that were present there, kept the passover, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days. And there was no passover like that in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as did Josiah. It was in the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah that this passover was kept, in 642 B.C.

And Josiah king of Judah commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the priests of the second order, and the keepers of the gate, to bring forth out of the temple of the Lord all the vessels that were made for the heifer Baal, the grove, and the demon-gods; and burned them outside the city of Jerusalem, in the fields of Kidron, and sent the ashes of them to Beth-el. And he put down the idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places of Judean cities. And they brought out the wooden image of the fertility goddess Asherah, and burned it to ashes, at the brook Kidron, and cast the ashes upon the graves of the children of the people. And he brake down the houses of the Sodomites, that were by the house of the Lord, where the women wove hangings for their groves. Moreover Josiah confounded all the priests of Judah, and brought down the high places where the priests burned incense, from Geba to Beer-sheba; and brake down the high places of the gates that were by the entrance gate of Joshua, the governor of the city, which were on the left side of the city gate. And he brought down Tophteh, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man might make his son or daughter to pass through the fire of Molech. And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun, at the entrance of the house of the Lord, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the sun with fire.

And the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made; and the altars which Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the Lord, did Josiah beat down to the ground, and he threw the dust of them into the brook Kidron. Also the high places that were before Jerusalem, on the right side of the mount of corruption, which Solomon had built for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians; for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites; and for Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites; did the king bring down, and brake their images in pieces, and filled their places with the bones of men. Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, he brake them down and burned the high place. And the workers with familiar spirits, images, idols and abominations, and the wizards did Josiah put away. And like unto him was there no king before him, that turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might.

Then it came to pass, that when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish by the Euphrates; and Josiah went out to fight against him. But Necho sent messengers to him, saying, What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house of Carchemish; for God commanded me to make haste; forebear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not. Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him; but disguised himself, that he might fight with him; and hearkened not to the words of Necho, from the mouth of God; and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo. And the archers shot king Josiah; and his servants took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot, and brought him to Jerusalem; and there he died, and was buried in the sepulchres of his fathers. And all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah; and in the book of the later day prophet Esdras of the sons of Aaron?

By this time (in 628 B.C.) one hundred and twelve years had elapsed from the time Samaria and all Israel was taken captive by the king of Assyria. And the children of captivity had truly repented of their transgressions, and sought diligently the Lord their God; and three generations of curse upon them had also passed away. The Lord of Wisdom, Truth, and Light, even Adhonai Yahweh, the Lord of Hosts, known to the Arabs as Allah Tá-ála; and to the Persian Fire Worshippers of the Holy Order of Zarathushtra as Ahura Mazda (Hormuzd, or Har-muzd), took away their reproach. This Mighty God of peace, power, and glory had so far created sixteen Zions (Airyana Vaejah, or Hari-yana Vaejah, the abode of the vehicle of the Lord), good lands and countries, even the Perfect Lands, after the great flood (of 2370 B.C.); of which the first was Airyana Vaejah, by the Vanguhi Daitya (or Daitih River). Now the time was at hand, that the plans for the seventeenth Perfect Land were being considered by the heavenly archangels, the head of whom was the Lord himself; and by the earthly archangels, the head of whom was Yima. And the city of bloodshed, Nineveh, was already destroyed four years past, when the Lord chose his first army of the Righteous from both the sons of Shem and of Japheth; even the Hebrews, Arabs, Syrians, Mongolians, Armenians, Georgians, Medes and Persians (Aryans), Greeks, Romans, Russians, and Copts (Egyptians), Chinese, and Aryavartans. And it was in this holy assembly of the archangels, that it was decided that the learning center of the whole world shall be at Takhte-sila (Seat of Morality), which is commonly known as Taxilla or Takshasila; and the seat of the upcoming Kingdom shall be at Istakhr (Persepolis). And at this first Mighty Assembly of the world archangels at Takhte-sila it was decided the time was nigh at hand that the second three thousand years of mixed existence, meaning Spiritual mixed with the worldly, shall end a decade from then. Therefore a prophet shall be raised among the Medes and Persians, even the proclaimer of the celestial mansions, and the head of the terrestrial archangels; that he might enlighten the kavis of the Order, who dwell in the darkness of the past; and establish the Righteous Kingdom on earth, which shall last forever. And that the secular and commercial language of the Assyrians, Medes and Persians, meaning the cuneiform writing of the Aryans (Hari-yanas), shall become the lingua franca of the secular or temporal world, and Arabic-Hebrew-Aramaic, with provincial variations, shall remain the sacred languages of the Shemitic people. And it was so.

And it came to pass that the people of Judah took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his stead; for there was much excitement everywhere, for the Gods didst descend upon the earth, even all the wise and holy of the world of that time were gathered together with one heart, and one mind, and one Spirit. Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And Jehoahaz did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, as did his fathers. And Pharaoh Necho put him in bands at Riblah in the land of Hamath; that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and put the land under tribute of an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold. And he appointed Eliakim son of Josiah king in his stead, and changed his name to Jehoiakim. And he removed Jehoahaz from his office.

And Jehoiakim gave silver and gold to Pharaoh; yet he taxed the land to give money according to the commandment of Pharaoh; and he taxed the people of the land according to his will. Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zubeda (Zebudah), the daughter of Pedaiah of Rome (Rumah). And he also did that which was evil, according to all that his fathers had done.

During his reign came Nebuchadnezzar, king of all the organized world then, who is called by the Hebrews the king of the Babylonians or king of the Assyrians; and Jehoiakim became his servant three years; then he rebelled, and paid not his annual tribute. For he was appointed unto judgement, the Lord chastised him by the bands of Chaldees, and by the bands of Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites; and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by his servants the archangels, and the prophets. And Jehoiakim slept with his fathers; and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead, who was also called Jeconiah, or Coniah. And the king of Egypt came not against him, for the king of Babylon had taken in the eighth year of Nebuchadnezzar all the land from the river (Nile) of Egypt unto the river Euphrates. Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. His mother's name was Nehushta (Nahushta), daughter of Elnathan (Al-nadan) of Jerusalem. He too did evil, according to all his father had done. In the selfsame year (617 B.C.) Nebuchadnezzar sent his servants to besiege Jerusalem, according to the commandment of the Lord; and when they came to Jerusalem, and besieged it, Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to meet the king in Babylon; he and his mother, his servants, his princes, and his counsellors. And they carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the Lord; and the treasures of the king's house; and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which were hidden away, which Solomon had made for the use in the temple of the Lord; for the thing was of the Lord. And they carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, with all his household, all the mighty men of valor, and all the craftsmen and smiths; none remained except the poorest sort of the people of the land; ten thousand captives; out of which seven thousand were men of might, and a thousand craftsmen and smiths. And Nebuchadnezzar made Mattaniah, uncle of Jehoiachin, a son of king Josiah, king in his stead; and changed his name to Zedekiah.

Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. And it was because the thing was of the Lord, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon, under whose tribute he was.

In the fifth year of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, and in the twelfth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of kings of the organized world, including Assyria and Babylonia (in 613 B.C.) Nebuchadnezzar dwelt at the palace in Nineveh; although the city fell in 632 B.C., in the fourteenth year of Nabopolassar's reign, which began in 645 B.C. For it had a more invigorating climate than Babylonia. And there continued to exist a close bond between the Babylonians and the Assyrians, for they jointly occupied a region which had no natural division to serve as frontier between the two countries. The city of Assur, the only city of Assyria located on the west of the Tigris, was once the original capital of the region. Thereafter, Nineveh became the most prominent capital, while both Calah and Khorsabad were used by the Assyrian monarchs as capital cities. A trade route to the Mediterranean and to Asia Minor ran along the northern part of Assyria; and other routes branched off into Armenia and the region of Lake Urmia (Urmiah), where dwelt the most righteous of the Lord.

Now at this time Arpaxad (Arpachshad) reigned over the Medes in Ecbatana; and built in Ecbatana walls round about of stones hewn three cubits, and made the height of the wall seventy cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits; and set towers upon the gates of it, an hundred cubits high, and the breadth in the foundation sixty cubits. The gates were raised to the height of seventy cubits, and the breadth of them was forty cubits; for his mighty armies, and for the setting in array of his footmen. During these days, Nebuchadnezzar made war with Arpaxad in the great plain, in the borders of Ragau. And there came all that dwelt along the Euphrates and Tigris, and Hydaspes; and those that dwelt in the plain of Arioch under the king of the Elymeans; and very many nations of the sons of Chelod; and they assembled themselves to battle. Then Nebuchadnezzar sent unto all that dwelt in Persia and eastward unto the river Indus; and westward beyond Egypt, unto Ethiopia; to come and make war against Arpaxad; for he was the king over all of them. But they took his word lightly, and would not come to war; and they sent his ambassadors away, in disgrace. Therefore Nebuchadnezzar was very angry with all those who rebelled against him. And he sware by his throne and kingdom, that he would surely be avenged upon all those borders of Celicia, Damascus and Syria; and would slay with the sword all the inhabitants of Moab, Ammon, Judea, and Egypt, till one comes to the borders of the two seas.

Then in the seventeenth year of his reign (608 B.C.) he marched in battle array against Arpaxad the king of Media; and overthrew the king, his horsemen, and all his chariots. And he came unto Ecbatana, and took the towers, and spoiled the streets thereof; and turned the beauty and glory of the city into shame. He took Arpaxad in the mountains of Ragau, and smote him with his darts, and utterly humbled him that day.

Afterward he returned to Nineveh, he and all his company of sundry nations; and they all banqueted and made merry, an hundred and twenty days. And in the eighteenth year of his reign, on the twentieth day of the first month (Nisan 20, 607 B.C.) there was talk in the house of Nebuchadnezzar that he should avenge himself on all the earth, as he had sworn before. So he called unto him all his officers and nobles, and communicated with them his secret counsel; and they all decreed to destroy all flesh, that did not obey the command of the king. After this, Nebuchadnezzar called Holofernes, the chief captain of his army, who was next to him in authority, and said unto him, Thus saith the great king, the lord of the whole earth, Behold, thou shalt go forth from my presence, and take with thee men that trust in their own strength, of footmen an hundred and twenty thousand, and twelve thousand horses with their riders; and thou shalt go against the west country, because they have disobeyed my commandment. And thou shalt declare unto them, that they prepare for me earth and water; for I will go forth in my wrath against them, and will cover the whole face of the earth with the feet of mine army; so that their slain shall fill their valleys and brooks, and their rivers shall be filled with their dead. And I will lead them captives to the utmost part of all the earth. Thou therefore shalt go forth beforehand for me unto all their borders; and if they yield themselves unto thee, thou shalt spare them for me till the day of their punishment. But those who are haughty and repent not, let not thine eye spare them, but put them to slaughter, and spoil them altogether. For as I live, and by the power of my kingdom, whatsoever I have spoken, that will I do by mine hand. Take thou heed that thou transgress none of the commandments of thy lord; but accomplish them fully, as I have commanded thee, and defer not to do them.

Then Holofernes went forth from the presence of Nebuchadnezzar his lord; and called all the governors and captains and officers of the army of Asshur (Assyria). And he mustered a hundred and twenty thousand chosen footmen, and twelve thousand archers on horseback. And he arranged them, as a great army is ordered for the war. He took camels and asses for their carriage, a very great number; and sheep, oxen, and goats without number for their provision; plenty of victuals for every man of the army; and very much gold and silver out of the king's house. Then Holofernes left on his journey with all his might; to subdue all the land in the western country. Their chariots, horsemen, and chosen footmen covered the face of the land as they moved westward; and a great number of sundry countries along the way also joined them; and like locusts, like the sand of the earth for multitude, they covered the land.

After three days journey from Nineveh toward the plain of Bectileth; they pitched near Bectileth, unto the mountain which is at the left hand of upper Cilicia. Then they marched into the hill country; and destroyed Phud and Lud; and spoiled all the children of Rashses and of Ishmael. Then Holofernes went over the Euphrates, and passed through Mesopotamia; and destroyed all the high cities that were along the river Arbonai, till he came to the sea. And he took the borders of Cilicia, and killed all that resisted him; and came to the borders of Japheth, toward the south, over against Arabia. He also surrounded the sons of Madai, and burnt up their dwellings and spoiled their sheepcotes. Then he went down into the plain of Damascus in the time of wheat harvest, and burnt up all their fields; and destroyed their flocks and herds; also he spoiled their cities, utterly wasted their countryside, and smote their young zealots with the edge of the sword. Therefore the fear and dread of Holofernes fell upon all the inhabitants of the sea coasts, in Sidon and Tyre; and those that dwelt in Sur, Oceana, Azotus, and Ascalon (Ashkelon) feared him greatly. So they sent ambassadors unto him to entreat for peace, saying, Behold, we the servants of Nebuchadnezzar the great king lie before thee; use us as shall be good in thy sight; behold, our houses and all our places, and all our fields of wheat, flocks and herds, and the lodges of our tents lie before thy face; use them as it pleaseth thee; behold, our cities and the inhabitants thereof are thy servants, come and deal with them as seemeth good unto thee.

Then came he down toward the sea coast; and set garrisons in the high cities, and took out of them chosen men for aid. So they and all the country round about received them with garlands, with dances and timbrels. Yet did he cast down their frontiers, and cut down their groves; and decreed to destroy all the gods of the land; that all nations should worship Nebuchadnezzar only; and that all tongues and tribes should call upon him as god. And he came over against Esdraelon, near Judea, over by the great strait of Judea. He pitched between Geba and Scythopolis; and there he tarried a whole month, that he might gather together all the carriages of his army.

And when the children of Israel that dwelt in Judea, heard all that Holofernes the chief captain of Nebuchadnezzar had done to the nations, and how he had spoiled their temples and brought them to nought; they were sore afraid of him, and for the temple of the Lord their God. For many had returned from their captivity, when they were carried by the king of Assyria nearly a hundred and thirty-three years before, when Samaria was besieged. When it was told Holofernes that the children of Israel had prepared for war, and have shut up passages of the hill country; and have fortified all the tops of the high hills, and laid obstacles in the champaign countries; he turned very angry. He called all the princes of Moab and captains of Ammon, and all the governors of the sea coast; and he said unto them, Tell me now, ye sons of Canaan, who this people is, that dwelleth in the hill country, and what are the cities that they inhabit, and what is the multitude of their army; and where is their power and strength; and who is set over them, or the captain of their army; and why have they not come out to meet me, as all the other inhabitants of the west?

Then said Achiar (Akhyar), the captain of all the sons of Ammon, Let now my lord hear a word from the mouth of thy servant; and I will declare unto thee the truth concerning this people, which dwelleth near thee, and inhabiteth the hill countries; yet shall no lie come out of the mouth of thy servant. And thus spake Achiar the Ammonite:

This people are descended of the Chaldeans (the Khaldūn). And they came hither from Mesopotamia, because they would not follow the gods of their fathers, which were in the land of Chaldea. For they left the way of their ancestors, and worshipped the God of heaven, the God whom they knew; so they cast them out from the face of their gods; and they fled into Mesopotamia, and sojourned there many days. Then their God commanded them to depart from the place they sojourned; and to go into the land of Canaan (Chanaan), where they dwelt; and they were increased with gold and silver, and with very much cattle.

But when famine covered all the land of Canaan, they went down into Egypt, and sojourned there; while they were nourished, they became there a great multitude, so that one could not number their nation. Therefore the king of Egypt rose up against them, and dealt subtly with them; and brought them low with laboring in brick, and made them slaves. Then they cried unto their God; and he smote all the land of Egypt with incurable plagues; so the Egyptians cast them out of their sight. And God dried the Red Sea before them, and brought them to mount Sinai, and Kadesh-barnea; and cast forth all that dwelt in the wilderness. So they dwelt in the land of the Amorites, and they destroyed by their strength all of Heshbon, and passing over Jordan, they possessed all their hill country. And they cast forth before them the Canaanites, the Pherezites, the Jebusites, the Shechemites, and all the Girgashites; and they dwelt in that country many days.

And whilst they sinned not before their God, they prospered; because the God that hateth iniquity was with them. But when they departed from the way which he had appointed unto them, they were destroyed in many battles very sore; and were led captives into a land that was not theirs; and the temple of their God was cast to the ground, and their cities were taken by the enemies. But now are they returned to their God, and are come up from the place where they were scattered; and have possessed Jerusalem, where their sanctuary is, and are seated in the hill country; for it was desolate before they came.

Now therefore, my lord and governor, if there be any error in this people, and they sin against their God, let us consider that this shall be their ruin, and let us go up, and we shall overcome them. But if there be no iniquity in their nation, let my lord now pass by, lest their Lord defend them, and their God be for them; and we become a reproach before all the world.

And when Achiar the Ammonite had finished these words, all the people standing round about the tent began to murmur; and the chief men of Holofernes, and the hosts of the Sidonians and Tyreans, and those that dwelt along the sea coast (of the Mediterranean Sea), began to say that he should be killed for speaking such words. And they said, We will not be afraid of the face of the children of Israel; for, lo, it is a people that have no strength for a battle. Now, therefore, lord Holofernes, we will go up; and they shall be prey to be devoured of all thine army.

When the tumult of men that were about the council ceased, Holofernes the chief captain of the army of Assur (Assyria) spake unto Achiar the Ammonite, and all the Moabites, before all the company of other hosts; saying, And who art thou Achiar, the hireling of Ephraim; that thou hast spoken these words among us today; and hast said, that we should not make war with the people of Israel, because their God will defend them? And who is God but Nebuchadnezzar? He will send his power, and will destroy them from the face of the earth, and their God shall not deliver them; but we the servant of our lord (Nebuchadnezzar) will destroy them as one man; for they are not able to sustain the power of our horses. For with them will we tread down under foot, and their mountains shall be drunken with their blood; and their fields shall be filled with their dead bodies; and their footsteps shall not be able to stand before us, for they shall utterly perish, saith king Nebuchadnezzar, lord of all the earth; for he said, None of my words shall be in vain.

And thou, Achiar, an hireling of Ammon, which hast spoken these words, in the day of thine iniquity, shall see my face no more from this day; until I take vengeance of this nation that came out of Egypt. And then shall the sword of mine army, and the multitude of them that serve me, pass through thy sides, and thou shall fall among their slain, when I return. Now therefore my servants shall bring thee back into the hill country, and shall set thee in one of the cities of the passages. And thou shalt not perish, till thou be destroyed by them. And if thou persuade thyself in thy mind that they shall not be taken, let not thy countenance fall; I have spoken it, and none of my words shall be in vain.

Then Holofernes commanded his servants, that waited in his tent, to take Achiar to Bethulia; and deliver him into the hands of the children of Israel. So his servants took him, and brought him out of the camp into the plain; and they went from the midst of the plain into the hill country; and came unto the fountains that were below Bethulia. And when the men of the city saw them, they took up their weapons, and went out of the city to the top of the hill. And every man that used a sling kept them from coming up by casting stones against them. Nevertheless having gotten privily under the hill, they bound Achiar, and cast him down; and left him at the foot of the hill, and returned to their lord. But the Israelites descended from their city, and came unto him, and loosed him, and brought him into Bethulia, and presented him to the governors of the city; which were in those days Oziah the son of Micha, of the tribe of Simeon, and Chabri the son of Jethaniel, and Chermish the son of Melchiel. And they called together all the ancients of the city, and all their youth ran together hither and thither, and their women, to call the people to the assembly. And they set Achiar in the midst of all their people and Azaiah asked him of that which had been done. And he told them the words of the council of Holofernes; and all the words which he had spoken in the midst of the princes of Assur and all the assembly; he told them every whit that which had happened.

Then the people fell down and worshipped the Lord their God; and cried unto him, saying, O Lord God of heaven, behold their pride, and pity the fallen state of our nation; and look upon the face of those that are sanctified unto thee this day. Then they comforted Achiar, and praised him greatly. And Azaiah took him out of the assembly unto his house, and made a feast to the elders; and they called on the God of Israel all that night for help. The next day Holofernes commanded all his army, his princes, and counsellors, to remove their camp, and pitch against Bethulia, by the fountain in the nearby valley; and they spread themselves in breadth over Dotham (Dothan) into Belmaim; and in length from Bethulia unto Cyamon by Esdraelon. And when the children of Israel saw the great multitude of the men of war, they were greatly troubled, and said one to another, Now will these men lick up the face of the earth; for neither the high mountains, nor the valleys or hills could bear their weight. Then every man took up his weapons of war, and they kindled fires upon their watchtowers, and watched all night. But the next day Holofernes brought forth all his horsemen in the sight of the children of Israel, that dwelt in Bethulia; and sealed the passages up to the city, and remained by the water fountains from which they drew their water. And Holofernes set the garrison by the fountains, and himself returned to the camp.

Then came the children of Esau, and the governors of Moab, and the captains of the nations of the sea coast, and said: Let our lord now hear a word, that there be not an overthrow in thine army. For this people of the children of Israel do not trust in their spears, but in the height of the mountains wherein they dwell; because it is not easy to come up to the tops of their mountains. Now therefore, my lord, fight not against them in battle array, and there shall not so much as one man of thy people perish. Remain in thy camp, and keep all the men of thine army; and let thy servants get into their hands the fountains of water, which issueth forth of the foot of the mountain. For all ~~the~~ inhabitants of Bethulia get their water from thence; so shall thirst kill them, and they shall give up their city; and we and our people will go up to the tops of the nearby mountains, and keep watch over them, that none goes out of the city to fetch the water. So that they and their wives and their children shall be consumed with the famine; and before the sword come against them, they shall be overthrown in the streets where they dwell. Thus shall thou render them an evil reward, because they rebelled and met not thy person peaceably. And these words pleased Holofernes, and all his servants; and they appointed to do according to the words of the children of Esau.

So the camp of the children of Ammon departed, and with them five thousand of the Assyrians; and they pitched in the valley, and took the fountains of water from the children of Israel. Then the children of Esau went up with the children of Ammon, and camped in the hill country by Dotham; and they sent some of them toward the south and some east, toward Ekrebel, near Chusi upon the brook Makhmur. And the rest of the army of the Assyrians camped in the plain, and covered the face of the whole land; and tents and carriages were pitched to a very great multitude. Then the children of Israel cried unto the Lord their God; for they were surrounded on all sides by the enemy, and there was no way to escape. Thus remained all the company of the Assyrians, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and all the sea coast nations which joined Holofernes; with their footmen, chariots, and horsemen, four and thirty days; and the inhabitants of Bethulia could not get down to the fountains of water; and all their cisterns, which were kept for emergencies, were emptied; and they did not have water to drink one day; and they gave them drink by measure. Therefore their young children were out of heart, and their women and young men fainted for thirst; and fell down in the streets of the city, and by the passages of the gates; and there was no longer any strength left in them. Then the Jews of Bethulia gathered themselves unto Azaiah, and to the chief of the city, and cried with a loud voice before the elders; and said, God be judge between us and you, for ye have done foolishly, in that ye have not required peace of the children of Asshur (Assyria). For now we have no helper; but God hath sold us into their hands; that we should be thrown down before them with thirst and great destruction. Now therefore call them unto you, and deliver the whole city for a spoil to the people of Holofernes, and his army. For it is better for us to be made spoil unto them, than to die for thirst; for by becoming his servants, our soul will live, and not see the death of our infants, our wives and our children. We take to witness against you the heaven and earth, and our God and Lord of our fathers, which punishes us according to our sins and the sins of our fathers, that he do not according as we have said this day. Then there was a great weeping and wailing with one consent in the midst of the assembly; and they cried unto the Lord God with a loud voice. Then said Azaiah to them, Brethren, be of good courage, let us yet endure five days, in the which space the Lord God may turn his mercy toward us; for he will not forsake us utterly. And if these days pass, and there come no help unto us, then I will do according to your word. And he dispersed the people, every one to their own charge; and they returned to their stations unto the walls and towers of their city, and hid their women and children in their chambers.

Now at this time dwelt Judith the daughter of Merari of the tribe of Simeon, in Bethulia. She was of a goodly countenance, and very beautiful to behold; and Manasses was her husband, of her tribe and kindred, who died in the barley harvest. For as he stood overseeing them that bound sheaves in the field, the heat of the sun came upon his head; and he fell on his bed, and died in the city of Bethulia. And they buried him with his fathers in the field between Dotham and Balamo; so Judith was a widow in her house three years and four months. And she made her a tent upon the top of her house, and put on sackcloth upon her loins, and wore her widow apparel. And she fasted all the days of widowhood; and observed sabbath, and the holy days, feasts and solemn days of the house of Israel. And her husband Manasses had left her gold and silver, menservants and maidservants, cattle and lands; and she was over them. And there was none that gave her ill word, for she feared God greatly. When she heard the evil words of the people against the governor, that they fainted for lack of water; for Judith had heard all the words that Azaiah had spoken unto them; and that he had sworn to deliver the city unto the Assyrians after five days.

Then she sent her waiting woman, that was over all that she had, to call Azaiah, Chabris and Charmis, the elders of the city. And they came unto her, and she said unto them, Hear me now, O ye governors of the inhabitants of Bethulia; for your words that ye have spoken before the people this day are not right; touching this oath which ye made and pronounced between God and you; and have promised to deliver the city to our enemies, unless within these days the Lord turn to help you. And now ye have tempted the Lord this day, and thus stand among the children of men, and not of God. And now, repent, and seek the Lord Almighty; but ye shall never know anything, for ye have no more the Spirit of discernment. For ye have not capacity to find the depths of the heart of man, neither can ye perceive the things that he thinketh; then how can you search out God, that hath made all these things, and know his mind, or comprehend his purpose? Nay, my brethren, provoke not the Lord our God; for God is not a man, that he may be threatened; neither is he as the son of man, that he should be wavering. Therefore let us wait for salvation of him, and call upon him to help us; and he will hear our voice, if it please him. For there arose none in our age, neither is there any now in these days, neither tribe, nor family, nor people, nor a city among us, which worship gods made with hands, as hath been aforetime. For the which cause our fathers were given to the sword and for spoil, and had a great fall before our enemies. But we know none other god; and trust that he will not despise us, nor any of our nation. For if we be taken so, all Judea shall be spoiled; and he will require profanation thereof at our mouth.

And the slaughter of our brethren, and the captivity of the country; and the desolation of our inheritance, will he turn upon our heads among the Gentiles; wheresoever we shall be in bondage; and we shall be an offence and a reproach to all them that possess us. For our servitude shall not be directed to favor; but the Lord our God shall turn it to dishonor. Now therefore, brethren, let us shew an ensample to our brethren; because their hearts depend upon us; and the sanctuary, the house, the altar, rest upon us. Moreover let us give thanks to the Lord our God, which trieth us, even as he did our fathers. Remember what things he did to Abraham, and how he tried Isaac; and what happened to Jacob in Mesopotamia of Syria; when he kept the sheep of Laban his mother's brother. For he hath not tried us in the fire, as he did them, for the examination of their hearts; neither hath he taken vengeance on us; but the Lord doth scourge them that come near unto him, to admonish them. Then said Azaiah to her, All that thou hast spoken hast thou spoken with a good heart; and there is none that may gainsay thy words. For this is not the first time that thy wisdom is manifested; but from the beginning of thy days all the people have known thy understanding; because thou art of a Good Disposition. But, behold, the people were very thirsty; and compelled us to do unto them as we have spoken, and to bring an oath upon ourselves, which we will not break. Therefore, now pray thou for us, because thou art a godly woman; and the Lord will send us rain to fill our cisterns, and we shall faint no more.

Then said Judith unto them, Hear me, and I will do a thing, which shall go throughout all generations to the children of our nation. Ye shall stand this night in the gate, and I will go forth with my waiting-woman; and within the days that ye have promised to deliver the city to our enemies, the Lord will visit Israel by mine hand. But inquire not ye of my act; for I will not declare it unto you, till the things be finished that I do. Then said Azaiah, and the elders of the city, Go in peace, and the Lord God be before thee, to take vengeance on our enemies. Then Judith fell upon her face, and put ashes upon her head, and uncovered the sackcloth. And about the time that incense of that evening was offered in Jerusalem in the house of the lord, Judith cried with a loud voice, and said: O Lord God of my father Simeon, to whom thou gavest a sword to take vengeance of the strangers, who loosened the girdle of a maid to defile her, and discovered the thigh of her shame, and polluted her virginity to her reproach; for thou saidst, It shall not be so, and yet they did so. Wherefore thou gavest their rulers to be slain, so that they dyed their bed in blood, being deceived; and smotest the servants with their lords, and the lords upon their thrones. And hast given their wives for a prey, and their daughters to be captives; and all their spoils to be divided among thy dear children; which were moved with zeal, and abhorred the pollution of their blood,and called upon thee for aid. O God, O my God, hear me also, a widow. For thou hast wrought not only those things, but also the things of the distant past and of the past; thou, O Lord, knowest the things which are now, and which are yet to come.

For, behold, the Assyrians are multiplied in their powers; and they are exalted with horse and man; they glory in the strength of their footmen; they trust in the shield and spear, and bow, and sling; and know not that thou art the Lord that breakest the battles, the Lord is thy name. Throw down their strength in thy power, bring down their might in thy wrath; for they have purposed to defile thy sanctuary, and to pollute the tabernacle where thy glorious name resteth, and to cast down with the sword the horn of thy altar. Behold their pride, and send thy wrath upon their heads; give unto thy handmaid, which am a widow, the power that I have conceived; that by the deceit of her lips she might smite the servant with the prince, and prince with the servant; that their stateliness and deception be brought down by the hand of a woman. For thy power resteth not in multitude, nor thy might in strong men; for thou art a God of the afflicted, and helper of the oppressed, an upholder of the weak, a protector of the forlorn, a savior of them that are without hope. I pray thee, O God of my father, and God of the inheritance of Israel, the Lord of the be not afraid in thine heart, but show unto him according to thine heart, and he will entreat thee well. Then they chose out an hundred men to accompany her and her maid, and they brought her to the tent of Holofernes.

Then there was a concourse and murmuring throughout all the camp; for her coming was noised among the surrounding tents; and they came about her, as she stood outside the tent of Holofernes. And they looked in awe and amazement at her beauty; and admired the children of Israel because of her; and everyone said to his neighbor, Who would despise this people, that have among them such a woman? Surely it is not good that one man of them be left, who being such might go and deceive the whole earth, and our wives and daughters be taken captives by their countenance, and despise us utterly.

Then they brought her into the tent of Holofernes. Now Holofernes rested upon his bed under a canopy, which was woven with purple, and gold, embellished with emeralds, and precious stones. And he came out with his silver lamp going before him; and Judith fell down upon her face, and did reverence unto him, and his servants took her up; and they all marvelled at the beauty of her countenance. Then said Holofernes unto her, Woman be of good comfort, fear not in thine heart; for I never hurt any that was willing to serve Nebuchadnezzar, the king of all the earth. Now therefore, if thy people that dwelleth in the mountains had not taken my word lightly, I would not have lifted up my spear against them; but they have brought this thing upon themselves. But now tell me wherefore art thou fled from them, and art come unto us. For if thou art come for safeguard, be of good comfort, thou shall live this night, and hereafter; for none shall hurt thee, but entreat thee well, as they do the servants of king Nebuchadnezzar my lord.

And Judith said unto him, Receive the word of thy servant, and suffer thy handmaid to speak in thy presence, and I will declare no lie to my lord this night. And if thou wilt follow the words of thine handmaid, God will bring the thing perfectly to pass by thee, and my lord shall not fail of his purposes. As Nebuchadnezzar king of all the earth liveth, and his power liveth, who hath sent thee for the upholding of every living thing; for not only all the men of the world shall serve him by thee; but also the beasts of the field, and the cattle, and the fowls of the air, shall live by thy power, under Nebuchadnezzar and all his house. For we have heard of thy wisdom and thy policies; and it is reported in all the earth that thou only art excellent in all the kingdom, and wonderful in feats of war. Now as concerning the matter, which Achiar did speak in thy council, we have heard his words; for the men of Bethulia saved him; and he declared unto them all that he had spoken unto thee.

Therefore, O lord and governor, reject not his word; but lay it up in thine heart, for it is true; for our nations shall not be punished, neither can the sword prevail against them, except they sin against their God. And now that my lord be not defeated and frustrate of his purpose, even death is now fallen upon them, and their sin hath overtaken them; wherewith they will provoke their God to anger, whensoever they shall do that which is not fit to be done. For their victuals fail them, and all their water is scant; and they have determined to lay hands upon their cattle, and purposed to consume all those things, that God hath forbidden them to eat by his laws; and are resolved to spend the firstfruits of the corn, and the tenths of wine and oil, which they had sanctified, and reserved for the priests that serve in Jerusalem before the face of our God; the which things it is not lawful for any of the people so much as to touch with their hands. For they have sent some to Jerusalem, because they also that dwell there have done likewise, to bring them a license from the senate. Therefore now when they shall bring them word, they will forthwith do it, and they shall be given thee to be destroyed the same day. Wherefore I thine handmaid, knowing all this, am fled from their presence; and God hath sent me to work things with thee, whereat all the earth shall be astonished, and whosoever shall hear it. For thy servant is religious, and serveth the God of heaven day and night; now, therefore, my lord, I will remain with thee; and thy servant will go out by night into the valley, and I will pray unto God; and he will tell me if they have committed sins. And I will come and shew it unto thee; then thou shalt go forth with all thine army, and there shall be none of them that shall resist thee. And I will lead thee through the midst of Judea, until thou come before Jerusalem; and I will set thy throne in the midst thereof; and thou shall drive them as sheep that have no shepherd. And a dog shall not so much as open his mouth at thee; for these things were told me according to my foreknowledge, and they were declared unto me, and I am sent to tell thee.

These words of Judith pleased Holofernes, and all his servants; and they marvelled at her wisdom, and said, There is not such a woman from one end of the earth to the other, both for beauty of face and wisdom of words. Likewise Holofernes said unto her thus: God hath done well to send thee before people, that strength might be in our hands, and destruction upon them that lightly regard my lord. And now thou art both beautiful in thy countenance, and witty in thy words; surely if thou do as thou hast spoken, thy God shall be my God, and thou shalt dwell in the house of king Nebuchadnezzar, and shalt be renowned throughout the whole earth. Then Holofernes commanded Bagoas his eunuch, who had charge over all that he had, to bring Judith from her tent to where he sat down to eat; and bade that they should prepare for her of his own meat, and that she should drink of his own wine. And Judith said, I will not take thereof, lest there be offence; but I will eat of my own provisions that I have brought. And Holofernes said unto her, If thy provisions should fail (deplete), how should we give thee the like? For there be none with us of thy nation. Then said Judith unto him, As thy soul liveth, my lord, thine handmaid shall not spend those things that I have, before the Lord work by mine hand the things that he hath determined. Then the servants of Holofernes ushered her back into her tent; and she slept till midnight, and arose toward the morning watch; and sent to Holofernes saying, Let my lord now command that thine handmaid may go forth unto prayer; and Holofernes commanded his guard that they should not stop her. Thus she abode in the camp three days, and each day went out in the night into the valley of Bethulia, and washed herself in a fountain of water by the camp. And when she came out, she besought the Lord God of Israel to direct her way, to the raising up of the children of her people. So she came in clean, and remained in the tent, until she finished her evening meal. And on the fourth day Holofernes made a feast to his own servants only, and called none of the officers to the banquet. Then said he to Bagoas the eunuch, Go now, and persuade this Hebrew woman which is with thee, that she come unto us, and eat and drink with us. For lo, it will be a shame for our person, if we shall let such a woman go, not having had her company; for if we draw her not unto us, she will laugh us to scorn.

Then went Bagoas from the presence of Holofernes, and came to her, and said; Let not this fair damsel fear to come to my lord; and to be honored in his presence, and drink wine, and be merry with us; and be made this day as one of the daughters of the Assyrians, which serve in the house of Nebuchadnezzar. Then said Judith unto him, Who am I now, that I should gainsay my lord? Surely whatsoever pleaseth him I will do speedily; and it shall be my joy unto the day of my death. So she arose, and decked herself with her apparel and all her woman's attire; and her maid went and laid soft skins on the ground for her over against Holofernes, that she might sit upon it to eat. Now when Judith came and sat down, Holofernes' heart was ravished with her, and his mind was moved; and he desired her greatly; for he waited a time to deceive her, from the day that he had seen her. Then said Holofernes unto her, Drink now, and be merry with us. So Judith said, I will drink now my lord, because my life is magnified in me this day more than all the days since I was born. Then she took and ate and drank before him that which her maid had prepared. And Holofernes took a great delight in her; and drank more wine than he had drunk at any time in one day since he was born. Now when the evening was come, his servants made haste to depart, and Bagoas shut his tent without, and dismissed the waiters. And Judith was left alone in the tent; and Holofernes could not move, but kept showing his teeth, as if smiling, and lay drunk upon his bed.

Now Judith had commanded her maid aforehand to stand without her tent, and to wait for her coming forth, as she did daily, even to go forth to her prayers, and she spake to Bagoas the same. Then Judith stood by his bed, and said in her heart, O Lord God of all power, look now upon the works of mine hands for the exaltation of Jerusalem; for now is the time to help thine inheritance, and to execute ~~mine~~ enterprises unto the destruction of the enemies which have arisen against us. Then she came to the pillar of the bed, near Holofernes' head, and grabbed his broad hatchet from thence; and approached him and took hold of his hair, yet he kept on smiling and could not move; and she said, Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, this day. And she smote twice upon his neck with all her might; and she took away his head, and tumbled his body down from the bed, and pulled down the canopy from the pillars; then she left the tent, as usual, and gave the head of Holofernes to her maid. And she put it in her bag of meat; so the twain went together according to their custom unto prayer. And when they passed the camp, they compassed the valley, and went up the mountain of Bethulia, and reached the gate of the city. Then she said afar off to the watchmen at the gate, Open, open now the gate; God, even our God is with us, to shew his power yet in Jerusalem; and his forces against the enemy, as he hath even done this day.

And when the men of her city heard her voice, they made haste to go down to the gate, and they called the elders of the city. And they ran all at once, both great and small; for they were surprised to see her; so they opened the gate, and received Judith and her maid; and made a fire for a light, and stood round about them. Then she said aloud, Praise, praise God, praise God, I say, for he hath not taken away mercy from the house of Israel; but hath destroyed our enemies by mine hands this night. And she took the head of Holofernes out of the bag, and shewed it to them, saying, Behold the head of Holofernes, the chief captain of the army of Assyria (Asshur); and, lo, the canopy wherein he did lie in his drunkenness; the Lord hath smitten him by the hand of a woman. As the Lord liveth, who hath kept me in my way that I went; my countenance enticed him to his destruction; and yet he hath not committed sin with me, to defile and shame me. Then all the people were marvellously astonished, bowed themselves, and worshipped God; and said with one accord, Blessed be thou, O our God, which hast this day brought to nought the enemies of thy people.

Then said Azaiah unto Judith, O daughter, blessed art thou of the Most High God above all the women upon earth; and blessed be the Lord God which hath created the heavens and the earth, which hath guided thee to the cutting off of the head of the chief of our enemies. For this, thy valor shall not depart from the hearts of men; and they shall remember the power of God forever. May God turn these things to thee for a perpetual praise, to visit thee in all good things, because thou hast not spared thy life for the affliction of our nation; but walking straight in the path of God thou hast revenged our ruin. And all the people said, So be it! So be it!

And Judith said unto them, Hear me now, my brethren, and take this head, and hang it upon the highest place of your walls. And as soon as the morning shall appear, take ye every one his weapons; and go forth every valiant man out of the city, and set ye a captain over them; as though ye would go down into the field toward the watch of the Assyrians, but go not down. Then they shall take their armour, and shall go into their camp, and stir up the captains of the army of Asshur, and they shall run to the tent of Holofernes, but shall not find him; then fear shall come upon them, and they shall flee before your face. So ye and all that inhabit the borders of Israel, shall pursue them, and overthrow them.

But before ye do these things, call me Achiar the Ammonite, that he may see and know him that despised the house of Israel; and was sent unto us, as it were to his death. Then they called Achiar out of the house of Azaiah; and when he saw the head of Holofernes in a man's hand in the assembly of the people, he fell down on his face, and his spirit failed him. But when he had recovered, he fell down at Judith's feet, and reverenced her; and said, Blessed art thou in all the tabernacle of Judah, and in all nations, which hearing thy name shall be astonished. Now therefore tell me all the things that thou hast done these days. Then Judith declared unto him in the midst of the people all that she had done, from the day she went forth until the hour she spake unto them. And when she finished speaking, the people shouted with a loud voice, and rejoiced throughout the city.

And when Achiar had seen all that the God of Israel had done, for he believed in God greatly, he circumcised the flesh of his foreskin, and was joined unto the house of Israel. And as soon as the morning came, they hanged the head of Holofernes upon the wall, and every man took his weapons; and they went forth in bands unto the straits of the mountain. And when the Assyrians saw them they did exactly according to the words of Judith. They went to their leaders at the camp, and their captains and councillors and rulers were all stirred up, and went to the tent of Holofernes, and said unto the guard, waken now our lord, for the slaves have become bold, and are come down to battle against us, that they may be utterly destroyed. Then went in Bagoas, and knocked at the door of the tent. But because none answered, he opened it, and went into the bedchamber; and found him cast upon the floor dead, and no head was found.

Therefore Bagoas cried with a loud voice, with weeping and wailing, and mighty cry; and he rent his garments. When he went into the tent where Judith lodged, and found her not, he leaped out to the people, and cried, These slaves have dealt treacherously; one woman of the Hebrews hath brought shame upon the house of king Nebuchadnezzar; for, behold, Holofernes lieth upon the ground without a head. There was a great commotion when the Assyrian army heard these words; they rent their coats, and their minds were marvellously troubled; and there was a cry and a very great noise throughout the camp; and the princes and councillors of the sea-coast nations, and all those who were not invited to Holofernes feast, rejoiced upon his death. And in the midst of great tumult and confusion, fear and trembling fell upon them, so that there was no man that dared to face his neighbor; and they fled hither and thither. Then the children of Israel pursued them, and slew them with great slaughter; and the inhabitants of Bethulia fell upon the camp of Asshur, and spoiled them, and were greatly enriched.

Then Joakim (or Seraiah) the high priest, and the elders of Jerusalem came to behold the good things that God hath shewed Israel; and to see Judith, and salute her. So they came to her, and blessed her with one accord, and said: Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, thou art the great glory of Israel, thou art the great rejoicing of our nation; thou hast done all these things by thine hand; thou hast done much good to Israel, and God is pleased therewith; blessed be thou of the Almighty Lord for evermore. And all the people said, So be it! And the people spoiled the camp of the armies of Holofernes, the captain of the hosts of king Nebuchadnezzar, the king of the organized world of that time. And they gave unto Judith the tent and all the belongings of Holofernes; and she took the stuff and laid it on her mule, and made ready her carts, and filled them up.

After this, all the women of Bethulia ran together to see her, and blessed her, and danced before her; and she took olive branches in her hand, and gave them to the women also; and they put a garland of olive upon her and her maid; and she went before the people in dance, leading all the women. And the men of Bethulia also followed in their armour with garlands, and with songs of praise and victory. Then Judith began to sing this psalm of praise unto the Lord God of Israel, and the people began to repeat after her:

> Begin unto my God with timbrels, sing unto my Lord with cymbals; tune unto him a new psalm; exalt him, and call upon his name. For God breaketh the battles; for among the camps in the midst of the people he hath delivered me out of the hands of them that persecuted me. Assur (Asshur) came out of the mountains from the north, he came with ten thousands of his army, the multitude whereof stopped the torrents, and their horsemen have covered the hills.
> He (Holofernes) bragged that he would burn up my borders, and kill my young men with the sword, and dash the sucking child against the ground, and make mine infant as a prey, and my virgins as a spoil. But the Almighty Lord hath disappointed them by the hand of a woman. For the mighty one did not fall by the sword, nor by the young men, nor did the sons of the giants set upon him, but Judith the daughter of Merari weakened him with the beauty of her countenance. For she put off the garment of her widowhood for the exaltation of those that were oppressed in Israel; and she anointed her face with ointment, and bound her hair in a tire, and took a linen garment to deceive him. Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty took his mind captive, and the hatchet passed through his neck.
> The Persians quaked at her boldness, and the Medes were daunted at her hardiness. Then my afflicted shouted for joy, and my weak ones cried aloud; but they were astonished; they lifted up their voices, but they were overtaken. The sons of the damsels have pierced them through, and wounded them as fugitives' children; they perished by the battle of the Lord. Yea, I'll sing unto the Lord a new song; O Lord, thou art great and glorious, wonderful in strength, and invincible. Let all creatures serve thee; for thou spakest, and they were made; thou didst send forth thine Spirit, and it created them; and there is none that can resist thy Word. For the mountains shall be moved from their foundations with the waters; the rocks shall melt as wax at thy presence; yet thou art merciful to those that fear thee. For all sacrifice is too little for a sweet savor unto thee; and all the fat is not sufficient for thy burnt offering; but one that feareth the Lord is great at all times.

Woe to the nations that rise up against my kindred! The Lord Almighty will take vengeance of them in the day of judgement, in putting fire and worms in their flesh; and they shall feel them, and weep forever.

Now, as soon as they all entered Jerusalem, they worshipped the Lord; and as soon as the people were purified, they offered their burnt offerings, and their free offerings, and their gifts. Judith also dedicated all the stuff of Holofernes, including his canopy, unto the Lord. So the people continued feasting in Jerusalem before the temple of the Lord, in the courtyard. Then they all returned to their places of dwellings, and Judith returned to Bethulia, and remained there. And in her own time she was honored throughout the land. Many desired her, and proposed to marry her; but none knew her all the days of her life, after that Manasses her husband was dead, and was gathered unto his people. But she increased more and more in honor, and waxed old in her husband's house, being an hundred and five years old; and made her maid free.

So Judith died in Bethulia, and they buried her in the cave of her husband Manasses. And all the house of Israel lamented her seven days; and before she died, she did distribute her goods to all them that were nearest of kindred to Manasses her husband, and to them that were nearest of her kindred. And there was none that made the children of Israel any more afraid in all the days of Judith, nor a long time after her death.

Now this incidence of Holofernes death by the woman of the Hebrews caused a great shame in the house of Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians and the Babylonians. And although the host of Nebuchadnezzar had pitched against Jerusalem on the tenth day of the tenth month, in the ninth year of his reign (10 Tebeth, 617 B.C.); and built shelters and fortresses round about; the city was not besieged until the eleventh year of Zedekiah king of Judah. On the ninth day of the fourth month (9 Tammuz, 607 B.C.) famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land. And the city was penetrated (broken up), and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden; and Zedekiah fled toward the plain. And the armies of the Chaldees pursued after Zedekiah, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and his men of war fled from him. So they took the king of Judah, and brought him to the king of Babylon to Riblah, and they gave judgement upon him; for they were wroth of the shame caused by the Hebrews. And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.

On the seventh day of the fifth month, in the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar (7 Ab, 607 B.C.), Nebuchadnezzar's captain of the guard Nebuzar-adan came unto Jerusalem; and he burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, every great man's house, and all the dwelling places of Jerusalem. And the army of the Chaldees brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about. And the remnant of the multitude did Nebuzar-adan carry away with him, along with all the brass, and silver, and utensils, and all that they possessed. And Nebuzar-adan took Seraiah (or Joakim) the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and three keepers of the door; then he searched throughout the city, and found a eunuch who had charge of the men of war; and seven of the king's counsellors; and the head scribe of the host, and sixty men of the people of the land.

Then Nebuzar-adan brought them to the king of Babylon, who was at this time at Riblah. And the king smote them, and put them to death in Riblah, in the land of Hamath. Thus Judah was taken captive. All together they had taken captive four thousand and six hundred souls, in this manner; although others had been taken at the time of Jehoiakim king of Judah, along with Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, to serve in the king's court, between 628 and 618 B.C.:

In his seventh year (617 B.C.) Nebuchadnezzar carried away of the Jews;	3,023
in his eighteenth year (607 B.C.) Nebuchadnezzar carried away;	832 in his twenty-third year (602 B.C.) Nebuzar-adan carried away;	745

Now during this time Jeremiah was the prophet of Judah; who was working on the compilation of the histories of both Judah and Israel, from where Samuel had left off. Jeremiah's prophetic service began in the thirteenth year of Josiah son of Amon the king of Judah, in 647 B.C. and lasted until the fifth month of 607 B.C., when Jerusalem was burnt by Nebuzar-adan on 7 Ab, 607 B.C. Jeremiah was the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that dwelt in Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin.

And the Lord appeared unto Jeremiah, and said: Before I formed thee in the belly, I knew thee; before thou camest forth out of the womb, I sanctified thee, and ordained thee a prophet unto the nations. Then said Jeremiah, Ah, Lord God! behold, I cannot speak, for I am a child. But the Lord said unto him, Say not, I am a child! For thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee; and whatsoever I command thou shalt speak; be not afraid of their faces; for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord. Then the Lord put forth his hand, and touched his mouth, and said, Behold I have put my words in thy mouth. Behold, this day I have set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms; to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build and to plant. And the Lord said unto Jeremiah, What seest thou? And he replied, I see a rod of an almond tree. Then the Lord said, Thou hast seen well, for I will hasten my word to perform it. The words of the Lord came to him the second time, What seest thou? And Jeremiah replied, I see a boiling pot,

From the time the nation of Israel was divided into the northern ten-tribe kingdom of Israel and the southern two-tribe kingdom of Judah and Benjamin, circa 997 B.C., until the desolation of Jerusalem and Judah by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylonia and Assyria, circa 607 B.C.; twenty kings had reigned over Judah, and nineteen over Israel. These are their names, and periods of their reigns, rounded off to the nearest year in the Gregorian calendar; and also the names of known prophets who ministered to these kings:

and the face thereof toward the north. Then the Lord said unto him, Behold, out of the north an evil shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land. For, lo, I will call all the families of the kingdom of the north, and gather them together in one place of assembly; and they shall come, and set every one his throne at the entrance gates of Jerusalem, against the walls thereof, and against all the cities of Judah. And I will utter my judgements against them touching all their wickedness; who have forsaken me, and are now dead in the Spirit, and are fallen to the ground.

Therefore, thou Jeremiah gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak unto them all that I command thee; be not dismayed at their faces, lest thou be confounded before them. For, behold, I have made thee this day a fortified city, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls against the whole land; against the kings of Judah, and their princes; against the priests thereof, and against all the people of the land. Although they shall fight against thee, they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, to deliver thee, saith the Lord.

Jeremiah prophecied, along with other prophets before him, until the fall of Jerusalem in 607 B.C. The lamentations of Jeremiah describe the conditions of the holy city, after the burning of the house of the Lord by Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard of Nebuchadnezzar king of the Assyrians and the Babylonians. These are the words of Jeremiah the prophet, who began his service in the thirteenth year of king Josiah of Judah, or in 647 B.C., to warn the southern kingdom of Judah of her impending destruction. In 625 B.C. Jeremiah was commanded by the Lord to write down all the things which have been revealed unto him, and all that which he hath seen; from the time of Josiah until the time of Jehoiakim (or Eliakim). And he continued to perform the Lord's work until the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah; when Jerusalem was burned by Nebuzar-adan in 607 B.C. The Lord also gave Jeremiah a secretary, namely Baruch son of Nerias, who continued his work, and kept the history of Israel, even when he was taken to dwell in Babylon, among other people of the court of Nebuchadnezzar. Now the Lamentations and Words of Jeremiah are abridged herewith. While the Lamentations were written after the fall of Jerusalem in 607 B.C., the Words of Jeremiah include the conditions of the Jews, his prophecies and exhortations, going back forty years, to 647 B.C.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH

(Prophet of the Lord during the reigns of Josiah, 659-628 B.C., Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, 628-618 B.C., Jehoiachin and Zedekiah, 617-607 B.C., kings of Judah.)

How doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! How is she become as a widow! She that was great among the nations, and princes among the provinces, how is she become a tributary! She weepeth sore in the night, her tears on her cheek; among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her; all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies. Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and great servitude. She dwelleth among the heathen, and findeth no rest; all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts; all her gates are desolate; her priests sigh, and her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

Her adversaries rule, and her enemies prosper; for the Lord hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions; her children are gone into captivity before the enemy. And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed; her princes have become like harts that find no pasture, nor have strength before the pursuer. Jerusalem dwelt in the past, and remembered the pleasant things of the days of old, in her afflictions and miseries; and when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, none did help her; and the adversary saw her, and mocked at her sabbaths. Jerusalem hath sinned, therefore she is removed, and chastened. All that honored her now despise her; because they have seen her nakedness; yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward with shame and guilt.

Her filthiness is in her skirts, she remembers not her last end; therefore she descended to the lowest regions slowly and wonderfully; she had no comforter. O Lord, behold my affliction, for the enemy hath glorified himself, unto the magnification of wickedness and evil. For the adversary hath spread out his hand upon all her pleasant things; for now the heathen hath entered the sanctuary; whom thou didst command that they should not enter into the congregation of Israel; has trespassed to pollute and defile thy holy house. All her people that are left in the city sigh, and seek bread; they have traded their pleasant things for meat, to relieve the pangs of hunger. Behold, O Lord, and consider my affliction, for I am become vile.

How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger; and cast down from heaven unto the earth the beauty of Israel, and remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger! The Lord hath swallowed up the habitations of Jacob, and hath not pitied; he hath thrown down in his wrath the strongholds of the daughter of Judah; he hath brought them down to the ground, and polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof. He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horns of Israel; he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about. He hath bent his bow like an enemy; he stood with his right hand as an adversary; and slew that were pleasant to the eye in the dwelling of the daughter of Zion, and poured out his fury like fire.

The Lord hath swallowed up Israel, and all her palaces, as an enemy; and hath destroyed their strongholds; and hath increased mourning and lamentation in the daughter of Judah. And he hath violently taken away his tabernacle, as if it were a garden; he hath destroyed his places of assembly; the Lord hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in his wrath and fury the king and the priest. The Lord hath cast off his altar, and abhorred his sanctuary; he hath given into the hand of the enemy the wall of her palaces; and they have entered the house of the Lord and polluted it; they have made noise in the house of the Lord, as in the day of a solemn feast. The Lord hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion; he hath stretched out a line, and hath not withdrawn his hand from destroying; therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament, they languished together.

Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and broken her bars; her kings and princes and the wisest of the ancients are among the Gentiles; the law is no more (in Jerusalem), and her prophets find no vision from the Lord. Her elders sit upon the ground, and keep silence; they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth; the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground. Mine eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings swoon in the streets of the city. They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? and pour out their soul into their mother's bosom.

What thing shall I take to witness for thee? What shall I compare thee with, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? For thy breach is great like the sea; who can heal thee? Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee; and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have sought false burdens and causes for banishment. All that pass by clap their hands in amazement; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call the perfection of beauty; the joy of the whole earth? All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee; they hiss and gnash the teeth; they say, We have swallowed her up; certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, we have seen it. The Lord hath done that which he had devised; he hath fulfilled his word; he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied; and he hath caused the enemy to rejoice over thee; he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

O wall of the daughter of Zion, let tears run down like a river, day and night; give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye cease. Arise ye, cry out in the night; in the beginning of the watches pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord; lift up thine hands toward him for the life of thy young children, that faint for hunger in every street. Behold, O Lord, and consider to whom thou hast done this; shall the women eat their fruit, their fetus ~~of~~ a span long? Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord? The young and the old lie on the ground in the streets; my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword; thou hast slain them in the day of thy wrath, and pitied not. Thou hast called as in a solemn day my terrors round about, so that in the day of the Lord's anger none escaped nor remained; those that I have swaddled and brought up hath the enemy consumed.

I am the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath. He hath led me, and brought darkness, not light. Surely against me he is turned; his hand is turned against me all the day long. My flesh and my skin hath he made old, and hath broken my bones. He hath compassed me with gall and travail. He hath set me in a dark place, as dead of old. He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out; he hath made my yoke heavy. Also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer. He hath enclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked. He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places. He hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces, and hath made me desolate. He hath bent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow. He hath caused the arrows of his quiver to enter into my reins.

I (Jeremiah) was a derision to my people, and their song all the day. He hath filled me with bitterness, and made me drunken with wormwood; he made me chew gravel stones, and covered me with ashes. And thou hast removed my soul far off from peace, and from prosperity. And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the Lord; remembering mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall. My soul hath them still in remembrance; and I am humbled by it; this I recall to my mind, and it gives me hope. It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. They are new every morning, great is thy faithfulness. The Lord is my portion, saith my Soul; therefore I will hope in him. The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth; for he sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him; he putteth his mouth in the dust, if so be there may be hope; he giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him, his cup of reproach is filled to the brim. Behold, the Lord will not cast off for ever; but though he cause grief, yet he will have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies. For he doth not afflict without a cause, nor grieve the children of men. And to crush under his feet all the prisoners of the earth; to turn aside the right of a man before the face of the Most High; to subvert a man in his cause, the Lord approveth not.

Who is he that saith, and it cometh to pass, when the Lord commandeth it not? Out of the mouth of the Most High proceedeth not evil and good? Wherefore doth a living man complain to another for the punishment of his sins? Let us ~~search and~~ try our ways, and turn again to the Lord. Let us lift up our heart, and our hands unto the God in heaven. How is the gold become dim! How is the most fine gold changed! The stones of the sanctuary are scattered in the streets. The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the Potter! Even the sea monsters draw out the breast; they give suck to their young ones; the daughter of my people is become cruel, like the ostriches in the wilderness. The tongue of the sucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst; the young children ask for bread; and no man shares with them. They that did feed delicately are now desolate in the streets; they that were brought up in scarlet embrace dunghills. For the punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the punishment of the sin of Sodom, that was overthrown in a moment, and none stayed her doom.

Her Nazarites were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk; they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire; their appearance now is blacker than coal; they are not known in the streets; their skin cleaveth to their bones, it is withered, and their skeleton is become like a stick. They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger; for these pine away, stricken through for want of the fruits of the field. The hands of the unbelieving women have boiled their own children; they were their meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people. The Lord hath accomplished his fury; he hath poured out his fierce anger, and kindled a fire in Zion; and hath devoured the foundations thereof. The kings of the earth, and the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy should have entered into the gates of Jerusalem.

For the sins of her prophets, and the iniquities of her priests, have shed the blood of the just and pious in their midst. They have wandered as blind men in the streets; they have polluted themselves with innocent blood and sin, so that men could not touch their garments. The men of God cried unto them, Depart ye; it is unclean; depart, depart, touch not. And when they fled away and wandered among the heathen, they said, behold, they shall no more sojourn there. Yea, the anger of the Lord hath divided them; he will no more regard them; they obeyed not the laws of the priesthood, nor did they favor their elders. Ignorance, lust, and greed overtook them; the consequence of their sins and transgressions destroyed them; and the face of the Lord is turned away from them. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, was taken in their pits; of whom it is written that, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen.

Rejoice now, and be glad in your hearts, O daughter of Edom, that dwelleth in the land of Uz; for the cup also shall pass through unto thee; thou shalt be drunken with pride and vanity, and shalt make thyself naked; and he will visit thine iniquity and will discover thy sins which thou committeth in secret. Remember, O Lord, what is come upon us; consider and behold our reproach. Our inheritance is turned to strangers, our houses to aliens. We are orphans and fatherless, our mothers as widows.

The enemy hath taken our property and possessions; and selleth our water and wood for money. They persecute us as we labor, and have no rest. We have been bondmen to the Egyptians, and now to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread. Our fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their iniquities. Servants have ruled over us, and there is none to deliver us out of their hand. Our skins are turned black like an oven, because of the terrible famine; and because of thy curse upon those who transgress thy laws, judgments, and statutes. The joy of our heart is departed, our dances and merrymaking is turned into mourning. The crown is fallen from our head, woe unto us that we have sinned! For this our heart is faint, and our eyes dim. On the mountain of Zion, which is now desolate, the foxes walk upon it. But thou O Lord, remainest for ever; and thy throne from generation to generation. Wherefore dost thou forget us, and forsake us so long a time? Turn thou us unto thee, O Lord, and we shall be turned unto thee; renew our days of old; for thou hast utterly rejected us, and thou art very wroth against us.

WORDS OF JEREMIAH

(Prophet of the Lord, from the time of Josiah, 659 - 628 B.C., until Zedekiah, 617 - 607 B.C.; kings of Judah)

The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin; to whom the word of the Lord came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign (647 B.C.). It came also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month.

The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations. Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, I cannot speak; for I am a child. But the Lord said unto me, Say not, I am a child; for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak. Be not afraid of their faces, for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the Lord. Then the Lord put forth his hand, and touched my mouth, and said unto me, Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth. See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, what seest thou? And I said, I see a rod of an almond tree. Then said the Lord unto me, Thou hast well seen, for I will hasten my word to perform it. And the word of the Lord came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I see a seething pot; and the face thereof is toward the north. Then the Lord said unto me, Out of the north an evil shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land. For, lo, I will call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the Lord; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah. And I will utter my judgments against them touching all their wickedness, who have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, and worshipped the idols of their own hands. Thou therefore gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak unto them all that I command thee; be not dismayed at their faces, lest thou be confounded before them. For, behold, I have made thee this day a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brazen walls against the whole land; against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land. And they shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee.

Moreover the word of the Lord came to me, Go and cry in the ears of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the Lord; I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals, when thou wentest after me in the wilderness, in a land that was not sown. Israel was holiness unto the Lord, and the firstfruits of his increase; all that devour him shall offend; evil shall come upon them, saith the Lord. Hear ye the word of the Lord, O house of Jacob, and all the families of the house of Israel; thus saith the Lord, What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain? Neither said they, Where is the Lord that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, that led us through the wilderness, through a land of deserts and of pits, through a land of drought, and of the shadow of death, through a land that no man passed through, and where no man dwelt? And I brought you into a plentiful country, to eat the fruit thereof and the goodness thereof; but when ye entered, ye defiled my land, and made mine heritage an abomination. The priests said not, Where is the Lord? And they that handle the law knew me not; the pastors (shepherds) also transgressed against me, and the prophets prophesied by Baal, and walked after things that do not profit. Wherefore I will yet plead with you, saith the Lord, and with your children's children. For pass over the isles of Chittim, and see; and send unto Kedar, and consider diligently, and see if there be such a thing. Hath a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? But my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit. Be astonished, O ye heavens, at this; and be horribly afraid, be ye very desolate, saith the Lord. For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters; and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water.

Is Israel a servant? Is he a homeborn slave? Why is he spoiled? The young lions roared upon him, and yelled, and they made his land waste; his cities are burned without inhabitant. Also the children of Noph and Tahapanes have broken the crown of thy head. Hast thou not procured this unto thyself, in that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, when he led thee by the way? And now what hast thou to do in the way of Egypt, to drink the waters of Sihor? Or what hast thou to do in the way of Assyria, to drink the waters of the river? Thine own wickedness shall correct thee, and thy backslidings shall reprove thee. Know therefore and see that it is evil and bitter, that thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God, and that my fear is not in thee, saith the Lord God of Hosts.

For of old time I have broken thy yoke, and burst thy bands; and thou saidst, I will not transgress; when upon every high hill and under every green tree thou wanderest, playing the harlot. Yet I had planted thee a noble vine, wholly a right seed; how then art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a strange vine unto me? For though thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord God. How canst thou say, I am not polluted, I have not gone after Baalim? See thy way in the valley, know what thou hast done; thou art a swift dromedary traversing her ways; a wild ass used to the wilderness, that snuffeth up the wind at her pleasure; in her occasion who can turn her away? All they that seek her will not weary themselves; in her month they shall find her. Withhold thy foot from being unshod, and thy throat from thirst; but thou saidst, There is no hope; no, for I have loved strangers, and after them will I go. As the thief is ashamed when he is found, so is the house of Israel ashamed; they, their kings, their princes, and their priests and their prophets, saying to a stock (wood), Thou art my father; and to a stone, Thou hast brought me forth; for they have turned their backs unto me, and not their faces; but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us. But where are thy gods that thou hast made thee? Let them arise, if they can save thee in the time of thy trouble; for according to the number of thy cities are thy gods, O Judah. Wherefore will ye plead with me? Ye all have transgressed against me, saith the Lord. In vain have I smitten your children; they received no correction; your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion.

O generation, see ye the word of the Lord. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? A land of darkness? Wherefore say my people, We are lords; we will come no more unto thee? Doth a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire? Yet my people have forgotten me days without number. Why trimmest thou thy way to seek love? Therefore hast thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways. Also in thy skirts is found the blood of the souls of the poor innocents; I have not found it by secret search, but upon all these. Yet thou sayest, Because I am innocent, surely his anger shall turn from me. Behold, I will plead with thee, because thou sayest, I have not sinned. Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way? Thou also shalt be ashamed of Egypt, as thou wast ashamed of Assyria. Yea, thou shalt go forth from him, and thine hands upon thine head; for the Lord hath rejected thy confidences, and thou shalt not prosper in them.

They say, If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, shall he return unto her again? Shall not that land be greatly polluted? But thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; yet return again to me, saith the Lord. Lift up thine eyes unto the high places, and see where thou hast not been lien with. In the ways hast thou sat for them, as the Arabian in the wilderness; and thou hast polluted the land with thy whoredoms and with thy wickedness. Therefore the showers have been withholden, and there hath been no latter rain; and thou hadst a whore's forehead, thou refusedst to be ashamed. Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide of my youth? Will he reserve his anger for ever? Will he keep it to the end? Behold, thou hast spoken and done evil things as thou couldest.

The Lord said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king, Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? She is gone up upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot. And I said after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me. But she returned not. And her treacherous sister Judah saw it. And I saw, when for all the causes whereby backsliding Israel committed adultery I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not, but went and played the harlot also. And it came to pass through the lightness of her whoredom, that she defiled the land, and committed adultery with stones and with stocks. And yet for all this her treacherous sister Judah hath not turned unto me with her whole heart, but feignedly, saith the Lord. And the Lord said unto me, The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah. Go and proclaim these words toward the north, and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the Lord; and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever. Only acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou hast transgressed against the Lord thy God; and hast scattered thy ways to the strangers under every green tree, and ye have not obeyed my voice, saith the Lord. Turn, O backsliding children, saith the Lord; for I am married unto you; and I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion. And I will give you shepherds according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding. And it shall come to pass, when ye be multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the Lord, they shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of the Lord; neither shall it come to mind; neither shall they remember it; neither shall they visit it; neither shall that be done any more. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem; neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil hearts. In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.

But I said, How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a pleasant land, a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? And I said, Thou shalt call me, My father; and shalt not turn away from me. Surely as a wife treacherously departeth from her husband, so have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the Lord. A voice was heard upon the high places, weeping and supplications of the children of Israel; for they have perverted their way, and they have forgotten the Lord their God. Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings. Say, We come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God. Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains; truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel. For shame hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth; their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters. We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us; for we have sinned against the Lord our God, we and our fathers, from our youth even unto this day; and have not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God.

If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, return unto me; and if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight, then shalt thou not be removed. And thou shalt swear, The Lord liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; and the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory. For thus saith the Lord to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, Break up your fallow ground, and sow not among thorns. Circumcise yourselves to the Lord, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings. Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land; cry, gather together, and say, Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities. Set up the standard toward Zion; retire, stay not; for I will bring evil from the north, and a great destruction. The lion is come up from his thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant. For this gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl; for the fierce anger of the Lord is not turned back from us. And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the Lord, that the heart of the king, and the heart of the princes shall fail, and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

Then said I, Ah, Lord God! surely thou hast greatly deceived this people and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall have peace; whereas the sword reacheth unto the soul. At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem, A dry wind of the high places in the wilderness toward the daughter of my people, not to fan, nor to cleanse, even a full wind from those places shall come unto me; now also will I give sentence against them. Behold, he shall come up as clouds, and his chariots shall be as a whirlwind; his horses are swifter than eagles. Woe unto us! For we are spoiled. O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved. How long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? For a voice declareth from Dan, and publisheth affliction from mount Ephraim. Make ye mention to the nations; behold, publish against Jerusalem, that watchers come from a far country, and give out their voice against the cities of Judah. As keepers of a field, are they against her round about; because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the Lord. Thy way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee; this is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reacheth unto thine heart.

My bowels, my bowels! I am pained at my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me; I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war. Destruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled; suddenly are my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment. How long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet? For my people is foolish, they have not known me; they are sottish children, and they have none understanding; they are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no knowledge. I beheld the earth, and, lo, it was without form, and void; and the heavens, and they had no light. I beheld the mountains, and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly. I beheld, and, lo, there was no man, and all the birds of the heavens were fled. I beheld, and, lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger. For thus hath the Lord said, The whole land shall be desolate; yet will I not make a full end. For this shall the earth mourn, and the heavens above be black; because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and will not repent, neither will I turn back from it. The whole city shall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks; every city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein. And when thou art spoiled, what wilt thou do? Though thou clothest thyself with crimson, though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold, though thou rentest thy face with painting, in vain shalt thou make thyself fair; thy lovers will despise thee, they will seek thy life. For I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child, the voice of the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that spreadeth her hands, saying, Woe is me now! For my soul is wearied because of murderers.

Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it. And though they say, The Lord liveth; surely they swear falsely. O Lord, are not thine eyes upon the truth? Thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction; they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return. Therefore I said, Surely these are poor; they are foolish; for they know not the way of the Lord, nor the judgment of their God. I will get me unto the great men, and will speak unto them; for they have known the way of the Lord, and the judgment of their God; but these have altogether broken the yoke, and burst the bonds. Wherefore a lion out of the forest shall slay them, and a wolf of the evenings shall spoil them, a leopard shall watch over their cities; every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces; because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings are increased. How shall I pardon thee for this? Thy children have forsaken me, and sworn by them that are no gods; when I had fed them to the full, they then committed adultery, and assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses. They were as fed horses in the morning; every one neighed after his neighbor's wife. Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord; And shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

Go ye up upon her walls, and destroy; but make not a full end; take away her battlements, for they are not the Lord's. For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the Lord. They have belied the Lord, and said, It is not he; neither shall evil come upon us; neither shall we see sword nor famine; and the prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them; thus shall it be done unto them. Wherefore thus saith the Lord, God of Hosts, Because ye speak this word, behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them. Lo, I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the Lord; it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say. Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men. And they shall eat up thine harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat. They shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds; they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig trees; they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword. Nevertheless in those days, saith the Lord, I will not make a full end with you.

And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, Wherefore doeth the Lord our God all these things unto us? Then shalt thou answer them, Like as ye have forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours. Declare this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying, Hear now this, O foolish people, and without understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not. Fear ye not me? saith the Lord; Will ye not tremble at my presence, which have placed the sand for the bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it; and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it? But this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone. Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season; he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest. Your iniquities have turned away these things; and your sins have withholden good things from you. For among my people are found the wicked; they lay wait, as he that setteth snares; they set a trap, they catch men. As a cage is full of birds, so are their houses full of deceit; therefore they are become great, and waxen rich. They are waxen fat, they shine; yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked; they judge not the cause, the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge. Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord; shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land; the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by means of their authority; and my people love to have it so; what will ye do in the end thereof?

O ye children of Benjamin, gather yourselves to flee out of the midst of Jerusalem, and blow the trumpet in Tekoa, and set up a sign of fire in Beth-haccerem; for evil appeareth out of the north, and great destruction. I have likened the daughter of Zion to a comely and delicate woman. The shepherds with their flocks shall come unto her; they shall pitch their tents against her round about; they shall feed every one in her place. Prepare ye war against her; arise, and let us go up at noon. Woe unto us! for the day passeth away; for the shadows of the evening are stretched out. Arise, and let us go by night, and let us destroy her palaces. For thus hath the Lord of Hosts said, Hew ye down trees, and cast a mount against Jerusalem; this is the city to be visited; oppression in the midst of her. As a fountain casteth out her waters, so she casteth out her wickedness. Violence and spoil is heard in her; before me continually is grief and wounds. Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul depart from thee; lest I make thee desolate forever, a land not inhabited.

Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine; turn back thine hand as a grapegatherer into the baskets. To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? Behold, their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken; behold, the word of the Lord is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it. Therefore I am full of the fury of the Lord; I am weary with holding in. I will pour it out upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together; for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is pregnant. And their houses shall be given unto others, with their fields and wives together; for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the Lord. For from the least of them even unto the greatest, every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. They have healed also the hurt of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? Nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush; therefore they shall fall among them that fall, at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths; where is the good way, walk therein; and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein. Also I set watchmen over you, saying, Hearken to the sound of the trumpet. But they said, We will not hearken.

Therefore hear, ye nations, and know O congregation, what is among them. Hear, O earth; behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it. To what purpose cometh there to me incense from Sheba, and the sweet cane from a far country? Your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will lay stumblingblocks before this people, and the fathers and the sons together shall fall upon them; the neighbor and his friend shall perish.

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, a people cometh from the north country; and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth. They shall lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel, and have no mercy; their voice roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion. We have heard the fame thereof; our hands wax feeble; anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail. Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way; for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side. O daughter of my people, gird thee with sackcloth, and wallow thyself in ashes; make thee mourning, as for an only son, most bitter lamentation; for the spoiler shall suddenly come upon us. I have set thee for a tower and a fortress among my people, that thou mayest know and try their way. They are all grievous revolters walking with slanders; they are brass and iron; they are all corrupters. The bellows are burned, the lead is consumed of the fire; the founder melteth in vain; for the wicked are not plucked away. Reprobate silver shall men call them, because the Lord hath rejected them.

The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying: Stand in the gate of the Lord's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, Hear the word of the Lord, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Trust ye not in lying words, saying, The temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord! For if ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings; if ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbor; if ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt; then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.

Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not; and come and stand before me in this house, which is called by my name, and say, We are delivered to do all these abominations? Is this house, which is called by my name, become a den of robbers in your eyes? Behold, even I have seen it, saith the Lord. But go ye now unto my place which was in Shiloh, where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for the wickedness of my people Israel. And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the Lord, and I spake unto you, rising up early and speaking, but ye heard not; and I called you, but ye answered not; therefore will I do unto this house, which is called by my name, wherein ye trust, and unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers, as I have done to Shiloh. And I will cast you out of my sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim. Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them; neither make intercession to me, for I will not hear thee. Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem? The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger. Do they provoke me to anger? saith the Lord; Do they not provoke themselves to the confusion of their own faces? Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Put your burnt offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh. For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices; but this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward. Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets; daily rising up early and sending them; yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck; they did worse than their fathers. Therefore thou shalt speak all these words unto them, but they will not hearken to thee; thou shalt also call unto them, but they will not answer thee. But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the Lord their God, nor receiveth correction; truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

Cut off thine hair, O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places; for the Lord hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath. For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight, saith the Lord; they have set their abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it. And they have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter; for they shall bury in Tophet, till there be no place. And the carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away. Then will I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; for the land shall be desolate.

At that time, saith the Lord, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves. And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped; they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth. And death shall be chosen rather than life by all the residue of them that remain of this evil family, which remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith the Lord of Hosts.

Moreover thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord, Shall they fall, and not arise? Shall he turn away, and not return? Why then is this people of Jerusalem slidden back by a perpetual backsliding? They hold fast deceit, they refuse to return. I hearkened and heard, but they spake not aright; no man repented of his wickedness, and said, What have I done? Every one turned to his course, as the horse rusheth into the battle. Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord. How do ye say, We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us? Lo, certainly in vain made he it; the pen of the scribes is in vain. The wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken; lo, they have rejected the word of the Lord; and what wisdom is in them? Therefore will I have their wives unto others, and their fields to them that shall inherit them; for every one from the least even unto the greatest is given to covetousness, from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. For they have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace. Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? Nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush; therefore shall they fall among them that fall; in the time of their visitation they shall be cast down, saith the Lord.

I will surely consume them, saith the Lord; There shall be no grapes on the vine, nor figs on the fig tree, and the leaf shall fade; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them. Why do we sit still? Assemble yourselves, and let us enter into the defenced (fortified) cities, and let us be silent there; for the Lord our God hath put us to silence, and given us water of gall to drink, because we have sinned against the Lord. We looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble! The snorting of his horses was heard from Dan. The whole land trembled at the sound of the neighing of his strong ones; for they are come, and have devoured the land, and all that is in it; the city, and those that dwell therein. For, behold, I will send serpents, cockatrices, among ~~you~~, which will not be charmed, and they shall bite you, saith the Lord. I would comfort myself against sorrow, my heart is faint in me. Behold the voice of the cry of the daughter of my people because of them that dwell in a far country, Is not the Lord in Zion? Is not her king in her? Why have they provoked me to anger with their graven images, and with strange vanities? The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved. For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt; I am gloomy; astonishment hath taken hold on me. Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?

Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people! Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men; that I might leave my people, and go from them! For they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies; they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth, for they proceed from evil to evil; and they know not me, saith the Lord. Take ye heed every one of his neighbor, and trust ye not in any brother; for every brother will utterly supplant, and every neighbor will walk with slanders. And they will deceive every one his neighbor, and will not speak the truth; they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity. Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit; through deceit they refuse to know me, saith the Lord. Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Behold, I will melt them, and try (test) them; for how shall I do for the daughter of my people? Their tongue is as an arrow shot out, it speaketh deceit; one speaketh peaceably to his neighbor with his mouth, but in heart he layeth his wait. Shall I not visit them for these things? saith the Lord; Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this? For the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and for the habitations of the wilderness a lamentation; because they are burned up, so that none can pass through them; neither can men hear the voice of the cattle; both the fowl of the heavens and the beasts are fled; they are gone. And I will make Jerusalem heaps, and a den of dragons; and I will make the cities of Judah desolate, without inhabitant.

Who is the wise man, that may understand this, and to whom the mouth of the Lord hath spoken, that he may declare it; for what land perisheth and is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through? And the Lord saith, Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein; but have walked after the imagination of their own heart and after Baalim, which their fathers taught them, therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will feed them, even this people, with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink. I will scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known; and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Consider ye, and call for the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning women, that they may come. And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters. For a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! We are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because our dwellings have cast us out.

Yet hear the word of the Lord, O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbor lamentation. For death is come up into our windows, and is entered into our palaces, to cut off the children from without, and the young men from the streets. Speak, thus saith the Lord, Even the carcases of men shall fall as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvestman, and none shall gather them. Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty glory in his might, let not the rich glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth; for in these things I delight, saith the Lord.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will punish all the circumcised with the uncircumcised; Egypt, and Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab, and all that are in the utmost corners, that dwell in the wilderness; for all these nations are uncircumcised in the body; and all the house of Israel are uncircumcised in the heart.

Hear ye the word which the Lord speaketh unto you, O house of Israel; thus saith the Lord, Learn not the way of the heathen, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them. The customs of the people are vain, as one cutteth a tree out of the forest, the work of the hands of the workman, with the axe. They deck the wood with silver and with gold; they fasten it with nails and with hammers, that it move not. The upright are as the palm tree, that speak not; they must needs be borne, because they cannot move. Be not afraid of them; for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good.

Forasmuch as there is none like unto thee, O Lord; thou art great, and thy name is great in might. Who would not fear thee, O King of nations? For to thee doth it appertain; forasmuch as among all the wise men of the nations, and in all their kingdoms, there is none like unto thee. But they are altogether brutish and foolish; the stock is a doctrine of vanities. Silver spread into plates is brought from Tarshish, and gold from Uphaz, the work of the workman, and handiwork of the founder; blue and purple is their clothing, the work of cunning men. But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting King; at his wrath the earth shall tremble, and the nations shall not be able to abide his indignation. Thus shall ye say unto them, The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, they shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens. He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom; and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion. When he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures. Every man is brutish in his knowledge, every founder is confounded by the graven image; for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them. They are vanity, and the work of errors; in the time of their visitation they shall perish. The portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things; and Israel is the rod of his inheritance; the Lord of Hosts is his name.

Gather up thy wares out of the land, O inhabitant of the fortress. For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will sling out the inhabitants of the land, and will distress them, that they may know it to be so. Woe is me for my hurt! My wound is grievous; but I (Jeremiah) said, Truly this is a grief, and I must bear it. My tabernacle is spoiled, and all my cords are broken. My children are gone forth of me, and they are not; there is none to stretch forth my tent any more, and to set up my curtains. For the shepherds are become brutish, and have not sought the Lord; therefore they shall not prosper, and all their flocks shall be scattered. Behold, the noise of the bruit is come, and a great commotion out of the north country, and from the east, to make the cities of Judah desolate, a den of jackals. O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps. O Lord, correct me, but with judgment; not in thine anger, lest thou bring me to nothing. Pour out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not; and upon the families that call not on thy name, but despise thee; for they have eaten up Jacob, and devour him, and consumed him, and have made his habitation a ruin.

The word that came to Jeremiah, from the Lord, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah,and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel; Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this covenant, which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt; from the iron furnace, saying, Obey my voice, and do according to all which I command you; so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God; that I may perform the oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day. Then answered I (Jeremiah), So be it, O Lord. Then the Lord said unto me, Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and do them. For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice. Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but walked every one in the ignorance of their evil heart; therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do, but they did them not. And the Lord said unto me, A conspiracy is found among the men of Judah, and among the inhabitants of Jerusalem. They are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they went after other gods to serve them; the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers.

Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able to escape; and though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them. Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, and cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense; but they shall not save them at all in the time of their trouble. For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to that shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal. Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them; for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their trouble. What hath my beloved to do in mine house, seeing she hath wrought lewdness with many, and the holy flesh is passed from thee? When thou doest evil, then thou rejoicest. The Lord called thy name, A green olive tree, fair, and of goodly fruit; with the noise of a great tumult he hath kindled fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken. For the Lord of Hosts, that planted thee, hath pronounced evil against thee, for the evil of the house of Israel and of the house of Judah, which they have done against themselves to provoke me to anger, in offering incense unto Baal.

And the Lord hath given me (Jeremiah) knowledge of it, and I know it; then thou shewedst me their doings. But I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter; and I knew not that they had devised devices against me, saying, Let us destroy the tree with the fruit thereof; and let us cut him off from the land of the living, that his name may be no more remembered. But, O Lord of Hosts, that judgest righteously, that triest the reins and the heart, let me see thy vengeance on them; for unto thee have I revealed my cause. And thus saith the Lord of the men of Anathoth, that seek thy life, saying Prophesy not in the name of the Lord, that thou die not by our hand. Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Behold, I will punish them; the young men shall die by the sword; their sons and their daughters shall die by famine; and there shall be no remnant of them; for I will bring evil upon the men of Anathoth, even the year of their visitation.

Righteous art thou, O Lord, when I plead with thee; yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments; Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper? Wherefore are all they happy that deal very treacherously? Thou hast planted them, yea, they have taken root; they grow, yea, they bring forth fruit; thou art near in their mouth, and far from their reins. But thou, O Lord, knowest me; thou hast seen me, and tried mine heart toward thee; pull them out like sheep for the slaughter, and prepare them for the day of slaughter. How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein? The beasts are consumed, and the birds; because they said, He shall not see our last end. If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? And if in the land of peace, thou trustedst, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan? For even thy brethren, and the house of thy father, even they have dealt treacherously with thee; yea, they have called a multitude after thee; believe them not, though they speak fair words unto thee.

I have forsaken mine house, I have left mine heritage; I have given the dearly beloved of my soul into the hand of her enemies. Mine heritage is unto me as a lion in the forest; it crieth out against me; therefore have I hated it. Mine heritage is unto me as a speckled bird, the birds round about are against her; come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, come to devour. Many false prophets have destroyed my vineyard; they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness. They have made it desolate, and being desolate it mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because no man layeth it to heart. The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness; for the sword of the Lord shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other; no flesh shall have peace. They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns; they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit; and they shall be ashamed of their revenues because of the fierce anger of the Lord.

And thus saith the Lord against all evil neighbors, that touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit. Behold, I will pluck them out of their land, and pluck out the house of Judah from among them. And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out I will return, and have compassion on them; and will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land, who is willing to return. And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn my ways, to live by my name, then shall they be built in the midst of my people. But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the Lord.

Thus said the Lord unto me, Go and get thee a linen girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it not in water. So I got a girdle according to the word of the Lord, and put it on my loins. And the word of the Lord came unto me the second time, saying, Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins; and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock. So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the Lord commanded me. And it came to pass after many days, that the Lord said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there. Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it; and behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing. Then the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Thus saith the Lord, After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem. This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing. For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the Lord; that they might be unto me for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory; but they would not hear. Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine; and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine? Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David's throne; and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with drunkenness. And I will dash them one against another, even the fathers and the sons together, saith the Lord; I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, but destroy them.

Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud; for the Lord hath spoken. Give glory to the Lord your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness. But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the Lord's flock is carried away captive. Say unto the king and to the queen, Humble yourselves, sit down; for your principalities shall come down, even the crown of your glory. The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them; Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive. Lift up your eyes, and behold them that come from the north; where is the flock that was given thee, thy beautiful flock? What wilt thou say when he shall punish thee? For thou hast taught them to be captains, and as chief over thee; shall not sorrows take thee, as a woman in travail?

And if thou say in thine heart, Wherefore come these things upon me? For the greatness of thine iniquity are thy skirts discovered, and thy heels made bare. As the Ethiopian changes his skin, or the leopard his spots; so ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil. Therefore will I scatter them as the stubble that passeth away by the wind of the wilderness. This is thy lot, the portion of thy measure from me, saith the Lord; because thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in falsehood. Therefore will I discover thy skirts upon thy face, that thy shame may appear. I have seen thine adulteries, and thy neighings, the lewdness of thy whoredom; and thine abominations on the hills in the fields. Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem! Wilt thou not be made clean? When shall it once be?

The word of the Lord that came to Jeremiah concerning the dearth. Judah mourneth, and the gates thereof languish; they are dejected unto the ground; and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up. And their nobles have sent their little ones to the waters; they came to the pits, and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; they were ashamed and confounded, and covered their heads. Because the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, the plowmen were ashamed, they covered their heads. Yea, the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass. And the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; their eyes did fail, because there was no grass.

O Lord, though our iniquities testify against us, be thou merciful for thy name's sake; for our backslidings are many, we have sinned against thee. O the hope of Israel, the Savior, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night? Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished, as a mighty man that cannot save? Yet thou, O Lord, art in the midst of us, and we are called by thy name; leave us not.

Thus saith the Lord unto this people, Thus have they loved to wander in disbelief; they have not refrained their feet, therefore the Lord doth not accept them; he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins. Then said the Lord unto me (Jeremiah), Pray not for this people for their good; for when they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt offering and an oblation, I will not accept them; but I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place. Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name. I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them; they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not; yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; by sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed. And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword. And they shall have none to bury them, their wives, their sons, nor their daughters; for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease; for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow. If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! And if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! Yea, both the prophet and the priest go about into a land that they know not. Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? Hath thy soul lothed Zion? Why hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us? We looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble! We acknowledge, O Lord, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers; for we have sinned against thee. Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake, do not disgrace the throne of thy glory; break not thy covenant with us. Are there any among the vanities (idols) of the Gentiles that can cause rain? Or can the heavens give showers? Art not thou he, O Lord our God? Therefore we will wait upon thee; for thou hast made all these things.

Then said the Lord unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people; cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth. And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee, Whither shall we go forth? Then thou shalt tell them, Thus saith the Lord; Such as are for death, to death; and such as are for the sword, to the sword; and such as are for the famine, to the famine; and such as are for the captivity, to the captivity. And I will appoint over them four kinds, saith the Lord: the sword to slay, the dogs to tear, the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy. And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Judah, for that which he did in Jerusalem. For who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem? Or who shall bemoan thee? Or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest? Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord, thou art gone backward; therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee; I am weary with vexation. And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land; I will bereave them of children, I will destroy my people, since they return not from their ways. Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas. I have brought upon them against the mother of the young men a spoiler at noonday; I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly, and terrors upon the city. She that hath borne seven languisheth; she hath given up the ghost; her sun is gone down while it was yet day; she hath been ashamed and confounded; and the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies, saith the Lord.

Woe is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me (Jeremiah) a man of strife and a man of contention to the whole earth! I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury; yet every one of them doth curse me. The Lord said, Verily it shall be well with thy remnant; verily I will cause the enemy to entreat thee well in the time of evil and in the time of affliction. Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel? Thy substance and thy treasures will I give to the spoil without price, and that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders. And I will make thee to pass with thine enemies into a land which thou knowest not; for a fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burn upon you.

O Lord, thou knowest; remember me, and visit me, and revenge me of my persecutors; take me not away in thy longsuffering; know that for thy sake I have suffered rebuke. Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart; for I am called by thy name, O Lord, God of Hosts. I sat not in the assembly of the mockers, nor rejoiced; I sat alone because of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with indignation. Why is my pain perpetual, and my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed? Wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar, and as waters that fail?

Therefore thus saith the Lord, If thou return, then will I bring thee again, and thou shalt stand before me. And if thou take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth; let them return unto thee; but return not thou unto them. And I will make thee unto this people a fenced brazen wall; and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the Lord. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

The word of the Lord came also unto me saying, Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place. For thus saith the Lord concerning the sons and the daughters that are born in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begat them in this land; They shall die of grievous deaths, they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried; but they shall be as dung upon the face of the earth, and they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine; and their carcases shall be meat for the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. For thus saith the Lord, Enter not into the house of mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoan them; for I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the Lord, even lovingkindness and mercies. Both the great and the small shall die in this land; they shall not be buried, neither shall men lament for them, nor cut themselves, nor make themselves bald for them. Neither shall men tear themselves for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead; neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother. Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting, to sit with them to eat and to drink. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place in your eyes, and in your days, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.

And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, Wherefore hath the Lord pronounced all this great evil against us? Or what is our iniquity? Or what is our sin that we have committed against the Lord our God? Then shalt thou say unto them, Because your fathers have forsaken me, saith the Lord; and have walked after other gods, and have served them, and have worshipped them, and have forsaken me, and have not kept my law. And ye have done worse than your fathers; for, behold, ye walk every one after the imagination of his evil heart, that they may not hearken unto me. Therefore will I cast you out of this land into a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers; and there shall ye serve other gods day and night; where I will not shew you favour.

Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them; and he will bring them again into their land that he gave unto their fathers.

Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks. For mine eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hid from my face, neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes. And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double; because they have defiled my land, they have filled mine inheritance with the carcases of their detestable and abominable things. O Lord, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit. Shall a man make gods unto himself, and they are no gods? Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is The Lord.

The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond; it is graven upon the table of their heart, and upon the horns of your altars; whilst their children remember their altars and their groves by the green trees upon the high hills. O my mountain in the field, I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, and thy high places for sin, throughout all thy borders. And thou, even thyself, shalt discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee; and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in the land which thou knowest not; for ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.

Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm and whose heart departeth from the Lord. For he shall be like the juniper tree in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and barren land.

Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not worry in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit. The heart is deceitful above all, and desperately wicked; who can know it? I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings. As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool.

A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary. O Lord, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be ashamed; and they that depart from me shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters. Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved, for thou art my praise.

Behold, they say unto me, Where is the word of the Lord? Let it come now. As for me, I have not hastened from being a pastor to follow thee; neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest, that which came out of my lips was right before thee. Be not a terror unto me; thou art my hope in the day of evil. Let them be confounded that persecute me, but let not me be confounded. Let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed; bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction.

Thus said the Lord unto me (Jeremiah), Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem; and say unto them, Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates; thus saith the Lord; Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem; neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I commanded your fathers. But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction. And it shall come to pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the Lord, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein; then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever. And they shall come from the cities of Judah, and from the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south; bringing burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and meat offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrifices of praise, unto the house of the Lord. But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day; then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

The word which came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words. Then I went down to the potter's house; and behold, he wrought a work on the wheels. And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter; so he made again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it. Then the word of the Lord came to me, saying, O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the Lord. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it. If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will forfeit the judgment that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it, if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will forsake of the good, wherewith I said I would benefit them.

Now therefore, go, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you; return ye now every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good. And they said, There is no hope; but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Ask ye now among the heathen, who hath heard such things; the virgin of Israel hath done a very horrible thing. Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field? Or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken? Because my people hath forgotten me, they have burned incense to vanity, and they have caused them to stumble in their ways from the ancient paths; to walk in paths, in a way not cast up; to make their land desolate, and a perpetual hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, and wag his head. I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy; I will shew them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

Then said they, Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the priest, nor counsel from the wise, nor the word from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words. Give heed to me, O Lord, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me. Shall evil be recompensed for good? For they have digged a pit for my soul. Remember that I stood before thee to speak good for them, and to turn away thy wrath from them. Therefore deliver up their children to the famine, and pour out their blood by the force of the sword; and let their wives be bereaved of their children, and be widows; and let their men be put to death; let their young men be slain by the sword in battle. Let a cry be heard from their houses, when thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them; for they have digged a pit to take me, and hid snares for my feet. Yet, Lord, thou knowest all their counsel against me to slay me; forgive not their iniquity, neither blot out their sin from thy sight, but let them be overthrown before thee; deal thus with them in the time of thine anger.

Thus saith the Lord, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests, and go forth unto the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the east gate; and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee, and say, Hear ye the word of the Lord, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall tingle, because they have forsaken me, and have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings of Judah; and have filled this place with the blood of innocents. They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal, which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter. And I will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives. And their carcases will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. And I will make this city desolate, and an hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof. And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters; and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them. Then shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee; and shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again; and they shall bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury. Thus will I do unto this place, saith the Lord; and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city as Tophet; and the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled as the place of Tophet; because of all the houses upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink offerings unto other gods.

Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the Lord had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in the court of the Lord's house; and said to all the people, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon this city and upon all her towns all the judgments that I have pronounced against it, because they have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.

Now Pashur the son of Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the Lord, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things. Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet; and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the Lord. And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The Lord hath not called thy name Pashur, but Magor-missabib. For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends. And they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it. And I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon; and he shall carry them captive into Babylon. Moreover I will deliver all the strength of this city; and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon. And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house shall go into captivity; and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there; thou, and all thy friends, to whom thou hast prophecied lies.

O Lord, thou hast persuaded me, and I was persuaded; thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed; I am in derision daily, every one mocketh me. For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil; because the word of the Lord was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily. Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay.

For I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. Report, say they, and we will report it. All my familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him. But the Lord is with me as a mighty terrible one; therefore my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not prevail; they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper; their everlasting confusion shall never cease. But, O Lord of Hosts, that triest the righteous, and seest the reins and the heart, let me see thy vengeance on them; for unto thee have I opened my cause. Sing unto the Lord, praise ye the Lord; for he hath delivered the soul of the poor from the hand of evildoers.

Cursed be the day wherein I was born; let not the day wherein my mother bare me be blessed. Cursed be the man who brought tidings to my father, saying, A man child is born unto thee; making him very glad. And let that man be as the cities which the Lord overthrew, and repented not; and let him hear the cry in the morning, and the shouting at noontide, because he slew me not from the womb; or that my mother might have been my grave, and her womb to be always great. Wherefore came I forth out of the womb to see labour and sorrow, that my days should be consumed with shame?

The word which came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, when king Zedekiah sent unto him Pashur the son of Melchiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying, Enquire, I pray thee, of the Lord for us; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us; if so be that the Lord will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel; Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and I will assemble them into the midst of this city. And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath. And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast; they shall die of a great pestilence. And afterward, saith the Lord, I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life; and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; he shall not spare them, nor have mercy.

And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death. He that abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence; but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live; and his life shall be unto him for a prey. For I have set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the Lord. It shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire. And touching the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the Lord; O house of David, thus saith the Lord, Execute judgment in the morning, and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire; and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings. Behold, I am against thee, O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain, saith the Lord; which say, Who shall come down against us? Or who shall enter into our habitations? But I will punish you according to the fruit of your doings, saith the Lord; and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof, and it shall devour all things round about it.

Thus saith the Lord, Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word; and say, Hear the word of the Lord, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates; thus saith the Lord, Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor; and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place. For if ye do this thing indeed, then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting upon the throne of David; riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people. But if ye will not hear these words, I swear by myself, saith the Lord, that this house shall become a desolation. For thus saith the Lord unto the king's house of Judah, Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon; yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited. And I will prepare destroyers against thee, every one with his weapons; and they shall cut down thy choice cedars, and cast them into the fire. And many nations shall pass by this city, and they shall say every man to his neighbor, Wherefore hath the Lord done thus unto this great city? Then they shall answer, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord their God; and worshipped other gods, and served them. Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him; but weep sore for him that goeth away, for he shall return no more, nor see his native country. For thus saith the Lord touching Shallum the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, which went forth out of this place; He shall not return thither any more. But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbor's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work; that saith, I will build me a wide house and large chambers, and cutteth him out windows; and it is cieled with cedar, and painted with vermilion. Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? Did not thy father eat ~~and~~ drink, and do judgment and justice, and then it was well with him? He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him; was not this to know me? saith the Lord. But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood; and for oppression, and for violence, to do it. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah; They shall not lament for him nor his household, saying, Ah my brother! or, Ah sister! They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah lord! or, Ah his glory! He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

Go up to Lebanon, and cry; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages, for all thy lovers are destroyed. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear. This hath been thy manner from thy youth, that thou obeyedst not my voice. The wind shall eat up all thy pastors, and thy lovers shall go into captivity; surely then shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness. O inhabitant of Lebanon, that makest thy nest in the cedars, how gracious shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, the pain as of a woman in travail! As I live, saith the Lord, though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence. And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest; even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans. And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die. But to the land whereunto they desire to return, thither shall they not return. Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol? Is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? Wherefore are they cast out, he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not? O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord, Write ye this man childless, a man that shall not prosper in his days; for no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the Lord. Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them; behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the Lord. And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the Lord.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD, OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither he had driven them. And they shall dwell in their own land.

Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets; all my bones shake; I (Jeremiah) am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome, because of the Lord, and because of the words of his holiness. For the land is full of adulterers; of swearing the land mourneth; the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their course is evil, their force is not right. For both prophet and priest are profane; yea, in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the Lord. Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein; for I will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation, saith the Lord. And I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria; they prophesied in Baal, and caused my people Israel to err. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem an horrible thing; they commit adultery, and walk in lies; they strengthen also the hands of evildoers, that none doth return from his wickedness; they are all of them unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah. Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts concerning the prophets; Behold, I will feed them with wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall; for from the prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth into all the land. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you, to make you vain; they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord. They say still unto them that despise me, The Lord hath said, Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the imagination of his own heart, No evil shall come upon you. For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord, and hath perceived and heard his word? Who hath marked his word, and heard it?

Behold, a whirlwind of the Lord is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind; it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked. The anger of the Lord shall not subside, until he have executed, and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it perfectly. I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied. But if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings. Am I a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not a God afar off? Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord. I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? Yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart; which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbor, as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal. The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord. Is not my word like a fire? saith the Lord; And like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces? Therefore, behold, I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that steal my words every one from his neighbor. Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that use their tongues, and say, He saith. Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord; and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them; therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord.

And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is the burden of the Lord? Thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? I will even forsake you, saith the Lord. And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the Lord, I will even punish that man and his house. Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbor, and every one to his brother, What hath the Lord answered? And, What hath the Lord spoken? And the burden of the Lord shall ye mention no more; for every man's word shall be his burden; for ye have perverted the words of the living God, of the Lord of Hosts, our God. Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the Lord answered thee? And, What hath the Lord spoken? But since ye say, The burden of the Lord; therefore thus saith the Lord; Because ye say this word, The burden of the Lord, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the Lord; therefore, behold, I will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers; and cast you out of my presence; and I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

The Lord shewed me (Jeremiah); and, behold, two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the Lord, after that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon. One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe; and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, they were so bad. Then said the Lord unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil. Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying; Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and I will bring a remnant of them again to this land; and I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up. And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord. And they shall be my people, and I will be their God; for they shall return unto me with their whole heart. And as the ~~evil figs~~ figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely, thus saith the Lord, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and them that dwell in the land of Egypt. And I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt; to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them. And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah between the fourth and fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

The which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah (647 B.C.) even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year (637 B.C.), the word of the Lord hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye have not hearkened. And the Lord hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets, rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear. They said, Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the Lord hath given unto you and to your fathers for ever and ever. And go not after other gods to serve them and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt. Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the Lord; that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt. Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Because ye have not heard my words, behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the Lord, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant; and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations. Moreover I will take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.

And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. And it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the Lord, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it perpetual desolations. And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it; even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations. For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them also; and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

For thus saith the Lord God of Israel unto me; Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it. And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them. Then took I the cup at the Lord's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the Lord had sent me; namely, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to make them a desolation; an astonishment, an hissing, and a curse, as it is this day: Pharoah king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people; and all the mingled people, and all the kings of the land of Uz, and all the kings of the land of the Philistines, and Ashkelon, and Azzah, and Ekron, and the remnant of Ashdod; Edom, and Moab, and the children of Ammon; all the kings of Tyrus, and all the kings of Zidon, and the kings of the isles which are beyond the sea; Dedan, and Tema, and Buz, and all that are in the utmost corners; all the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the mingled people that dwell in the desert; all the kings of Zimri, and all the kings of Elam, and all the kings of the Medes, and all the kings of the north, far and near, one with another, and all the kingdoms of the world, which are upon the face of the earth; and the king of Sheshach (Shishak) shall drink after them. Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Drink ye, and be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you. And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Ye shall certainly drink. For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city which is called by my name, and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished; for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the Lord of Hosts. Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, The Lord shall roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall give a shout, as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered, nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground.

Howl, ye shepherds, and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes, ye principal of the flock; for the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are determined; and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel. And the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape. A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock, shall be heard, for the Lord hath spoiled their pasture. And the peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the Lord. He hath forsaken his covert, as the lion; for their land is desolate because of the fierceness of the oppressor, and because of his fierce anger.

In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word from the Lord, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Stand in the court of the Lord's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the Lord's house; all the words that I command thee to speak unto them, diminish not a word; if so be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way, that I may forsake the evil which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings. And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord; If ye will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you; to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I sent unto you; both rising up early, and sending them, but ye have not hearkened; therefore will I make this house like Shiloh; and will make this city a curse to all the nations of the earth. So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the Lord.

Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the Lord had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die. Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the Lord, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the Lord.

When the princes of Judah heard these things, they came up from the king's house unto the house of the Lord, and sat down in the entry of the new gate of the Lord's house. Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, This man is worthy to die; for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears. Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes and to all the people, saying, The Lord sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard. Therefore now amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the Lord your God; and the Lord will repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you. As for me, behold, I am in your hand; do with me as seemeth good and meet unto you. But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof; for of a truth the Lord hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears. Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets; this man is not worthy to die, for he hath spoken to us in the name of the Lord our God.

Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying, Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Zion shall be plowed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest. Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? Did he not fear the Lord, and besought the Lord, and the Lord foresook the evil which he had pronounced against them? Thus might we procure great evil against our souls. And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the Lord, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and against this land according to all the words of Jeremiah. And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death; but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt; and Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt. And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the common people.

Nevertheless the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, came this word unto Jeremiah from the Lord, saying,Thus saith the Lord to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck. And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon; by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah; and command them to say unto their masters, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters; I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me. And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant; and the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him. And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come; and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him. And it shall come to pass, that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon; that nation will I punish, saith the Lord, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand. Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, nor to your dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon. For they prophesy a lie unto you, to remove you far from your land; and that I should drive you out, and ye should perish. But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the Lord; and they shall till it, and dwell therein. I (Jeremiah) spake also to Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live. Why will ye die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the Lord hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? Therefore hearken not unto the words of the prophets that speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon; for they prophesy a lie unto you. For I have not sent them, saith the Lord, yet they prophesy a lie in my name; that I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto you. Also I spake to the priests and to all this people, saying, Thus saith the Lord; Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, Behold, the vessels of the Lord's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon; for they prophesy a lie unto you. Hearken not unto them; serve the king of Babylon, and live; wherefore should this city be laid waste? But if they be prophets, and if the word of the Lord be with them, let them now make intercession to the Lord of Hosts, that the vessels which are left in the house of the Lord, and in the house of the king of Judah,

Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah, The Lord hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in a lie. Therefore thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth; this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught rebellion against the Lord. So Hananiah the prophet died the same year in the seventh month.

Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon, after Jeconiah the king, and the queen, and the eunuchs, the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem; by the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon) saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon: Build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them; take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters; and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished. And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the Lord for it; for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed. For they prophesy falsely unto you in my name; I have not sent them, saith the Lord. For thus saith the Lord, After seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place. For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord; thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart. And I will be found of you, saith the Lord; and I will turn away your captivity; and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the Lord; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

Because ye have said, The Lord hath raised us up prophets in Babylon; know that thus saith the Lord of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity, thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Behold, I will send upon them the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil. And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them; because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the Lord, which I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the Lord.

Hear ye therefore the word of the Lord, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon; thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, of Ahab the son of Kolaiah, and of Zedekiah the son of Maaseiah, which prophesy a lie unto you in my name. Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes; and of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The Lord make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire; because they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbors' wives; and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a witness, saith the Lord. So shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the Nehelamite, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, and to Zephaniah the other son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying, The Lord hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada the priest; that ye should be officers in the house of the Lord; for every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldest put him in prison, and in the stocks. Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you? For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long; build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying, Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the Lord concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite; Because Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie; therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed; he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the Lord; because he hath taught rebellion against the Lord.

--- The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, ~~—~~Thus speaketh the Lord God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. For, lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord; and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

And these are the words that the Lord spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah, We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace; ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? Wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness? Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him. But they shall serve the Lord their God, and a David their king, whom I will raise up unto them. Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the Lord; neither be dismayed, O Israel. For, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee; though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee, but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished. For thus saith the Lord, Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous. There is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up; thou hast no healing medicines. All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not; for I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy; with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; because thy sins were increased. Why criest thou for thine affliction? Thy sorrow is incurable for the multitude of thine iniquity; because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee. Therefore all they that devour thee shall be devoured; and all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity; and they that spoil thee shall be a spoil, and all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey. For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord; because they called thee an Outcast, saying, This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after.

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwellingplaces; and the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof. And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry; and I will multiply them, and they shall not be few; I will also glorify them, and they shall not be small. Their children also shall be as aforetime, and their congregation shall be established before me, and I will punish all that oppress them. And their nobles shall be of themselves, and their governor shall proceed from the midst of them; and I will cause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me; for who is this that ~~engaged his~~ heart to ~~approach~~ unto me? saith the Lord. And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. Behold, the whirlwind of the Lord goeth forth with fury, a continuing whirlwind; it shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked. The fierce anger of the Lord shall not subside, until he have done it, and until he have performed the intents of his heart; in the latter days ye shall consider it.

At the same time, saith the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people. Thus saith the Lord, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee. Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel; thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry. Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria; the planters shall plant, and shall eat them as common things. For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God. For thus saith the Lord; Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations; publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel. Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together; a great company shall return thither. They shall come with weeping, and with supplications, will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble; for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.

Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd; and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all. Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together; for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow. And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the Lord.

Thus saith the Lord, A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus, Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke; turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God. Surely after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth. Is Ephraim my dear son? Is he a pleasant child? For since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still; therefore my bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the Lord. Set thee up waymarks, make thee high heaps; set thine heart toward the highway, even the way which thou wentest; turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities.

IV. THE FOURTH EPOCH: FROM AARON TO JOHN THE BAPTIST (1597 B.C. - 33 A.D.)

How long wilt thou go about, O thou backsliding daughter? For the Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, As yet they shall use this speech in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity; The Lord bless thee, O habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness. And there shall dwell in Judah itself, and in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks. For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul. Upon this I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast. And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; so will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, saith the Lord. In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge. But every one shall die for his own iniquity; every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel. After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar, the Lord of Hosts is his name. If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being ~~a~~ nation before me for ever. Thus saith the Lord; If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner. And the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath. And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the Lord; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever.

The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the early part of the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar (in 608 B.C.). For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem; and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house. For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it. And Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon; and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes; and he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the Lord; though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

And Jeremiah said, The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth; for the right of redemption is thine to buy it. So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the Lord, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin; for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the Lord. And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even seventeen shekels of silver. And I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances. So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open. And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son; and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison. And I charged Baruch before them, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Take these evidences, the evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the Lord, saying, Ah Lord God! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee; thou shewest lovingkindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them; the Great, the Mighty God, the Lord of Hosts, is his name, great in counsel, and mighty in work, for thine eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men; to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings; which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee a name, as at this day. And hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with great terror. And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey. And they came in, and possessed it; but they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law; they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst them to do; therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them. Behold the mounts, they are come unto the city to take it; and the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans, that fight against it, because of the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence; and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it. And thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; for the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying, Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh; is there any thing too hard for me? Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it; and the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink offerings unto other gods, to provoke me to anger. For the children of Israel and the children of Judah have only done evil before me from their youth; for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the Lord. For this city hath been to me as a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto this day; that I should remove it from before my face, because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger; they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And they have turned unto me the back, and not the face; though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction. But they set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it. And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

And now therefore thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, It shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence. Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely. And they shall be my people, and I will be their God; and I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul. For thus saith the Lord; Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them. And fields shall be bought in this land, whereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans. Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south; for I will cause their captivity to return, saith the Lord.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah the second time, while he was yet shut up in the court of the prison, saying, Thus saith the Lord the maker thereof, the Lord that formed it, to establish it; the Lord is his name; Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not. For thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by the mounts, and by the sword; they come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, whom I have slain in mine anger and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness I have hid my face from this city. Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth. And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at first. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honor before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them; and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it. Thus saith the Lord; Again there shall be heard in this place, which ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate, without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast; the voice of joy, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the voice of them that shall say, Praise the Lord of Hosts; for the Lord is good; for his mercy endureth for ever. And of them that shall bring the sacrifice of praise into the house of the Lord. For I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at first, saith the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Again in this place, which is desolate without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, shall be an habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down. In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah. In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely; and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord Our Righteousness. For thus saith the Lord; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually.

And the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord; If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night; and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers. As the host of heaven cannot be numbered, neither the sand of the sea measured; so will I multiply the seed of David my servant, and the Levites that minister unto me. Moreover the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, saying, Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying, The two families which the Lord hath chosen, he hath even cast them off? Thus they have despised my people, that they should be no more a nation before them. Thus saith the Lord; If my covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob, and David my servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them.

The word which came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth of his dominion, and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, saying, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel; Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire; and thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon. Yet hear the word of the Lord, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the Lord of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword; but thou shalt die in peace; and with the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee; so shall they burn odours for thee; and they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! For I have pronounced the word, saith the Lord. Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, when the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah; for these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to proclaim liberty unto them. That every man should let his manservant, and every man his maidservant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother. Now when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his manservant, and every one his maidservant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go. But afterward they turned, and caused the servants and the maids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

Therefore the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel; I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying, At the end of seven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which hath been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee; but your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear. And ye were now turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbor; and ye had made a covenant before me in the house which is called by my name; but ye turned and polluted my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom ye had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids. Therefore thus saith the Lord; Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbor. Behold, I proclaim a liberty for you, saith the Lord, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth. And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when they cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof, the princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf; I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life; and their dead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth. And Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which are gone up from you. Behold, I will command, saith the Lord, and cause them to return to this city; and they shall fight against it, and take it, and burn it with fire; and I will make the cities of Judah a desolation without an inhabitant.

The word which came unto Jeremiah from the Lord in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying, Go unto the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the Lord, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink. Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites. And I brought them into the house of the Lord, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the door. And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine. But they said, We will drink no wine; for Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever. Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any; but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers. Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us; to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters. Nor to build houses for us to dwell in; neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed, but we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us. But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians; so we dwell at Jerusalem.

Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the Lord. The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their fathers' commandment. Notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me. I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them; and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers; but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me. Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me; therefore thus saith the Lord God of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them. Because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered. And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you; therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.

And it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah (625 B.C.), that this word came unto Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Take thee a roll of a book, and write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and against all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah (647 B.C.) even unto this day. It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may return every man from his evil way; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin. Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah; and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the Lord, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book (scroll). And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the Lord. Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the Lord in the ears of the people in the Lord's house upon the fasting day; and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities. It may be they will present their supplication before the Lord, and will return every one from his evil way; for great is the anger and the fury that the Lord hath pronounced against this people. And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him; reading in the book the words of the Lord in the Lord's house. And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the Lord to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem. Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the Lord, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe; in the higher court, at the entry of the new gate of the Lord's house, in the ears of all the people.

When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the Lord, then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber. And, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, Elnathan the son of Achbor, Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah. Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people. Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them. And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears. Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words. And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth? Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book. Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be. And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king. So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll; and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king. Now the king sat in the winterhouse in the ninth month; and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him. And it came to pass that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth. Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words. Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll; but he would not hear them. But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel,and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet; but the Lord hid them.

Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, after the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned. And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the Lord; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast? Therefore thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah; He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost. And I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not. Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire; and there were added besides them many like words.

And king Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon made king in the land of Judah. But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the Lord, which he spake by the prophet Jeremiah. And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the Lord our God for us. Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; for they had released him from the prison. Then Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt; and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

Then came the word of the Lord unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, that sent you unto me to enquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's amry, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land. And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire. Thus saith the Lord, Deceive not yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us; for they shall not depart. For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded men among them, yet should they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.

And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army; then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to separate himself thence in the midst of the people. And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans. Then said Jeremiah, It is false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him; so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison. When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days; then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out; and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the Lord? And Jeremiah said, There is; for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land? Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king; let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there. Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

Then Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying, Thus saith the Lord, He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence; but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live. Thus saith the Lord, This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it. Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death; for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee; thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back. So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans. And thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon; and thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die. But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee. Then thou shalt say unto them, I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there. Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him; and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived. So Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken; and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

In the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month (Tebeth, 609 B.C.), came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it. And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up. And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate; Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris; even Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon. And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night; by way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls; and he went out the way of the plain. But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho. And when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he gave judgment upon him. Then the king of Babylon is said to have slain the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes, also the nobles of Judah. Moreover, they put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains, to carry him to Babylon. And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem. Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained. But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time. Now Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, Take him, and look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee. So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes; even they sent, and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home; so he dwelt among the people.

Now the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah,while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying, Go and speak to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee. But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the Lord; and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid. For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee; because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the Lord.

The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, after Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon. And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, The Lord thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place. Now the Lord hath brought it, and done according as he hath said; because ye have sinned against the Lord, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you. And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thine hand. If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and I will look well unto thee; but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear; behold, all the land is before thee; whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go. And while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people; or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon; then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men. And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans; dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you. As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us; but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken. Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, and said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not. Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it; wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing; for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

Now it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah. Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land. Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war. And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it, that there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the Lord. And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping all along as he went; and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam. And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him. But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not; for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbare, and slew them not among their brethren. Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of Gedaliah, was it which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel; and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain. Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah; even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam; and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to the Ammonites. But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done, then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon. Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad. So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah. But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites. Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon. And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of Chimham, which is by Beth-lehem, to go to enter into Egypt; because of the Chaldeans; for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

Then all the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, came near, and said unto Jeremiah the prophet, Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted before thee, and pray for us unto the Lord thy God, even for all this remnant; for we are left but a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us; that the Lord thy God may shew us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do. Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the Lord your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that whatsoever thing the Lord shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will keep nothing back from you. Then they said to Jeremiah, The Lord be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the Lord thy God shall send thee to us. Whether it be good,or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the Lord our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the Lord our God.

And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah. Then called he Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest. And he said unto them, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him; if ye will still abide in this land, then will I build you, and not pull you down, and I will plant you, and not pluck you up; for I am vexed of the judgment that I have rendered unto you. Be not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the Lord; for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand. And I will shew mercies unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land. But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the Lord your God, saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell. And now therefore hear the word of the Lord, ye remnant of Judah, thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; If ye wholly set your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there; then it shall come to pass, that the sword, which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die. So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence; and none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; As mine anger and my fury hath been poured forth upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; so shall my fury be poured forth upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt; and ye shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and ye shall see this place no more. The Lord hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; Go ye not into Egypt; know certainly that I have admonished you this day. For ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye sent me unto the Lord your God, saying, Pray for us unto the Lord our God; and according unto all that the Lord our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it. And now I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the Lord your God, nor any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you. Now therefore know certainly that ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire to go and to sojourn.

And it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the Lord their God, for which the Lord their God had sent him to them, even all these words, then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest falsely; the Lord our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there. But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans; that they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon. So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the Lord, to dwell in the land of Judah. But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah; even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah. So they came into the land of Egypt; for they obeyed not the voice of the Lord; thus came they even to Tahpanhes.

Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying, Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them. And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword. And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives. And he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace. He shall break also the images of Beth-shemesh, that are in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, and at Noph, and in the country of Pathros, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein, because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers. Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate. But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods. Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day. Therefore now thus saith the Lord, the God of Hosts, the God of Israel, Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, out of Judah, to leave you none to remain; in that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth? Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem? They are not humbled even unto this day, neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah. And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine; they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine; and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach. For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence; so that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there; for none shall return but such as shall escape.

Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying, As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem; for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil. But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine. And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, without our men?

Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying, The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the Lord remember them, and came it not into his mind? So that the Lord could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day. Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the Lord, and have not obeyed the voice of the Lord; nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day. Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the Lord, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt; thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed; to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her; ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows. Therefore hear ye the word of the Lord, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth. Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them. Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, mine, or theirs. And this shall be a sign unto you, saith the Lord, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil. Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will give Pharaoh Hophra, king of Egypt, into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, that sought his life.

The word that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah (in 625 B.C.), saying, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch; Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the Lord hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest. Thus shalt thou say unto him, The Lord saith thus; Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land. And seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not; for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the Lord; but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Gentiles; against Egypt, against the army of Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon smote in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah. Order ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle. Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furbish the spears, and put on the brigandines. Wherefore have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? And their mighty ones are beaten down, and are fled apace, and look not back; for fear was round about, saith the Lord. Let not the swift flee away, nor the mighty man escape; they shall stumble, and fall toward the north by the river Euphrates. Who is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers? Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers; and he saith, I will go up, and will cover the earth; I will destroy the city and the inhabitants thereof. Come up, ye horses; and rage, ye chariots; and let the mighty men come forth; the Ethiopians and the Libyans, that handle the shield; and the Lydians, that handle and bend the bow. For this is the day of the Lord God of Hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries; and the sword shall devour, and it shall be sated and made drunk with their blood; for the Lord God of Hosts hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates. Go up into Gilead, and take balm, O virgin, the daughter of Egypt; in vain shalt thou use many medicines; for thou shalt not be cured. The nations have heard of thy shame, and thy cry hath filled the land; for the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty, and they are fallen both together.

The word that the Lord spake to Jeremiah the prophet, how Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon should come and smite the land of Egypt. Declare ye in Egypt, and publish in Migdol, and publish in Noph and in Tahpanhes. Say ye, Stand fast, and prepare thee; for the sword shall devour round about thee. Why are thy valiant men swept away? They stood not, because the Lord did drive them. He made many to fall, yea, one fell upon another; and they said, Arise, and let us go again to our own people, and to the land of our nativity, from the oppressing sword. They did cry there, Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise; he hath passed the time appointed. As I live, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of Hosts, Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, and as Carmel by the sea, so shall he come. O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, furnish thyself to go into captivity; for Noph shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant. Egypt is like a very fair heifer, but destruction cometh; it cometh out of the north. Also her hired men are in the midst of her like fatted bullocks; for they also are turned back, and are fled away together; they did not stand, because the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation. The voice thereof shall go like a serpent; for they shall march with an army, and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood. They shall cut down her forest, saith the Lord, though it cannot be searched; because they are more than the grasshoppers, and are innumerable. The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north. The Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, saith; Behold, I will punish Amon of Thebes, even the multitude of No; and Pharaoh, and Egypt, with their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and them that trust in him. And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives; and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants; and afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the Lord.

But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel. For, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid. Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the Lord. For I am with thee; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished.

The word of the Lord that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote Gaza. Thus saith the Lord, Behold, waters rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and all that is therein; the city, and them that dwell therein; then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl. At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands; because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth; for the Lord will spoil the Philistines, the remnant of the country of Caphtor. Baldness is come upon Gaza; Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley; how long wilt thou cut thyself? O thou sword of the Lord, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? Put up thyself into thy scabbard; rest, and be still. How can it be quiet, seeing the Lord hath given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea shore? There hath he appointed it.

Against Moab thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Woe unto Nebo! For it is spoiled. Kiriathaim is confounded and taken; Misgab is confounded and dismayed. There shall be no more praise of Moab. In Heshbon they have devised evil against it; come, and let us cut if off from being a nation. Also thou shalt be cut down, O Madmen; the sword shall pursue thee. A voice of crying shall be from Horonaim, spoiling and great destruction. Moab is destroyed; her little ones have caused a cry to be heard. For in the going up of Luhith continual weeping shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim, the enemies have heard a cry of destruction. Flee, save your lives, and be like the heath in the wilderness. For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken; and Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with his priests and his princes together. And the spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape; the valley also shall perish, and the plain shall be destroyed, as the Lord hath spoken. Give wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away; for the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein. Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither hath he gone into captivity; therefore his taste remained in him, and his scent is not changed. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will send unto him wanderers, that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Beth-el their confidence.

How say ye, We are mighty and strong men for the war? Moab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities, and his chosen young men are gone down to the slaughter, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of Hosts. The calamity of Moab is near to come, and his affliction hasteth fast. All ye that are about him, bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod! Thou daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds. O inhabitant of Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done? Moab is confounded; for it is broken down; howl and cry; tell it in Arnon, that Moab is spoiled, and judgment is come upon the plain country; upon Holon, and upon Jahazah, and upon Mephaath. And upon Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim; and upon Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon Beth-meon; and upon Kerioth, and upon Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near. The horn of Moab is cut off, and his arm is broken, saith the Lord.

Make ye him drunken, for he magnified himself against the Lord. Moab also shall wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision. For was not Israel a derision unto thee? Was he found among thieves? For since thou spakest of him, thou skippedst for joy. O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities, and dwell in the rock, and be like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth. We have heard the pride of Moab (he is exceeding proud), his loftiness, and his arrogancy, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart. I know his wrath, saith the Lord; but it shall not be so; his lies shall not so effect it. Therefore will I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; mine heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres. O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer; thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach even to the sea of Jazer; the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer fruits and upon thy vintage. And joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have caused wine to fail from the winepresses; none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting. From the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh, and even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, from Zoar even unto Horonaim, as an heifer of three years old; for the waters also of Nimrim shall be desolate. Moreover I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the Lord, him that offereth in the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods. Therefore mine heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, and mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kir-heres; because the riches that he hath gotten are perished. For every head shall be bald, and every beard clipped; upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and upon the loins sackcloth. There shall be lamentation generally upon all the housetops of Moab, and in the streets thereof; for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the Lord. They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! How hath Moab turned the back with shame! So shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him. For thus saith the Lord; Behold, he shall fly as an eagle, and shall spread his wings over Moab. Kerioth is taken, and the strong holds are surprised, and the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs. And Moab shall be destroyed from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against the Lord. Fear, and the pit, and the snare, shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab, saith the Lord. He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare; for I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, the year of their visitation, saith the Lord. They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon because of the force; but a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the tumultuous ones. Woe be unto thee, O Moab! The people of Chemosh perisheth; for thy sons are taken captives, and thy daughters captives. Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days; saith the Lord, Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

Concerning the Ammonites, thus saith the Lord; Hath Israel no sons? Hath he no heir? Why then doth their king inherit Gad, and his people dwell in his cities? Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in Rabbah of the Ammonites; and it shall be a desolate heap, and her daughters shall be burned with fire; then shall Israel be heir unto them that were his heirs, saith the Lord. Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled; cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, gird you with sackcloth; lament, and run to and fro by the hedges; for their king shall go into captivity, and his priests and his princes together. Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, thy flowing valley, O backsliding daughter? That trusted in her treasures, saying, Who shall come unto me? Behold, I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the Lord, God of Hosts, from all those that be about thee; and ye shall be driven out every man right forth; and none shall gather up him that wandereth. And afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the Lord.

Concerning Edom, thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Is wisdom no more in Teman? Is counsel perished from the prudent? Is their wisdom vanished? Flee ye, turn back, dwell deep, O inhabitants of Dedan; for I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, the time that I will visit him. If grapegatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? But thieves by night, they will destroy till they have enough. I have made Esau bare, I have uncovered his secret places, and he shall not be able to hide himself; his seed is spoiled, and his brethren, and his neighbors, and he is not. Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive; and let thy widows trust in me. For thus saith the Lord; Behold, they whose judgment was not to drink of the cup have assuredly drunken; and art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished? Thou shalt not go unpunished, but thou shalt surely drink of it. For I have sworn by myself, saith the Lord, that Bozrah shall become a desolation, a reproach, a waste, and a curse; and all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes. I have heard a rumour from the Lord, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying, Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle. For, lo, I will make thee small among the heathen, and despised among men. Thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill; though thou shouldest make thy nest as high as the eagle, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord. Also Edom shall be a desolation; every one that goeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss at all the plagues thereof. As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbor cities thereof, saith the Lord, no man shall abide there, neither shall a son of man dwell in it. Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan against the habitation of the strong; but I will suddenly make him run away from her; and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? For who is like me? And who will appoint me the time? And who is that shepherd that will stand before me? Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord, that he hath taken against Edom; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman. Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out; surely he shall make their habitations desolate with them. The earth is moved at the noise of their fall, at the cry the noise thereof was heard in the Red Sea. Behold, he shall come up and fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah. And at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

Concerning Damascus, Hamath is confounded, and Apad; for they have heard evil tidings; they are fainthearted; there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet. Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her; anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail. How is the city of praise not left, the city of my joy! Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the Lord of Hosts. And I will kindle a fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad.

Concerning Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms of Hazor, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon shall smite, thus saith the Lord; Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil the men of the east. Their tents and their flocks shall they take away; they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, Fear is on every side. Flee, get you far off, dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the Lord; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you. Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, that dwelleth without care, saith the Lord, which have neither gates nor bars, which dwell alone. And their camels shall be a booty, and the multitude of their cattle a spoil; and I will scatter into all winds them that are in the utmost corners; and I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof, saith the Lord. And Hazor shall be a dwelling for jackals and a desolation for ever; there shall no man abide there, nor any son of man dwell in it.

The word of the Lord that came to Jeremiah the prophet against Elam in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might. And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven, and will scatter them toward all those winds; and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come. For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before their enemies, and before them that seek their life; and I will bring evil upon them, even my fierce anger, saith the Lord; and I will send the sword after them, till I have consumed them; and I will set my throne in Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the Lord. But it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the Lord.

The word that the Lord spake against Babylon and against the land of the Chaldeans by Jeremiah the prophet. Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and set up a standard; publish, and conceal not. Say, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces. For out of the north there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein; they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast. In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping; they shall go, and seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten. My people hath been lost sheep; their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains; they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their restingplace. All that found them have devoured them; and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice, even the Lord, the hope of their fathers. Remove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he goats before the flocks. For, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations; and they shall set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken; their arrows shall be as of a mighty expert man; none shall return in vain. And Chaldea shall be a spoil; all that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the Lord. Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced, O ye destroyers of mine heritage, because ye are grown fat as the heifer at grass, and bellow as bulls, your mother shall be sore confounded; she that bare you shall be ashamed; behold, the hindermost of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert. Because of the wrath of the Lord it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate; every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues. Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about; all ye that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows; for she hath sinned against the Lord. Shout against her round about; she hath given her hand; her foundations are fallen, her walls are thrown down; for it is the vengeance of the Lord; take vengeance upon her; as she hath done, do unto her. Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sickle in the time of harvest; for fear of the oppressing sword they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land. Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away; first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon shall break his bones. Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria. And I will bring a remnant of Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead. In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, they shall not be found; for I will pardon them whom I reserve. Go up against the land of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of Pekod; waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the Lord, and do according to all that I have commanded thee. A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction. How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! How is Babylon become a desolation among the nations! I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware; thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast striven against the Lord. The Lord hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation; for this is the work of the Lord God of Hosts in the land of the Chaldeans. Come against her from the utmost border, open her storehouses; cast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly; let nothing of her be left. Slay all her bullocks; let them go down to the slaughter; woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of their visitation. The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, to declare in Zion the vengeance of the Lord our God, the vengeance of his temple. Call together the archers against Babylon; all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape; recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her; for she hath been proud against the Lord, against the Holy One of Israel. Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the Lord. Behold, I am against thee, O thou most proud, saith the Lord God of Hosts; for thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee. And the most proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up; and I will kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go. Their Redeemer is strong; the Lord of Hosts is his name; he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the Lord, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and upon her princes, and upon her wise men. A sword is upon the liars, and they shall dote; a sword is upon her mighty men, and they shall be dismayed. A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all the mingled people that are in the midst of her; and they shall become as women (in travail). A sword is upon her treasures, and they shall be robbed. A drought is upon her waters, and they shall be dried up; for it is the land of graven images, and they are mad upon their idols. Therefore the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein; and it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation. As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbor cities thereof, saith the Lord; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein. Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. They shall hold the bow and the lance; they are cruel, and will not shew mercy; their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon. The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble; anguish took hold of him, and pangs as of a woman in travail. Behold, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong; but I will make them suddenly run away from her; and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? For who is like me? And who will appoint me the time? And who is that shepherd that will stand before me? Therefore hear ye the counsel of the Lord, that he hath taken against Babylon; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans. Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out; surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them. At the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry shall be heard among the nations.

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the midst of them that rise up against me, a destroying wind; and will send unto Babylon fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land; for in the day of trouble they shall be against her round about. Against him that bendeth let the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifteth himself up in his brigandine; and spare ye not her young men; destroy ye utterly all her host. Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are thrust through in her streets. For Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the Lord of Hosts; though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel. Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul; be not cut off in her iniquity; for this is the time of the Lord's vengeance; he will render unto her a recompense. Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken. The nations have drunken of her wine, therefore the nations are mad. Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed; howl for her, take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed. We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed; forsake her, and let us go every one into his own country; for her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness; come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God. Make bright the arrows; gather the shields. The Lord hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes; for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is the vengeance of the Lord, the vengeance of his temple. Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong, set up the watchmen, prepare the ambushes; for the Lord hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon. O thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures, thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness. The Lord of Hosts hath sworn by himself, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men, as with caterpillars; and they shall lift up a shout against thee. He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding. When he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude of waters in the heavens; and he causeth the vapors to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures. Every man is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image; for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them. They are vanity, the work of errors; in the time of their visitation they shall perish. The portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things; and Israel is the rod of his inheritance; the Lord of Hosts is his name. Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war; for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms; and with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider. With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid; I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers. And I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the Lord. Behold, I am against thee, O destroying mountain, saith the Lord, which destroyest all the earth; and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, and will make thee a burnt mountain. And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; but thou shalt be desolate for ever, saith the Lord. Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz; appoint a captain against her; cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars. Prepare against her the nations with the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion. And the land shall tremble and sorrow; for every purpose of the Lord shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant. The mighty men of Babylon have forborn to fight, they have remained in their holds; their might hath failed; they became as women; they have burned her dwellingplaces; her bars are broken. One post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to shew the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end, and that the passages are stopped, and the reeds they have burned with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; The daughter of Babylon is like a threshingfloor, it is time to thresh her; yet a little while, and the time of her harvest shall come. Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon hath devoured me, he hath crushed me, he hath made me an empty vessel, he hath swallowed me up like a dragon, he hath filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out. The violence done to me and to my flesh be upon Babylon, shall the inhabitant of Zion say; and my blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee; and I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry. And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwellingplace for dragons, an astonishment, and an hissing, without an inhabitant. They shall roar together like lions; they shall yell as lions' whelps. In their heat I will make their feasts, and I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the Lord. I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams with he goats.

How is Sheshach taken! And how is the praise of the whole earth surprised! How is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations! The sea is come up upon Babylon; she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof. Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby. And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up; and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him; yea, the wall of Babylon shall fall. My people, go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the Lord. And lest your heart faint, and ye fear for the rumour that shall be heard in the land; a rumour shall both come one year, and after that in another year shall come a rumour, and violence in the land, ruler against ruler. Therefore, behold, the days come, that I will do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon. And her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her. Then the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon; for the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the Lord. As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all the earth. Ye that have escaped the sword, go away, stand not still; remember the Lord afar off, and let Jerusalem come into your mind. We are confounded, because we have heard reproach; shame hath covered our faces, for strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the Lord's house. Wherefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will do judgment upon her graven images; and throughout all her land the wounded shall groan. Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the Lord. A sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans; because the Lord hath spoiled Babylon, and destroyed out of her the great voice; when her waves do roar like great waters, a noise of their voice is uttered.

Because the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and her mighty men are taken, every one of their bows is broken, for the Lord God of recompenses shall surely requite. And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men; and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of Hosts. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken, and her high gates shall be burned with fire; and the people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a quiet prince. So Jeremiah wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all these words that are written against Babylon. And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt read all these words; then shalt thou say, O Lord, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be desolate for ever. And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates; and thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her; and they shall be weary. Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, according to all that Jehoiakim (Eliakim) had done. For through the anger of the Lord it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon. And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about. So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah. And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land. Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden. Now the Chaldeans were by the city round about, and they went by the way of the plain. But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him. Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him. And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes; he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah. Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death.

Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, which served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem. And burned the house of the Lord, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldeans, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about. Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude. But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land for vinedressers and for husbandmen. Also the remainder of the pillars of brass that were in the house of the Lord, the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the Lord, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon. The caldrons also, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away. And the basins, and the firepans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away. And concerning the pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers; it was hollow. And a chapiter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapiter was five cubits, with network and pomegranates upon the chapiters round about, all of brass; the second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these. And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and all the pomegranates upon the network were an hundred round about.

And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the door. He took also out of the city an eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that were near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city. So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

And it is said that the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath. Thus Judah was carried away captive out of his own land. This is the people whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away captive in the seventh year, three thousand Jews and three and twenty. In the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two persons. In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons; all the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

> And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, in the five and twentieth day of the month (20 Adar, 581 B.C.), that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the first year of his reign lifted up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, and brought him forth out of prison, and spake kindly unto him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon, and changed his prison garments; and he did continually eat bread before him all the days of his life. And for his diet, there was a continual diet given him of the king of Babylon; every day a portion until the day of his death, all the days of his life.

Now at the time of Jeremiah, there was another prophet, namely Ezekiel; who was among the captives taken to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar along with Jehoiachin in 617 B.C. His first vision came to him when he was in his thirtieth year, in the fourth month of Tammuz, on the fifth day; in the fifth year of exile of king Jehoiachin of Judah (in 613 B.C.); and according to the ancient tradition of the Holy Order, a prophet was ordained at the age of thirty. Ezekiel began to prophesy unto the Jews that dwelt by the river Chebar; he was of the Aaronic priests that dwelt in Jerusalem, and spent a great deal of time at the temple, while he was growing up in Jerusalem; for he was not taken into captivity until he was about twenty-six years old. And during his youth Jeremiah prophecied in Judah, so Ezekiel and Jeremiah were also contemporaries of Daniel the prophet.

Ezekiel served the Jews and elders of Babylonia, and worked with the prophets there. Both Ezekiel and Jeremiah prophecied unto the people of Jerusalem and Babylonia, saying, Settle down and be at peace in Babylon, for the reason that the seventy-year period must yet come to pass, before ye can be delivered! And Jeremiah sent letters to the Jews of captivity in Babylonia, with the above message. For before Nebuchadnezzar king of the Babylonians and Assyrians had carried away captive Jeconiah son of Jehoiakin king of Judah, and the brightest of the princes and priests of Judah, the Lord had showed Jeremiah two baskets of figs; one basket had very good figs, and the other basket had corrupted figs; and the Lord asked Jeremiah, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And Jeremiah replied, Figs, the good figs are very good; and the evil, very evil, they are so evil that they cannot be eaten. And the Lord spake unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and I will bring a remnant of them again to this land. And I will build them, and not pull them down; I will plant them, and not pluck them up. And to them I will give an heart to know me, that I am the Lord; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God; for they shall return unto me with their whole heart. And as the evil figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely, thus saith the Lord, so will I give Zedekiah king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remain in this land, and them that dwell in the land of Egypt. And I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt; to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, and in all the places they shall be given to be driven. And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence among them; till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto their fathers.

Therefore the captives in Baylonia were in a much better standing before the Lord than were the Jews remaining in Palestine. And Ezekiel at the Lord's command took up dwelling among the exiles at Tel-abib by the river Chebar. Although the Jews were exiles, they were living in their own houses; and they continued to exist as a unified and organized body of the Lord's people. Many were happily settled in their new lands throughout more than the one hundred and twenty-seven provinces of the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire of the Medes, Persians, Turks, and Elamites, the great and righteous empire or the Kingdom to mark the end of the second separation of the 3,000 years of mixed existence, even the Spiritual mixed with the worldly; and the beginning of the worldly state. It was truly the first human age of enlightenment; in which the foundation of the Kingdom was built upon the most sublime and noble truths of the Aryans, and the most ancient and profound truths of their Shemitic brethren, whose sole pursuit since time immemorial was to know and understand the mysteries of the human Soul or Spirit. While their Shemitic brethren preferred to dwell in the past and the future, the Japhethic people preferred to dwell in the present, and sought diligently Spiritual guidance. Thus it was during this time the twain were combined, and the glory, majesty, and righteousness which prevailed during the Hakhamanish empire of Persia, were the result of the great gathering of saints and archangels, both during the time of Ahasuerus and before the fall of Ninevah the capital of Assyria. Moreover it was during this time that a Zarathustra (or Zoroaster) was born, according to its appointed time; and the Seventeenth Good Land was also to be created, for its appointed time had arrived.

Ezekiel the prophet received his commission by the river Chebar in the fifth year of the exile of king Jehoiachin, in 613 B.C. For Ezekiel's wife was unfaithful to him and the Lord, the Lord told him, Son of man,— hear, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke; yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep; neither shalt thy tears run down. Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead; put on thy turban (headdress), and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy lips, and eat not the bread of men; and in the evening Ezekiel's wife died. Thus the Lord was showing the signs unto his people, through his prophets, concerning the upcoming destruction of Jerusalem, and to bring to shame the pride of the Jews by profaning their temple; for they revered the temple more than the Lord.

Ezekiel was given a vision of the Lord on his throne, attended by living creatures having four faces and wings, accompanied by wheels within wheels, which moved along with the living creatures. Ezekiel the prophet was sent as a watchman to the house of Israel, to warn them of their wicked way, and of the upcoming judgment upon his people, as was Isaiah before him. Ezekiel was a proclaimer of the celestial mansions, even the mouth and tongue of the Lord, as was Zoroaster the prophet, who converted Ahasuerus or Vishtaspa unto the religion of the essence of the ancient faith of the fire worshippers; and ordained him into the Holy Order of Zarathustra.

And the Lord spake unto Ezekiel, Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee. And the Holy Spirit entered into Ezekiel, as the Lord said again, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that hath rebelled against me; they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day. For they are impudent children, stiffnecked and stiffhearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shall say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God. And they, whether they will hear or forebear, for they are a rebellious house, yet shall know that there hath been a prophet among them. And thou, Son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though briers and thorns be they, and thou dost dwell among the scorpions; be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house. And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they hear, or whether they forebear. Now thou, Son of man, hear what I say unto thee, Be not thou rebellious like unto them; open thy mouth and eat that which I give thee.

And when Ezekiel looked, behold, an hand was sent unto him, and, lo, a scroll of the prophecies was therein; and the hand spread it before him; and on both sides of the scroll were written lamentations, mourning, and woe. Moreover the Lord said unto him, Son of man, eat that which thou findest; eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel. And Ezekiel opened his mouth, and ate up that scroll. And the Lord said, Son of man, let thy belly digest it, fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then Ezekiel swallowed it all up and digested it, and said, I didst eat up the scroll, and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness. And the Lord said unto him, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak my words unto them. For thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech and of an hard language, which thou canst not understand, but to the house of Israel. Surely, had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee; but the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee, neither would they hearken unto me, for all the house of Israel is impudent and stiffnecked, and stiffhearted. Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against theirs; as a diamond is harder than flint, have I made thy forehead harder; fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house. Therefore, thou son of man, all my words that I shall speak, receive them in thine heart, and hear them with thine ears. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people; and speak unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

Then the Spirit took Ezekiel up, and he heard behind him a voice of great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place. And Ezekiel heard a sound of the wings of the living creatures that touched one another, and the noise of the wheels, and of a great rushing. So the Spirit lifted him up, and carried him away. Thus Ezekiel began to prophecy concerning the captivity of the Jews of Jerusalem and Judah (and Benjamin also); for the Lord had spoken it that he will bring them to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans. Behold, the rest of the prophecies and words of Ezekiel and Jeremiah, are they not published in the holy book called the Bible? An abridgement of his words is herewith provided:

WORDS OF EZEKIEL

(Prophet of the Lord, who was taken captive to Babylon in 617 B.C.)

Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year (of my age), in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the river of Chebar, that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God. In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity (5 Tammuz, 613 B.C.); the word of the Lord came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi; in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of the Lord was there upon him. And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself; and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire. Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And this was their appearance: They had the likeness of a man, and every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. And their feet were straight feet; and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings. Their wings were joined one to another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straight forward. As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man, and the face of a lion, on the right side; and they four had the face of an ox and of an eagle on the left side. Thus were their faces; and their wings were stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies. And they went every one straight forward; whither the spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went. As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps; it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning. Now as I saw the living creatures, behold, one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces. The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl; and they four had one likeness; and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides; and they turned not when they went. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings were full of eyes round about them four. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them; for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels. When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them; for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels. And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above. And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other; every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies. And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host; when they stood, they let down their wings. And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings. And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone; and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward; and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

And he said unto me, Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee. And the Spirit entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me. And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that hath rebelled against me; they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day. For they are impudent children and stiffhearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God. And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, for they are a rebellious house, yet shall know that there hath been a prophet among them. And thou, Son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though briers and thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions; be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house. And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear; for they are most rebellious. But thou, Son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house; open thy mouth, and eat that which I give thee. And when I looked, behold, an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, a roll of a book was therein; and he spread it before me; and it was written within and without; and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.

Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, eat that which thou findest; eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll. And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness. And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them. For thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech and of an hard language, but to the house of Israel. Not to many people of a strange speech and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. Surely, had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee. But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me; for all the house of Israel are impudent and hardhearted. Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead; fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house. Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, Thus saith the Lord God; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. Then the Spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place. I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing. So the Spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; but the hand of the Lord was strong upon me.

Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days. And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Again, When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock before him, he shall die; because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul. And the hand of the Lord was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth into the plain, and I will there talk with thee. Then I arose, and went forth into the plain; and, behold, the glory of the Lord stood there, as the glory which I saw by the river of Chebar; and I fell on my face. Then the Spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thine house. But thou, O Son of man, behold, they shall put bands upon thee, and shall bind thee with them, and thou shalt not go out among them. And I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be to them a reprover; for they are a rebellious house. But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear; for they are a rebellious house.

Thou also, Son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and portray upon it the city, even Jerusalem. And lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set battering rams against it round about. Moreover take thou unto thee an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city; and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. This shall be a sign to the house of Israel. Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it; according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity. For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days; so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel. And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days; I have appointed thee each day for a year. Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it. And, behold, I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee from one side to another, till thou hast ended thy days of thy siege. Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side, three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof. And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day; from time to time shalt thou eat it. Thou shalt drink also water by measure, the sixth part of an hin; from time to time shalt thou drink. And thou shalt eat it as barley cakes, and thou shalt bake it with dung that cometh out of man, in their sight. And the Lord said, Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their defiled bread among the Gentiles, whither I will drive them. Then said I, Ah Lord God! Behold, my soul hath not been polluted; for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there abominable flesh into my mouth. Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith. Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the staff of bread in Jerusalem; and they shall eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall drink water by measure, and with astonishment; that they may want bread and water, and be astonished one with another, and consume away for their iniquity.

And thou, Son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard; then take thee balances to weigh, and divide the hair. Thou shalt burn with fire a third part in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled; and thou shalt take a third part, and smite about it with a knife; and a third part thou shalt scatter in the wind; and I will draw out a sword after them. Thou shalt also take thereof a few in number, and bind them in thy skirts. Then take of them again, and cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the fire; for thereof shall a fire come forth into all the house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God; This is Jerusalem; I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her. And she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations, and my statutes more than the countries that are round about her; for they have refused my judgments and my statutes, they have not walked in them. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye multiplied more than the nations that are round about you, and have not walked in my statutes, neither have kept my judgments, neither have done according to the judgments of the nations that are round about you. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments in the midst of thee in the sight of the nations. And I will do in thee that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like, because of all thine abominations. Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers; and I will execute judgments in thee, and the whole remnant of thee will I scatter into all the winds. Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord God; surely, because thou hast defiled my sanctuary with all thy detestable things, and with all thine abominations, therefore will I also diminish thee; neither shall mine eye spare, neither will I have any pity. A third part of thee shall die with the famine, pestilence and fire; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and I will scatter a third part into all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them. Thus shall mine anger be accomplished, and I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and I will be comforted; and they shall know that I the Lord have spoken it in my zeal, when I have accomplished my fury in them. Moreover I will make thee waste, and a reproach among the nations that are round about thee, in the sight of all that pass by. So it shall be a reproach and a taunt, an instruction and an astonishment unto the nations that are round about thee, when I shall execute judgments in thee in anger and in fury and in furious rebukes. I the Lord have spoken it. I shall send upon them the evil arrows of famine, which shall be for their destruction, and I will increase the famine upon you, and will break your staff of bread; so will I send upon you famine and evil beasts, and they shall bereave thee; and pestilence and blood shall pass through thee; and I will bring the sword upon thee. I the Lord have spoken it.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face toward the mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys; Behold, I, even I, will bring a sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places. And your altars shall be desolate, and your images shall be broken; and I will cast down your slain before your idols. And I will lay the dead carcases of the children of Israel before their idols; and I will scatter your bones round about your altars. In all your dwellingplaces the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and made desolate; and your idols may be broken and cease, and your images may be cut down, and your works may be abolished. And the slain shall fall in the midst of you, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Yet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries. And they that escape of you shall remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives; because I am broken with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me; and with their eyes, which go a whoring after their idols; and they shall loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations. And they shall know that I am the Lord, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them. Thus saith the Lord God, Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot; and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! For they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence. He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine; thus will I accomplish my fury upon ~~them~~. Then shall ye know that I am the Lord, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars; upon every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols. So will I stretch out my hand upon them, and make the land desolate, yea, more desolate than the wilderness toward Diblath, in all their habitations; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Also, thou Son of man, thus saith the Lord God unto the land of Israel; An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land. Now is the end come upon thee, and I will send mine anger upon thee, and will judge thee according to thy ways; and will recompense upon thee all thine abominations. And mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity; but I will recompense thy ways upon thee, and thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God, An evil, an only evil, behold, is come. An end is come, the end is come; it watcheth for thee; behold, it is come. The morning is come unto thee, O thou that dwellest in the land; the time is come, the day of trouble is near, and not the sounding again of the mountains. Now will I shortly pour out my fury upon thee, and accomplish mine anger upon thee; and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations. And mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity. I will recompense thee according to thy ways and thine abominations that are in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am the Lord that smiteth. Behold the day, behold, it is come; the morning is gone forth; the rod hath blossomed, pride hath budded. Violence is risen up into a rod of wickedness; none of them shall remain, nor of their multitude, nor of any of theirs; neither shall there be wailing for them. The time is come, the day draweth near; let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn; for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof. For the seller shall not return to that which is sold, although they were yet alive; for the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof which shall not return; neither shall any strengthen himself in the iniquity of his life. They have blown the trumpet, even to make all ready; but none goeth to the battle; for my wrath is upon all the multitude thereof. The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within; he that is in the field shall die with the sword; and he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him. But they that escape of them shall escape; and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity. All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water. They shall also gird themselves with sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; and shame shall be upon their faces, and baldness upon their heads. They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be removed; their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord; they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels; because it is the stumblingblock of their iniquity. As for the beauty of his ornament, he set it in majesty; but they made the images of their abominations and of their detestable things therein; therefore have I set it far from them. And I will give it into the hands of the strangers for a prey, and to the wicked of the earth for a spoil; and they shall pollute it. My face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place; for the robbers shall enter into it, and defile it. Make a chain; for the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence. Wherefore I will bring the worst of the heathen, and they shall possess their houses. I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease; and their holy places shall be defiled. Destruction cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none. Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; then shall they seek a vision of the prophet; but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients. The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the hands of the people of the land shall be troubled. I will do unto them after their way, and according to their deserts will I judge them; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month (5 Elul, 612 B.C.), as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me. Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire, from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber. And he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the Spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem; to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy. And behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain. Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry. He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? Even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? But turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations. And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall. Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall; and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door. And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here. So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, portrayed upon the wall round about. And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel; and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up. Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? For they say, The Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth. He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do. Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz. Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O Son of man? Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these. And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men; with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east (for they returned to their ancient religion of the fire worshippers, which kept them into the realms of mortality and strife; and for this reason the Lord abhorred Spiritual Israel). Then he said unto me (Ezekiel), Hast thou seen this, O Son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger; and, lo, they put the branch to their nose. Therefore will I also deal in fury; mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity. And though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.

He cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, Cause them that have charge over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand. And, behold, six men came from the way of the higher gate, which lieth toward the north, and every man a slaughter weapon in his hand; and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side; and they went in, and stood beside the brazen altar. And the glory of the God of Israel was gone up from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house. And he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's inkhorn by his side. And the Lord said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem; and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof. And to the others he said in mine hearing, Go ye after him through the city and smite; let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity; slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house. And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain; go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city. And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I fell upon my face, and cried, and said, Ah, Lord God! Wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem? Then said he unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and the land is full of blood, and the city full of perverseness; for they say, the Lord hath forsaken the earth, and the Lord seeth not. And as for me also, mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, but I will recompense their way upon their head. And, behold, the man clothed with linen, which had the inkhorn by his side, reported the matter, saying, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

Then I looked, and, behold, in the firmament that was above the head of the cherubim there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne. And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels, even under the cherub, and fill thine hand with coals of fire from between the cherubim, and scatter them over the city. And he went in in my sight. Now the cherubim stood on the right side of the house, when the man went in; and the cloud filled the inner court. Then the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the Lord's glory. And the sound of the cherubim's wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh. And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubim; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels. And one cherub stretched forth his hand from between the cherubim unto the fire that was between the cherubim, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen; who took it, and went out. And there appeared in the cherubim the form of a man's hand under their wings. And when I looked, behold, the four wheels by the cherubim, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub; and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a beryl stone. And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went. And their whole body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had. As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel. And every one had four faces; the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle. And the cherubim were lifted up. This is the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar. And when the cherubim went, the wheels went by them; and when the cherubim lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them. When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also; for the spirit of the living creature was in them. Then the glory of the Lord departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubim. And the cherubim lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight. When they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the Lord's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above. This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubim. Every one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings. And the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves; they went every one straight forward.

Moreover the Spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto the east gate of the Lord's house, which looketh eastward; and behold at the door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people. Then said he unto me, Son of man, these are the men that devise mischief, and give wicked counsel in this city; which say, It is not near; let us build houses; this city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.

Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, O Son of man. And the Spirit of the Lord fell upon me, and said unto me, Speak, thus saith the Lord; Thus have ye said, O house of Israel; for I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them. Ye have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain. Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Your slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron; but I will bring you forth out of the midst of it. Ye have feared the sword; and I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord God. And I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, and will execute judgments among you. Ye shall fall by the sword; I will judge you in the border of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. This city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof; but I will judge you in the border of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord; for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, but have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you. And it came to pass, when I (Ezekiel) prophesied, that Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died. Then fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah Lord God! Wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel? Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get ye far from the Lord; unto us is this land given in possession. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence. And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new Spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh; that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God. But as for them whose heart walketh after the detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord God. Then did the cherubim lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above. And the glory of the Lord went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city. Afterwards the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity. So the vision that I had seen went up from me. Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the Lord had shewed me.

The word of the Lord also came unto me, saying, Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not; for they are a rebellious house. Therefore, thou Son of man, prepare thee stuff for removing, and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight; it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house. Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing; and thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, as they that go forth into captivity. Dig thou through the walls in their sight, and carry out thereby. In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight. Thou shalt cover thy face, that thou see not the ground; for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel. And I (Ezekiel) did so as I was commanded. I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the evening I digged through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight. And in the morning came the word of the Lord unto me, saying, Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, the rebellious house, said unto thee, What doest thou? Say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, This burden concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them. Say, I am your sign; like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them; they shall remove and go into captivity. And the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight, and shall go forth; they shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby; he shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes. My net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there. And I will scatter toward every wind all that are about him to help him and all his bands; and I will draw out the sword after them. And they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries. But I will leave a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

Moreover the word of the Lord came to me, saying, Son of man, eat thy bread with quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness. And say unto the people of the land, Thus saith the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may be desolate from all that is therein, because of the violence of all them that dwell therein. And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth? Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord God; I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision.

For there shall be no more any vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel. For I am the Lord; I will speak, and the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged; for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord God. Again the word of the Lord came to me, saying, Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off. Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord God.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto them that prophesy out of their own hearts, Hear ye the word of the Lord; Thus saith the Lord God, Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing! O Israel, thy prophets are like the foxes in the deserts. Ye have not gone up into the gaps, neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel to stand in the battle in the day of the Lord. They have seen vanity and lying divination, saying, The Lord saith, and the Lord hath not sent them; and they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word. Have ye not seen a vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination, whereas ye say, The Lord saith it; albeit I have not spoken? Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies, therefore, behold, I am against you, saith the Lord God. And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies; they shall not be in the assembly of my people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord God. Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, Peace, and there was no peace; and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untempered mortar. Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall; there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it. Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it? Therefore thus saith the Lord God; I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in my fury to consume it. So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar; and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it. To wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord God. Likewise, thou Son of man, set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them. And say, Thus saith the Lord God; Woe to the women that sew pillows to all armholes, and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature to hunt souls! Will ye hunt the souls of my people, and will ye save the souls alive that come unto you? And will ye pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies? Wherefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls to make them fly; and I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly. Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, by promising him life. Therefore ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations; for I will deliver my people out of your hand; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

Then came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me. And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, and put the stumblingblock of their iniquity before their face; should I be enquired of at all by them? Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart (meaning worshiping men, and things of the world), putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the Lord will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols. That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; Repent, and turn yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations. For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the Lord will answer him by myself. And I will set my face against that man, and will make him a sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the Lord have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity; the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him. That the house of Israel may go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord God.

The word of the Lord came again to me, saying, Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it. Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls by their righteousness, saith the Lord God. If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts; though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate. Or if I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I cut off man and beast from it, though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves. Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast; though Noah, Daniel, and Job were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness. For thus saith the Lord God; How much more when I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast? Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters. Behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see their way and their doings; and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it. And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings; and ye shall know that I have not done without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord God.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, What is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest? Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? Or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon? Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; and the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet for any work? Behold, when it was whole, it was meet for no work; how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned? Therefore thus saith the Lord God; As the vine tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire, my Son, for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will set my face against them; they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I set my face against them. And I will make the land desolate, because they have committed a trespass, saith the Lord God.

Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations, and say, Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem; Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And as for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor swaddled. None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born. And when I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live; yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live. I have caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast increased and waxen great, and thou art come to excellent ornaments; thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare. Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time was the time of love; and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness; yea, I sware unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord God, and thou becamest mine. Then washed I thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil. I clothed thee also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk. I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck. And I put a jewel on thy forehead, and earrings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head. Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and broidered work; thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil; and thou wast exceeding beautiful, and thou didst prosper into a kingdom. And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty; for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God. But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was. And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon; the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so. Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images of men, and didst commit whoredom with them, and tookest thy broidered garments, and coveredst them; and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them. My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for a sweet savour; and thus it was, saith the Lord God. Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them to be devoured. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter, that thou hast slain my children, and delivered them to cause them to pass through the fire for them? And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood. And it came to pass after all thy wickedness, woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord God; that thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place, and hast made thee an high place in every street. Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms. Thou hast also committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neighbors, great of flesh; and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger. Behold, therefore I have stretched out my hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, the daughters of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way. Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied. Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith. How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord God, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious whorish woman; in that thou buildest thine eminent place in the head of every way, and makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, in that thou scornest hire; but as a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband! They give gifts to all whores; but thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom. And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms; and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary. Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God, Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them; behold, therefore I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness. And I will judge thee, as women that break wedlock and shed blood are judged; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy. And I will also give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places; they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take thy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare. They shall also bring up a company against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords. And they shall burn thine houses with fire, and execute judgment upon thee in the sight of many women; and I will cause thee to cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more. So will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet. Because thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord God; and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations. Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter. Thou art thy mother's daughter, that loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children; your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite. And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand; and thy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations; but, as if that were a very little thing, thou wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways. As I live, saith the Lord God, Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters. Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me; therefore I took them away as I saw good. Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done. Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins that thou hast committed, more abominable than they; they are more righteous than thou; yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters. When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them; that thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them. When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate. For thy sister Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy pride, before thy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of Syria, and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines, which despise thee round about. Thou hast borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the Lord. For thus saith the Lord God; I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant. Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger; and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant. And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord; that thou mayest remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord God.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel; and say, Thus saith the Lord God; A great eagle with great wings, long-winged, full of feathers, which had divers colours, came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar. He cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried it into a land of traffic; he set it in a city of merchants. He took also of the seed of the land, and planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow tree. And it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him; so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs. There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers; and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation. It was planted in a good soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine. Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God, Shall it prosper? Shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? It shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof. Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? Shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? It shall wither in the furrows where it grew. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me (Ezekiel), saying, Say now to the rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? Tell them, Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon. And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and hath taken an oath of him; he hath also taken the mighty of the land; that the kingdom might be base, that it might not lift itself up, but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand. But he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. Shall he prosper? Shall he escape that doeth such things? Or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered? As I live, saith the Lord God, surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king; whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die. Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons. Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head. And I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me. And all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds; and ye shall know that I the Lord have spoken it. Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent. In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar; and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish; I the Lord have spoken and have done it.

The word of the Lord came unto me again, saying, What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge? As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine; the soul that sinneth, it shall die. But if a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right; and hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath defiled his neighbor's wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous (or defiled) woman. And hath not oppressed any, but hath restored to the debtor his pledge, hath spoiled none by violence, hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment. He that hath not given forth upon usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, hath executed true judgment between man and man, hath walked in statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, he shall surely live, saith the Lord God. If he beget a son that is a robber, a shedder of blood, and that doeth the like to any one of these things, and that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath eaten upon the mountains, and defiled his neighbor's wife, hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abomination; hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase; shall he then live? He shall not live; he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him. Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like; that hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbor's wife; neither hath oppressed any, hath not withholden the pledge, neither hath spoiled by violence, but hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment; that hath taken off his hand from the poor, that hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live. As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even he shall die in his iniquity. Yet say ye, Why. Doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live. The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son; the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him. But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die. All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him; in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God; and not that he should return from his ways, and live? But when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned; in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die. Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel; Is not my way equal? Are not your ways unequal? When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die. Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive. Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die. Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the Lord is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? Are not your ways unequal? Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin. Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God; wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye.

Moreover take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel, and say, What is thy mother? A lioness; she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions. And she brought up one of her whelps; it became a young lion, and it learned to cath the prey; it devoured men. The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of Egypt. Now when she saw that she had waited, and her hope was lost, then she took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion. And he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men. And he knew their desolate places, and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring. Then the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him; he was taken in their pit. And they put him in ward in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon; they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel. Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters; she was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters. And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches. But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the east wind dried up her fruit; her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them. And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

And it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month (10 Ab, 611 B.C.), that certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the Lord, and sat before me. Then came the word of the Lord unto me, saying, Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Are ye come to enquire of me? As I live saith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you. Wilt thou judge them, Son of man, wilt thou judge them? Cause them to know the abominations of their fathers. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, In the day when I chose Israel, and lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am the Lord your God; in the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them, to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands. Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt; I am the Lord your God. But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me; they did not cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt. Then I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt. But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt. Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness. And I gave them my statutes, and shewed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them. Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them. But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness; they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; and my sabbaths they greatly polluted. Then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them. But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out. Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, the glory of all lands; because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths; for their heart went after their idols. Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness. But I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols. I am the Lord your God; walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God. Notwithstanding the children rebelled against me; they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths. Then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness. Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth. I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries; because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' idols. Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live. And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the Lord.

Therefore, Son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Yet in this your fathers have blasphemed me, in that they have committed a trespass against me. For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering; there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink offerings. Then I said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day. Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? And commit ye whoredom after their abominations? For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day; and shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be enquired of by you. And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone. As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you. And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God. And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant. And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me. I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God, Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me; but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols. For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord God, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me. There will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the firstfruits of your oblations, with all your holy things. I will accept you with your sweet savour, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers. And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the south field. And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the Lord; Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree; the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from the south to the north shall be burned therein. And all flesh shall see that I the Lord have kindled it; it shall not be quenched. Then said I, Ah Lord God! They say of me, Doth he not speak parables?

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel, and say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked. Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath, and against all flesh from the south to the north; that all flesh may know that I the Lord have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath; it shall not return any more. Sigh therefore, thou Son of man, with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before their eyes. And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh. And every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water; behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord God. Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord; Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished. It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furbished that it may glitter; should we then make mirth? It contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree. And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled; this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer. Cry and howl, Son of man; for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel -- terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people, smite therefore upon thy thigh. Because it is a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod? It shall be no more, saith the Lord God. Thou therefore, Son of man, prophesy, and smite thine hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain. It is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their privy chambers. I have set the point of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied; ah! It is made bright, it is wrapped up for the slaughter. Go thee one way or other, either on the right hand, or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set. I will also smite mine hands together, and I will cause my fury to rest; I the Lord have said it. The word of the Lord came unto me again, saying, Also, thou Son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come; both twain shall come forth out of one land; and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city. Appoint a way, that the sword may come to Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced. For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination; he made his arrows bright, he consulted with images, he looked in the liver. At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort. And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, to them that have sworn oaths; but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand. And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same; exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him. And thou, Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn; for the slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering. Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain;

of the wicked, whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end. Shall I cause it to return into his sheath? I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created, in the land of thy nativity. And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee, I will blow against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee into the hand of brutish men, skilful to destroy. Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land; thou shalt be no more remembered; for I the Lord have spoken it.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Now, thou Son of man, wilt thou judge, wilt thou judge the bloody city? Yea, thou shalt shew her all her abominations. Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord God, The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, and maketh idols against herself to defile herself. Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast shed; and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years. Therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries. Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art infamous and much vexed. Behold, the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their power to shed blood. In thee have they set light by father and mother; in the midst of thee have they dealt by oppression with the stranger; in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow. Thou hast despised mine holy things, and hast profaned my sabbaths. In thee are men that carry tales to shed blood; and in thee they eat upon the mountains; in the midst of thee they commit lewdness. In thee have they discovered their fathers' nakedness; in thee have they humbled her that was set apart for pollution. And one hath committed abomination with his neighbor's wife; and another hath lewdly defiled his daughter-in-law; and another in thee hath humbled his sister, his father's daughter. In thee have they taken gifts to shed blood; thou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbors by extortion, and hast forgotten me, saith the Lord God. Behold, therefore I have smitten mine hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee. Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? I the Lord have spoken it, and will do it. And I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and will consume thy filthiness out of thee. And thou shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become dross; all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the dross of silver. Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you. Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof. As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you. And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, say unto her, Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation. There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey; they have devoured souls; they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof. Her priests have violated my law, and have profaned mine holy things; they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed difference betwen the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them. Her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain. And her prophets have daubed them with untempered mortar, seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord God, when the Lord hath not spoken. The people of the land have used oppression, and exercised robbery, and have vexed the poor and needy; yea, they have oppressed the stranger wrongfully. And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found none. Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath; their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord God.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Son of man, there were two women, the daughters of one mother. And they commited whoredoms in Egypt; they committed whoredoms in their youth; there were their breasts pressed, and there they bruised the teats of their virginity. And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister; and they were mine, and they bare sons and daughters; Thus were their names: Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem Aholibah. And Aholah played the harlot when she was mine; and she doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbors, which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses. Thus she committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted; with all their idols she defiled herself. Neither left she her whoredoms from Egypt; for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her. Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted. These discovered her nakedness; they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword; and she became famous among women; for they had executed judgment upon her. And when her sister Aholibah saw this, she was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms more than her sister in her whoredoms. She doted upon the Assyrians her neighbors, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men. Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way, and that she increased her whoredoms; for when she saw men portrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans portrayed with vermilion, girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity. And as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea. And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated from them. So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness; then my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister. Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt. For she doted upon their paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses. Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth. Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side. The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them; all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords, and renowned, all of them riding upon horses. And they shall come against thee with chariots, wagons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about. And I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments. And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee; they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword; they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire. They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy fair jewels. Thus will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom from the land of Egypt; so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more. For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated; and they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare; and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms. I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols. Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her cup into thine hand. Thus saith the Lord God, Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large; thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much. Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria. Thou shalt even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts; for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast forgotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

The Lord said moreover unto me, Son of man, wilt thou judge Aholah and Aholibah? Yea, declare unto them their abominations. That they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands, and with their idols they have committed adultery; and have also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them. Moreover this they have done unto me; they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths. For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, thus have they done in the midst of mine house. And furthermore, that ye have sent for men to come from far, unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came; for whom thou didst wash thyself, paintedst thy eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments, and satest upon a stately bed, and a table prepared before it, whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil. And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her; and with the men of the common sort were brought Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads. Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit whoredoms with her, and she with them? Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot; so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women. And the righteous men, they shall judge them after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood; because they are adulteresses, and blood is in their hands. For thus saith the Lord God; I will bring up a company upon them, and will give them to be removed and spoiled. And the company shall stone them with stones, and dispatch them with their swords; they shall slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire. Thus will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness. And they shall recompense your lewdness upon you, and ye shall bear the sins of your idols; and ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

Again in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month (10 Tebeth, 609 B.C.), the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same day; the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day. And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Set on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it. Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder, fill it with the choice bones. Take the choice of the flock, and burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein. Wherefore thus saith the Lord God; Woe to the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! Bring it out piece by piece; let no lot fall upon it. For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust. That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great. Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burned. Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed. She hath wearied herself with lies; and her great scum went not forth out of her; her scum shall be in the fire. In thy filthiness is lewdness; because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee. I the Lord have spoken it; it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent; according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord God.

Also the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke; yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears run down. Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead, bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy lips, and eat not the bread of men. So I spake unto the people in the morning; and at even my wife died; and I did in the morning as I was commanded. And the people said unto me, Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest? Then I answered them, The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and that which your soul pitieth; and your sons and your daughters whom ye have left shall fall by the sword. And ye shall do as I have done; ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men. And your tires (turbans) shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet; ye shall not mourn nor weep; but ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another. Thus Ezekiel is unto you a sign; according to all that he hath done shall ye do; and when this cometh ye shall know that I am the Lord God. Also, thou Son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and all upon which they set their minds, their sons and their daughters; that he who escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause to hear with the ears? In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb; and thou shalt be a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against the Ammonites, and prophesy against them. And say unto the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord God; Thus saith the Lord God; Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity; behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the men of the east for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee; they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk. And I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching place for flocks; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. For thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast clapped thine hands; and stamped with the feet, and rejoiced in heart with all thy despite against the land of Israel; behold, therefore I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and will deliver thee for a spoil to the heathen; and I will cut thee off from the people, and I will cause thee to perish out of the countries; I will destroy thee; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God; Because that Moab and Seir do say, Behold, the house of Judah is like unto all the heathen, therefore, behold, I will open the side of Moab from the cities, from his cities which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon and Kiriathaim; unto the men of the east with the Ammonites, and will give them in possession, that the Ammonites may not be remembered among the nations. And I will execute judgments upon Moab; and they shall know that I am the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God; Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them; therefore thus saith the Lord God, I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and they of Dedan shall fall by the sword. And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel; and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God. Thus saith the Lord God, Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it for the old hatred, therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethim and destroy the remnant of the sea coast. And I will execute great vengeance upon them with furious rebukes; and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month (1 Nisan, 607 B.C.), that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people; she is turned unto me; I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste. Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up. And they shall destroy the wall of Tyrus, and break down her towers; I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock. It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea; for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God; and it shall become a spoil to the nations. And her daughters which are in the field shall be slain by the sword; and they shall know that I am the Lord. For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, a king of kings; from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people. He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field; and he shall make a fort against thee, and cast a mount against thee, and lift up the buckler against thee. And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with his axes he shall break down thy towers. By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee; thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach. With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets; he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the grond. And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise; and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy thy pleasant houses; and they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water. And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard. And I will make thee like the top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more; for I the Lord have spoken it, saith the Lord God. Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus; Shall not the isles shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee? Then all the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments; they shall clothe themselves with trembling; they shall sit upon the ground, and shall tremble at every moment, and be astonished at thee. And they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and say to thee, How art thou destroyed, that was inhabited of seafaring men, the renowned city, which wast strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it! Now shall the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure. For thus saith the Lord God; When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee; when I shall bring thee down with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory in the land of the living; I will make thee a terror, and thou shalt be no more; though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Now, thou Son of man, take up a lamentation for Tyrus (Tyre); and say unto Tyrus, O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea, a merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God; O Tyrus, thou hast said, I am of perfect beauty. Thy borders are in the midst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty. They have made all thy ship boards of fir trees of Senir; they have taken cedars from Lebanon to make masts for thee. Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars; the company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of the isles of Chittim. Fine linen with broidered work from Egypt was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail; blue and purple from the isles of Elishah was that which covered thee. The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners; thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots. The ancients of Gebal and the wise men thereof were in thee thy calkers; and all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise. They of Persia and of Lud and of Phut were in thine army, thy men of war; they hanged the shield and helmet in thee; they set forth thy comeliness. The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about, and the Gammadim were in thy towers; they hanged their shields upon thy walls round about; they have made thy beauty perfect. Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs. Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants; they traded the persons of men (slaves) and vessels of brass in thy market. They of the house of Togarmah traded in thy fairs with horses and horsemen and mules. The men of Dedan were thy merchants; many isles were the merchandise of thine hand; they brought thee for a present horns of ivory and ebony. Syria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of the wares of thy making; they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and broidered work, and fine linen, and coral, and agate. Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants; they traded in thy market wheat of Minnith, and Pannag, and honey, and oil, and balm. Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making, for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool. Dan also and Javan going to and fro occupied in thy fairs; bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market. Dedan was thy merchant in precious clothes for chariots. Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar, they occupied with thee in lambs, and rams, and goats; in these were they thy merchants. The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants; they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold. Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants; these were thy merchants in all sorts of things, in blue clothes, and broidered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandise. The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market; and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas. Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters; the east wind hath broken thee in the midst of the seas. Thy riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, and in all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin. The suburbs shall shake at the sound of the cry of thy pilots. And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land; and shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes. And they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing. And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea? When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise. In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depths of the waters thy merchandise and all thy company in the midst of thee shall fall. All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance. The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee; thou shalt be a terror, and never shalt be any more.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God; Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a God, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God. Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel in the wisdom of the world; there is no secret that they can hide from thee; with thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures. By thy great wisdom and by thy traffic hast thou increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God; behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations; and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness. They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas. Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God? But thou shalt be a man, and no God, in the hand of him that slayeth thee. Thou shalt die the deaths of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers; for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God. Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord God; Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty. Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold; the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth; and I have set thee so; thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire. Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee. By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned; therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God; and I will destroy thee, O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire. Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness; I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee. Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffic; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee. All they that know thee among the people shall be astonished at thee; thou shalt be a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against Zidon, and prophesy against it, and say, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, O Zidon; and I will be glorified in the midst of thee; and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall have executed judgments in her, and shall be sanctified in her. For I will send into her pestilence, and blood into her streets; and the wounded shall be judged in the midst of her by the sword upon her on every side; and they shall know that I am the Lord. And there shall be no more a pricking brier unto the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, that despised them; and they shall know that I am the Lord God. Thus saith the Lord God, When I shall have gathered the house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob. And they shall dwell safely therein, and shall build houses, and plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell with confidence, when I have executed judgments upon all those that despise them round about them; and they shall know that I am the Lord their God.

In the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month (12 Tebeth, 608 B.C.), the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt. Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself. But I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will cause the fish of thy rivers to stick unto thy scales, and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers,and all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales. And I will leave them in the wilderness; thee and all the fish of thy rivers; thou shalt fall upon the open fields; thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered; I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field and to the fowls of the heaven. And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the Lord, because they have been a staff of reed to the house of Israel. When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder; and when they leaned upon thee, thou brakest, and madest all their loins to be at a stand. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will bring a sword upon thee, and cut off man and beast out of thee. And the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am the Lord; because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it. Behold, therefore I am against thee, and against thy rivers, and I will make the land of Egypt utterly waste and desolate, from the tower of Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia. No foot of man shall pass through it, nor foot of beast shall pass through it, neither shall it be inhabited forty years. And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years. And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries. Yet thus saith the Lord God, At the end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered. And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the land of Pathros, into the land of their habitation; and they shall be there a base kingdom. It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations; for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations. And it shall be no more the confidence of the house of Israel, which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them; but they shall know that I am the Lord God.

And it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year, in the first month (1 Nisan, 591 B.C.), the word of the Lord came unto me, saying. Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus. Every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled; yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army. I have given him the land of Egypt for his labour wherewith he served against it, because they wrought for me, saith the Lord God. In that day will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth, and I will give thee the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God; Howl ye, Woe worth the day! For the day is near, even the day of the Lord is near, a cloudy day; it shall be the time of the heathen. And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they shall take away her multitude, and her foundations shall be broken down. Ethiopia, Libya, Lydia, all the mingled people, Chub, and the men of the land that is in league, shall fall with them by the sword. Thus saith the Lord, They also that uphold Egypt shall fall; and the pride of her power shall come down; from the tower of Syene shall they fall in it by the sword, saith the Lord God. And they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted. And they shall know that I am the Lord, when I have set a fire in Egypt, and when all her helpers shall be destroyed. In that day shall messengers go forth from me in ships to make the careless Ethiopians afraid, and great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt; for, lo, it cometh. Thus saith the Lord God, I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar (Nebuchadnezzar) king of Babylon. He and his people with him, the terrible of the nations, shall be brought to destroy the land; and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain. And I will make the rivers dry, and sell the land into the hand of the wicked; and I will make the land waste, and all that is therein, by the hand of strangers; I the Lord have spoken it. Thus saith the Lord God, I will also destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt; and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt. And I will make Pathros desolate; and will set fire in Zoan, and will execute judgments in No. And I will pour my fury upon Sin, the strength of Egypt; and I will cut off the multitude of No. And I will set fire in Egypt; Sin shall have great pain, and No shall be rent asunder, and Noph shall have distresses daily. The young men of Aven and of Pibeseth shall fall by the sword; and these cities shall go into captivity. At Tehaphnehes also the day shall be darkened, when I shall break there the yokes of Egypt; and the pomp of her strength shall cease in her; as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity. Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first month, in the seventh day of the month (7 Nisan, 607 B.C.), that the word of the Lord came unto me (Ezekiel), saying, Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and, lo, it shall not be bound up to be healed, to put a roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the sword. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will break his arms, the strong, and that which was broken; and I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand. And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries. And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand; but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly wounded man. But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt. And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude; Whom art thou like in thy greatness? Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of an high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs. The waters made him great, the deep set him up on high with her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her little rivers unto all the trees of the field. Therefore his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long because of the multitude of waters, when he shot forth. The fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did the beasts of the field bring forth their young; and under his shadow dwelt all great nations. Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches; for his root was by great waters. The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him; the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chestnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty. I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches; so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and his heart is lifted up in his height; I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen; he shall surely deal with him; I have driven him out for his wickedness. And strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him; upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow, and have left him. Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches. To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees stand up in their height, all that drink water; for they are all delivered unto death, to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit. Thus saith the Lord God, In the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning; I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed. And I caused Lebanon to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him. I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit; and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth. They also went down into hell with him unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen. To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? Yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth. Thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised, with them that be slain by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

And it came to pass in the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month (1 Adar, 606 B.C.), that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt; and say unto him, Thou art like a young lion of the nations, and thou art as a whale in the seas; and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and fouledst their rivers. Thus saith the Lord God, I will therefore spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net. Then will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee. And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height. I will also water with thy blood the land wherein thou swimmest, even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee. And when I shall put thee out, I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light. All the bright lights of heaven will I make dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord God. I will also vex the hearts of many people, when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known. Yea, I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my sword before them; and they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall. For thus saith the Lord God, The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee. By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, the terrible of the nations, all of them; and they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude thereof shall be destroyed. I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great waters; neither shall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them. Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to run like oil, saith the Lord God. When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be destitute of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, then shall they know that I am the Lord. This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her; the daughters of the nations shall lament her; they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord God.

It came to pass also in the twelfth year, in the fifteenth day of the month (15 Adar, 606 B.C.), that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and cast them down, even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit. Whom dost thou pass in beauty? Go down, and be thou laid with the uncircumcised. They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword; she is delivered to the sword; draw her and all her multitudes. The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him; they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword. Asshur is there and all her company; his graves are about him, all of them slain, fallen by the sword. Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company is round about her grave; all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused terror in the land of the living. There is Elam and all her multitude round about her grave, all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which are gone down uncircumcised into the nether parts of the earth; which caused their terror in the land of the living; yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit. They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude; her graves are round about him; all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword; though their terror was caused in the land of the living, yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit; he is put in the midst of them that be slain. There is Meshech, Tubal, and all her multitude; her graves are round about him; all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living. And they shall not lie with the mighty that are fallen of the uncircumcised, which are gone down to hell with their weapons of war; and they have laid their swords under their heads, but their iniquities shall be upon their bones, though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living. Yea, thou shalt be broken in the midst of the uncircumcised, and shalt lie with them that are slain with the sword. There is Edom, her kings, and all her princes, which with their might are laid by them that were slain by the sword; they shall lie with the uncircumcised, and with them that go down to the pit. There be the princes of the north, all of them, and all the Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain; with their terror they are ashamed of their might; and they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit. Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God. For I have caused my terror in the land of the living; and he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that are slain with the sword, even Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

Again the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, speak to the children of thy people, and say unto them, When I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman; if when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning, if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O Son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou Son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live? Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? Therefore, thou Son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression. As for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth. When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it. Again, when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right; if the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in the statutes of life, without committing iniquity; he shall surely live, he shall not die. None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him; he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live. Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the Lord is not equal; but as for them, their way is not equal. When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby. But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby. Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

And it came to pass in the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month (5 Tebeth, 606 B.C.), that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, The city is smitten. Now the hand of the Lord was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came; and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb. Then the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land; but we are many; the land is given us for inheritance. Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Ye eat with the blood, and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood; and shall ye possess the land? Ye stand upon your sword, ye work abomination, and ye defile every one his neighbor's wife; and shall ye possess the land? Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; As I live, surely they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts to be devoured, and they that be in the forts and in the caves shall die of the pestilence. For I will lay the land most desolate, and the pomp of her strength shall cease; and the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through. Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when I have laid the land most desolate because of all their abominations which they have committed. Also, thou Son of man, the children of thy people still are talking against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the Lord. And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness. And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument; for they hear thy words, but they do them not. And when this cometh to pass (lo, it will come), then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

And the word of the Lord came unto me (Ezekiel), saying, Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God unto the shepherds, Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed; but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken; neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them. And they were scattered, because there is no shepherd; and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill. Yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them. Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord; As I live, saith the Lord God, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock. Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord; Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against such shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them. For thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day. And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be. There shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord God. I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick; but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment. And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I judge between cattle and cattle, between the rams and the he goats. Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? And to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet? And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet. Therefore thus saith the Lord God unto them, Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle. Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad; therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle. And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing. And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land; and shall know that I am the Lord, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them. And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall be no more consumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more. Thus shall they know that I the Lord their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord God. And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against mount Seir, and prophesy against it, and say unto it, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and I will make thee most desolate. I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate, and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. Because thou hast had a perpetual hatred, and hast shed the blood of the children of Israel by the force of the sword in the time of their calamity, in the time that their iniquity had an end. Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee. For thou hast not despised blood, even blood shall pursue thee. Thus will I make mount Seir most desolate; and cut off from it him that passeth and him that returneth. And I will fill his mountains with his slain; in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword. I will make thee perpetual desolation, and thy cities shall not return; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Because thou hast said, These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will possess it; whereas the Lord was there. Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God, I will even do according to thine anger, and according to thine envy which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them. And I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee. And thou shalt know that I am the Lord, and that I have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel; saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us to consume. Thus with your mouth ye have boasted against me, and have multiplied your words against me; I have heard them. Thus saith the Lord God, When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate. As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee. Thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, all of it; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

Also, thou Son of man, prophesy unto the mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God, Because the enemy hath spoken against you, saying, Aha, even the ancient high places are ours in possession; therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God: Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, and ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people, therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God. Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken, which became a prey and derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about. Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, which have appointed my land into their possession with the joy of all their heart, with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey. Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have borne the shame of the heathen. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, I have lifted up mine hand; surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame. But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come. For, behold, I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown. And I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it. And the cities shall be inhabited, and the wastes shall be builded. And I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and bring fruit; and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginnings; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them. Thus saith the Lord God, Because they say unto you, Thou devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy nations, therefore thou shalt devour men no more, neither bereave thy nations any more, saith the Lord God. Neither will I cause to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more; neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more; neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall any more, saith the Lord God.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me (Ezekiel), saying, Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way and by their doings; their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman. Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols they had polluted it. And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries; according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of his land. But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went. And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. Then will I pour clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean; from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes; and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will also save you from all your uncleannesses; and I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen. Then shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good; and shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God, be it known unto you; be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God, In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded. And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and inhabited. Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the Lord build the ruined places, and plant that which was desolate. I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it. Thus saith the Lord God, I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock. As the holy flock, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts; so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men; and they shall know that I am the Lord.

The hand of the Lord was upon me (Ezekiel) and carried me out in the spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones. And caused me to pass by them round about; and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live; and I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. So I prophesied as I was commanded; and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above; but there was no breath in them. Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, Son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God, Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army. Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel; behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost; we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves; and shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land. Then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou Son of man, take thee one stick (scroll), and write upon it, for Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick (scroll), and write upon it, for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for the house of Israel his companions. And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows; and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick (scroll) and they shall be one in mine hand. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land. And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all; neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them out of all their dwellingplaces, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them; so shall they be my people, and I will be their God. And a David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd; they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children; and my servant David, their prince for ever. Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them. My tabernacle also shall be with them; yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the heathen shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.

And the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him. And say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. And I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords. Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet; Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands; many people with thee. Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them. After many days thou shalt be visited; in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword; and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste, but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them. Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee. Thus saith the Lord God, It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought. And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates, to take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land. Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? Hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? To carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil? Therefore, Son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord God, In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it? And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army. And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes. Thus saith the Lord God, Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years, that I would bring thee against them? And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face. For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel. So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence; and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and walls shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God; every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will visit him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

Therefore, thou Son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. And I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee, and will cause thee to come up from the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel. And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand. Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee. I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field to be devoured. Thou shalt fall upon the open field; for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God. And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell carelessly in the isles; and they shall know that I am the Lord. So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, the Holy One in Israel. Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God; this is the day whereof I have spoken. And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the handstaves, and the spears, and they shall burn them with fire seven years. So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire; and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord God. And it shall come to pass in that day, I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea; and it shall stop the noses of the passengers; and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude; and they shall call it the valley of Hamongog. And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land. Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God. And they shall sever out men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, to cleanse it; after the end of seven months shall they search. And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamongog. And also the name of the city shall be Hamonah. Thus shall they cleanse the land.

And, thou Son of man, thus saith the Lord God, Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood. Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan. And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you. Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord God. And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day forward. And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity; because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies; so fell they all by the sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name, after that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God; which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen; but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face anymore from them; for I have poured out my Spirit on the house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

In the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month (10 Nisan, 593 B.C.), in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, in the selfsame day the hand of the Lord was upon me, and brought me thither. In the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel; and set me upon a very high mountain, by which was as the frame of a city on the south. And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed; and he stood in the gate. And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee, art thou brought hither; declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel. And behold a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed of six cubits long, by the cubit and an hand breadth; so he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed. Then came he unto the gate which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad; and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad. And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate by the porch of the gate within was one reed. He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed. Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate inward. And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of one measure; and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side. And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits. The space also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side; and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side. He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another; the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door. He made also posts of threescore cubits, even unto the post of the court round about the gate. And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner gate were fifty cubits. And there were narrow windows to the little chambers, and to their posts within the gate round about, and likewise to the arches; and windows were round about inward; and upon each post were palm trees. Then brought he me into the outward court, and, lo, there were chambers, and a pavement made for the court round about; thirty chambers were upon the pavement. And the pavement by the side of the gates over against the length of the gates was the lower pavement. Then he measured the breadth from the forefront of the lower gate unto the forefront of the inner court without, an hundred cubits eastward and northward. And the gate of the outward court that looked toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof. And the little chambers thereof were three on this side and three on that side; and the posts thereof and the arches thereof were after the measure of the first gate; the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And their windows, and their arches, and their palm trees, were after the measure of the gate that looketh toward the east; and they went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches thereof were before them. And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east; and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits. After that he brought me toward the south, and behold a gate toward the south; and he measured the posts thereof and the arches thereof according to these measures. And there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows; the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And there were seven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them; and it had palm trees, one on this side, and another on that side, upon the posts thereof. And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south; and he measured from gate to gate toward the south an hundred cubits. And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate; and he measured the south gate according to these measures. And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures, and windows in it and in the arches thereof round about; it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad. And the arches round about were five and twenty cubits long, and five cubits broad. And the arches thereof were toward the utter court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof; and the going up to it had eight steps. And he brought me into the inner court toward the east, and he measured the gate according to these measures. And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures; and there were windows therein and in the arches thereof round about; fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad. And the arches thereof were toward the outward court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side; and the going up to it had eight steps. And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it according to these measures. The little chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about; the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And the posts thereof were toward the utter court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side; and the going up to it had eight steps. And the chambers and the entries thereof were by the posts of the gates, where they washed the burnt offering. And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt offering and the sin offering and the trespass offering. And at the side without as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables. Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices. And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high; whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt offering and the sacrifice. And within were hooks, an hand broad, fastened round about; and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering. And without the inner gate were the chambers of the singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south; one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north. And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the house. And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the altar; these are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the Lord to minister unto him. So he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house. And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side; and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side. The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it; and there were pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

He brought me to the temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle. And the breadth of the door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side; and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits. Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits; and the door, six cubits; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits. So he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple; and he said unto me, This is the Most Holy. After he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side chamber, four cubits, round about the house on every side. And the side chambers were three, one over another, and thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side chambers round about, that they might have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the house. And there was an enlarging, and a winding about still upward to the side chambers; for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house; therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst. I saw also the height of the house round about; the foundations of the side chambers were a full reed of six great cubits. The thickness of the wall, which was for the side chamber without, was five cubits; and that which was left was the place of the side chambers that were within. And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side. And the doors of the side chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south; and the breadth of the place that was left was five cubits round about. Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits. So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long. Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, an hundred cubits. And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, an hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court. The door posts, and the narrow windows, and the galleries round about on their three stories, over against the door, cieled with wood round about, and from the ground up to the windows, and the windows were covered. To that above the door, even unto the inner house, and without, and by all the wall round about within and without, by measure. And it was made with cherubim and palm trees, so that a palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub; and every cherub had two faces; so that the face of a man was toward the palm tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion toward the palm tree on the other side; it was made through all the house round about. From the ground unto above the door were cherubim and palm trees made, and on the wall of the temple. The posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other. The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood; and he said unto me, This is the table that is before the Lord. And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors. And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door. And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, cherubim and palm trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without. And there were narrow windows and palm trees on the one side and on the other side, on the sides of the porch, and upon the side chambers of the house, and thick planks.

Then he brought me forth into the utter court, the way toward the north; and he brought me into the chamber that was over against the separate place, and which was before the building toward the north. Before the length of an hundred cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits. Over against the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, and over against the pavement which was for the utter court, was gallery against gallery in three stories. And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, a way of one cubit; and their doors toward the north. Now the upper chambers were shorter; for the galleries were higher than these, than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building. For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts; therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground. And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the utter court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits. For the length of the chambers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits; and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits. And from under these chambers was the entry on the east side, as one goeth into them from the utter court. The chambers were in the thickness of the wall of the court toward the east, over against the separate place, and over against the building. And the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they; and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors. And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them. Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the Lord shall eat the most holy things. There shall they lay the most holy things, and the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; for the place is holy. When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people. Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about. He measured the east side with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about. He measured the north side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about. He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed. He turned about to the west side, and measured five hundred reeds with the measuring reed. He measured it by the four sides; it had a wall round about, five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad, to make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.

Afterward he brought me to the gate, even the gate that looketh toward the east. And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east; and his voice was like a noise of many waters; and the earth shined with his glory. And it was according to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw when I came to destroy the city; and the visions were like the vision that I saw by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face. And the glory of the Lord came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east. So the Spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house. And I heard him speaking unto me out of the house; and the man stood by me. And he said unto me, Son of man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name, shall the house of Israel no more defile; neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by the carcases of their kings in their high places. In their setting of their threshold by my thresholds, and their post by my posts, and the wall between me and them, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed; wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger. Now let them put away their whoredom, and the carcases of their kings, far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever. Thou Son of man, shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities; and let them measure the pattern. And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, shew them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the laws thereof; and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them. This is the law of the house, Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house. And these are the measures of the altar after the cubits: The cubit is a cubit and an hand breadth; even the bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the edge thereof round about shall be a span; and this shall be the higher place of the altar. And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit. So the altar shall be four cubits; and from the altar and upward shall be four horns. And the altar shall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, square in the four squares thereof. And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and its stairs shall look toward the east. And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord God, These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, to offer burnt offerings thereon, and to sprinkle blood thereon. And thou shalt give to the priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, which approach unto me, to minister unto me, saith the Lord God, a young bullock for a sin offering. And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the settle, and upon the border round about; thus shalt thou cleanse and purge it. Thou shalt take the bullock also of the sin offering, and he shall burn it in the appointed place of the house, without the sanctuary. And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the bullock. When thou hast made an end of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish. And thou shalt offer them before the Lord, and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and they shall offer them up for a burnt offering unto the Lord. Seven days shalt thou prepare every day a goat for a sin offering; they shall also prepare a young bullock, and a ram out of the flock, without blemish. Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it; and they shall consecrate themselves. And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward, the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and your peace offerings; and I will accept you, saith the Lord God.

Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary which looketh toward the east; and it was shut. Then said the Lord unto me, This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the Lord, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut. It is for the prince; the prince, he shall sit in it to eat bread before the Lord; he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same. Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house; and I looked, and, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house of the Lord; and I fell upon my face. And the Lord said unto me (Ezekiel), Son of man, mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the Lord, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary. And thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, O ye house of Israel, let it suffice you of all your abominations, in that ye have brought into my sanctuary strangers, uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye offer my bread, the fat and the blood, and they have broken my covenant because of all your abominations. And ye have not kept the charge of mine holy things; but ye have set keepers of my charge in my sanctuary for yourselves. Thus saith the Lord God, No stranger, uncircumcised in heart, nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel. And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols, they shall even bear their iniquity. Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house; they shall slay the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them. Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord God, and they shall bear their iniquity. And they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place; but they shall bear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed. But I will make them keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein. But the priests the Levites, the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they shall stand before me to offer unto me the fat and the blood, saith the Lord God. They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to my table, to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge. And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments; and no wool shall come upon them, while they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within. They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves with any thing that causeth sweat. And when they go forth into the utter court, even into the utter court to the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments. Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads. Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court. Neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is put away; but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that had a priest before. And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane; and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean. And in controversy they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments; and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies, and they shall hallow my sabbaths. And they shall come at no dead person to defile themselves; but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves. And after he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days. And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin offering, saith the Lord God. And it shall be unto them for an inheritance; I am their inheritance; and ye shall give them no possession in Israel; I am their possession. They shall eat the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; and every dedicated thing in Israel shall be theirs. And the first of all the firstfruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's; ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house. The priests shall not eat of any thing that is dead of itself, or torn, whether it be fowl or beast.

Moreover, when ye shall divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall offer an oblation unto the Lord, an holy portion of the land. The length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about. Of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the suburbs thereof. And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand; and in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place. The holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the Lord; and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary. And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for twenty chambers. And ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion; it shall be for the whole house of Israel. And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward. And the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border. In the land shall be his possession in Israel; and my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes. Thus saith the Lord God, Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel; remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your exactions from my people, saith the Lord God. Ye shall have just balances, and a just ephah, and a just bath. The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure, that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer; the measure thereof shall be after the homer. And the shekel shall be twenty gerahs; twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh. This is the oblation that ye shall offer; the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of wheat, and ye shall give the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of barley. Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, ye shall offer the tenth part of a bath out of the cor, which is an homer of ten baths; for ten baths are an homer. And one lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, out of the fat pastures of Israel; for a meat offering, and for a burnt offering, and for peace offerings, to make reconciliation for them, saith the Lord God. All the people of the land shall give this oblation for the prince in Israel. And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and drink offerings, in the feasts, and in the new moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel. He shall prepare the sin offering, and the meat offering, and the burnt offering, and the peace offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God, In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock without blemish, and cleanse the sanctuary. And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering, and put it upon the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court. And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple; so shall ye reconcile the house. In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten. And upon that day shall the prince prepare for himself and for all the people of the land a bullock for a sin offering. And seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt offering to the Lord, seven bullocks and seven rams without blemish daily the seven days; and a kid of the goats daily for a sin offering. And he shall prepare a meat offering of an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and in hin of oil for an ephah. In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, shall he do the like in the feast of the seven days, according to the sin offering, according to the burnt offering, and according to the meat offering, and according to the oil.

Thus saith the Lord God, The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened. And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate; then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening. Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the Lord in the sabbaths and in the new moons. And the burnt offering that the prince shall offer unto the Lord in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish. And the meat offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. And in the day of the new moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram; they shall be without blemish. And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah. And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof. But when the people of the land shall come before the Lord in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate; he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it. And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth. And in the feasts and in the solemnities the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the Lord, one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day; then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate. Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt offering unto the Lord of a lamb of the first year without blemish; thou shalt prepare it every morning. And thou shalt prepare a meat offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the Lord. Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat offering, and the oil, every morning for a continual burnt offering. Thus saith the Lord God; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince; but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them. Moreover the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession; that my people be not scattered every man from his possession. After, he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north; and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward. Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall bake the meat offering; that they bear them not out into the utter court, to sanctify the people. Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, in every corner of the court there was a court. In the four corners of the court there were courts joined of forty cubits long and thirty broad; these four corners were of one measure. And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about. Then said he unto me, these are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward; for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar. Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side. And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the waters were to the ankles. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins. Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over; for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over. And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river. Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other. Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea; which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed (free of salt). And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live; and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither; for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh. And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea, exceedingly many. But the miry places thereof and the marshes thereof shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt. And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed. It shall bring forth new fruit according to its months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine.

Thus saith the Lord God, This shall be the border, whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel; Joseph shall have two portions. And ye shall inherit it, one as well as another; concerning the which I lifted up mine hand to give it unto your fathers; and this land shall fall unto you for inheritance. And this shall be the border of the land toward the north side, from the great sea, the way of Hethlon, as men go to Zedad; Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim, which is between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; Hazar-hatticon, which is by the coast of Hauran. And the border from the sea shall be Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath. And this is the north side. And the east side ye shall measure from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea. And this is the east side. And the south side southward, from Tamar even to the waters of strife in Kadesh, the river to the great sea. And this is the south side southward. The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against Hamath. This is the west side. So shall ye divide this land unto you according to the tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you; and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that in what tribe the stranger sojourneth, there shall ye give him his inheritance, saith the Lord God.

Now these are the names of the tribes. From the north end to the coast of the way of Hethlon, as one goeth to Hamath, Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus northward, to the coast of Hamath; for these are his sides east and west; a portion for Dan. And by the border of Dan, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Asher. And by the border of Asher, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Naphtali. And by the border of Naphtali, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Manasseh. And by the border of Manasseh, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Ephraim. And by the border of Ephraim, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Reuben. And by the border of Reuben, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Judah. And by the border of Judah, from the east side unto the west side, shall be the offering which ye shall offer of five and twenty thousand reeds in breadth, and in length as one of the other parts, from the east side unto the west side; and the sanctuary shall be in the midst of it. The oblation that ye shall offer unto the Lord shall be of five and twenty thousand in length, and of ten thousand in breadth. And for them, even for the priests, shall be this holy oblation; toward the north five and twenty thousand in length, and toward the west ten thousand in breadth, and toward the east ten thousand in breadth, and toward the south five and twenty thousand in length; and the sanctuary of the Lord shall be in the midst thereof. It shall be for the priests that are sanctified of the sons of Zadok; which have kept my charge, which went not astray when the children of Israel went astray, as the Levites went astray. And this oblation of the land that is offered shall be unto them a thing most holy by the border of the Levites. And over against the border of the priests the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth; all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand. And they shall not sell of it, neither exchange, nor alienate the firstfruits of the land; for it is holy unto the Lord. And the five thousand, that are left in the breadth over against the five and twenty thousand, shall be a profane place for the city, for dwelling, and for suburbs; and the city shall be in the midst thereof. And these shall be the measures thereof; the north side four thousand and five hundred, and the south side four thousand and five hundred, and on the east side four thousand and five hundred, and the west side four thousand and five hundred. And the suburbs of the city shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, and toward the south two hundred and fifty, and toward the east two hundred and fifty, and toward the west two hundred and fifty. And the residue in length over against the oblation of the holy portion shall be ten thousand eastward, and ten thousand westward. And it shall be over against the oblation of the holy portion; and the increase thereof shall be for food unto them that serve the city. And they that serve the city shall serve it out of all the tribes of Israel. All the oblation shall be five and twenty thousand by five and twenty thousand; ye shall offer the holy oblation foursquare, with the possession of the city. And the residue shall be for the prince, on the one side and on the other of the holy oblation, and of the possession of the city, over against the five and twenty thousand of the oblation toward the east border, and westward over against the five and twenty thousand toward the west border, over against the portions for the prince. And it shall be the holy oblation, and the sanctuary of the house shall be in the midst thereof. Moreover from the possession of the Levites, and from the possession of the city, being in the midst of that which is the prince's, between the border of Judah and the border of Benjamin, shall be for the prince. As for the rest of the tribes, from the east side unto the west side, Benjamin shall have a portion. And by the border of Benjamin, from the east side unto the west side, Simeon shall have a portion. And by the border of Simeon, from the east side unto the west side, Issachar a portion. And by the border of Issachar, from the east side unto the west side, Zebulun a portion. And by the border of Zebulun, from the east side unto the west side, Gad a portion. And by the border of Gad, at the south side southward, the border shall be even from Tamar unto the waters of strife in Kadesh, and to the river toward the great sea. This is the land which ye shall divide by lot unto the tribes of Israel for inheritance, and these are their portions, saith the Lord God. And these are the goings out of the city on the north side, four thousand and five hundred measures. And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel; three gates northward; one gate of Reuben, one gate of Judah, one gate of Levi. And at the east side four thousand and five hundred; and three gates; and one gate of Joseph, one gate of Benjamin, one gate of Dan. And at the south side four thousand and five hundred measures; and three gates; one gate of Simeon, one gate of Issachar, one gate of Zebulun. At the west side four thousand and five hundred, with their three gates; one gate of Gad, one gate of Asher, one gate of Naphtali. It was round about eighteen thousand measures; and the name of the city from that day shall be, The Lord is there.

Now among the captives taken to Babylon, there dwelt a man in Babylon, called Joakim. And he took a wife, whose name was Susanna (Shushanna), the daughter of Chelcias, a very fair woman, and one that feared the Lord. Her parents were also righteous; and taught their daughter according to the law of Moses. Joakim was a great rich man, and had a fair garden adjoining his house; and to him resorted the Jews of the city, because he was more honorable than all others. The same year were appointed two of the elders of the people to be judges — such as the Lord spake of, that wickedness came from Babylon from ancient judges, who seem to govern people. These kept much at Joakim's house; and all that had grievances and complaints also came to them.

And it came to pass, that one day when the people had departed at noon, Susanna went into her husband's garden to walk. When the two elders saw her going in every day, and walking about the garden, their lust was inflamed toward her. So they thirsted and craved after her in their minds; and perverted their minds so that they could neither look unto heaven, nor render justice. Although both were prisoners of the lusts of their hearts, neither one would acknowledge unto the other his suffering. For they were ashamed to declare their lust, and what they desired to do with her. Yet they watched her day to day. And the day came when both the elders acknowledged their lust toward her; and then appointed they a time both together, when they might find her alone. And it came to pass, that as they watched for a fit time, she went in as before with two maids only; and she was desirous to wash herself in the garden, for it was hot. And there was nobody there save the two elders, that had hid themselves, and watched her. Then she said to her maids, Bring me oil and washing balls, and shut the garden doors that I may undress myself. And they did as she bade them, and shut the garden doors, and went out themselves at a privy door to fetch the things that she had commanded them; but they saw not the elders, because they were hid. Now when the maids were gone forth, the two elders rose up, and ran unto her, saying, Behold, the garden doors are shut that no man can see us; and we are in love with thee; therefore consent unto us, and lie with us. If thou wilt not, we will bear witness against thee, that a young man was with thee; therefore didst thou send away thy maids from thee. Then Susanna sighed, and said, I am in a strait on every side; for if I do this thing, it is death unto me; and if I do it not, I cannot escape your hands. It is better for me to fall into your hands, and not do it, than to sin in the sight of the Lord. With that Susanna cried with a loud voice, and the two elders cried out against her. When the servants of the house heard the cry in the garden, they rushed in to see what was done to her. And when the two elders declared their matter, the servants were greatly ashamed; for there was never such a report made of Susanna. The next day, when the people were assembled to her husband Joakim, the two elders came also full of mischievous imagination against Susanna, to put her to death, and said before the people, Send for Susanna, the daughter of Chelcias, Joakim's wife. And so they sent.

And when she came in with her father and mother, her children, and all her kindred, with a veil upon her face, these wicked men commanded to uncover her face, that they might be filled with her beauty. Therefore, her friends and kindred that saw her wept. Then the two elders stood up in the midst of the people, and laid their hands upon her head. And she weeping looked up toward heaven, for her heart trusted in the Lord. And the elders said, As we walked in the garden alone, this woman came in with two maids, and shut the garden door, and sent the maids away. Then a young man, who there was hid, came unto her, and lay with her. Then we that stood in a corner of the garden, seeing this wickedness, ran unto them. And when we saw them together, the man we could not hold; for he was stronger than we, and he opened the door and ran out. But having taken this woman, we asked who the young man was, but she would not tell us; these things we do testify.

Then the assembly believed them, and those of the elders and judges; so they condemned her to death. Then Susanna cried out with a loud voice, and said, O everlasting God, that knoweth the secrets, and knowest all things before they be, thou knowest that they have borne false witness against me, and, behold, I must die; whereas I never did such things as these men have invented against me. And the Lord heard her voice. Therefore when she was led to be put to death, the Lord raised up the Holy Spirit of a youth, whose name was Daniel. And he cried with a loud voice, I am clear from the blood of this woman. Then all the people turned themselves toward him, and said, What meaneth thou by these words which thou hast spoken? So he stood up in the midst of them, and said, Are ye such fools, ye sons of Israel, that without a trial or knowledge of the truth ye have condemned a daughter of Israel? Return again to the place of judgement, for they have borne false witness against her.

Wherefore, all the people of the assembly turned again in haste; and the elders said unto Daniel, Come, sit down among us, and shew it us, seeing God hath given thee the gift of words, and the honor of an elder. Then said the youth Daniel unto them, Put these two aside one far from the other, and I will examine them. So when the two elders were separated from one another, he called one of them, and said, O thou that are waxen old in wickedness, now thy sins which thou hast committed aforetime are come to light. For thou hast borne false witness, and pronounced false judgement; hast condemned the innocent, and let the guilty go free; albeit the Lord saith, The innocent and righteous shalt thou not slay. Now then, if thou hast seen her, tell me, Under what tree sawest thou them companying together? And the elder answered, Under a mastick tree. And Daniel said, Very well, thou hast lied against thine own head; for even now the angel of God hath received the sentence of God to cut thee in two. Then he commanded that the second elder be brought forth, and he said unto him, O thou seed of Canaan (Chanaan), and not of Judah, beauty hath deceived thee, and the lust hath perverted thine heart. Thus have ye dealt with the daughters of Israel, and they for the fear companied with you; but the daughters of Judah would not abide in your wickedness. Now therefore tell me, Under what tree didst thou take them companying together? And the man answered, Under an holm tree.

Then said Daniel unto him, Well, thou hast lied against thine own head; for the angel of God waiteth with the sword to cut thee in two, that he may destroy you. With that all the assembly cried out with a loud voice, and praised God, who saveth them that trust him. And they arose against the two elders; and according to the law of Moses, they put them to death. Thus the innocent blood was saved that day. Thereafter Chelcias and his wife praised God for their daughter Susanna, with Joakim her husband, and all the kindred; and there was no dishonesty found in her. From that day forth was Daniel had in great reputation in the sight of the people.

Now in the days of Jehoiakim king of Judah (628-618 B.C.), Nebuchadnezzar came up against Jerusalem, and Jehoiakim became his servant. In the third year of Jehoiakim's reign did Nebuchadnezzar, who was yet coregent with his father Nabopolassar, take Jerusalem. And he carried with him vessels of the house of the Lord unto Shinar, to the house of his god and to his treasury. And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes; the children in whom was no blemish, but well favored, and skillful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding of science; such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace; and to whom they might teach the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans. Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, who were carried to Babylon; and unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names. For he gave Daniel the name Belteshazzar; to Hananiah, Shadrach; to Mishael, Meshach; and to Azariah, Abed-nego. And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank; so that they might be trained for three years; after which time they might stand before the king.

But Daniel resolved in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank; therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs, that he might not defile himself. Now the Lord had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs. And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and drink. For why should he see your faces unhealthy like others of your age? Then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king. Then said Daniel to Melzar the steward, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse (boiled grains, cereal, etc.), and water to drink. Then let our countenance be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of those who eat the portion of the king's meat; as thou seest, deal with thy servants accordingly. So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days. And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and healthier than all the children which ate the portion of the king's food. Thus Melzar their steward took away their portion of the king's food and wine; and gave them pulse and water instead.

And, behold, to these four children God didst give knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom; and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. Now at the end of their training period, the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar. And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; therefore they stood before the king. And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, which the king enquired of the Babylonian priests and noblemen, he found them ten times better than all his magicians, astrologers, and counsellors, in the realm. And Daniel continued to wait upon the king.

In the second year of the crowning of Nebuchadnezzar (623 B.C.), he dreamt dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and suffered from sleeplessness. Then the king commanded to call the magicians, the astrologers and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, to interpret his dreams. So they came and stood before the king. And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream. Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack (Aramaic), O king, live forever; tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation. The king answered, The thing is gone from me. And if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made dunghills. But if ye shew the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts and rewards and great honor; therefore show me the dream and the interpretation thereof. They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it. The king said unto them, I knew of a certainty that you would make excuses, because ye see the thing is gone from me. But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you. For ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed; therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof. And the Chaldeans answered, bowing before the king, There is not a man upon the earth, O king, that can shew the king's matter; for there is no king, lord, or ruler, that asked such a thing at the hand of any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean. And it is a rare thing that the king requireth; and there is none that can shew it or the interpretation thereof, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh. Therefore the king Nebuchadnezzar was very furious and wroth; and commanded Arioch the king's captain to destroy all the wise men of Babylon. And as the decree went forth, they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

And when Daniel heard of the king's decree, he inquired at the hand of Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree of the king so harsh? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel; and Daniel said that he would interpret his dream. And Daniel made this thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions; that they might seek mercies of the God of heaven concerning this mystery; that Daniel and his fellows might not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon. Soon after, the secret was revealed unto Daniel, in a night vision. And Daniel woke up, and praised the God of heaven in these words:

> Blessed be the name of the Lord for ever and ever; for wisdom and might are his. He changeth the times and seasons; he removeth kings and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that possess an understanding heart. He revealeth the deep and secret things; he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him.
> I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hath given me wisdom and might; and hath made known unto me now what we desired of thee; for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

Thereafter Daniel went to see Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the magicians, astrologers, and Chaldeans of Babylon; and said unto him, Destroy not the wise men of Babylon; bring me in before the king; and I will show unto the king the interpretation. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said, I have found a man of the captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation. The king said unto Daniel, whose court name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and interpretation thereof? And Daniel replied, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians and soothsayers shew unto the king; but there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets and maketh known to king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in latter days; thy dream, and thy visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these. And as for thee, O king, thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, as to what should come to pass from hereafter; and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass. But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I possess more than any; but for the sake that the interpretation be made known to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thine heart.

Thou, O king, sawest, and beheld a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold; his breast and arms of silver, and his belly and thighs of brass; his legs of iron, his feet of part iron and part clay. Thou sawest till a stone cut out without hands (meaning a meteorite) smote the image upon his feet of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together; and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried some away, and others were scattered hither and thither, that no place was found for them. Then the stone (meaning the Arabians that dwelt in the region of Mecca or Becca, where the black meteorite had been venerated since millennia past; it was here that Abraham and Ishmael built the temple to the Lord God of Abraham, the Lord of the universe) that smote the great image, became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

This is the dream, and now we shall tell the interpretation thereof. Thou, O king, art a king of kings; for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the fields and fowls of the air, hath he given into thine hand; and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold. After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior and lesser than thine; then shall arise the third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth and breaketh all things, shall it break in pieces and bruise it. And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, partly of potter's clay and partly iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet were part iron and part clay, so shall the kingdom be partly strong, and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men; but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay. And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed. And the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever on the strength of Truth and Righteousness.

And forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone cut out without hands, that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver and gold; the Most High God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure. Then king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel; and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him. And Nebuchadnezzar thus spake unto Daniel, Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal this secret. And the king made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon. Then Daniel requested of the king, that he set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego over the affairs of the province of Babylon, but Daniel sat in the gate of the king.

And it came to pass that Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, whose height was sixty cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits; and he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon. Then Nebuchadnezzar gathered together the princes, the governors, the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up. Then an herald made the proclamation, O nations, peoples, and tongues; behold, each time ye hear the sound of the coronet, flute, harp, sackbut (a triangular stringed instrument), psaltery, dulcimer (bagpipe), and all kinds of music, all together, ye shall fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up; and whoso falleth not down, and worshippeth, shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. And thereafter every time they heard the sounds of the musical instruments, all nations, kindred, tongues, and people, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

Wherefore at that time certain of the Chaldees came, and accused the Jews. And they went to king Nebuchadnezzar, and said, O king, live for ever; thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the coronet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the golden image; and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, have not regarded thee; they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring the three Jews. And they brought these men before the king. And Nebuchadnezzar spake unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up? Now if ye be ready to fall down and worship, it is well; but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands? And the three answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not accountable unto thee in this matter; for the Lord is our Master and King; as he is thine also, but thou knowest not. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the expression of his countenance was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Therefore he commanded his most mighty of his army that they should heat the furnace, seven times hotter than before; and to bind the three Jews, and they were bound in their coats, their hosen, their hats, and their other garments, and cast into the burning fiery furnace. And because the king's commandment was urgent, and they were eager to put them to death, the furnace being hotter than ever before, the flame of the fire consumed those men that took Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; and the three fell down into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Behold, Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished; and rose up in haste, and asked his countrymen, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. Then he said unto them, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire; and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

And Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the fiery furnace, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the Most High God, come forth, come hither. Then the three came forth out of the midst of the fire. And the princes, governors, captains, and king's counsellors being gathered together, saw that upon the bodies of these men fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats damaged; nor the smell of fire had passed onto them. Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him; and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God. Therefore I make this decree, that every nation, tongue, and people, which speak anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill; because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. And the king promoted the three Jews in the province of Babylon.

Thus Nebuchadnezzar son of Nabopolassar, and father of Amel-Marduk (Evil-merodach), ruled as the king of the organized world forty-three years (from 624-581 B.C.). It was in the nineteenth year of Nabopolassar, that his son Nebuchadnezzar, the coregent, warred in the mountainous region, and returned to Babylon with much spoil; and earned a good reputation as commander of the army. During the twenty-first year of Nabopolassar's reign, Nebuchadnezzar marched with the Babylonian army to Carchemish, and fought against the Egyptians. He led his forces to the Hatti-land, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim king of Judah, 625 B.C. Soon after, the news of his father's death brought Nebuchadnezzar to Babylon; and on the first of Elul (August-September, 624 B.C.) he ascended the throne. In the selfsame year he returned to the Hatti-land, and captured the Philistine city of Ashkelon. Besides attaining many military victories, and expanding his territory, he undertook many municipal and building projects. To satisfy the homesick longings of his Median queen, it is said that Nebuchadnezzar built the Hanging Garden, a marvel and wonder of its time. He also built temples, palaces, and walls. These words are from one of his inscriptions:

> Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, the restorer of Esagila and Ezida, son of Nabopolassar am I. As a protection to Esagila, that no powerful enemy and destroyer might take Babylon; that the line of battle might not approach Imgur-Bel; the wall of Babylon that which no former king had done; at the enclosure of Babylon I made an enclosure of a strong wall on east side. I dug a mote, I reached the level of the water. I then saw that the wall which my father had prepared was too small in its construction. I built with bitumen and brick a mighty wall which, like a mountain, could not be moved; and connected it with the wall of my father. I laid its foundations on the breast of the under-world; its top I raised up like a mountain. Along this wall to strengthen it I constructed a third, and as the base of a protecting wall I laid a foundation of bricks and built it on the breast of the under-world, and laid its foundation. The fortifications of Esagila and Babylon I strengthened, and established the name of my reign forever.

Moreover, Nebuchadnezzar did leave this testimony, to the people of his day, and to posterity; for he was a very religious man. Although he did worship the Babylonian deities; Marduk (Merodach) the chief god of Babylon did he truly worship. To Marduk attributed Nebuchadnezzar all his military victories; and sacred vessels of the Lord and trophies of war kept he in the temple of Marduk. And Nebuchadnezzar said, For thy glory, O exalted Merodach, a house have I made, may it receive within it the abundant tribute of the kings of the nations, and of all peoples! He knew the Lord, and could recognize the Son of God; it was this Son of God who revealed himself to Nebuchadnezzar, in the name and form of Marduk; for he was a king of the eternal kingdom of the Son of God. Now these are the last words of Nebuchadnezzar son of Nabopolassar, that became the king of kings of his day:

> Nebuchadnezzar the king, unto all people, nations, and tongues, that dwell in all the earth; peace be multiplied unto you.
>
> I thought it good to show the signs and wonders that the Most High God hath wrought toward me. How great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation. I, Nebuchadnezzar, was at rest at mine house, and prospering in my palace. I saw a dream which made me afraid; and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me.
>
> Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream. Then came the magicians, the astrologers, the soothsayers, and the Chaldeans; and they could not discern the nature of my dream; and when it was revealed unto them, they knew not the interpretation thereof.
>
> But at last Daniel came in before me, whose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my God, in whom is the Spirit of the holy gods. And I said unto him, O Belteshazzar, master of the magicians, because I know that the Spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the vision of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.
> Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed — I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great. The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth. The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much; and it was meat for all. The beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the air dwelt in its branches; and all flesh was fed of it. And, behold, a watcher and a Holy One came down from heaven. He cried aloud, and said, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches; shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit; let the beast get away from under it, and the fowls from its branches. Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth. Let his heart be changed from man's; and let the beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him. This matter is by decree of the Watchers and the demand by the word of the Holy Ones (of the eternal priesthood of God); to the intent that the living may know the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men; and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and settest up over it the basest of men, according to needs, purposes, and designs.

This is the dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, my son, declare the interpretation thereof; for as much as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation; but thou art able, for the Spirit of the holy gods is in thee. Then Daniel, even Belteshazzar, was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. So the king spake and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. And Belteshazzar replied, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies. The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong; whose height reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth; whose leaves were fair, and fruit much; and it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of heaven had their habitation; it is thou, O king, that are grown and become strong; for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth. And whereas the king saw a watcher and a holy one coming down from heaven, saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, and let it be wet with the dew of heaven; and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him; this is the interpretation, O king: This is the decree of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the king. That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen; and they shall wet thee with dew of heaven, and seven times shall the Lord pass over thy afflictions; till thou art confirmed that the Most High ruleth the kingdoms of men, and giveth to whomsoever he willeth. And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree to its roots, to leave the dead remnant with its roots, that it may in due time yield again; and this kingdom of the dead shall be surely established forever unto thee; after that thou shalt have known that heavens do rule. Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee: Break off thy sins by righteousness; and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor and persecuted; if thou wishest to lengthen thy peace, tranquility, and joy.

Babylonian conception of the world

And all this didst come upon Nebuchadnezzar; at the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon. The king spake and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty? While the king thus spake, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee is spoken; the kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive thee from men; and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times the Lord shall pass over thee; until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he willeth.

The selfsame hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen and his body wet with dew of heaven, till his hair was grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

And at the end of the days, I Nebuchadnezzar, lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and my understanding returned unto me; and I blessed the Most High; I praised and honored him that liveth forever; whose dominion is an everlasting dominion; and his kingdom is from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing unto him; he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven and of the earth; and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doeth thou? And in an instant all became clear, and I saw my folly; my power of reason returned unto me, for the glorification of my kingdom; my honor and my brightness returned unto me; my counsellors and my princes sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me. Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honor the King of heaven; all whose works are truths, and whose ways are just; and those who walk in pride and vanity he is able to abase.

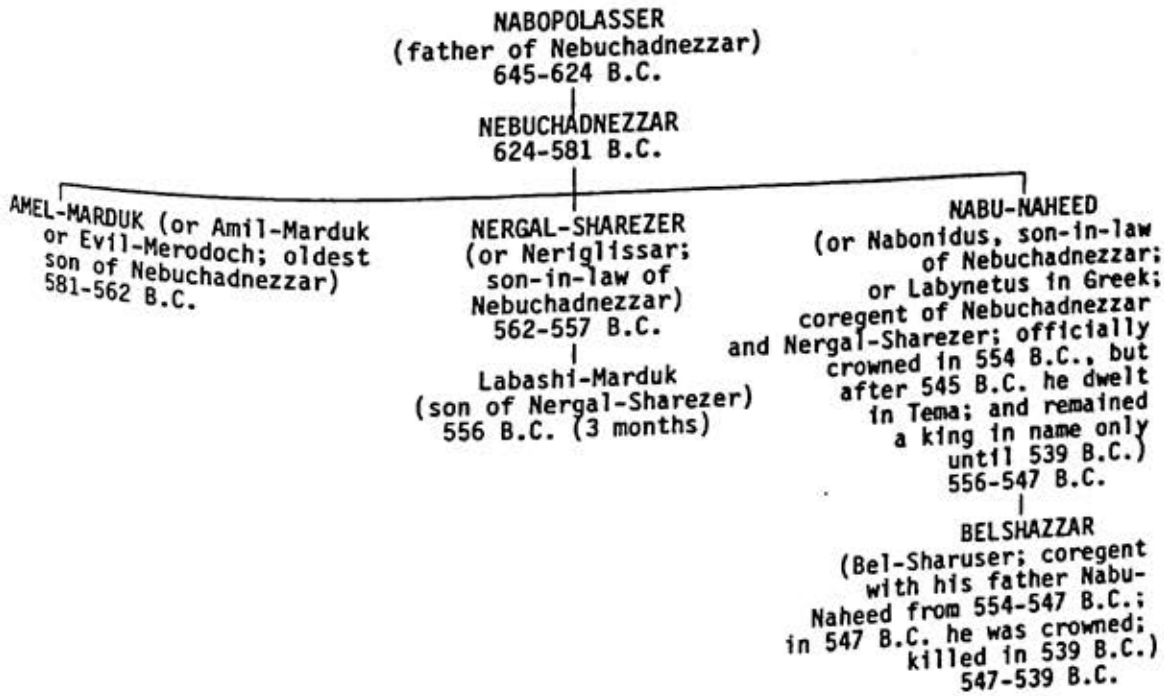
And it came to pass, according to the noble custom, that sons of the king and his counsellors and princes were trained at the royal court for their future appointments and missions; and out of this pool of righteous souls were chosen the coregents, to rule with the kings and sovereigns. Among such as these were also Daniel or Belteshazzar, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, the children of Judah, who were brought to Babylon from Jerusalem to be trained. And out of the four Daniel was the wisest and the holiest; and to him was married a daughter of Nebuchadnezzar; and he was above all other princes. Now this is the genealogy of Nebuchadnezzar:



Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus) was married to a daughter of Nebuchadnezzar, as was Daniel, and Nergal-Sharezer. Nabu-Naheed's ascension to the throne followed the assassination of Labashi-Marduk. In 554 B.C. Nabu-Naheed was made king of Babylon. In the seventh, ninth, tenth, and eleventh years of his reign, Nabu-Naheed attempted to capture the Arabian city of Tema; for it was a junction city on the ancient caravan routes along which gold and spices were transported through Arabia, from East to West, and from North to South. Also Tema was known to have a salubrious climate; and as in Babylon, the worship of the moon was prominent in Arabia. And after the twelfth year of his reign Nabu-Naheed dwelt in the Arabian oasis city of Tema, in a palace which he began to construct in 550 B.C. and which was completed in 546. And in the year 547 B.C. Belshazzar was crowned king, as Nabu-Naheed prepared to retire in his new palace; and Nabu-Naheed dwelt in Tema after 545 B.C. And Belshazzar (or Bel-Sharuser), the son of Nabu-Naheed, grandson of Nebuchadnezzar by his daughter Neetoeris, served as the treasurer of Babylon under Amel-Marduk. But it was not until the third year of Nabu-Naheed, 554 B.C., that he began to rule as coregent with his father Nabu-Naheed.

Now in the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel had a dream and a vision while resting upon his bed. Then he wrote down the dream, and told the sum of the matters to the king. Thus he spake:

> I saw in my vision by night; and behold, the four winds of heaven strove upon the great sea. And the four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings. I saw till its wings were plucked, and they lifted it up unto the earth; and made it stand upon his feet as a man; then the beast's heart was replaced with man's heart.
>
> And behold, the second beast was like a bear, and it raised itself up on one side, and it had three ribs in his mouth between its teeth. And they said to the beast, Arise, devour much flesh! After this, I beheld, and lo, the third beast was like a leopard, and on its back were four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads, and they gave unto it a great dominion. Then I saw the fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, bitterly proud and merciless; it had teeth of iron and nails of brass; and it devoured and brake into pieces everything round about it, and stamped the residue with its feet. As I considered its ten horns, behold, there came up among them another little horn; before whom three of the first horns were plucked off by the roots. And, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking mighty and vain things. This fourth beast was different than all others.
> I saw till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days sitting upon his throne, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him. And a thousand thousand ministered unto him; and ten thousand times ten stood before him; the judgement was set, and the books were opened. I beheld till the horn of the (fourth) beast spake vain and mighty words, till the beast was slain, and his body was burnt to ashes. The other three beasts were judged, they had their dominion taken away from them, yet their lives were prolonged a time and season.

Then I beheld one like the Son of Man descending from the clouds of heaven; and they brought him to the Ancient of days. And there was given him dominion, glory, and a Kingdom; that all people, nations, and tongues should serve him; whose dominion is everlasting, and whose kingdom is unperishable.

I Daniel (or Belteshazzar) was grieved in my Spirit and body; and the visions of my head troubled me. Then I came near unto one of the attendants, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things, and said: These great beasts, which are four, are four kings which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the Kingdom and possess it for ever, even for ever and ever. And that I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was different than all others, whose teeth were of iron, and nails of brass, which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet; and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of the horn that had eyes, and a mouth which spake vain and mighty things, who was more dreadful and terrible than the other beasts. I beheld the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgement was given to the saints of the Most High; and in that time the saints possessed the Kingdom. And he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be different than all the kingdoms before it; for in its might and power of hell it shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall rise after them, even the little horn, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak vain and mighty words against the Most High; and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws in his delusion and folly; and they shall be given into his hands, until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgement of the Ancient of days will prevail; and the saints will take away his dominion, to consume and destroy unto the end. And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions of the earth shall serve and obey him.

Then in the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision appeared unto Daniel. And he saw that he was at Shushan (Susa) in the palace which is in the province of Elam. And he stood at the bank of the river Ulai. Then he lifted up his eyes, and saw, behold, stood before him in the river a ram with high horns; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. He saw the ram pushing westward, and northward and southward; so that no beast might stand before him; neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; and he did according to his will, and became great. And as thus he pondered, behold, an he-goat came from the west, and swept the whole earth, and touched not the ground; and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes. And he came to the ram with two horns which stood before the river; and ran into him in the fury of his power. And enraged against him, he smote the ram and brake his two horns; and there was no power left in the ram, and he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him; and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand.

Therefore the he-goat waxed very great in power and dominion; and when he was strong, the great horn was broken; instead of it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven. And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south and the east, and toward the pleasant land. And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast some of the hosts and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he magnified himself unto the prince of the host; and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his abode was cast down. And an host was given him to take away the daily sacrifice of the people, and to cast down the truth to the ground; and it practised falsehood and abominations, and prospered.

Then Daniel heard one saint speaking to another, saying, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the desolation of the place (Babylon), and its host to be trodden under foot? And he looked at Daniel, and said, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the house of the king of Babylon be cleansed.

And, behold, it came to pass that, as Daniel stood by the river Ulai, he heard a voice from the midst of the river, saying, Gabriel, make him to understand the vision. And as the angel Gabriel came to where Daniel stood, he fell upon his face, and he was afraid, and the angel said unto Daniel, Understand, O son of man, for at the time of the end shall be the vision. Now as he was speaking with Daniel, a deep sleep came over him, and he lay asleep with his face to the ground. And Gabriel said unto Daniel, Behold I will make thee know what shall be in the last days, in its time appointed (meaning after the end of two thousand and three hundred days). The two horns of the ram which thou sawest are the kings of Media and Persia; and the rough goat is the king of Grecia (Greece), and the great horn between his eyes is the first king.

Now after the great horn was broken, and in its place stood up four, four kingdoms shall emerge out of the nation, but not in his power. And in the latter days of these kingdoms, when their transgressions are become fully ripe for judgement, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark riddles shall stand up. And his power will be mighty, but not by his own power, as the power of the moon upon the darkness of the earth. And he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall practice and prosper; and shall destroy the mighty and the holy. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart and by peace shall he destroy many. (This reference is to the latter-day Arabian prophet and emperor Mohammed.) And he shall stand up against the Most High in pride and vanity, and in its appointed time shall he be broken without hand. And Gabriel said unto Daniel, The vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true, therefore shut thou up the vision, for it shall be many a day, until all shall be fulfilled. After this Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days; then he rose up and did the king's business; and he was astonished at the vision, but none understood it.

Now, Kavi Vishtaspa(Hystaspes, or Gushtasp), who was later given the throne name Ahasuerus, ruled the Bactrian kingdom in eastern Iran; was ordained into the ancient Order of Zarathustra (or Zoroaster) in the thirty-seventh year of his reign (576 B.C.), and he dwelt at the royal palace at Shushan (Susa), in the province of Elam (about 225 miles east of Babylon, on the Karkhel river); and his son Darius (Daryavaoosh) was made the sovereign of eastern Iran. At this time Darius was about twenty-five years old. It was this Ahasuerus, who at the end of his reign, had dominion over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces; his empire extended from India (Ind) in the east to Egypt in the west, and beyond Egypt unto Ethiopia.

And while Ahasuerus reigned at Shushan, and his son Darius in eastern Iran, time was nigh for the prophecy of Isaiah son of Amoz, to be fulfilled. For the Lord had spoken by the mouth of Isaiah, that a Cyrus shall be born of the Persians, and he shall be the Lord's shepherd; he shall perform all his pleasure; even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built again, and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid. And also to fulfill the words of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, that Jerusalem shall lay desolate seventy years; which desolation began in 607 B.C., and shall end in 537 B.C.; and that Cyrus shall be the Lord's Anointed One, a Meshiahh (Messiah), or Christ.

And thus was the promised Cyrus born: Astyages (Afrasiab) the king of the Medes, after a bad dream, gave his daughter to Cambyses a Persian to marry; because he feared that he would dethrone him. Cyrus was born of this marriage. But in another dream it was revealed to him that Cyrus would replace him, so he ordered the baby killed. He ordered his chief advisor Harpagos (Piran) to kill the boy; but Harpagos gave the boy to a shepherd whose wife had given birth to a dead baby. The shepherd and his wife substituted their dead baby for Cyrus, and Harpagos was satisfied. The name of the wife was Spako, which in Median meant dog; thus a child suckled by a dog! When Cyrus was ten he was discovered by Astyages (Afrasiab), but his courtiers comforted him, that he feared no more, and they sent Cyrus to dwell with his real parents in Persis (Parsa). Cyrus was the son of the Persian ruler Cambyses by his wife Mandane (Ferangis), the daughter of Astyages king of the Medes. Cyrus succeeded his father Cambyses to the throne of Anshan, which was under the suzerainty of the Median king Astyages (Afrasiab, Ishtumegu), in 559 B.C. When he reached manhood he revolted; and in 550 B.C. Astyages called up his troops to march against Cyrus. And he sent Harpagos against him as the commander of the Median army. But the army with Harpagos deserted to Cyrus and the rest fled. In fetters they delivered Harpagos (Piran) to Cyrus; thus the Persians and Medes joined forces, and thereafter with unity they fought under Cyrus.

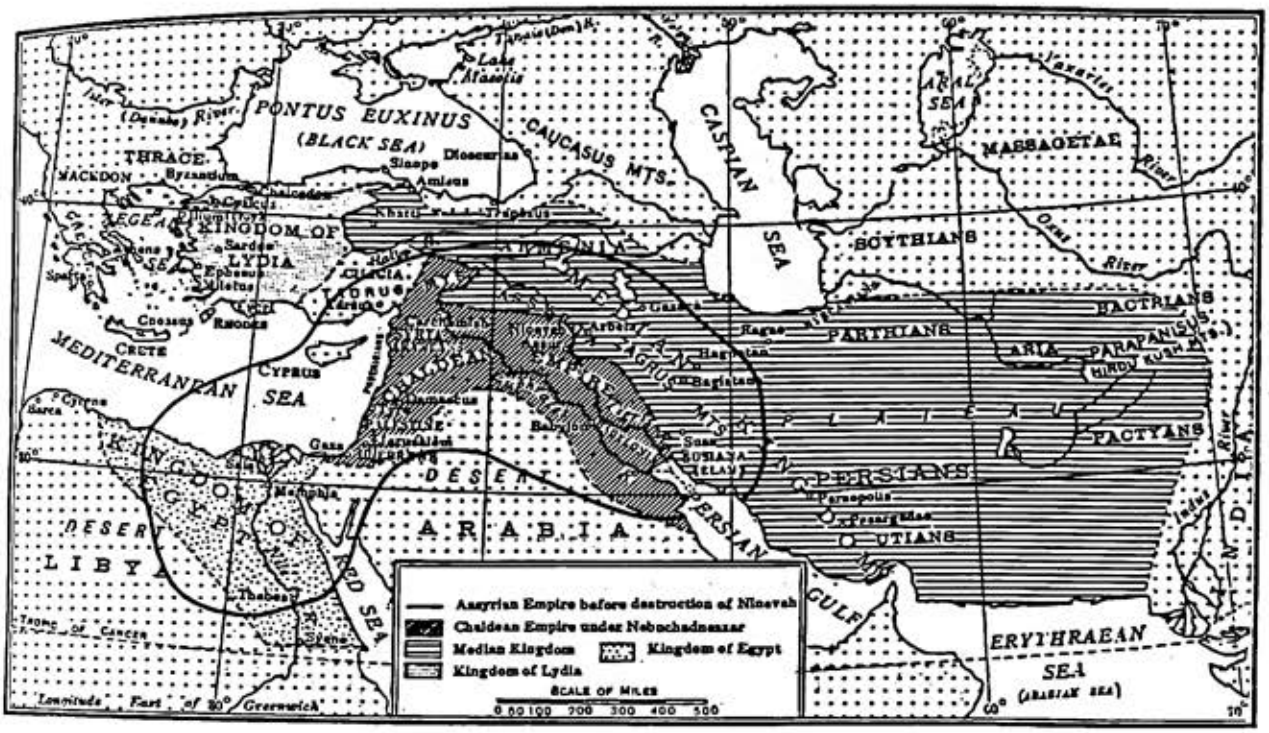
Cyrus during his childhood worked in menial positions as the son of a Persian bandit of the Mardi tribe, Atradates, and a shepherdess, at the Median court. And here he developed the desire to free himself from the bonds of servitude, and to become great. And it came to pass that Astyages sent him as an envoy to the Cadusians; and he met a Persian named Oibaras; with whom he planned to revolt against Astyages. And Astyages sent an army against the rebels and they were besieged on a mountain at Pasargadai. Then the Persian women shamed their men to deeds of valor, and in this manner Cyrus and his men defeated the Medes, and captured Ecbatana, their capital city. Then he consolidated his power in eastern Iran, Armenia, and in the south of the Caucasus; and he killed Astyages (Afrasiab) in the eleventh year of his reign.

After this he began to consolidate the dominion of the Median Empire, advancing all the way to the eastern borders of the Lydian empire at the Halys river in Asia Minor. Now king Croesus of Lydia, one of the richest kings of the time, faced with the threat of Cyrus the Persian, made political alliance with king Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus) of Babylon, Pharaoh Amasis II of Egypt, and with the Spartans of Greece. But before these allies could render assistance, Cyrus defeated the Lydians that were under Croesus, and captured Sardis. Cyrus then subdued the Ionian cities, and placed all of Asia Minor under the tribute of the Persian Empire.

In the seventeenth year of Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus), 540 B.C., Cyrus sent Darius the son of Ahasuerus, his friend and kinsman, that ruled in eastern Iran; and whose father ruled the Median Empire from the palace of Shushan (Susa), against Babylon, as the commander of the Medo-Persian armies. And Darius came out of Persia with a great army. When Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus) perceived he was advancing to attack him, he assembled his forces and returned to Babylon from Tema, to oppose him; but he was defeated, and fled with a few of his troops, and was shut within the city of Borshippa, a sister city of Babylon. Then Darius commanded his officers to tear down the outer walls of the city of Babylon,



Organized World under Various Kingdoms

because it had proved very troublesome to him, and was difficult to take; then he marched with his men to Borshippa to capture Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus); but Nabu-Naheed delivered himself voluntarily into the hands of Darius. His life was spared, but the kingship of Babylon was taken away from him; and he was given a place of abode in Carmania, where it is said that he spent the remainder of his life, and died. And the Babylonians made Belshazzar, the firstborn of Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus) the king, who had been coregent with Nabu-Naheed (Nabonidus) since 554 B.C., and was crowned in 547 B.C.

Now Darius was a great builder of municipal works, but his especial passion was for water projects. He made great efforts to make Persia a strong sea power. Darius employed foreign navigators; and dispatched a skillful Mediterranean sailor named Scylak to explore the course of the great Indus river in India. Then he sent him to sail along the coast of Asia from the mouth of the Indus westward to the Isthmus of Suez. Moreover, Darius restored the ancient but long filled-up canal of the Egyptians connecting the Nile with the Red Sea. Along the ancient routes of this canal, he had erected great stone tablets, that bear the account of the restoration of the canal. The fragments of these stone tablets survive even to this day, and bear such account as this, of king Darius:

and his countenance was changed, and his lords were astonished. Now the queen, by the reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet room, and spake thus: O king, live for ever; let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed. There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the Spirit of the holy Gods; and in the days of thy father, light, understanding, and wisdom of the Gods was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy (grand)father, and thy father the king, made master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers. Forasmuch as an excellent spirit, knowledge, understanding, and interpretation of dreams is found in him, his tongue speaketh the noble truths, and his words dissolve doubts, in this same Daniel; now let Daniel be called, and he will show the interpretation thereof.

Then was Daniel brought in before Belshazzar, the coregent king of Babylon; and the king spake unto Daniel, and said: Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my (grand)father brought out of Jewry? I have even heard of thee, that the Spirit of the Gods is in thee, and light and understanding and excellent wisdom is found in thee. And I have heard of thee, that thou canst make interpretations and dissolve doubts. Now if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation (of the writing on the wall) thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be made the third (high ranking) ruler in the kingdom.

And Daniel answered the king, and said, Let thy gift be to thyself, O thou king, and give thy rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation. To thy (grand)father Nebuchadnezzar, O king, the Most High God gave a kingdom, and majesty, glory, and honor. He gave him all people, nations, tongues; and they trembled and feared before him; for whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he set up, and whom he would he brought down. But when his heart was lifted up with pride and vanity, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took all his glory of the world. And he was driven from the sons of men; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses; they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; till he was confirmed in the knowledge of the Most High God, that ruled all the kingdoms of men; and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he willeth.

And thou, his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thyself before the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee; and thou and thy lords, and thy wives and concubines have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone; which see not, nor hear, nor know, but bring about the snare upon thy soul. And the God in whose hand is thy breath, and all thy ways, thou hast not glorified, but hath forsaken altogether. It was for this, that the part of the hand was sent, which wrote upon the wall, MENE MENE TEKEL (DAKHIL) UPHARSIN [literally, MANY MANY or a large number (Mene Mene) ENTER (Tekel or Dakhil) of the PERSIANS (Upharsin)]. This is the interpretation, God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Thou art weighed in the balance, and art found wanting; thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians. Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel or Belteshazzar with scarlet; and put a chain of gold about his neck; and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom. In that night it is said that Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans was slain. And Darius, son of Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus, was made the king of the Babylonian empire on the seventeenth day after Darius had taken Babylon. In a great gathering Cyrus, son of Cambyses (Saiawoosh), grandson of Cyrus Kai-Kaus, announced also concerning the liberty to the Jews, and building of the temple in Jerusalem.

The first encounter between Daniel and Cyrus son of Cambyses took place after Cyrus II had conquered Astyages (Afrasiab), the principal Turanian adversary of Iran. After Astyages was gathered to his fathers (in 549 B.C.), and Cyrus II took his kingdom, Daniel conversed with the king, and was honored above all his friends. Now the king also worshipped Bel the idol of the Babylonians. And the king worshipped it, and went daily to adore it; and the Babylonians spent upon him every day twelve great measures of fine flour, forty sheep, and six vessels of wine. But Daniel worshipped his own God, and the king said unto him, Why dost thou not worship Bel? And he replied, Because I may not worship idols made with hands, but the living God, who hath created the heaven and earth, and hath sovereignty over all flesh. Then said the king unto Daniel, Thinkest thou not that Bel is a living God? Seest thou not how much he eateth and drinketh every day? Then Daniel smiled, and said, O king, be not deceived; for this is but clay within and brass without, and did never eat or drink any thing. So the king was wroth, and called for his priests, and said unto them, If ye tell me not who it is that devoureth these expenses, ye shall die. But if ye can certify to me that Bel devoureth them, then Daniel shall die; for he hath spoken blasphemy against Bel. And Daniel said unto the king, Let it be according to thy word.

Now the priests of Bel were seventy, besides their wives and children. And the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel. So the priests of Bel said, Lo, we go out; but thou, O king, set on the meat, and make ready wine, and shut the door fast, and seal it with thine own signet. And tomorrow when thou comest in, if thou findest not that Bel hath eaten up all, we will suffer death; or else Daniel that speaketh falsely against us. And they little regarded it; for under the table they had made a privy entrance, whereby they entered in continually, and consumed the offerings. So when they were gone, the king set the food of the offering before Bel. Behold, Daniel had commanded his servants aforetime to bring ashes and scatter them throughout all the temple in the presence of the king alone; then went they out, and shut the door, and sealed it with the king's signet, and departed.

When the night came, the priests with their wives and children, as usual, did come up through the privy door, and did eat and drink up all. In the morning the king arose, and Daniel with him. And the king said, Daniel are the seals whole? Yea, O king, they be whole. And as soon as he opened the door, the king looked upon the table, and cried with a loud voice, Great art thou, O Bel, and with thee is no deceit at all. Then laughed Daniel, and held the king that he should not go in, and said, Behold now the pavement, and mark well whose footsteps are these. And the king said, I see the footsteps of men, women, and children; and then the king was angry, and took the priests with their wives and children, who showed him the privy doors through which they came in to consume the things that were set on the table. Therefore the king ordered the priests to be slain, and delivered Bel into Daniel's power, who destroyed Bel and his temple.

And in the same place there was a great dragon, which they of Babylon worshipped. And the king said unto Daniel, Wilt thou also say that this is of brass? Lo, he liveth, he eateth and drinketh; thou canst not say that he is no living god, therefore worship him. Then Daniel said, I will worship the Lord my God, for he is the living God; but give me leave, O king, and I shall slay this dragon without a sword or staff. The king said, I give thee leave. And Daniel took pitch, and fat, and hair, and did seethe them together, and made lumps thereof; this he put in the dragon's mouth, so the dragon burst in sunder; and Daniel said, Lo these are the gods ye worship. When they of Babylon and in Babylonia heard of it, they took great indignation, and conspired against Cyrus son of Cambyses, saying, Behold, he is become a Jew, and he hath caused the destruction of Bel, and slain the dragon, and put the priests to death.

So they came to the king, and said, Deliver us Daniel, or else we will destroy thee and thine house. Now when the king saw that they pressed him sore, being constrained he delivered Daniel unto them; and they cast him into the lions' den, where he was six days. And in the den there were seven lions; and they had given them every day two carcasses of men and two sheep, which then were not given, that they may devour Daniel. Behold, there was in Jewry a prophet, called Habakkuk who had made pottage, and had broken bread in a bowl, and was going into the field to bring it to the reapers. But the angel of the Lord said unto Habakkuk, Go carry the dinner that thou hast unto Daniel of Babylon, who is in the lions' den. And Habakkuk said, Lord I never saw Babylon, neither do I know where the den is. Then the angel of the Lord took him by the crown, and bare him by the hair of his head; and through the vehemency of his Spirit set him over the den in which was Daniel of Babylonia. And Habakkuk cried, saying, Daniel, Daniel, take the dinner which God hath sent thee. And Daniel said, Thou hast remembered me, O God; neither hast thou forsaken them that seek thee and love thee.

So Daniel arose, and did eat; and the angel of the Lord set Habakkuk in his place again immediately. Upon the seventh day the king went to bewail Daniel, and when he came to the den, he looked in, and, behold, Daniel was sitting. Then cried the king with a loud voice, Great art thou, O Lord God of Daniel, and there is none other beside thee. And he drew him out, and cast those that were the cause of his destruction into the den; and the lions devoured them in a moment before his face.

And when Darius the son of Vishtaspa (or Ahasuerus) became the king of the Babylonian empire, in 539 B.C., Cyrus II son of Cambyses was made the king of the Hakhamanish empire of Persia and Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus was in the seventy-fourth year of his reign, and residing at the palace at Shushan (Susa). And it pleased Darius to set over the Babylonian kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, to rule over the whole kingdom. And over them were three presidents, and Daniel was the first, that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king of the lands should suffer no damage. And Daniel was preferred above the presidents, and princes, because of the excellent Spirit in him, and Cyrus was preparing Darius to rule over the whole Persian empire, as his father Vishtaspa, or Ahasuerus; whose reign lasted until 522 B.C.

Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could not find any occasion or fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him. Then these men took counsel against Daniel, and said, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against the law of his God. Then these presidents and princes went to the king, and said, King Darius, live forever. And all the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, the princes, the counsellors, and the captains had all consulted together to establish a royal statute, and a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask petition of any God or man for thirty days, save thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions. So they petitioned the king, and said, Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the Law of the Medes and Persians (and Elamites), which altereth not. Wherefore king Darius (Daryavaoosh) signed the writing and the decree.

Now when Daniel knew that the writing (petition) was signed, he went into his house; his windows being open in his chamber, facing toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime. Then these men assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplications before his God. And they returned to the king, saying, Hast thou, O king, not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed; but maketh his petition before his God three times a day.

Therefore the king's countenance changed, when he heard these words; and was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart to deliver Daniel; and he labored till the going down of the sun to deliver him. Then these men assembled unto the king, and said, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, that no decree nor statute which issueth forth from the king's court can be altered or changed. Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions; and the king spake unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee. And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den, and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords, that the purpose might not be changed against Daniel.

Then king Darius went to his palace, and passed the night fasting; neither were the instruments of music brought before him, and his sleep left him. And the king arose very early in the morning, went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel, and said, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions? Then spake Daniel from the den, saying, Long live the king, my God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me; forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no harm. Then was the king exceedingly glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him; for he put his trust in the Lord his God.

And Darius the king of Babylonia commanded, and they brought those men that accused Daniel, and cast them in the den of lions; and then they cast their children and wives in the lion's den. And the lions overpowered them, and devoured them to their doom. Then king Darius issued a decree unto nations, kindred, tongues, and people, that dwelt on earth, saying: Peace be multiplied unto you. I make this decree, that in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, steadfast and eternal; and his Kingdom which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion which shall be unto the end of the shining of the sun. He delivereth and rescueth, and worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth; it is he who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions. So this Daniel prospered and grew mighty in the reign of Darius son of Vishtaspa (or Ahasuerus), and in the reign of Cyrus II son of Cambyses; a truly righteous prophet of the Lord he was. Daniel or Belteshazzar was not only the highest Spiritual man of his time among all the kings of the world, but also he was the highest secular official of the Babylonian kingdom; for he was the first of the three presidents that were set over all the temporal matters of the government; and the chain of command was from the first president of Babylonia to the second to the third; to the twelve Spiritual princes; governors, princes of the provinces, to the counsellors, to the captains, and to the citizenry. Now these are the words of Daniel from his book:

> In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, whose personal name was Spentadatha, of the seed of the Medes, which was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans. In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolation of Jerusalem.
> And I (Daniel) set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth and ashes. And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments. We have sinned, and we have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments; neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land.

O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day. To the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their rebellion, and transgressions against thy commandments; O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. To the Lord our God belongeth mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him. Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by the hand of his servants and prophets. Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy Law, even by departing to far off places, that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us; and the oath that is written in the Law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him.

And he hath confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great calamity; for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem. As it is written in the Law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us; yet made we not our prayers before the Lord our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy Truths.

Therefore hath the Lord watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us; for the Lord our God is righteous in all his works which he performs; for we obey not his voice. And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gotten thee renown, as at this day, we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from the city of Jerusalem, thy holy mountain; because for our sins, and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people are become a reproach to all that are about us. Now, therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications; and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake.

O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is hallowed by thy name; for we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousness, but for thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord forgive; O Lord hearken and do; defer not, for thine own sake, O my God; for thy city and thy people are called by thy name.

And as I (Daniel) was thus praying, and confessing my sins and the sins of my people Israel; yea, while I was yet praying, even the angel Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of evening oblation. He informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth; and I am come to shew thee; for thou art greatly beloved. Therefore, understand the matter, and consider the vision.

Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to cease from the transgressions and to make an end to sins, and to make reconciliation and restitution for iniquities; and to bring in everlasting righteousness, to seal up the visions and the prophecies, and to anoint the Most Holy. Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem unto the Messiah (Meshiahh) the Prince, shall be seven weeks; and threescore and two weeks; the streets shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times.

And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not of himself; but the people of the princes shall come, and the bruised shall seek the destruction of the city and the sanctuary. And the end thereof desolations are determined. And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblations to cease; and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate (again), even until the consummation; and all that hath been determined, shall be poured upon the desolate.

Also in the first year of Darius at Babylon, I (Daniel) stood to confirm and to strengthen him. And now will I shew the truth. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than all of them; and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up nations against the realm of Grecia (kingdom of Macedonia). And a mighty king shall stand up, to rule an empire of great dominion; and shall bring to pass all that is needful to establish the (Righteous) Kingdom for ever. Then his kingdom will be broken; and be divided unto the four winds of heaven. For this Kingdom shall not be of inheritance, that it be passed on to posterity, nor according to the power and dominion of kings and rulers; but it shall be the Kingdom of righteousness.

And it shall come to pass that the king of the south (of the Arabs) shall be strong; and one of his princes shall be made stronger than him, and his dominion shall be great. And in time the king's daughter of the south shall be joined together with the king of the north (Medo-Persians); but she shall not retain the power of the arm, neither shall he, nor shall he rule. For she, and he that begat her, and they that brought her, and strengthened her, shalt not be given to the rulership. But out of the branch of her roots shall one stand up in his might, and shall come with an army; and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall go against him and prevail. And he shall also carry captives into Egypt with their gods, with their princes, and their precious vessels of silver and gold. And he shall continue longer than the king of the north.

Then shall he return into his own land. But the sons of the kings of the north shall be stirred up, to assemble a multitude of host; and one shall certainly come, and overflow, and trespass to entice him to anger, and then shall he return to stir up his fortress. And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth to fight with the king of the north; and the king of the north will set forth a great multitude, and this multitude shall be given into his hand. And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up, and he shall trod down tens upon thousands, but this shall not appease his anger or suffering; nor shall he be strengthened by it. For the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former; and shall certainly come after certain years with a great army and with much riches. And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south; also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish their vision; but they shall fall. So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mount, and take the most fenced cities; and the arms of the south shall not withstand, neither his chosen people; neither shall there be any strength to withstand. But he that cometh against him shall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him. And he shall stand in the glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed.

He shall also set his feet to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and upright ones with him; this shall he do. And he shall give him the daughter of women, corrupting her; but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him.

After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many; but a prince in behalf of himself shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him. Then shall he turn his face toward the fort of his own land; but he shall stumble and fall, and not be found, then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom; but within a few days he will be destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle. And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honor of the kingdom; but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. With the arms of a flood shall they be overflown from before him; and shall be broken; yea, also the prince of the covenant. And making a league with him, he shall work deceitfully; for he shall come up, and shall become strong with small people. He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he will do that which his fathers have not done, nor his father's fathers. He shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches; yea, and he shall forecast his devices against the strongholds, even for a time. And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand, for they shall forecast devices against him. Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him; and his army shall rebel, and many shall fall down slain.

And both of these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies on one table; yet shall they not prosper, for the end shall not be until the time appointed. Then shall the king of the north return to his land with great riches, and much spoil; and his heart lifted up in pride and vanity, shall be against the holy covenant. At the time appointed he will return again toward the south; but it shall not be as the former, or the latter. For the ships of Chittim shall come against him; therefore he shall be grieved, and return, with much indignation against the holy covenant; so shall he do. And he will have intelligences with those that forsook the holy covenant. And the arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength; and shall take away the daily sacrifice and offering; and they will place the abominations such as maketh the land desolate. And such as do wickedly against the holy covenant shall be corrupt by flatteries; but the people that do know their God shall be strong to do exploits. And they that understand among the people shall instruct many; yet they shall fall by the sword, by flame, by captivity, or by spoil, many days. Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help; but many shall cleave to them with flatteries. And of them of understanding that fall, shall be tried, to purge, and to make them white, to the time of the end; because it is yet for a time appointed, and not forever.

And the king of the north shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god; and shall speak great words against the God of gods, and shall prosper, till the indignation be accomplished; for that which is determined shall be done. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers; nor the desire of women, nor regard for any god will sway his vain belief of self-magnification; for he shall magnify himself above all. Thus shall he do in the most strong holds; and now a strange god he shall acknowledge and increase with glory; and he shall cause the people to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain. And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him; and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and horsemen, with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overthrow and pass over. He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many shall be overthrown; but Edom, Moab, and the children of Ammon shall escape out of his hand. He shall stretch forth his hand upon the countries also, and the land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Lybians and the Ethiopians shall be at his feet. But tidings out of the east and of the north shall trouble him; therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. And he shall plant the abodes of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain, yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

And at that time shall Michael (the archangel) stand up, the great prince which standeth up for the children of the Lord's people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was a nation aforetimes. And at that time the Lord's people shall be delivered; every one that shall be found written in the Book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life, some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and turn many to righteousness for ever and ever.

But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

Now at the time of the fall of Babylon (in 539 B.C.), Darius, son of Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus, was appointed king of the Babylonian empire by Cyrus; which Cyrus was a coregent of Vishtaspa at the palace in Shushan (Susa). During this time also Joshua son of Jehozadak (Jozadak, or Josedech) was the high priest in Jerusalem; and Zerubbabel, whose Babylonian name was Sheshbazzar, was appointed by Cyrus the first governor of the repatriated Jews. He was the son of Pedaiah and the son-in-law of Shealtiel. In 537 B.C. Zerubbabel led a Jewish remnant back to Jerusalem.

At this time also the Lord sent out Haggai and Zechariah the prophets, to proclaim his word concerning the rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem, and to encourage people to serve God, and to do good works. He sent his word to Haggai in the sixth month of the second year of Darius king of Babylonia (Elul, 538 B.C.); and to Zechariah in the eighth month of the selfsame year. (Bul/Heshvan, 538 B.C.). Now the words of Haggai, of the Great Synagogue of Judah; and of Zechariah, son of Berechiah the son of Iddo the prophet, are thus:

WORDS OF HAGGAI

(Prophet of the Lord during the governorship of Zerubbabel; 538/537 B.C.)

In the second year of Darius the king of Babylonia, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month (1 Elul, 538 B.C.), came the word of the Lord by Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the Lord's house should be built. Then came the word of the Lord by Haggai the prophet, saying, Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie waste? Now therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Consider your ways; ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Consider your ways, go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the Lord. Ye looked for much, and lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it.

Why? saith the Lord of hosts. Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house. Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit. And I called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and upon all the labour of the hands.

Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech (Jehozadak) the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the Lord their God; and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the Lord their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the Lord. Then spake Haggai the Lord's messenger in the Lord's message unto the people, saying, I am with you, saith the Lord. And the Lord stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah; and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest; and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they began work in the house of the Lord of Hosts, their God, in the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king (24 Elul, 538 B.C.)

In the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month (21 Tishri/Ethanim) came the word of the Lord by the prophet Haggai, saying, Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying, Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? And how do ye see it now? Is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing? Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the Lord; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work; for I am with you saith the Lord of Hosts. According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you; fear ye not. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; and I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come; and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of Hosts. The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts. The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the Lord of Hosts; and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of Hosts.

In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the Lord by Haggai the prophet, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying, If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No. Then said Haggai, if one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. Then answered Haggai, and said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the Lord; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean. And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the Lord; since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten; when one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty. I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail in all the labours of your hands; yet ye turned not to me, saith the Lord. Consider now from this day forward, even from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month (24 Chislev) even from the day that the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid, consider it. Is the seed yet in the barn? Yea, as yet the vine, and the fig tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth; from this day will I bless you.

And again the word of the Lord came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying, Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth; and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother. In that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the Lord, and will make thee as a signet; for I have chosen thee, saith the Lord of Hosts.

WORDS OF ZECHARIAH

In the eighth month, in the second year of Darius king of Babylonia, (Bul/Heshvan, 538 B.C.), came the word of the Lord unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, The Lord hath been sore displeased with your fathers. Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Turn ye unto me and I will turn unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts. Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings; but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the Lord. Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, do they live for ever? But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? And they returned and said, Like as the Lord of Hosts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us.

Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Shebat, in the second year of Darius (24 Shebat, 538 B.C.), came the word of the Lord unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, I saw by night, and behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white. Then said I, O my lord, what are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will shew thee what these be. And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, These are they whom the Lord hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth. And they answered the angel of the Lord that stood among the myrtle trees, and said, We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest. Then the angel of the Lord answered and said, O Lord of Hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation these threescore and ten years? And the Lord answered the angel that talked with me with good words and comfortable words. So the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy. And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease; for I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction. Therefore thus saith the Lord, I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies; my house shall be built in it, saith the Lord of Hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem. Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad; and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem. Then lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and behold four horns. And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem. And the Lord shewed me four carpenters. Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head; but these are come to fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

I lifted up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold a man with a measuring line in his hand. Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof. And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her. Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, saith the Lord; for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the Lord. Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you; for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye. For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants; and ye shall know that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me. Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion; for, lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me unto thee. And the Lord shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again. Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord; for he is raised up out of his holy habitation.

And he shewed me Joshua (Jeshua) the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan; even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee; is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and stood before the angel. And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment. And I said, Let them set a fair mitre (turban) upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the Lord stood by.

And the angel of the Lord protested unto Joshua, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts; If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou shalt also judge my house; and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee places to walk among these that stand by. Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou and thy fellows that sit before thee; for they are men wondered at; for, behold, I will bring forth my servant The BRANCH. For behold the stone that I have laid before Joshua; upon one stone shall be seven eyes; behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the Lord of Hosts; and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day. In that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbor under the vine and under the fig tree.

The angel that walked with me came again, and waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep, and said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and behold a candlestick all of gold; with a bowl upon the top of it, and his seven lamps thereon, and seven pipes to the seven lamps, which are upon the top thereof. And two olive trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl,and the other upon the left side thereof. So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord? Then the angel answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts. Who art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain; and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings; crying, Grace, grace unto it.

Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me (Zechariah), saying, The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also finish it; and thou shalt know that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me unto you. For who hath despised the day of small things? For they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with those seven; they are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole earth. Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these two olive trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof? And what be these two olive branches which through the two golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves? And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord. Then said he, These are the two anointed ones, that stand by the Lord of the whole earth.

Then I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying roll. And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits. Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth; for every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it; and every one that lieth shall be cut off as on that side according to it. I will bring it forth, saith the Lord of Hosts; and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name; and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof. Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth. And I said, What is it? And he said, This is an ephah that goeth forth. He said moreover, This is their resemblance through all the earth. And, behold, there was lifted up a talent of lead; and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah. And he said, This is wickedness. And he cast it into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof. Then lifted I up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings; for they had wings like the wings of a stork; and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven. Then said I to the angel that talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah? And he said unto me, To build it an house in the land of Shinar; and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

And I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass. In the first chariot were red horses; and in the second chariot black horses; and in the third chariot white horses; and in the fourth chariot grisled and bay horses. Then I answered and said unto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord? And the angel answered and said unto me, These are the four spirits of the heavens, which go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth. The black horses which are therein go forth into the north country; and the white go forth after them; and the grisled go forth toward the south country. And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might walk to and fro through the earth; and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth. Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit in the north country.

and I was jealous for her with great fury. Thus saith the Lord, I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; and Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth; and the mountain of the Lord of Hosts the holy mountain. There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age. And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the Lord of Hosts. Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country; and I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day that the foundation of the house of the Lord of Hosts was laid, that the temple might be built. For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction; for I set all men every one against his neighbor. But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the Lord of Hosts. For the seed shall be prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things. And it shall come to pass, that as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing; fear not, but let your hands be strong. For thus saith the Lord of Hosts, As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the Lord of Hosts, and I repented not, so again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah; fear ye not. These are the things that ye shall do; Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates, and let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbor; and love no false oath; for all these are things that I hate, saith the Lord.

And the word of the Lord of Hosts came unto me, saying, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love the truth and peace. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities; and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of Hosts; I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of Hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you.

The burden of the word of the Lord in the land of Hadrach, and Damascus shall be the rest thereof; when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the Lord. And Hamath also shall border thereby; Tyrus, and Zidon, though it be very wise. And Tyrus did build herself a strong hold, and heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Behold, the Lord will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea; and she shall be devoured with fire. Ashkelon shall see it, and fear; Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowful, and Ekron; for her expectation shall be ashamed; and the king shall perish from Gaza, and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited. And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod, and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines. And I will take away his blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between his teeth; but he that remaineth, even he, shall be for our God, and he shall be as a governor in Judah, and Ekron as a Jebusite. And I will encamp about mine house because of the army, because of him that passeth by, and because of him that returneth; and no oppressor shall pass through them any more; for now have I seen with mine eyes. Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem. Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off; and he shall speak peace unto the heathen; and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth. As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope; even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee. When I have bent Judah for me, filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man. And the Lord shall be seen over them, and his arrow shall go forth as the lightning; and the Lord God shall blow the trumpet, and shall go with whirlwinds of the south. The Lord of Hosts shall defend them; and they shall devour, and subdue with sling stones; and they shall drink, and make a noise as through wine; and they shall be filled like bowls, and as the corners of the altar. And the Lord their God shall save them in that day as the flock of his people; for they shall be as the stones of a crown, lifted up as an ensign upon his land. For how great is his goodness, and how great is his beauty! Corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids.

Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain; so the Lord shall make bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field. For the idols have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they comfort in vain; therefore they went their way as a flock, they were troubled, because there was no shepherd. Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds, and I punished the goats; for the Lord of Hosts hath visited his flock the house of Judah; and hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle. Out of him came forth the corner, out of him the nail, out of him the battle bow, out of him every oppressor together. And they shall be as mighty men, which tread down their enemies in the mire of the streets in the battle; and they shall fight, because the Lord is with them, and the riders on horses shall be confounded. And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off; for I am the Lord their God, and will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine; yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them; and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people; and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them. And he shall pass through the sea with affliction, and shall smite the waves in the sea, and all the deeps of the river shall dry up; and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away. And I will strengthen them in the Lord; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the Lord.

Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars. Howl, fir tree; for the cedar is fallen; because the mighty are spoiled; howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; for the forest of the vintage is come down. There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled; a voice of the roaring of young lions; for the pride of Jordan is spoiled. Thus saith the Lord my God; Feed the flock of the slaughter; whose possessors slay them, and hold themselves not guilty; and they that sell them say, Blessed be the Lord, for I am rich; and their own shepherds pity them not. For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the Lord. But, lo, I will deliver the men every one into his neighbor's hand, and into the hand of his king; and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them. And I will feed the flock of slaughter, even you, O poor of the flock. And I took unto me two staves: the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bands; and I fed the flock. Three shepherds also I cut off in one month; and my soul loathed them, and their soul also abhorred me. Then said I, I will not feed you; that that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of another. And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people. And it was broken in that day; and so the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the Lord. And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver. And the Lord said unto me, Cast it unto the potter; a goodly price that I was prised at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord. Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. And the Lord said unto me, Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd. For, lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land, which shall not visit those that be cut off, neither shall seek the young one, nor heal that that is broken, nor feed that that standeth still; but he shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces. Woe to the idle shepherd that leaveth the flock! The sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye; his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkened.

The burden of the word of the Lord for Israel, saith the Lord, which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him. Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling unto all the people round about, when they shall be in the siege both against Judah and against Jerusalem. And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people; all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it. In that day, saith the Lord, I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness; and I will open mine eyes upon the houses of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness. And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the Lord of Hosts their God. In that day will I make the governors of Judah like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left; and Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem. The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah. In that day shall the Lord defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of the Lord before them. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadad-rimmon in the valley of Megiddon. And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of Shimei apart, and their wives apart.

In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of Hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered; and also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land. And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord; and his father and his mother that begat him shall thrust him through when he prophesieth. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied; neither shall they wear a rough garment to deceive; but he shall say, I am no prophet, I am an husbandman; for man taught me to keep cattle from my youth. And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts; smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered; and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones. And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried; they shall call on my name, and I will hear them; I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The Lord is my God.

Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east; and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west; and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal. Yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah; and the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark. But it shall be one day which shall be known to the Lord, nor day, nor night; but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light. And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea; in summer and in winter shall it be. And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem. And it shall be lifted up, and inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate; and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's winepresses. And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem; Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague. And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. And it shall be, that whoso of the heathen will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, even upon them shall be no rain. And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD; and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be Holiness unto the Lord of Hosts; and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein; and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord of Hosts.

Now the conquest of Babylon by Darius under Cyrus marks the beginning of the political end of the Shemitic dominion. Some seventeen years later Darius would become the king of the Hakhamanish empire of Persia (522/21 B.C.), the Aryan dominion would truly begin, and would end with Alexander in 330 B.C. And the Shemitic rule over Mesopotamia and the Near East was now shifted by the so called Medo-Persians and Elamites, commonly known as the Persians. And the age of Enlightenment and Godliness, even the age of Ahura Mazda or Hormuzd ( ) truly began. Now the Seventeenth Good Land (or Zion) was created by the Almighty God, through the Righteousness of the Son; and the essence of the ancient religion of the fire worshippers, of the Holy Order of Zarathustra or Zerdusht, was once again revived. This was the age of healing, salvation, and enlightenment; the age of everything which ariseth out of the Good Principle, and Good Disposition; out of Good Thoughts, Good Words, and Good Deeds. Yea, this was the age of the first spiritual assembly of all the archangels of the Three Worlds, the upper, middle, and nether-world, the worlds of Goodness, Passion, and Nothingness; of essence, bliss, and created bodies; even the worlds of the Sun, Moon, and the Stars, and in that Assembly the noble truths and mysteries of old were revealed unto them. But above all it was the age when a new Zarathustra or a Son of God (of divine birth) was created; he was the mouth and tongue of the Lord, the proclaimer of the celestial mansions; even a prophet and head of all the earthly archangels, was brought forth for the purpose of glorification, unification and establishment of the Kingdom; the Hakhamanish empire of the Medes, Persians, Turanians, Elamites, Arpachshadites, Asshurites, and Syrians. And they possessed the power and strength of the Law of Moses and the Truths of the Aryans. The synergistic nature of this power was the foundation upon which the Hakhamanish empire, commonly known as the Medo-Persian or simply Persian or Aryan empire, was built. That the Aryan truths were combined with the Shemitic knowledge of the scriptures of the millennia past, is seen in the injunction of Minuchir (712-592 B.C.), the seventh king of the Persian empire, to his son Nadir (Nauder), just before his death:

> O, my son! Fix not thine heart upon a regal crown; for this vain world is fleeting as the wind; the pains and sorrows of twice sixty years have I endured, though happiness and joy have also been my portion. I have fought in many a battle, vanquished many a foe. By Faridun's command I girt my loins; and his advice has ever been my guide. I hurled just vengeance on the tyrant brothers Salim and Tur, who slew the gentle Irij. And cities have I built; and made the tree which yieldeth poison, teem with wholesome fruit. And now to thee the kingdom I resign; that kingdom which belonged to Faridun; and thou wilt be sovereign of the world! But turn not from the worship of thy God; that sacred worship Moses taught, the best of all the prophets; turn not from the Path of purest holiness, thy father's choice.

Darius (Daryavaoosh), son of Vishtaspa, entered the gates of Babylon on Tishri 16, October 5/6, 539 B.C.; and Cyrus entered Babylon to confer the Babylonian empire upon Darius, seventeen days later, on Marchesvan 3 (October 22-23). And in the selfsame year he made the proclamation at a great assembly in Babylon that the Jews may return to Jerusalem and rebuild the house of God. And to Sheshbazzar (Zerubbabel), whom he had made governor of Jerusalem, he said: Take thou the vessels of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon; and take these vessels; go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem; and let a house of God be built in its place. Then Darius the king of Babylon, son of Vishtaspa, made a decree, in official memorandum, upon a scroll, and sent to Ecbatana where the official government records were kept, and works instigated, saying:

In the first year of Cyrus the king of the Medes, the same Cyrus the king made a royal proclamation concerning the house of God at Jerusalem saying, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices; and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid. The height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits; with three rows of great stones, and a row of treated timber; and let the expense be charged to the king's treasury. And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God be returned, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem; everything in its place, is to be placed in the house of God.

At the fall of Nineveh (in 632 B.C.) the Medes and the Persians, the descendants of Gomer, Magog (Majūj) and Madai (Mada), sons of Japheth (Haifeth, Yapheth), son of Noah, were well-settled in the region at the southeastern end of the Zagros mountains, just north and east of the Persian Gulf. Here its shores are little better than desert; but valleys of the mountainous hinterland are rich and fertile. In these valleys the Persians occupied a district some four hundred miles long. These people were known as a rude mountain folk, leading a settled agricultural life, with simple institutions, in the absence of art, writing, or literature; but with stirring memories of the past. As they tilled their fields and watched their flocks, they told many tales of their Aryan ancestors, and of the ancient faith of their fathers the fire worshippers. And they acknowledged themselves vassals of their kinsmen the Medes, who ruled far to the north and northwest of them.

Now, while Israel and Judah rebelled and foresook the Lord their God, even their Savior and Meshiahh (Messiah), the King of all the kingdoms on earth, their Japhethic brethren diligently sought the reservoirs of Spiritual waters as the land of drought seeks the rain. Moreover, bound to the seed of ignorance, and not being a part of the holy nation of the Lord's people, and upholding the traditions and professions of the farmers, merchants, and the nomadic herdmen, their Spiritual learning was limited in scope, capacity, and application. And there was no way to find relief from the pain and misery which ariseth out of the consequence of indulging in forbidden pastures.

After the Flood, of 2370 B.C., many nations sprang from Japheth (Yapheth, Haifeth, or Joppa), son of Noah; for Noah's blessings were upon him; that Japheth shall enlarge, and pervade the world, yet shall he abide in the dwellings of Shem; and that Canaan (meaning descendants of Ham) shall be his servants. Now this is the genealogical reckoning of the Japhethic-Shemitic-Hamitic line of descent, and a common line of descent of the Lord's people, from the time of the first creation of the Lord God unto the descendants of Japheth, Shem, and Ham, sons of Noah; as shown on the following pages:

THE FIRST SAVIOR, MESHIAHH (Messiah), Christ, or the Son of God; meaning the first Ahura Mazda, Allah Táála, Adhonai Yahweh, or Jesus Christ. 6618 B.C.

The First Savior, Meshiahh, Christ, or the Son of God was created by the Eternal Father the Lord God in the shape of a fire priest. From the Endless Light created he him; and his brilliance was that of Fire, and its incombustibility was like that which is inside the Light. Before the Creation the Lord Messiahh was not Ruler, but after the Creation he became Ruler, Patron, Wise, Free from Suffering, Manifest, All-Caring, Benefactor, All-Seeing, and Eternal; to last forever from one generation to the next. In the exact image of himself the Lord God created him, and called him by his own name; thus the Father was in the Son, and the Son in the Father. And thus he became the Only Begotten of the Father, for ever and ever.

This Most High God, or the Son of God, the Savior and Meshiahh of all creatures was created in 6618 B.C. (Gregorian calendar); or 2592 years before Adam's time. And for the first three thousand years he did not utter but thought; did not eat, and did not speak, but contemplated, and reflected upon the Righteousness of the perfect and true religion; and the desired pure glorification of the Creator.

GAYOMARD (The first created man; progenitor of Mashya and Mashyoi or Matro and Matryao)

After three thousand years of pure and Spiritual existence, the eternal Kingdom, or the Holy Order was corrupted by the contentious promise breaker, tempter, and deceiver of mankind, and his female demons; and the life of piety was mixed with the life of passion; and a burdensome morality, or the nature of Gayomard, the nature of double-mindedness, hypocrisy, even the nature of the Druj, came into existence into the everlasting Kingdom. And on his passing away, the nature of Gayomard flowed unto his seed; which was brought to the earth, under the care of a beneficent angel, and was preserved in the earth until through the protection of the archangels, a brother (Mashya) and a sister (Mashyoi) of mankind were created, and were brought together; and they were connected and joined together by the powers of heaven, even of the Holy Order. And through their union sprang many people; they were the progenitors of Adam, the first high priest of the Holy Order, that was taken from among the children of men, and ordained into the high priesthood of the eternal Kingdom.

ADAM
4026 - 3096 B.C.

The first high priest taken from among men; and ordained into the Holy Order of Zarathustra (Zerdusht), the Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God, which later came to be known as the Holy Melchizedek (Malek-us-Sadek) Priesthood; that he might be the mediator between the Lord and all men of the world, in all matters of the kingdom.

SETH
3896 - 2984 B.C.

During the time of Seth, son of Adam, the Holy Order of the Priesthood of God, or the Order of Zarathustra, was 3,000 years old. The first three thousand years of Spiritual and pure existence ended in 3618 B.C. And the next three thousand years were to be mixed with the worldly; thus piety was mixed with passion, the Immortal with the mortal. This First Separation of the Third Millennium marks the organization and framing of the Holy Order of Zarathustra, or the Son of God. This also marks the establishment of the everlasting office of the Guardian Spirit; a prophet, the first Master of the house of the Lord, and the head of all the earthly archangels. And this office was organized by Yima the good shepherd, the son of Vivanghat. It was also during the time of Seth son of Adam, that the official record-keeping and reckoning began in the year 3761 B.C.

Medo-Persian & Shemitic Line of Descent

(1) KAI-OMARS (also Gayomart; Gayomard)
(1580 - 1550 B.C.)

He was the first monarch of the Medo-Persians and Elamite-Arpachshadites; these were the Wise Lord's people, the Haryanas (or the Aryans), the Vehicle of the Lord; whose first abode was at Airyana Vaejah, the first Good Land, after the Flood of 2370 B.C., which the Wise Lord created. In eastern Iran, provinces and people combined themselves into a confederation of tribes, which was ruled by a kavi, or poet-ruler. For example, Darius, or Daryavaoosh, son of Vishtaspa, of the clan of Hakhamanish (Achaemenid), of the tribe of Pasargadai, of the province of Parsa, of the people of Arya (Airya). Kai-Omars was the first Iranian or Aryan ruler to establish a code of laws for his people. He dwelt in the mountains, and wore garments made of the skins of beasts. And his reign lasted thirty years. Moses (Moshe or Mūsa) of the Hebrews and Arabs was thirteen years old, when Kai-Omars began to reign.

(2) HOSHANG (Haoshyarsha)
1550 - 1510 B.C.

(3) TAHOOMER (Takhmoruw)
1510 - 1480 B.C.

(4) JAMSHID (Yima)
1480 - 780 B.C.

Jamshid began his reign when Moses of the Hebrews and the Arabs was one hundred and thirteen years old; and Aaron his brother had been dead six years. Jamshid lost the kingdom to Zohak, Ad-Zahak, son of Mirtaz-taazi, king of Arabia; and himself became a wanderer on earth.

(In the meantime people put Abteen, a descendant of Tahoomers, upon the throne of Persia; Abteen was killed by the spies of Zohak, when Faridoon his son was two months old. The child was raised in the Alburz mountains.)

(6) FARIDOON (Furdoon, Faridun, Fardoon)
763 - 712 B.C.

He was created by the Lord, when he created the Fourteenth Good Land (or Zion), the four-cornered Varena. He was the son of Abteen. Faridoon conquered Zohak, and the kingdom returned to the Kai-Omars dynasty. He had three sons from whom sprang the Medo-Persians; who joined forces with the Elamites that dwelt in Khuzistan in southwest Iran, and Arpachshadites that dwelt in Armenia, in the region between Urmiah and Lake Van. Now Faridoon had three sons, Salim, Tur, and Irij. And he commanded a learned person of his realm, saying, Go thou in quest of three daughters born to the same father and mother, adorned with every grace and accomplishment, that I may have my three sons married into one family. And through the providence of God, matrimonial alliance between the king of Yemen, who had three daughters, and Faridoon, the king of kings of Persia or Iran, and its empire was concluded. And the king of Yemen sent away his daughters with splendid dowries and precious jewels. Faridoon was two months old when Zohak put his father Abteen to death. And the mother of the infant fled; and the infant was raised in the Alburz mountains.

MIRTAZ-TAAZI (Murtaz, Merdas)
(A king of the Arabs)

He had a thousand animals that gave milk; and the milk of these animals he gave away in charity. And his son Zohak killed him to gain his kingdom; for the evil spirit entered into Zohak when he entered into an oath with Iblis, the Devil.

(5) ZOHAK (Ad-Zahak, Zahhak, Azi-Dahak)
780 - 763 B.C.

Son of Mirtaz-Taazi, when he sank into the hell-fire and despair, the Devil again aroused him, saying, that if serpents were fed daily with human brains, which would probably kill them, his life might be prolonged, and made easy. And Kavah the blacksmith, who had two sons Shahpur and Shirueh, rebelled against Zohak, and refused to give his sons to be sacrificed in Bait-ul-Mukaddas which he had built to the gods. So Kavah joined Faridoon the sixth king of Persia; and his descendants served in the armies of various kings. Zohak died in the land of Ind or India. And when he was the general of the army of the king of Assyria, the evil one showed him how to kill his father Mirtaz-taazi and become the king in his stead. His descendants continued to rule for a thousand years.

MIHRAB
A descendant of Zohak, was the chief of Kabul; he was the father of Rudebah, his daughter, who married Zal, father of Rustam.

When Faridoon was sixteen years old, he resolved to kill the tyrant Zohak; he conquered Bait-ul-Mukaddas (Kunuk-duz-mokt) and freed the two sisters of Jamshid that were imprisoned in the tower; and then he ascended to the empty throne of Persia, while Zohak was in Ind (India) in quest, with his new army. When Zohak returned and found that he had lost the empire, he desired to kill Faridoon; but instead he was smitten by Faridoon; who did not kill him, due to the Divine Voice which he heard.

(7) MINUCHIR
(Son of the daughter of Irij)
712 - 592 B.C.

Irij's wife Mahafrid gave birth to a girl. When she grew up Faridoon gave her in marriage to Pishong and from this union an heir was born who in form and feature resembled Irij and Faridoon. He was called Minuchir, and great rejoicing took place on the occasion of his birth. His reign lasted one hundred and twenty years. One of the chiefs of Minuchir was Nariman; his son Sam-Suwar, his son Zal, his son Rustam; and Sohrab was Rustam's son. Just before his death Minuchir said these words unto his son Nadir: . . . And now to thee the kingdom I resign; that kingdom which belonged to Faridoon; and thou wilt be the sovereign of the world! But turn not from the worship of thy God; that sacred worship Moses taught, the best of all the prophets, turn not from the path of purest holiness, thy father's choice . . .

KAI-KOBAD
642 - 542 B.C.

The first ruler of the Kaianide dynasty; he was a descendant of Kai-Omars; Kai-Kobad had four sons: Cyrus I or Kai-Kaus or Kurush; Arish, Poshin, and Aramin. His rule lasted for a hundred years; from 642 - 632 B.C. he was at Persepolis (Istakhr); and from 632 -542 B.C. at the palace at Shushan (Susa), and in the Alburz mountains.

CYRUS I (Kai-Kaus, Koh-resh, or Kurush)
642 - 559 B.C.

He began his reign as coregent of his father from 642 - 600 B.C.; and from 600 - 559 B.C. as the king of the Medians and Persians. He founded two observatories, one at Babel and the other on the Tigris. His empire included Turan, Chin, (China), Mikran, and Berber; and Egypt and Hamavaran were under his tribute.

CAMBYSES I (Saiawoosh, Kambujiya)

He was the son of Cyrus I or Kai-Kaus. Cambyses married the daughter of Afrasiab or Astyages, the enemy of the government of the Iranian empire. Out of this matrimonial alliance was born the promised savior of the Lord's people, as it was prophecied by prophet Isaiah son of Amoz, namely a Cyrus among the Medo-Persians and Elamites. It is said that Cambyses or Saiawoosh was captured and killed in Turan by his father-in-law. Cambyses did not reign, but remained a commander of the Persian armies; until he changed sides to Afrasiab or Astyages.

(12) CYRUS II (Kai-Khosrau, Koh-resh II, or "Cyrus the Great")
559 - 530 B.C. (coregent until 539 B.C.)

Under Cyrus II the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire of Persia was established. He unified the armies of the Medes, the Persians, the Elamites, and the Turanians, and they fought for his cause faithfully. Cyrus established his royal residence and capital at Pasargadai nine years after the capture of Babylon. Cyrus, the first great conqueror of the Indo-European race, fell in battle, as he was fighting with the nomads of northeastern Iran. His body was laid away in a massive tomb of simplicity at Pasargadai, which was found by Alexander of Macedonia.

It was under Cyrus II that Babylon was taken without battle in October of 539 B.C., under the commandership of Darius son of Vishtaspa; and Cyrus anointed him king of the Babylonian empire in the selfsame year; and to his son Cambyses II gave he the kingdom of Mesopotamia according to the tradition of the Babylonian kings, on the day of the new year, or Nau-ruz, the festival instigated by the good shepherd Yima, whom Ahura Mazda (Ohrmuzd) appointed, before Zoroaster or Spitama Zarathustra was created, in 538 B.C. And Cyrus' son was installed in his office of the king as coregent with a ceremony of approval and adoption by the Babylonian god Marduk; and Cambyses II was presented to the Egyptians as the son of the god Re. Cyrus proclaimed liberty to the Jews of his empire, including the Babylonians, that they might return to Jerusalem and rebuild the desolate city, and the house of the Lord. For the seventy year period of desolation was to end in 537 B.C. The desolation of Jerusalem began in the eleventh year of the reign of king Zedekiah of Judah, when the city fell on 9 Tammuz, 607 B.C.

Four years after Cyrus' death, his son Cambyses conquered Egypt. This conquest of the only remaining power rounded off the Persian empire.

ARSHAMA (Arsames, or Lohurasp)
642 - 612 B.C.

He was a descendant of Hoshang; and belonged to the dynasty of poet-kings, the fire worshippers, that were called the "mumblers". In 642 B.C., the selfsame year he began his reign as coregent with his father, Cyrus I was sent by Kai-Kobad to confer the kingdom of Balkh upon Arshama or Lohurasp, the son-in-law of Cyrus I. But after thirty years, Arshama took religious retirement in Balkh, and the rulership of eastern Iran fell into the hands of Vishtaspa his son.

VISHTASPA (Hystaspes, Ahasuerus, or Gushtasp)
612 - 522 B.C.

Although Afrasiab (Astyages), Cyrus II (Cyrus the Great) and Cambyses II (son of Cyrus II) are reckoned as the king of kings; it was Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus son of Arshama (Lohurasp) who was the Spiritual king of kings, the others during his time were lesser kings of kings of the empire. For it was the royal custom to have more than one king of kings and coregents. Vishtaspa became the ruler of eastern Iran in 612 B.C., after the religious retirement of his father Arshama or Lohurasp. In 576 B.C. he was ordained into the Holy Order of Zarathustra, the Holy Order of the Son of God; and soon after was made a king of kings of the Hakhamanish (Achaemenid) empire of Persia. His court name was Ahasuerus, and he dwelt in the royal palace in Shushan (Susa). Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus' reign lasted ninety years; and ninety years had elapsed from his ordination until the end of his son Darius' reign. By the end of his reign, he had in his dominion over one hundred and twenty provinces.

522/21 - 486 B.C.

In 576 Darius, the other son of Vishtaspa, became the ruler of eastern Iran, when he was twenty-five years old; he was sixty-two years old when he took Babylon without a battle in October of 539 B.C. In 522/21 his reign began as the king of kings of the Hakhamanish empire, ruling over 120 provinces, and he reigned until 486 B.C. But before his crowning, Bardiya or Gaumata the Magian usurped the throne of Persia for about six to eight months; Nebuchadnezzar III reigned for about two months, and Nebuchadnezzar IV reigned for three months. And in Darius' time Elamite became the language of the records at Persepolis.

size, splendor, beauty and magnificence was beyond any comparison; for it was built under the most Righteous and Wise archangels of the time. The great minds of the world at Takhtesila (Taxila) in northwest India were brought together; and Persepolis was merely a manifestation of their power and glory. The palace was primarily used for rituals and ceremonies, and governmental purposes.

(Codommanus, or Dara; half-brother of Alexander of Macedonia)
336 - 330 B.C.

The conquest by Alexander of Macedonia and the end of the Hakhamanish (Achaemenid) empire marked the end of traditional history, and the beginning of a new era, an era of oecumenical culture known as Hellenism. The foreign (Greek) rule and disunity began with Alexander; followed by the loss of truths, symbols, traditions, and central authority. Foreigners had become the arbiters of the royal destiny; and Persians sought local authorities for guidance, and gave allegiance to them; and the lower units of society, the extended family, the clan, and the tribe began to reassert their influence.

Now, it is said that Kai-Omars (also called Gayomard, or Gayomart) was the first known monarch of Persia; for no oral or written history of the Japhethic people exists beyond Kai-Omars. He dwelt among the mountains, and his clothing was made of animal skins. This first monarch of Persia had only one enemy, a demon, who viewed his power with envy, and aspired to grasp the glory which cannot be taken but must be earned through the grace of the Lord of heaven; through good thoughts, good words, good deeds, good religion, and good life; therefore, he secretly aspired to destroy Kai-Omars, that he might capture his glory. And Kai-Omars' son Saiamuk warred with the demon's son, and lost, bringing great shame and sorrow to Kai-Omars. A year later, a divine voice came to him, saying, Thou needest but to send another army against the demons, and thou shall return victorious. This Kai-Omars did, sending the army under Hoshang, son of Saiamuk. And he did conquer the demon host, and returned victorious. After a thirty year reign, Kai-Omars died, and Hoshang (Husheng, or Haoshyarsha) his son ascended to the throne of Persia.

Hoshang brought many good things to his people; he brought fire from stone, and again established the ancient religion of the fire worshippers, calling the flame the light of Divinity. He brought the art of the blacksmith, and dug canals and streams to irrigate the fields, for the purpose of cultivation. He showed the nomadic and tent-dwelling people how to make bread, and the art of cookery; for before him they subsisted mainly on dairy products, fruits, vegetables, and some cereals. After forty years, Hoshang was succeeded by his son Tahoomer (Tahumers or Tokhmoruw).

Tahoomer was also called Dev-bund, or the Binder of demons. He brought together all the wise men in his dominion, to consider and deliberate on the matters that might be advantageous to the people of God. In his days wool was spun and woven; garments and carpet manufacturing became prevalent; and various beasts and animals were trained to assist men in their labors in the field, and for hunting purposes; especially panthers, falcons, and hawks. Tahoomer warred against the demons, led by Ghoo (Ghu). Ghoo was killed, and the demons petitioned for mercy; saying in return they would teach Tahoomer the art of reading and writing; and this they did. Tahoomer's reign lasted thirty years, and he was succeeded by his son Jamshid, who was also the manifestation of the ancient Good Shepherd (Yima).

The line of Jamshid ruled for seven hundred years, from one generation to the next, basically with no change in the manner in which the government functioned, and the general conditions prevailed. However, coats of mail, cuirasses, swords, and various kinds of armor were invented and manufactured; and garments of silk and linen and robes of fur were made and worn by his people, and princes. Jamshid was the first person to put an edging around his garment, and ring upon his finger, among the kings of Persia. And when they asked him, Why did you bestow all the decoration and ornament on the left hand, whilst the right is superior? He answered, Sufficient for the right is the ornament of being right.

A splendid palace was built for him, with turrets, towers, and balconies. Seafaring and river vessels were designed and manufactured during the reign of Jamshid. And in his palace was built a magnificent throne, on which the demons could raise him into the air, and transport him in a moment wherever he chose. Every Nau-ruz, or new year's day, he held a royal feast, and invited mortals, demons, magicians, soothsayers, and wise men of his kingdom; for the well-being of his people was the first concern of Jamshid, and it was for this reason that all dwelt in peace, safety, compassion, and prosperity, for seven hundred years, with no major change. However, after seven hundred years, ignorance, pride, vanity and disease came over Jamshid; for he became self-conceited, and haughty; he glorified himself and not his Creator, and boasted foolishly; in ignorance and disbelief he fell into the snares of the demons. Therefore the kingdom was taken away from him, and Zohak (Ad-Zahak, or Azi-Dahak) the Arab king took away the kingdom. And Jamshid became a wanderer, later to be captured and killed by Zohak.

Now Zohak was the son of Mirtaz (Murtaz) -Taazi, a king of the Arabs; and he had a thousand animals that gave milk, and the milk of these animals he gave away in charity among the poor. Mirtaz's son Zohak had ten thousand Arab horses, or tazis; and for this reason he was surnamed Biwurasp (biwur, meaning ten thousand; and asp, meaning horse). And it came to pass, that Zohak being overcome by the Devil, Angra Mainyu, Mara, or Iblis, murdered his father, by digging a pit on the way to the house of prayer; into which his father fell, and died. Moreover the Devil secretly calculated to destroy large numbers of the people of the light; and caused two black serpents to spring up attached to Zohak's shoulders, which demanded that they must be fed daily with human brains, lest Zohak not live. It was when Zohak, son of Mirtaz-taazi, sank into the hell-fire and despair, that the Devil again aroused him, saying that his life would only be prolonged, and made easy, if the serpents were fed daily with human brains. And Kavah the blacksmith, who had two sons Shahpur and Shirueh, rebelled against Zohak, and refused to give his sons to be sacrificed in Bait-ul-Mukaddus (Kunuk-duz-mokt) which Zohak had built to his gods. So Kavah joined Faridoon (Fardoon or Faridun); and Kavah's descendants served in the armies of various kings, and the governors of provinces. It is said that before Zohak killed his father Mirtaz-Taazi, he was a general in the army of the king of Assyria; and it was during this time that the Evil One deceived him to kill his father. Moreover, it was through Mihrab, a descendant of Zohak, the chief of Kabul, that the line of Rustam and Sohrab came into existence; for Mihrab was the father of Rudebah, who married Zal, father of Rustam.

Now, while Zohak sat upon the throne of Persia, the people secretly made Abteen, son of Jamshid the fourth king of Persia, their ruler. And when the spies of Zohak found out, Abteen was killed; and Abteen's son Faridoon, now two months old, was taken to be raised in the Alburz mountains. And it had come to pass, that Zohak had dreamt that he was attacked by three warriors, two of large stature, and one small. The youngest struck him a blow on the head with his mace, bound his hands, and casting a rope around his neck, dragged him along in the presence of crowds of people. Zohak screamed and sprung up from his sleep in the greatest horror. He afterward called together the mubids, or wise men of his court; and having told them about his dream, commanded them to give him a faithful interpretation. The mubids foresaw in this vision the approaching decline of his power and dominion, but they were afraid to speak their opinion, because of fear for their lives. Three days were passed under the pretence of studying more scrupulously all the signs and appearances, and still not one of them had the courage to speak out. On the fourth day the king grew angry, and insisted on the dream being interpreted. In this dilemma, the mubids finally told him, "Thy life approaches to an end, and Faridoon, though yet unborn, was he who struck the blow against you, and he will be thy successor."

When Zohak killed Abteen, Faridoon's father, his mother Faranuk fled to the Alburz mountains, and she came to the keeper of a pasture who had a cow named Purmaieh, which yielded abundance of milk, which he gave away in charity. Because of her grief and distress, Faranuk's milk dried up in her breasts, and she was therefore under the necessity of feeding the babe milk from the cow. She remained there one night, and would have departed in the morning; but considering the deficiency of milk, and the misery in which she was involved, continually afraid of being discovered and known, she did not know what to do. At length she thought it best to leave Faridoon with the keeper of the pasture, and resigning him to the protection of God, went herself to the mountain Alburz. The keeper readily complied with the tender wishes of the mother and nourished the child with the fondness and affection of a parent during the space of three years. After that period had elapsed, she returned to the old man of the pasture, for the purpose of reclaiming and conveying Faridoon to a safer refuge upon the mountain Alburz. The keeper said to her, "Why dost thou take the child to the mountain? He will perish there." She replied that God Almighty had inspired a feeling in her heart that it was necessary to remove him.

Intelligence having reached Zohak that the son of Abteen was nourished and protected by the keeper of the pasture, he himself proceeded with a large force to the spot, where he put to death the keeper and all his tribe, and also the cow which had supplied milk to Faridoon, whom he sought for in vain.

The ancient records relate that a dervish who had taken up abode in the mountain Alburz generously shared with mother and son all the food and comforts which God gave him, and at the same time he took great pains in storing the mind of Faridoon with various kinds of knowledge. One day he said to Faranuk, "The person foretold by wise men and astrologers as the destroyer of Zohak and his tyranny, is thy son!" Faranuk, from several concurring indications and signs, held a similar conviction.

When Faridoon reached his sixteenth year, he descended from the mountain, and remained for a time on the plain beneath. He inquired of his mother why Zohak had put his father to death, and Faranuk told him the melancholy story. Upon hearing this, he resolved to be revenged on the tyrant. His mother endeavored to divert him from his determination, observing that he was young, friendless, and alone, while his enemy was master of the world, and surrounded by armies. "Be not, therefore, precipitate," she said. "If it is thy destiny to become king, wait till the Almighty shall bless thee with means sufficient for the purpose." Faridoon replied impatiently, "Tis heaven inspires me; led on by heaven, this arm will quickly bring the tyrant from his palace, to the dust."

Faridoon, aided by the directions and advice of the blacksmith, Kavah, now proceeded against Zohak. He had Kavah make him an iron mace formed like the head of a cow. In his progress, he visited a shrine, or place of pilgrimage frequented by the worshippers of God, where he besought inspiration and aid, and where he was taught by a radiant personage the mysteries of the magic art, receiving from him a key to every secret.

He had two elder brothers, whom he took along with him. When they saw his altered mien, the pomp and splendor of his appearance, they grew envious of his good fortune, and privately meditated his fall. One day they found him asleep at the foot of a mountain, and they immediately went to the top and rolled down a heavy fragment of rock with the intention of crushing him to death; but the clattering noise of the stone awoke him and he arrested the stone in its course by the use of the knowledge of sorcery which had been imparted to him. The brothers beheld this with astonishment, and hastening down the mountain, cried aloud, "We know not how the stone was loosened from its place; God forbid that it should have done any injury to Faridoon." Faridoon, however, was well aware of this being the evil work of his brothers, but he took no notice of the conspiracy, and instead of punishing them, raised them to higher dignity and consequence.

Kavah directed their route over the mountainous tracts and plains which lie contiguous to the banks of the Dijleh, or Tigris, close to the city of Bagdad. Upon reaching that river they called for boats, but got no answer from the ferryman; at which Faridoon was enraged and immediately plunged, on horseback, into the foaming stream. All his army followed without delay, and by the grace of God arrived on the other side in safety.

He then turned toward Bait-ul-Mukaddus (Kunuk-duz-mokt) built by Zohak, overthrew the powerful talisman Zohak had set up, and vanquished successively all the enchanted monsters and hideous shapes which appeared before him. He captured the whole of the building which had a tower so lofty it could be seen at a distance of many leagues, and released the females who were secluded there, including Shahrnaz and Arnawaz, the two sisters of Jamshid. He then ascended the empty throne of Zohak, which had been guarded by the talisman, and took the demons under his command. When he heard that the tyrant had gone with an immense army toward India, in quest of Faridoon, and had left the treasury with only a small force at the seat of his government, Faridoon rejoiced, and appropriated the throne and treasure to himself, returning the kingdom to the Kai-Omars dynasty.

Faridoon inquired of Arnawaz why Zohak had chosen the route toward India. She replied, "For two reasons: first, he expects to find thee in that area; and if he fails, he will subdue the whole country, which is the seat of sorcery, and thus obtain possession of a renowned magician who can charm thee into his power. Night and day the terror of thy name oppresses him, his heart is all on fire, and life is a torture to him."

The keeper of the talisman escaped, fled to Zohak and told him of the conquest. As soon as the army of Zohak heard the news, they rebelled against his cruelty and joined Faridoon. Zohak went to the camp of Faridoon, hoping alone to be revenged upon his enemy, but he was himself struck by Faridoon with his cow-headed mace, and thrown into a cave on the mountain to die alone.

Faridoon had three sons from whom sprang the Medo-Persians who joined forces with the Elamites that dwelt in Khuzistan in southwest Iran, and Arpachshadites that dwelt in Armenia, in the region between Urmiah and Lake Van. And Faridoon commanded a learned person of his realm, saying, Go thou in quest of three daughters, born to the same father and mother, adorned with every grace and accomplishment, that I may have my three sons married into one family. And through the providence of God, matrimonial alliance between the king of Yemen, who had three daughters, and Faridoon, a king of kings of Persia, was concluded. And the king of Yemen sent away his daughters with splendid dowries and precious jewels.

Afterward, Faridoon divided his empire among his sons. To Salim, from whom the Sairima people descended, he gave Rome and Khawer.

To Tur he gave Turan, or Turkey. (The Turanians are the Scythians of Greek historians, who are said, about 639 B.C., to have invaded the kingdom of the Medes. The Scythian nations, under the name of Goths and Vandals, subsequently overran the Roman empire. Iran and Turan comprised all of upper Asia, with the exception of India and China. The great river called by the Arabs and the Persians Jihun or Amu, and by the Greeks and Romans Oxus, divided these two great countries from each other.) The Tura people descended from Tur. To Irij (Erech), Faridoon gave Persia, or Iran, and from Irij descended the Arya or Airya people. Persia was a beautiful country, and the garden of spring, full of freshness and perfume; Turan, on the contrary, was less cultivated and the scene of perpetual broils and insurrections. The elder brother, Salim, was therefore discontented with the unfair partition of the empire and with his father. He sent to Tur, saying: "Our father has given to Irij the most delightful and productive kingdom, and to us, two wild uncultivated regions. I am the eldest son, and I am not satisfied with this distribution, what sayest thou?"

Tur fully took the side of his brother; but he thought their father ought to be made aware of the dissatisfaction he had produced, "For," he thought to himself, "in a new distribution, perhaps Persia may be assigned to me."

A messenger was dispatched to Faridoon, threatening war against both Irij and Faridoon, unless Irij be given a more humble portion. Faridoon counseled Irij to seek peace, and Irij agreed, declaring that he would willingly sacrifice his throne and diadem rather than go to war with his brothers. Therefore Irij went immediately to his brothers to place his kingdom at their disposal and seek their favor and affection.

However, when he met with Salim and Tur in Turkestan, they were jealous over his lordly appearance, and the admiration of their armies and people for Irij. Tur would not believe his assurances of his resolution to resign the monarchy of Persia; in a moment he sprung up, and seizing the golden chair from which he had just arisen, struck a violent blow with it on the head of Irij. He then drew his dagger, and dissevered the head of the youth from his body. He embalmed the head and sent it to Faridoon. Faridoon buried it in a favorite garden, and subsequent to this dreadful calamity he always wore black clothes.

During his reign, Faridoon commanded the gilders of China to inscribe on the front of his palace, Strive, O wise man, to make the wicked good, for the good are of themselves great and fortunate. He reigned from 763 to 712 B.C.

Faridoon continued to cherish with the fondest affection the memory of his murdered son, and still looked forward with anxiety to the anticipated hour of retribution. He fervently hoped that a son might be born to take vengeance for his father's death. But it so happened that Mahafrid, the wife of Irij, gave birth to a daughter. When this daughter grew up, Faridoon gave her in marriage to Pishung and from that union an heir was born who in form and feature resembled Irij and Faridoon. He was called Minuchir, and great rejoicings took place on the occasion of his birth.

The child was nourished with great tenderness during his infancy, and when he grew up he was carefully instructed in every art necessary to form the character, and acquire the qualities of a warrior. Faridoon was accustomed to place him on the throne and decorate his brows with the crown of sovereignty; and the soldiers enthusiastically acknowledged him as their king, urging him to rouse himself and take vengeance of his enemies for the murder of his grandfather.

Salim and Tur were informed of the preparations that were being made against them, and were seized with inexpressible terror. So they determined to pursue cunning measures by splendid presents and conciliatory language to regain the good will of Faridoon. Accordingly they dispatched a messenger, who delivered magnificent presents and communicated the object of his mission: to give up their kingdoms to Minuchir, whom they desired to see. They would see him, Faridoon replied, surrounded by his soldiers, clad in steel, and they would feel the edge of life-destroying swords.

Then Faridoon showed to the messenger his great warriors, one by one: Kavah and his two sons, Shahpur and Shirueh, Karun, Nariman and his son Sam Suwar, who had vanquished or tamed a great number of animals and terrible monsters. The messenger returned to Salim and Tur, who rapidly collected their armies and proceeded toward Iran. The armies engaged in battle and Minuchir killed both Tur and Salim; whose armies now sought protection from Minuchir, and united themselves under him.

Upon the death of Faridoon, a short time after Minuchir's victory had been celebrated, Minuchir succeeded to the government of the empire and continued to observe strictly all the laws and regulations of his great-grandfather. He commanded his subjects to be constant in the worship of God.

Minuchir reigned one hundred and twenty years, 712 to 592 B.C., and was succeeded by his son, Nadir (Nauder), whom he counseled thus, just before his death: And now to thee the kingdom I resign; that kingdom which belonged to Faridoon; and thou wilt be the sovereign of the world! But turn not from the worship of thy God; that sacred worship Moses taught, the best of all the prophets, turn not from the path of purest holiness, thy father's choice.

The warrior Sam Suwar had a son born to him whose hair was perfectly white; when Sam saw him he was grieved, and determined with a sorrowful heart to take him up to the mountain Alburz and abandon him there to be destroyed by beasts of prey. Alburz was the abode of the Simurgh and, while flying about in quest of food for his hungry young ones, that surprising animal discovered the child lying alone upon the hard rock. The Simurgh compassionately took him up in the air and conveyed him to his own habitation. He nourished and taught the child, who was named Zal, up to his youth.

In the meantime Sam had a change of heart, and came to the mountain in search of his son, whom a dream had foretold was still living. The Simurgh sent him to his father, assuring him that he was not going to abandon him to misfortune, but to increase his prosperity; and as a striking proof of affection, the Simurgh gave him a feather from his own wing, with these instructions — "Whenever thou art involved in difficulty or danger, put this feather on the fire, and I will instantly appear to thee to ensure thy safety."

Minuchir was reigning at this time, and he presented Zal with Arabian horses, and armor, and gold, and splendid garments, and appointed Sam to the government of Kabul, Zabul, and Ind. Zal accompanied his father on his return; and when they arrived at Zabulistan, the most renowned instructors in every art and science were collected together to cultivate and enrich his young mind.

Zal had a son by his wife Rudebah, daughter of the chief of Kabul, Mihrab, who was descended from Zohak, and this son became the famous warrior Rustam.

Before two months had passed upon Nadir commencing his reign, he had neglected the counsels of his father, and betrayed the despotic character of his heart. To such an extreme did he carry his oppression, that to escape from his violence, the people were induced to solicit other princes to come and take possession of the empire.

Anticipating an immediate revolt and an invading army, Nadir asked the assistance of Sam. The intercession of Sam produced an entire change in the government of Nadir to the principles of Hoshang, Faridoon, and Minuchir.

In the meantime, Poshang, a descendant of Tur, thought it the ideal time to send an army against Nadir, led by his son Afrasiab (Astyages, Alp Er Tonga, Frangrasian). Nadir, whose reign lasted only seven years, 592/91 - 585 B.C., was killed by Afrasiab, who became master of Persia, 585 - 549 B.C. Nadir's sons, Toos and Gushtahem, were of a tender age at the time of Nadir's death, and they went to live under the protection of Zal, in Sistan. Zal turned his attention to obtaining the assistance of one of the race of Faridoon to expel Afrasiab from the throne of Persia.

At the time when Salim and Tur were killed, Tahmasp, the son of Salim, fled the country and took refuge on an island, where he died, and left a son named Zau. Zal sent Karun, the son of Kavah, attended by proper escort, with overtures to Zau, who readily complied, and was under favorable circumstances seated upon the throne. He subdued the country, and turned his arms against Afrasiab, who retreated to his father in Turan.

The reign of Zau lasted five years, 549 - 544 B.C., after which he died, and was succeeded by his son Garshasp, who reigned 544 - 543 B.C.

Garshasp was deposed, being unequal to the task of ruling, and the government was officially taken over by Cyrus II in 539 B.C. Zal sent Rustam to the mountain Alburz, where one of the race of Faridoon was known to be residing, by the name of Kai-Kobad, a wise and elderly man, with qualifications for the exercise of sovereign power. The first ruler of the Kaianide dynasty, he was a descendant of Kai-Omars.

Kai-Kobad returned with Rustam to the house of Zal, where on the eighth day he was crowned king, and besought to commence the war against Afrasiab.

Kai-Kobad's army, led by Rustam, routed Afrasiab and drove him across the river Jihun. Peace was concluded, with the river Jihun to be the boundary beyond which Afrasiab must not pass.

The Persian throne was established at Istakhr (Persepolis, Chehelminar, or the Forty Pillars), and Kai-Kobad administered the affairs of his government with admirable benevolence and clemency, and with unceasing solicitude for the welfare of his subjects. After he had continued ten years at Istakhr building towns and cities, and diffusing improvement and happiness over the land, he removed his throne into Iran. His reign lasted 100 years, 642 - 542 B.C. He had four sons: Cyrus I (Kai Kaus, Koh-resh, Kurush), Arish, Poshin, and Aramin; and when the period of his dissolution drew nigh, he solemnly enjoined the eldest, Cyrus I, whom he appointed his successor, to pursue steadily the path of integrity and justice, and to be kind and merciful in the administration of the empire left to his charge.

Cyrus I began his reign as coregent of his father from 642 - 600 B.C. and from 600 - 559 B.C. as a king of kings of the Medians and Persians. His empire included Chin (China), Mikran and Berber; and Egypt and Hamaveran were under his tribute. He was the second king of the dynasty called Kaianide. He appointed Rustam captain-general of the armies, to which the lieutenant-generalship and the administration of the state was annexed, under the title of "the champion of the world." He also gave him a taj, or crown of gold, which kings only were accustomed to wear, and granted him the privilege of giving audience seated on a throne of gold. It is said that Cyrus I applied himself much to the study of astronomy, and that he founded two great observatories, one at Babel, and the other on the Tigris.

He soon began to deviate from the wise customs and rules which had been recommended as essential to his prosperity and happiness. He feasted and drank wine continually with his warriors and chiefs, so that in the midst of his luxurious enjoyments he looked upon himself as superior to every being on the face of the earth, and thus astonished the people, high and low, by his extravagance and pride.

Cyrus I had a son, Cambyses I (Saiawoosh, Kambujiya). When intelligence reached him that Afrasiab was again preparing for invasion of Iran, Cambyses requested to be employed in this endeavor against Afrasiab. He was sent and threw Afrasiab into a terror by defeating the Bulghar and Tartar legions after a conflict of three days. Afrasiab had also had a dream in which he was defeated by Cambyses. He therefore sent splendid presents, consisting of horses richly caparisoned, armor, swords, and other costly articles, and a written dispatch, proposing a termination of hostilities. Terms were proposed by Cambyses of one hundred distinguished heroes as hostages, and the restoration of all the provinces which the Turanians had taken from Iran; these terms were accepted by Afrasiab. However Cyrus I was determined to detroy Afrasiab and recalled Rustam and Cambyses, sending Toos to lead the Persian army.

At this, Cambyses felt his honor affronted and felt that he could not return to Cyrus I, and that his only alternative was to join Afrasiab.

Accordingly, he wrote to Afrasiab, informing him that Cyrus I had refused to ratify the treaty of peace, that he was compelled to return the hostages, and even himself to seek protection in Turan from the resentment of his father. This unexpected intelligence excited considerable surprise in the mind of Afrasiab, but he had no hesitation in selecting the course to be followed. The ambassadors, Zinga and Shaweran, were soon furnished with a reply, which was to this effect: "I settled the terms of peace with thee, not with thy father. With him I have nothing to do. If thy choice be retirement and tranquility, thou shalt have a peaceful and independent province allotted to thee; but if war be thy object, I will furnish thee with a large army. Thy father is old, and infirm, and with the aid of Rustam, Persia will be an easy conquest."

Having thus obtained the promised favor and support of Afrasiab, Cambyses gave in charge to Bahram the city of Balkh, the army and treasure, in order that they might be delivered over to Toos on his arrival; and taking with him three hundred chosen horsemen, passed the Jihun and advanced to the court of Afrasiab, where his reception was warm and flattering.

Cambyses remained in Turan, and married his second wife Ferangis, the daughter of Afrasiab. Out of this matrimonial alliance was born the promised savior of the Lord's people, as it was prophecied by prophet Isaiah, son of Amoz, namely a Cyrus of the Medo-Persians and Elamites. But Gersiwaz, Afrasiab's brother, looked upon Cambyses with a jealous and malignant eye, and poisoned Afrasiab's mind against him. Cambyses was forced to flee, and unable to take Ferangis with him on account of her condition. Calling together his three hundred Iranians, and requesting Ferangis, if she happened to be delivered of a son, to call him Kai-Khosrau, he set off on his journey.

Cambyses was captured and killed. Afrasiab even wanted to have Ferangis put to death, so that there might be no issue of her marriage with Cambyses, but the warrior Piran spoke up against such cruelty. Afrasiab left her to the care of Piran with the injunction that when the child was born, it must be brought immediately to him.

In due time a son was born, and was called Kai-Khosrau (Cyrus II, Koh-resh II; Cyrus the Great). As soon as he was born, Piran took measures to prevent his being carried off to Afrasiab, and committed him to the care of some peasants on the mountain Kalun. On the same night Afrasiab had a dream, in which he received intimation of the birth of Cyrus II; and he sent for Piran to know why his commands had not been complied with. Piran replied that he had cast away the child in the wilderness. "And why was he not sent to me?" inquired the despot. "Because," said Piran,"I considered thy own future happiness; thou has unjustly killed the father, and God forbid that thou shouldest also kill the son!" Afrasiab was abashed. Gersiwaz became hateful to his sight, and he began at last to deeply repent of his violence and inhumanity.

Cyrus II grew up under the fostering protection of the peasants, and showed early marks of talent and activity. He excelled in manly exercises; and hunting ferocious animals was his peculiar delight.

Instructors had been provided to initiate him in all the arts and pursuits cultivated by the warriors of those days, and even in his twelfth year accounts were forwarded to Piran of wonderful feats he had performed.

Piran told the boy of the rank and misfortune of his father. He devised a plan whereby he told Afrasiab that the boy had been found and brought up in the wilderness by some peasants, but was little more than an idiot; and Cyrus II was sent to Afrasiab, where he acted the part of being totally deranged. Thus, considering him harmless, he returned him to his mother.

Cyrus I was grief-stricken when he heard of Cambyses death. He sent Rustam to avenge, and to find Kai-Khosrau (Cyrus II); this was accordingly carried out and Cyrus II and Ferangis escaped from Turan and came to the court of Cyrus I.

From 559 to 539 B.C. Cyrus II was coregent with Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus. He was sent with Rustam against Turan and succeeded in revenging the cruel murder of his father Cambyses by conquering Turan and executing Afrasiab and Gersiwaz.

Under Cyrus II, the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire of Persia was established. He unified the armies of the Medes, the Persians, the Elamites and the Turks, and they fought for his cause faithfully. He established his royal residence and capital at Pasargadai nine years after the capture of Babylon. Cyrus II was the first great conqueror of Indo-European blood, and he fell in battle as he was fighting with the nomads of eastern Iran. His body was laid away in a massive tomb of simplicity at Pasargadai, which was later found by Alexander of Macedonia.

It was under Cyrus II that Babylon was taken without battle in October of 539 B.C., under the commandership of Darius, son of Vishtaspa; and Cyrus made him king of the Babylonian empire in the selfsame year. To his son, Cambyses II, he gave the kingdom of Mesopotamia, according to the tradition of the Babylonian kings, on the day of the new year, or Nau-ruz, the festival instigated by the good shepherd Yima (Jamshid), whom Ahura Mazda (Ohrmuzd) appointed before Zoroaster (Zerdusht or Zarathustra) was born, in 538 B.C. And Cyrus' son was installed in the office of king as coregent with a ceremony of approval and adoption by the Babylonian god Marduk; and Cambyses II was presented to the Egyptians as the son of the god Re.

Cyrus proclaimed liberty to the Jews of his empire, including of Babylonia, that they might return to Jerusalem and rebuild the desolate city, and the house of the Lord. For the seventy year period of desolation was to end in 537 B.C. The desolation of Jerusalem began in the eleventh year of the reign of king Zedekiah of Judah, when the city fell on 9 Tammuz, 607 B.C.

Four years after Cyrus' death, his son Cambyses II conquered Egypt. This conquest of the only remaining power rounded off the Persian empire.

Cyrus I appointed Arshama (Lohurasp), a descendant of Hoshang, and his son-in-law successor to his throne. He belonged to the dynasty of poet-kings, the fire worshippers, that were called the "mumblers."

In 642 B.C., the selfsame year he began his reign as coregent of his father, Cyrus I was sent by Kai-Kobad to confer the kingdom of Balkh upon Arshama, but Arshama took religious retirement in Balkh, and the rulership of eastern Iran fell into the hands of Vishtaspa, his son.

Arshama (Arsames, Lohurasp) had four sons, two by the daughter of Cyrus I, Ardshir and Shydasp, and two by another woman, Vishtaspa (Hystaspes, Ahasuerus, or Gushtasp) and Zarir.

Vishtaspa was valiant, acute, and marked out for sovereignty, and on account of his independent conduct, was no favorite with his father; in defiance of whom, with a rebellious spirit, he collected together a hundred thousand horsemen, and proceeded with them toward Hindustan of his own accord. Arshama sent after him his brother Zarir, with a thousand horsemen, in the hopes of influencing him to return. Zarir convinced him to return, on the condition that he should be nominated heir to the throne, and treated with becoming respect and ceremony. Zarir agreed to interpose his efforts to this end, and brought him back, but it was soon apparent that Arshama had no inclination to promote the elevation of Vishtaspa in preference to the claims of his other sons.

Vishtaspa in disgust fled from his father's house, without any attendants, and shaped his course toward Rome. Arshama again sent Zarir in quest of him; but the youth, after a tedious search, returned without success.

Upon his arrival in Rome, Vishtaspa chose a solitary retirement, where he remained for some time, and was at length compelled by poverty and want, to ask for employment in the establishment of the sovereign of that country, stating that he was an accomplished scribe, and wrote a beautiful hand. He was told to wait a few days, as at that time there was no vacancy. But hunger was pressing, and he could not suffer delay; he therefore went to the master of the camel-drivers and asked for service, but he too had no vacancy. However, feeling sorry for the distress of the applicant, he generously supplied him with a hearty meal. After that, Vishtaspa went into a blacksmith's shop, and asked for work, and his services were accepted. The blacksmith put the hammer in his hands, and the first blow he struck was given with such force that he broke the anvil. The blacksmith was amazed and angry, and indignantly turned him out of his shop.

Disconsolate and wretched, Vishtaspa left the place, and observing a husbandman standing in a field of corn, he approached the spot and sat down. The husbandman seeing him sitting in sorrow and tears, asked him the cause of his grief, and he soon became acquainted with all the circumstances of the stranger's life. Pitying his distress, he took him home and gave him some food.

After having partaken sufficiently of the refreshments placed before him, Vishtaspa inquired of his host to what tribe he belonged, and from whom he was descended. "I am descended from Faridoon," rejoined he, "and I belong to the Kaianian tribe. My occupation in this retired spot is, as thou seest, the cultivation of the ground, and the customs and duties of husbandry." Vishtaspa stated he was descended from Hoshang, who was the ancestor of Faridoon; and they were, therefore, of the same origin. In consequence of this connection, Vishtaspa and the husbandman lived together on the most friendly footing for a considerable time.

At this time, the king of Rome held a swayamvara for his daughter Kitabun, who was now of age. Vishtaspa attending, was chosen by Kitabun, and she gave him a bunch of roses, the token by which her choice was made known, and then retired.

The king, when he heard what she had done, was exceedingly irritated, thinking that her affections were place on a beggar, or some nameless stranger of no birth or fortune, and his first impulse was to have her put to death. But after protests from his people, he had enquiries made into the character and parentage of his proposed son-in-law, and was told his name, the name of his father, and of his ancestors, and the causes which led to his present condition; however, he would not believe a word. He finally relented so far as to sanction the marriage, but indignantly drove Kitabun from his house, with her husband, without a dowry, or any money to supply themselves with food.

Vishtaspa supplied their needs by hunting in the forest. The king of Rome had two more daughters, and a person of distinction named Mabrin wished to be espoused to one, and another man of rank, Ahrun, the youngest. The king gave each in turn a dreadful task to accomplish: Mabrin to kill a wolf which had been extremely ferocious and destructive to his property; and later, Ahrun was to destroy a hideous dragon that had taken possession of a neighboring mountain.

Becoming acquainted with the generosity and bravery of Vishtaspa, each requested his aid, and he first killed the wolf for Mabrin, and then the dragon for Ahrun.

Now between Vishtaspa, Mabrin and Ahrun the warmest friendship developed. Indeed they were seldom parted; and the three sisters remained together in equal affection. One day Kitabun, the wife of Vishtaspa, let out the secret that her husband was the person who had killed the wolf and the dragon.

No sooner was this story told, than it spread, and in the end reached the ears of the queen, who told the king. The king sent for Vishtaspa, and conferred upon him great honor, appointing him to the chief command of his army. Vishtaspa conquered Alias, the ruler of Khuz, and in consequence of this brilliant success, the king conferred additional honors on him, and he now began to display the ambition which he had long cherished. When the Roman warriors were hesitant on the subject of invasion of Iran, Vishtaspa went to the king and said he would undertake the task with even an inconsiderable army.

The king was overjoyed, kissed his head and face, and loaded him with presents, and ordered his secretary to write to Arshama in the following terms: "I am anxious to meet thee in battle, but if thou art not disposed to fight, I will permit thee to remain at peace, on condition of surrendering to me half thy kingdom. Should this be refused, I will myself deprive thee of thy whole sovereignty."

Arshama received some idea that his son Vishtaspa might be related to this overture, when the messenger described Vishtaspa's feats of courage and said that he resembled Zarir in feature. But Arshama answered: "Do not take me for an Alias, nor think that one hero of thine is competent to oppose me. I have a hundred equal to him. Continue, therefore, to pay me tribute, or I will lay waste thy whole country."

Arshama then sent Zarir to the king of Rome to counsel him on the justice and propriety of preserving peace, then on to Vishtaspa, where he was received with affection and gladness. Zarir stated to Vishtaspa the views and resolutions of his father, which were for Vishtaspa to pardon his father's infirmities, and come back to Iran, his own country and home, that he might resign to him his crown and throne and take leave of the world.

Vishtaspa was as much astonished as delighted with this information, and his anxiety being great to return to his own country, he that very night, accompanied by his wife Kitabun, and Zarir, set out for Iran. Approaching the city, he was met by an Istakbal, or honorary deputation of warriors, sent by the king; and when he arrived at court, Arshama descended from his throne and embraced him with paternal affection, shedding tears of contrition for having previously treated him not only with neglect, but severity. He now made him ample atonement, and ordering a golden chair of royalty to be constructed, and placed close to his own, they both sat together, and the people by command tendered him their respect and allegiance.

Soon afterward, Arshama relinquished all authority in the empire, assumed the coarse habit of a recluse, and retired to a celebrated place of pilgrimage, near Balkh. There, in a solitary cell, he devoted the remainder of his life to prayer and the worship of God.

Arshama reigned from 642 - 612 B.C. Vishtaspa became the ruler of Iran in 612 B.C., and reigned ninety years, to 522 B.C. Later, he was given the court name Ahasuerus, and he dwelt in Shushan (Huja, or Susa) at the royal palace. Vishtaspa was the great spiritual king, all the minor sovereigns paid him tribute, excepting Arjasp, the ruler of Chin and Machin, whose army consisted of devs (devas), peris (demonesses in the form of beautiful women), and men; for considering him of superior importance, Vishtaspa sent him yearly the annual tributary present.

In those days lived Zerdusht (Zarathustra, Zoroaster), the Guber, who was highly accomplished in the knowledge of Divine things. Vishtaspa became greatly pleased with his learning and piety, and took him into his confidence. The prophet and Son of God, explained to him the doctrines of the fire-worshippers, and by his art he reared a tree before the house of Vishtaspa, beautiful in its foliage and branches; and whoever ate of the leaves of that tree became learned and accomplished in the mysteries of the future world, and those who ate the fruit thereof became perfect in wisdom and holiness.

In consequence of the illness of Arshama, who was nearly at the point of death, Zerdusht or Zarathustra went to Balkh for the purpose of administering relief to him, and he happily succeeded in restoring him to health. On his return he was received with additional favor by Vishtaspa, who immediately afterward became his disciple. Zarathustra of the Spitamas then told him that he was the prophet of God, and promised to show him miracles. He said he had been to heaven and to hell. He could send anyone, by prayer, to heaven; and whomsoever he despised he could send to hell. He had seen the seven mansions of celestial regions, and the thrones of sapphires, and all the secrets of heaven were made known to him by his attendant angel. He said that the sacred book, called Zendavesta, descended from above expressly for him, and that if Vishtaspa followed the precepts in that blessed volume, he would attain celestial felicity. The prophet further said that he had prepared a ladder, by which he had ascended into heaven and had seen the Almighty. Vishtaspa readily became a convert to his principles. He was ordained into the Holy Order of Zarathustra, or the Order of the Son of God, in 576 B.C., and was made a king of kings of the Hakhamanish empire of the Medians, Persians, Elamites, and Turanians (Turks). Ninety years had also elapsed from the time of his ordination to the end of his son Darius' reign; Ahasuerus had dominion over one hundred twenty provinces of the Hakhamanish (Achaemenid) empire.

One day this Zarathustra asked Vishtaspa why he condescended to pay tribute to Arjasp. "God is on thy side," said he, "and if thou desirest an extension of territory, the whole country of Chin may be easily conquered." After an exchange of letters, war between the two countries was the result.

Zarathustra of the Spitamas said to Vishtaspa, "Ask thy vizier, Jamasp, what is written in thy horoscope, that he may relate to thee the dispensations of heaven." Jamasp, in reply to the inquiry, took the king aside and whispered softly to him, "A great number of thy brethren, thy relations, and thy warriors will be slain in the conflict, but in the end thou wilt be victorious. Vishtaspa deeply lamented the coming event, which would involve the destruction of his kinsmen, but did not shrink from the battle, for he rejoiced in the anticipation of obtaining the victory.

The result of the battle was the retreat of Arjasp. His troops soon threw away their arms and begged for mercy, and many of them were taken prisoner by the Iranians. Vishtaspa's brother, Zarir, had been killed in the conflict, and Vishtaspa approached his body, and lamenting deeply over his unhappy fate, placed him in a coffin, and built over him a lofty monument, around which lights were ever afterwards kept burning, night and day; and he also taught the people the worship of fire, and was anxious to establish everywhere the religion of Zarathustra.

Vishtaspa had by his wife, Kitabun, the daughter of the king of Rome, two sons, named Isfendiyar and Bashutan. Isfendiyar had led the battle against Arjasp and now Vishtaspa named his son as his successor, and told him that he must now not waste time in peace and private gratification, but proceed to the conquest of other countries. Zarathustra was deeply interested in his further operations, and recommended him to subdue kingdoms for the purpose of diffusing everywhere the new religion, that the whole world might be enlightened and edified.

Isfendiyar immediately complied, and the first kingdom he invaded was Rome. The sovereign of that country having no power nor means to resist the incursions of the enemy, readily adopted the faith of Zarathustra, and accepted the sacred book, named the Zendavesta, as his spiritual instructor. Isfendiyar afterward invaded Hindustan and Arabia, and several other countries, and successfully established the religion of the fire-worshippers in them all.

A warrior close to Vishtaspa, Gurzam, who had a bitter jealousy against Isfendiyar, privately told Vishtaspa that Isfendiyar was considering the overthrow of his father. This was believed, and Vishtaspa sent his minister Jamasp to summon Isfendiyar to the king's presence. Isfendiyar had a premonition of evil, but left his eldest son Bahman in charge of his army, and accompanied by his other three sons, Mihrbus, Avis, and Nushahder, traveled to the court. When he reached Vishtaspa's presence, he was denounced and thrown into prison.

Having thus made Isfendiyar secure in the mountain prison, and being entirely at ease about the internal safety of the empire, Vishtaspa was anxious to pay a visit to Zal and Rustam at Sistan, and to convert them to the religion of Zarathustra. On his approach to Sistan he was met and respectfully welcomed by Rustam, who afterwards in open assembly received the Zendavesta and adopted the new faith, which he propagated throughout his own territory. Vishtaspa remained two years his guest, enjoying all kinds of recreation, and particularly the sports of the field, and the forests.

When Bahman, son of Isfendiyar, heard of the imprisonment of his father, he, in grief and alarm, abandoned his trust, dismissed the army, and proceeded to Balkh, where he joined his two brothers, and wept over the fate of their unhappy father.

In the meantime the news of the confinement of Isfendiyar, the absence of Vishtaspa, and the unprotected state of Balkh, stimulated Arjasp to further effort, and he dispatched his son Kahram with a large army toward the capital of Vishtaspa, to carry into effect his purpose of revenge.

Arshama was still in religious retirement at Balkh. The people were under great apprehension, and being without a leader, anxiously solicited the old king to command them — they would hear no denial and, as it were, tore him from his place of refuge and prayer. There were assembled only about a thousand horsemen, and with these he advanced to battle, but what were they compared to the hundred thousand whom they met, and by whom they were soon surrounded. Their bravery was useless. They were at once overpowered and defeated, and Arshama himself was one of the slain.

Upon the achievement of victory, Kahram entered Balkh in triumph, made the people prisoners, and destroyed all the places of worship belonging to the Gubers. He also killed the keeper of the altar, and burnt the Zendavesta, which contained the formulary of their doctrines and belief.

One of the women of Vishtaspa's household happened to elude the grasp of the invader, and hastened to Sistan to inform the king of the disaster that had occurred. Vishtaspa received the news with dismay, and made preparations with the utmost speed for his departure. He invited Rustam to accompany him, but the champion excused himself at the time, and afterwards declined altogether on plea of sickness.

Before Vishtaspa had yet arrived at Balkh, Kahram hearing of his approach went out to meet him with his whole army, and was joined on the same day by Arjasp and his demon-legions. The battle terminated in the defeat of Vishtaspa, who was pursued till he was obliged to take refuge in a mountain fort. He again consulted Jamasp to know what the stars foretold, and Jamasp replied that he would recover from the defeat through the exertions of Isfendiyar alone. Pleased with this interpretation, he on that very day sent Jamasp to the prison with a letter to Isfendiyar, in which he hoped to be pardoned for the cruelty he had been guilty of towards him, in consequence, he said, of being deceived by the arts and treachery of those who were only anxious to effect his ruin. He declared that he would put those enemies to death in his presence, and replace the royal crown upon his head. At the same time he confined in chains the warrior, Gurzam. Jamasp rode immediately to the prison, and delivering the letter, urged the prince to comply with his father's entreaties, but Isfendiyar was incredulous and not so easily to be moved. Jamasp, however, persevered in his anxious solicitations, describing to him how many of his brethren and kindred had fallen, and also the perilous situation of his own father if he refused his assistance.

Finally he agreed and was freed from his chains and brought before his father, who begged to be forgiven, and again resigned to him the throne of the empire, and appointed him to the command of the imperial armies. He then directed Gurzam, upon whose malicious counsel he had acted, to be brought before him, and the wicked minister was punished with death on the spot, and in the presence of the injured prince.

Battle was engaged between Kahram and Isfendiyar and their armies; with Isfendiyar the victor. When he came before Vishtaspa, the mail on his body, from the number of arrows sticking in it, looked like a field of reeds; about a thousand arrows were taken out of its folds. Vishtaspa kissed his head and face, and blessed him, and prepared a grand banquet, and the city of Balkh resounded with rejoicings on account of the great victory.

Many days had not elapsed before a further enterprise was to be undertaken. The sisters of Isfendiyar were still in confinement, and required to be released. The prince readily complied with the wishes of Vishtaspa who now repeated to him his desire to relinquish the cares of sovereignty, and place the reins of government in Isfendiyar's hands, that he might devote himself entirely to the service of God. But Isfendiyar replied that he had no desire to be possessed of the power; he rather wished for the prosperity of the king.

Isfendiyar made another conquest at the request of Vishtaspa, of the brazen fortress of Arjasp, where his sisters were captive. This he

However after his victory, Bahman was persuaded to liberate Zal, whose age and infirmities had rendered him harmless. Bahman restored to him the possession of Sistan, and divesting himself of further revenge, returned to Persia. There he continued to exercise the function of royalty, till one day he was bitten by a venemous snake, and he died of the wound in the eighth year of his reign.

Although he had a son, named Sassan, he did not appoint him successor, but gave the crown and throne to his wife, Humai, whom he had married a short time before his death, saying: If Humai should have a son, that son shall be my successor; but if a daughter, Humai must continue to reign.

Wisdom and generosity were said to have marked the reign of Humai. In justice and beneficence she was unequalled. She gave birth to a son, whom she entrusted to a nurse to be brought up secretly, and declared publicly that it had died the same day it was born. At this event the people rejoiced, for they were happy under the administration of Humai.

Upon the boy attaining his seventh month, however, the queen sent for him, and wrapping him up in rich garments, put him in a box, and when she had fastened down the cover, gave it to two confidential servants, in the middle of the night, to be flung into the Euphrates. "For," she thought, "If he be found in the city, that will be the end of my authority, and the crown will be placed on his head. Wiser, therefore, will it be for me to cast him into the river; and if it please God to preserve him, he may be nurtured, and brought up in another country." Accordingly, in the darkness of night, the box was thrown into the Euphrates, and it floated rapidly down the stream for some time without being observed.

In the morning, the ark was noticed by a washerman, who drew it to shore and opened the lid. Within the box he then saw splendid silk-embroidered scarfs and costly raiment, and upon them a lovely infant asleep. He immediately took up the child, and carried it to his wife, saying: "It was but yesterday that our own infant died, and now the Almighty has sent another in its place." The woman looked at the child with affection, and taking it in her arms fed it with her own milk. In the box they also found jewels and rubies, and they congratulated themselves on being at length blessed by Providence with wealth, and a boy at the same time. They called him Darab, and the child soon began to speak in the language of his foster parents.

The washerman and his wife, for fear that the boy and the wealth might be discovered, thought it safest to leave their home, and sojourn in another country. When Darab grew older, he was more skillful and accomplished, and more expert at wrestling than other boys of a greater age. But whenever the washerman told him to assist in washing clothes, he always ran away, and would not stoop to drudgery.

Darab was now sent to school, and he soon excelled his master. He was given by his foster parents another master and a fine horse, and was daily instructed in the art of using the bow, the javelin, and the sword, and in every exercise becoming a young gentleman and warrior.

The developments of his talents and genius suggested to him an inquiry into who he was and his foster mother described to him the manner in which he was found. He asked her if she had anything that was taken out of the box and she gave him the two rubies remaining; one he bound round his arm, and the other he sold to pay the expenses of traveling and change of place.

At that time, the king of Rome had sent an army into Iran, and Humai told her general, Rishnawad, to collect a force corresponding with the emergency; and he issued a proclamation inviting all young men desirous of military glory to flock to his standard.

Darab heard this proclamation with delight, and among others hastened to Rishnawad, who presented the young warriors as they arrived successively to Humai. The queen steadfastly marked the majestic form and features of Darab, and said in her heart, "The youth who bears this dignified and royal aspect, appears to be a Kaianian by birth," and as she spoke, the instinctive feeling of a mother seemed to agitate her bosom.

After the first march of the army, a tremendous wind and heavy rain came on, and all the soldiers were under tents, excepting Darab, who had none, and was obliged to take shelter beneath an archway, where he laid himself down, and fell asleep. Suddenly a super-natural voice was heard, saying:

Arch! stand firm and from thy wall
Let no ruined fragment fall!
He who sleeps beneath is one
Destined to a royal throne.
Arch! a monarch claims thy care,
The king of Persia slumbers there.

The voice was heard by everyone near, and Rishnawad having also heard it, inquired of his people from whence it came. As he spoke, the voice repeated its caution:

Arch! stand firm, and from thy wall
Let no ruined fragment fall!
Bahman's son is in thy keeping;
He beneath thy roof is sleeping.
Though the winds are loudly roaring,
And the rain in torrents pouring,
Arch! stand firm, and from thy wall
Let no loosened fragment fall.

Rishnawad's amazement increased. He now sent a person under the archway to see if anyone was there, and the youth was discovered in deep sleep upon the ground, and the arch above him rent and broken in many parts. Rishnawad having learned of this circumstance, desired that he might be awakened and brought to him. The moment he was removed, the whole of the arch fell down with a dreadful crash, and this wonderful escape was communicated to the leader of the army, who by a strict and particular inquiry soon became acquainted with all the occurrences of the stranger's life. Rishnawad also summoned before him the washerman and his wife, and they corroborated the story he had been told. He himself recognized the ruby on Darab's arm, which convinced him that he was the son of Bahman, whom Humai had caused to be thrown into the Euphrates. Thus satisfied with his identity, he treated him with great honor, placed him on his right hand, and appointed him to a high command in the army.

Soon afterward an engagement took place with the Rumis, and Darab in the advanced guard performed prodigies of valor. In the evening Rishnawad bestowed upon him the praise which he deserved.

After more struggle, the Persians were triumphant, and Rishnawad readily settled the terms of peace; and the emperor Kaisar was permitted to return to his own dominions.

After this event Rishnawad sent to Humai intelligence of the victories he had gained, and of the surprising valor of Darab, transmitting to her the ruby as evidence of his birth. Humai was at once sure that he was her son, for she well remembered the day on which he was enrolled as one of her soldiers, when her heart throbbed with instinctive affection at the sight of him. She immediately proceeded to the Atish-gadeh, or Fire-altar, and made an offering on the occasion; and ordering a great fire to be lighted, gave immense sums away in charity to the poor. Having called Darab to her presence, she went with a splendid retinue to meet him at the distance of one journey from the city; and as soon as he approached, she pressed him to her bosom, and kissed his head and eyes with the fondest affection of a mother. On the first day of happy omen, she relinquished the crown and throne, after having reigned for thirty-two years.

Darab conducted the affairs of the kingdom with humanity, justice and benevolence; and by these means secured the happiness of his people. He had no sooner commenced his reign, than he sent for the washerman and his wife, and enriched them by his gifts. "But," he said, "I present to you this property on this condition — you must not give up your occupation — you must go every day, as usual, to the riverside, and wash clothes; for perhaps in the process of time you may discover another box floating down the stream, containing another infant!" With this condition the washerman complied.

Some time afterward, the kingdom was invaded by an Arabian army, consisting of one hundred thousand men, and commanded by Shaib, a distinguished warrior. Darab was engaged with his army three days and three nights, and on the fourth morning the battle terminated, in consequence of Shaib being slain. The booty was immense, and a vast number of Arabian horses fell into the hands of the victor; which, together with the quantity of treasure captured, strengthened greatly the resources of the state. The success of this campaign enabled Darab to extend his military operations; and having put his army in order, he proceeded against Philip of Macedon (Failakus), then king of Rome, whom he defeated with great loss. Many were put to the sword, and the women and children carried into captivity. Philip himself took refuge in the fortress of Amur from whence he sent an ambassador to Darab, saying that if peace was only granted to him, he would willingly agree to any terms that might be demanded. When the ambassador arrived, Darab said to him, "If Philip will bestow upon me his daughter, Nahid (Naheed), peace shall be instantly re-established between us — I require no other terms." Philip readily agreed, and sent Nahid with numerous splendid presents to the king of Persia, who espoused her, and took her with him to his own country.

It so happened that Nahid had an offensive breath, which was extremely disagreeable to her husband, and in consequence he directed enquiries to be made everywhere for a remedy. No place was left unexplored; at length an herb of peculiar efficacy and fragrance was discovered, which never failed to remove the imperfection complained of; and it was accordingly administered with confident hopes of success. Nahid was asked to wash her mouth with the infused herb, and in a few days her breath became balmy and pure.

When she found she was likely to become a mother, she did not communicate the circumstance, but requested permission to pay a visit to her father. The request was granted, and on her arrival in Rome, she was delivered of a son. Philip had no male offspring, and was overjoyed at this event, which he at once determined to keep unknown to Darab, publishing abroad that a son had been born in his house, and causing it to be understood that the child was his own. When the boy grew older, he was called Alexander (Iskander, or Sikandar); and became highly accomplished in all the arts of diplomacy and war. Philip placed him under Aristotle, a sage of great renown, and he soon equalled his master in learning and science.

Darab married another wife, by whom he had another son, named Dara; and when the youth was twenty years of age, the father died. Thus Darab reigned for thirty-four years. Dara continued the government of the empire in the same spirit as his father; claiming tribute from the inferior rulers, with similar strictness and authority.

After the death of Philip, Alexander became king of Rome; Philip reigned for twenty-four years.

Philip, before his death, placed the crown of sovereignty upon the head of Alexander, and appointed Aristu, who was one of the disciples of the great Aflatūn, his vizier. He cautioned him to pursue the path of virtue and rectitude, and to cast from his heart every feeling of vanity and pride; above all he implored him to be just and merciful.

Upon Alexander's elevation to the throne, Dara sent an envoy to him to claim the customary tribute, but he received for an answer, "The time is past when Rome acknowledged the superiority of Persia. It is now thy turn to pay tribute to Rome. If my demand be refused, I will immediately invade thy dominions; and think not that I shall be satisfied with the conquest of Persia alone, the whole world shall be mine; therefore prepare for war."

Dara had no alternative, not even submission, and accordingly assembled his army, for Alexander was already in full march against him. Upon the confines of Persia, the armies came in sight of each other. Alexander resolved to ascertain the exact condition of his adversary; and with this view he entered the Persian camp as an ambassador. Dara allowed him to approach, and inquired what message the king of Rome had sent him.

The pretended envoy answered, "Alexander has not invaded thy empire for the exclusive purpose of fighting, but to know its history, its laws, and customs, from personal inspection. His object is to travel through the whole world. Why then should he make war on thee? Give him a free passage through thy kingdom, and nothing more is required. However, if it be thy wish to proceed with hostilities, he apprehends nothing from the greatness of thy power.

Dara ordered refreshments to be brought. He filled a cup and gave it to the envoy, who drank it, but did not, according to custom, return the empty goblet to the cup bearer. The cup bearer demanded the cup, and Dara asked the envoy why he did not give it back.

"It is the custom in my country," said the envoy, "when a cup is once given into an ambassador's hands, never to receive it back again."

Dara was amused by this explanation, and presented to him another cup, and successively four, which the envoy did not fail to appropriate in the same way.

In the evening a feast was held; in the midst of the entertainment one of the persons present recognized Alexander, and immediately whispered to Dara that his enemy was in his power. Alexander perceived the change in the scene, and snatching the four cups and rushing from the tent, vaulted on his horse and rode away. Presently a troop was ordered in pursuit, but the darkness prevented their chase having any success.

As soon as he reached his own army, Alexander (Sikandar) sent for Aristotle and his courtiers, and displayed to them the four golden cups. "These," said he, "have I taken from my enemy; I have taken them from his own table, and before his own eyes. His strength and numbers too I have ascertained, and my success is certain." No time was now lost in arrangements for the battle. The armies engaged, and they fought seven days without a decisive blow being struck. On the eighth, Dara was compelled to fly, and his legions, defeated and harassed, were pursued with great slaughter to the banks of the Euphrates. Alexander now returned to take possession of the capital. Dara collected his scattered forces for another try, but again was defeated.

After his second success, Alexander devoted himself to winning the affections of the people and they soon ceased to remember their former king with any degree of attachment to his interests. Alexander told them, "Persia indeed is my inheritance; I am no stranger to you, for I am myself descended from Darab. You may therefore safely trust to my justice and paternal care in everything that concerns your welfare." The result was that legion after legion united in his cause, and consolidated his power.

Dara, with the few troops still faithful to their king, made another attempt, and the result was what had been anticipated. Dara was again a fugitive, and after the defeat escaped with three hundred men into the neighboring desert. Alexander captured his wife and family, but honorably restored them to the unfortunate monarch, who, destitute of all further hope, now asked for a place of refuge in his own dominion, in exchange for all the buried treasure of his ancestors. Alexander invited him to his presence, and promised to restore his throne, that he might pursue other conquests, but Dara's pride prevented him from personally acknowledging Alexander's authority over him. Resolved on this point, he requested the aid of Faur, one of the sovereigns of India, and Faur recommended he should pay him a visit for the purpose of determining the best course to pursue. Alexander became aware of their correspondence, and took care that his enemy should be intercepted in whatever direction he might proceed.

Dara had two ministers, Mahiyar and Jamusipar, who found that the astrologers predicted that their master would in a few days fall into Alexander's hands. Therefore they consulted together and decided to put him to death themselves, in order to obtain favor with Alexander. It was night, and the soldiers of the escort were dispersed at various distances, and the ministers were stationed on each side of the king. As they travelled, Jamusipar plunged his dagger into Dara's side, and Mahiyar gave another blow, which felled the monarch to the ground. They immediately sent tidings to Alexander, who hastened to the spot.

Dara still breathed, and when he lifted up his eyes and beheld Alexander, he groaned deeply. Alexander asked him to rise up that he might be conveyed to a place of safety, to apply remedies to his wounds. "Alas!" replied Dara. "The time for remedies is passed. I leave thee to heaven, and may thy reign give peace and happiness to the empire."

"Never," said Alexander, "did I desire to see thee thus. If the Almighty should spare thy life, thou shalt again be the monarch of Persia, and I will go from hence. On my mother's word, thou and I are sons of the same father. It is this brotherly affection which now wrings my heart." And he promised vengeance against the murderers.

Dara now said that he would be able to die with his mind at rest, as a result of Alexander's consolation. He requested Alexander to espouse his daughter, Roshung, and if they should have a son to name him Isfendiyar, that he might propagate the sacred doctrines of Zerdusht (Zarathustra) and the Zendavesta.

Alexander promised to fulfill his wishes, and Dara shortly thereafter expired. Dara was entombed with honor, and the two ministers were executed.

Alexander now had no rival to the throne of Persia and commenced his government under the most favorable conditions. He continued the same customs and ordinances which were handed down to him, and retained every one in his established rank and occupation, and reigned with justice and liberality. He wrote to the mother of Roshung, and communicated to her the dying wish of the king, requesting her to send Roshung to him that he might fulfill the last request. The wife of Dara immediately complied with the command, and sent her daughter with various presents to Alexander. Roshung was married to the conqueror, who loved her exceedingly, and on her account remained some time in Persia; but he at length decided to proceed into India to conquer that country. Kaid, a ruler of India, surrendered his kingdom, and waited on Alexander, personally acknowledging his authority and dominion.

Faur, the king of Kanuj, however, refused to submit. Faur had sixty thousand horsemen, and two thousand elephants. Alexander had a force of thirty thousand Iranians, forty thousand Romans, and ten thousand Indians. Alexander's troops were terrified at the sight of so many elephants, which gave the enemy such tremendous superiority. Aristotle and some other counsellors were consulted and suggested the construction of an iron horse and rider, to be placed on wheels and drawn by horses, and filled with combustibles. At an appointed signal, the horse and rider would be ignited and make a tremendous explosion. This was carried out, and of the two thousand advancing elephants, many were burnt and destroyed, and the remainder, with the troops, fled in confusion. Alexander then encountered Faur, slew him and became ruler of Kanuj.

After the conquest of Kanuj, Alexander went to Mekka (Mecca, or Becca) for pilgrimage; and from thence to another city, where he was told of two extraordinary trees in the kingdom, one a male, the other a female, from which a voice proceeded. The male tree spoke in the day, and the female in the night, and whoever had a wish went there to have his desires accomplished. Alexander went there, hoping in his heart that a considerable portion of his life remained. When he came to the tree a terrible sound rung in his ears and he asked the people present what it meant. The attendant priest said that it implied that fourteen years of his life still remained. Alexander wept and asked if he would be able to return to Rome and see his mother and children before he died. The answer was, "Thou shalt die at Kashan."

Alexander left in sorrow and proceeded toward Rome. In his progress he arrived at another city, where the inhabitants were afflicted by the presence of two demons, or giants, who devoured men and goats and whatever came in their way. They were called Yajuj and Majuj (Gog and Magog). Alexander ordered a barrier to be built five hundred yards high, and three hundred yards wide, and the giants were unable to scale this, leaving the inhabitants without fear of molestation. Alexander journeyed on and eventually reached Kashan, where he fell sick and in a few days, according to the oracle and prophesy, expired.

Thus the Hakhamanish empire which began circa 612 B.C. with Vishtaspa (or Ahasuerus), ended about 330 B.C. with Alexander of Macedonia; and later Seleucids and Parthians took over the reins of the Persian empire. And the Eighteenth Good Land was to be built for the eternal kingdom of God, and its holy priesthood. Now this Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus, father of Darius or Daryavaoosh, began his rule in eastern Iran, then became a king of kings of the Persian empire and dwelt among other kings at the palace in Shushan (Susa, or Huja); and was given dominion over one hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from the land of Ind (India) unto Ethiopia.

The words of Mordecai the son of Jair, a Benjamite, the older cousin of Esther (or Hadhassah) are herewith abridged. Esther was a Jewish orphan girl of the same tribe. She was the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai; and her guardian was her older cousin Mordecai, one of king Ahasuerus' servants that dwelt in the king's gate of the palace of Shushan. After Ahasuerus had deposed his Medo-Persian queen Vashti for disobedience, a gathering of all the beautiful virgins of the realm took place, that he might choose another for his first queen. And Esther was selected as his queen in the seventh year of his reign at Shushan. And this is the account:

It came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus, who reigned from Ind (India) even unto Ethiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces; that in those days, the king sat on the throne of his empire, in Shushan (Susa, Huja) the palace. In the third year of his reign, Ahasuerus made a great feast unto all his princes and servants, even all the power realm of Persia, Media, Elam, and all of his empire; their nobles and princes were gathered in this great assembly of priests and nobles of the empire. The great assembly lasted one hundred and eighty days; and all the riches, majesty, and glory of the empire were displayed. Besides all the pertinent matters concerning the establishment of the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire, it was here that it was approved that Takhte-sila or Takshasila (or Taxilla) shall be the Spiritual and temporal learning center of the world, and Istakhr (Persepolis), Ecbatana, and other designated places shall be the seats of the Hakhamanish empire; and that Elamite shall be the language of records at Persepolis.

And at the end of one hundred and eighty days, king Ahasuerus made a feast unto all the people that were present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days; in the court of the garden of the king's palace; where were white, green, and blue hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble; the beds were of gold and silver, upon a pavement of red, blue, white and black marble. And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, each vessel diverse from another, and royal wine in abundance. Sacred drinks were consecrated and partaken; and none did compel, for it was the command of the king to the officers of his house, that they should please each according to every man's pleasure.

Also Vashti the first queen of Ahasuerus made a feast for the women in the royal house which belonged to the king. On the seventh day when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigthana, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven chamberlains, that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king, to bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown royal, and shew the people and princes her beauty, for she was fair to look on. But Vashti refused to obey the king's command, by his chamberlains; therefore the king was very wroth, and his anger burned within him. Then the king consulted the wise men his counsellors, the seven princes of the Medians, Persians, and Elamites; namely, Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan; these saw the king's face and were the highest officials of the empire. And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, saying, Vashti the queen hath not only done wrong to the king, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus; for she hath disobeyed the command of the king, and broken the unbreakable law of the Medes and Persians (albeit the law pertains to official decrees alone, not to the verbal command of the king). For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands, when it shall be reported. King Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she again came not. So the king's counsellors said, If it please the king, let there go a royal decree from him, and let it be written according to the laws of the Medes and Persians, that it be not altered. That Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto another that is better than she; so that when the decree shall be published throughout all his empire, the wives shall give to their husbands honor, both to great and small. And the saying pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan. And he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province, according to the language thereof; that every man shall bear rule in his own house; and shall not be accountable to deviant laws of the land, unless a suit is brought forth against him.

When the wrath of king Ahasuerus subsided, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done and that which was decreed against her. Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king; and let him appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the king's harem, unto the custody of Hegai, the keeper of the house of the women; and let there things for purification be given them. And let the maiden that pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king, and he did so.

Now Mordecai a Benjamite was brought to the palace of Shushan, to the court of Ahasuerus, with the brightest and worthiest of the sons of nobles and priests, of Jerusalem and Judah, during the reign of Jeconiah king of Judah, in 617 B.C. And to Esther or Hadhassah his uncle's daughter he became a guardian, when both her father and mother were killed; and Mordecai took her as his own daughter.

And it came to pass, when the king's decree was heard; and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther the daughter of Abihail, the uncle of Mordecai, was also brought to the king's harem, to the keeper of the women. And the maiden pleased Hegai, and she obtained his kindness. Speedily he appointed seven maidens to attend to her every need, out of the king's house; and preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the harem. And Esther showed them not of which people she was from, nor her kindred; for Mordecai had charged her that she should remain silent concerning the matter. And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, to know how Esther was doing, and what should become of her.

Now, after that each maid was purified for twelve months, according to the manner of the women of the king's court; for so were the days of purification, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with perfumes, unguents, balms and other things; then she was taken to king Ahasuerus. Thus came every maiden of the harem unto the king; and whatsoever and whomsoever she desired was given to her, out of the house of women, to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's house. When the maid's turn had come, in the evening she would go; on the morrow she would return into the second harem or the house of women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's keeper of the concubines; and she would no more return to the king, except the king was delighted in her to call her by her name.

And it came to pass, that when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, was come to go unto the king, she required nothing but that which Hegai the king's keeper appointed. And Esther obtained favor in the sight of all of them that looked upon her. So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus in the tenth month of Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign, at Shushan the palace. And the king loved Esther above all the women, so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

After this the king made a great feast unto all his princes and servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a release to the provinces, and conferred gifts and titles, according to their standings. And when the virgins were gathered together the second time, Mordecai was the gatekeeper of the king; and Esther had not yet shewed her people nor kindred, as she was charged by Mordecai. And in those days, while Mordecai sat in the king's gate, two of the king's chamberlains, Bigthana and Teresh his assistant, of the guards were wroth, and sought to lay hands on king Ahasuerus. And the thing was known to Mordecai as he sat at the gate; who told it to Esther the queen; and Esther certified the king concerning the matter in Mordecai's name. And when inquiries were made, it was found out, and both were hanged on a tree; and it was recorded in the book of chronicles before the king. Then king Ahasuerus did promote Haman the Amalekite, son of Hammedatha (gift of Ham), the traditional enemy of the Israelite.

And all the king's servants of the palace bowed and reverenced Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence. Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgresseth thou the king's commandments? It came to pass that, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see if Mordecai's matter may stand; for he had told them that he was a Jew. And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, he was full of wrath; and he thought privily to lay hands on Mordecai and all his people that dwelt there; for they had showed them where they lived. Wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews throughout the kingdom of Ahasuerus.

In the first month, or Nisan, in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, at Shushan, they cast the lot (Pur) before Haman from day to day, and from month to month; until the twelfth month, the month of Adar. And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people, neither keep they the king's law; therefore it is not for the king's profit to suffer. If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed; and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business; and the amount might be drawn against the king's treasuries. And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it to Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of the Jews. And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given thee, and the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

Then on the thirteenth day of Nisan, the king's scribes were called; and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people, according to their language and manner of writing, in the name of king Ahasuerus, and sealed with the king's ring. And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, in the month of Adar; and to take the spoil of them for a prey. The copies of the decree were published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day. The posts went out hastily by the king's commandment, and the decree was also published in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink, but the city of Shushan (Susa, or Huja) was perplexed.

When Mordecai perceived all that was done, he rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth with ashes; went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and bitter cry; and came even before the king's gate; for none was allowed to enter the king's gate in sackcloth. And in every province of the empire was a great mourning among the Jews; and fasting, weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes. So Esther's maid and her chamberlains came and told it her. Then the queen was exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him, but he received it not. Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, who was appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a command to search out the matter with Mordecai. So Hatach went forth to Mordecai, unto the street of the city that was before the king's gate. And Mordecai told him all that had happened unto him, and about the decree of king Ahasuerus concerning the destruction of the Jews which was to be in the twelve month; and he showed him a copy of the decree, and said, Shew it to Esther, and declare unto her that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication unto him, and to plead for her people. And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

Again Esther (or Hadhassah) spake unto Hatach, and asked him to convey this message to Mordecai, and say, All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law, to put him to death; except such to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live; but I have not been called to come in unto him these thirty days. And they brought Esther's words unto Mordecai. And Mordecai sent her the answer, saying, Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all other Jews. For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, shall there the breath of relief and deliverance arise to the Jews from some other place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed; and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this? Then Esther bade them return to Mordecai this answer: Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day; I also and my maidens will fast also likewise; and then will I go in unto the king, who is not according to the law (of Moses); and if I perish, I perish. So Mordecai went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

And it came to pass on the third day, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's apartment; and king Ahasuerus sat upon his royal throne overlooking the gate of the house. And, it was so, when the king saw Esther standing in the court, she obtained favor in his sight; and the king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near and touched the top of the sceptre. Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? It shall be even given to thee to the half of the kingdom. And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him. And the king said unto his chamberlain, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

And while the king partook of the wine, he said unto Esther, What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee; and what is thy request, even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed. Then said Esther, My petition and my request, if I have found favor in the sight of the king; and if it please the king to grant my petition, and to perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare tomorrow as the king hath said.

Then went Haman forth that day joyfully and with a merry heart; but when he saw Mordecai in the king's gate, and he bowed himself not to reverence him, he was full of indignation against Mordecai. Nevertheless Haman refrained himself; and when he came home, he sent and called for his friends, and Zeresh his wife. And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and all wherein the king had promoted him; and how he was advanced above the other princes and servants of the king. And he said, moreover, Yea Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and tomorrow am I invited unto her also with the king. Yet all this availeth me nothing so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

And said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto Haman, Let a gallows be made fifty cubits high, and tomorrow speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon; then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman; and he caused the gallows to be prepared. On that night could not the king sleep; and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles, and they were read before the king. And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hands on king Ahasuerus. And the king said, What honor and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing done for him. And the king said, Who is in the court? For now Haman was come into the outer court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.

So Haman came in, and the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honor? Now Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honor more than to myself? And Haman answered the king, For the man whom the king delighteth to honor, let the royal apparel be brought which the king useth to wear, and the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown royal which is upon his head; and let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honor; and bring him on horseback through the streets of the city, and proclaim before him, Thus shall be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honor.

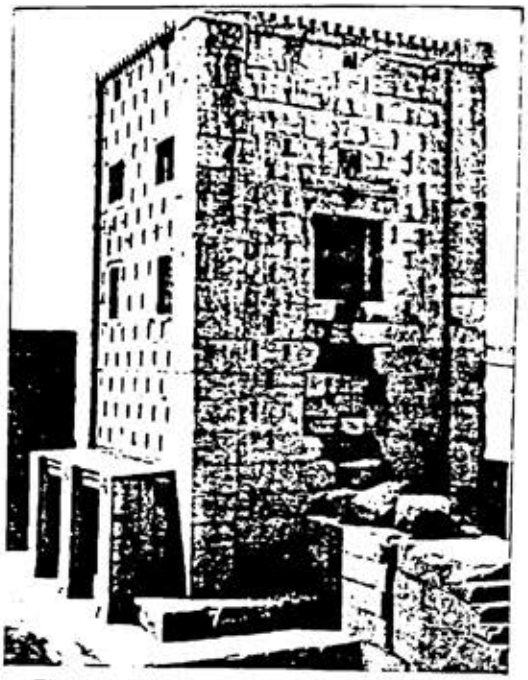
Then the king said to Haman, Make haste; take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth in the king's gate; let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken. Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honor. And Mordecai returned to the king's gate; but Haman hasted to his house mourning, and having his head covered. When Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends everything which had befallen him, then said his wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shall surely fall before him. And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

So the king and Haman came to Esther's banquet, and as the king partook of the wine, he said unto Esther again, What is thy petition queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee; and what is thy request? and it shall be performed even to the half of the kingdom. Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favor in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request. For we are sold, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. But if we had been sold for bondmen and bondwomen, I would hold my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage. Then king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who is he, and where is he, that durst presume in his heart to do so? And Esther said, the adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was afraid before the king and the queen.

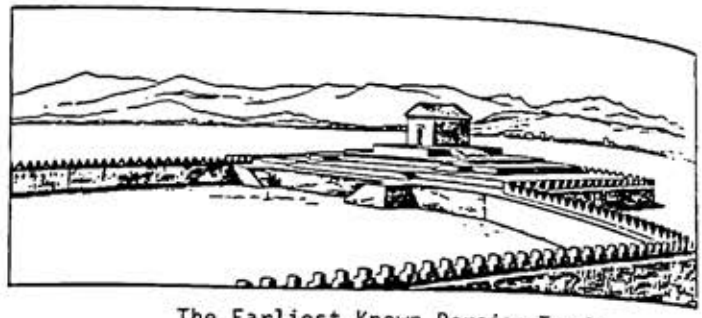
And the king arising from the banquet of wine in his wrath went into the palace garden; and Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king. Then the king returned from the garden into the banquet room; and Haman was fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was. And said the king, Will he force the queen also before me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, one of the chamberlains covered Haman's face. And Harbonah said unto the king, Behold also, the gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, Hang him thereon. So they hanged Haman on the gallows which he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified.

And on that day did king Ahasuerus give the house of Haman the Jews' enemy unto Esther the queen. And Mordecai came before the king; for Esther had told him what he was unto her. Then the king took off his ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet again before the king, and fell down at his feet, and besought him with tears to put away the mischief of Haman the Amalekite; and his device which he had devised against the Jews. Then the king held out the golden sceptre toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king; and said, If it please the king, and if I have found favor in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse the letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, which he wrote to destroy the Jews in all the king's provinces. For how can I endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? Or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred? Then king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen and Mordecai the Jew, Behold I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews. Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring; for the decree which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may no man reverse.

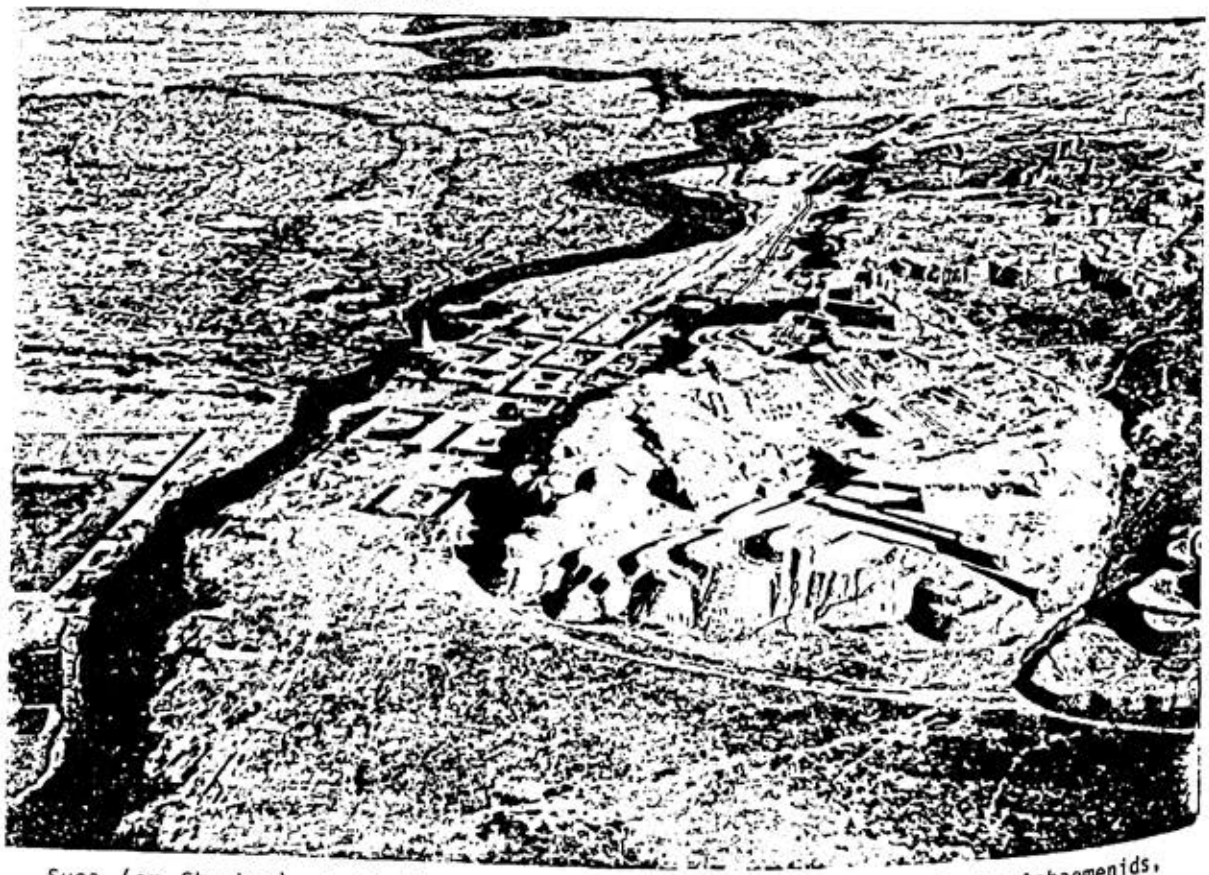
On the twenty-third day of the month of Sivan, the third month, the king's scribes were called; and it was written thereof according to



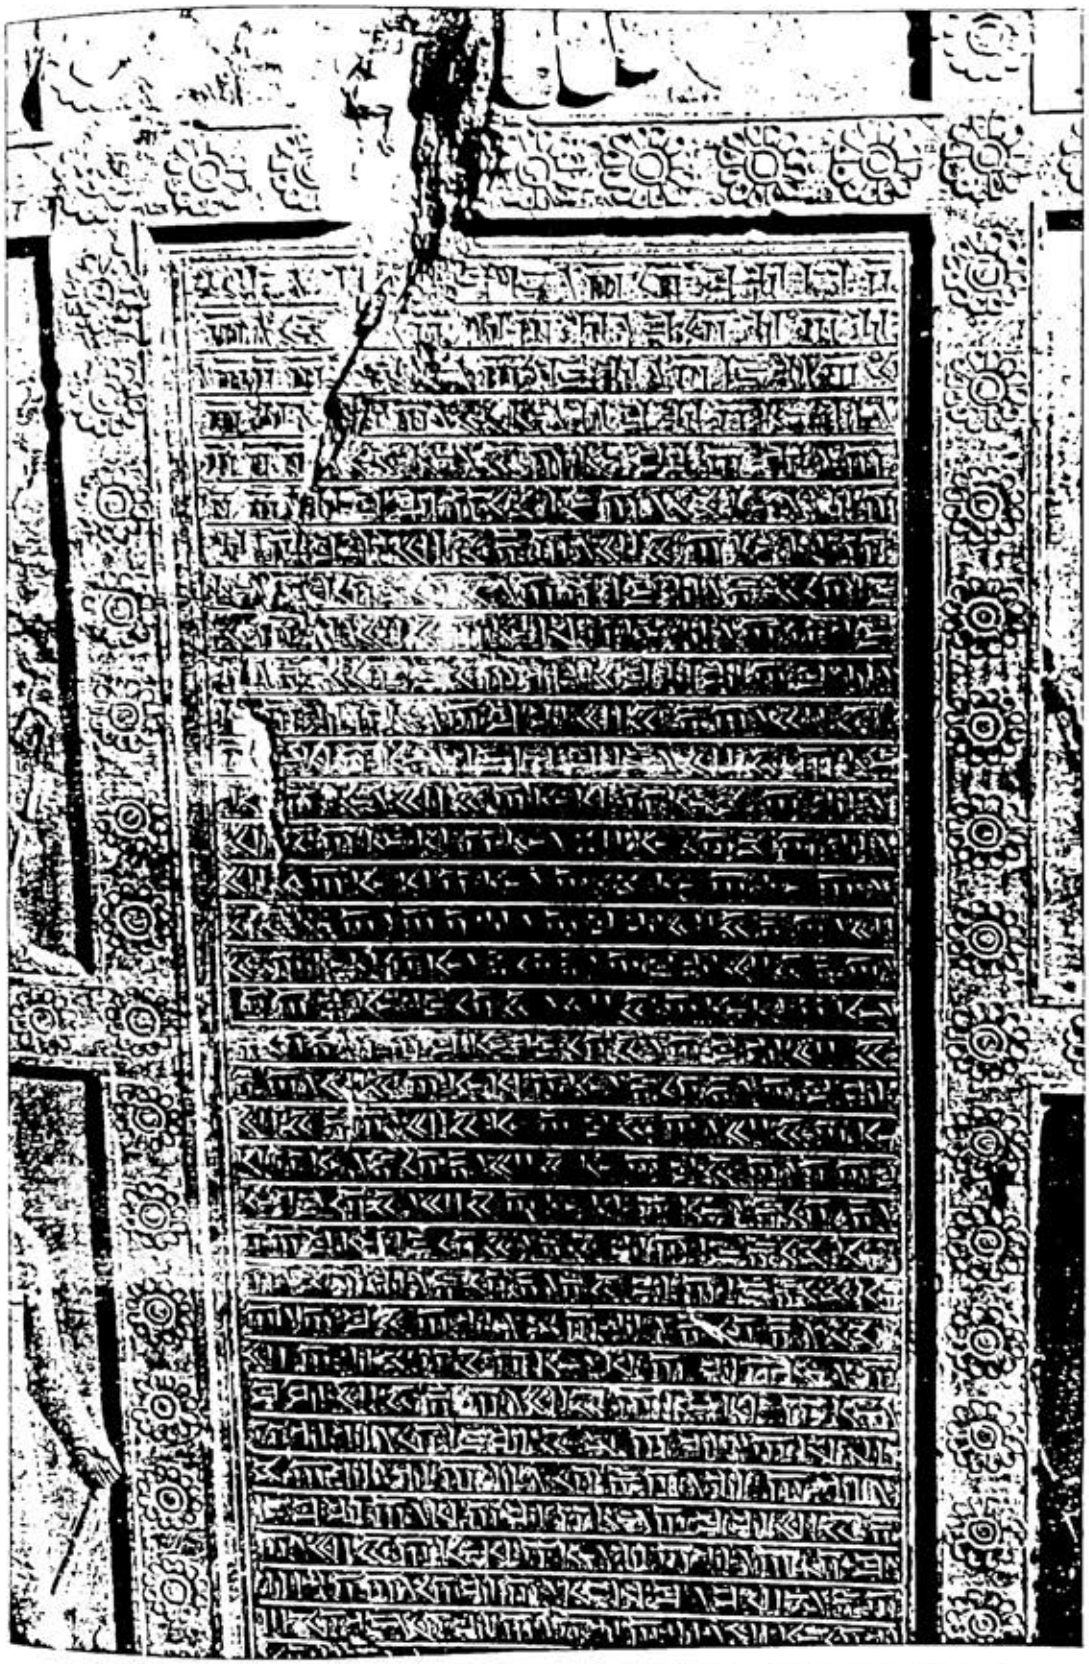
The Kabah of Zoroaster at Naqsh-i Rustam. This structure facing the royal tombs may have been one of the ayadana (place of worship).



The Earliest Known Persian Temple
This temple was discovered at Pasargadae by Herzfeld, who concluded that it was erected by Cyrus himself, near whose palace and tomb it stands.



Susa (or Shushan), a bird's-eye view. Susa was the capital of the Achaemenids, and finds of objects from all over the empire indicate the cosmopolitan nature of the metropolis. It was here that king Ahasuerus and Esther dwelt at one time.



An Old Persian inscription of Artaxerxes III Ochus (359 - 338 B.C.) at Persepolis. Under him the Achaemenid empire received a new impetus.

all that Mordecai commanded unto the Jews; and to the lieutenants; and deputies and rulers of the provinces from the land of Ind (India) unto Ethiopia, an hundred and twenty-seven provinces; and unto each province according to its language and manner. And he wrote king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed it with the king's ring; and sent letters by posts on horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries. Wherein the king granted the Jews in every city to gather themselves together, and stand for their lives; to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both women and children, and to take spoil of them for prey.

And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of blue and white; and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple; and in the city of Shushan, and all the provinces which received the king's decree, the Jews had joy and gladness, a day of feasts and rejoicings. And many of the people of the land became Jews, for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

Now on the selfsame day, the thirteenth day of Adar, in the twelve month, the Jews gathered themselves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of king Ahasuerus; to lay hand on such as sought their hurt; and no man could withstand them, for the fear of them fell upon all people. And all the rulers of the provinces, the lieutenants, the deputies, and the officers of the king helped the Jews, because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them. For this man Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces; and he waxed greater and greater. Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the sword, and with a great slaughter, those that hated them.

In the palace of Shushan the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men. And they slew Parshandatha, Dalphon, Aspatha, Poratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Parmashta, Arisai, Aridai, and Vajezatha, the ten sons of Haman son of Hammedatha the Amalekite, the enemy of the Jews; but on the spoil laid they not their hand. And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace and ten sons of Haman; what else have they done in the king's provinces? Now what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee; or what is thy request further? and it shall be done. Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do tomorrow also according unto this day's decree; and let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows. And king Ahasuerus commanded it to be done; and they hanged the bodies of the ten sons of Haman upon the selfsame gallows which Haman had built for Mordecai the Jew. It was on the fourteenth day of the month of Adar, that the Jews of Shushan slew three hundred men of the city; and on the prey they laid not their hand. And the other Jews in the king's provinces also did according to the new decree, and slew seventy-five thousand of their enemies; and they also laid not their hands on the prey.

And of the priests and the righteous of the empire, some fasted and rejoiced, some rested and prayed, some praised the Lord in sacred hymns; but the hearts of many were gladdened and spirits uplifted. But the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month of Adar a day of gladness and feasting, a good day, a day of sending portions one to another. Then Mordecai and Esther wrote letters and sent them to one hundred and twenty-seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus; to establish the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar, the twelfth month, the days of feasting and gladness, and of sending portions one to another. For they were the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month was turned from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a day of rejoicing; and were saved from destruction by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all Jews; that had cast Pur, that is, the lot, to consume and destroy them, through secret combinations and murders. Wherefore they called these the days of Purim, the day of the Purs. And the Jews made a vow upon themselves and their seed, to keep the two days of Purim, according to the writing of Esther and Mordecai, the days of feasting, and rejoicing, and sending portions one to another; and to remember how the Lord had delivered the Jews by the hands of Esther and Mordecai. And Mordecai the Jew continued to grow mighty in the Spirit and judgement, and he was next to king Ahasuerus, and greatly beloved of the Jews.

Now among the Japhethic or non-Shemitic branch of the human family, the nations that descended from Gomer, son of Japheth, grandson of Noah, are the Cimmerians, an Aryan race called Gimirrai by the Assyrians. They settled in the region north of the Black Sea. The peninsula of the southern Ukraine, extending into the northern portion of the Black Sea, is called Crimea, after these nomadic people. During the reign of Assyrian king Sargon (in the eighth century B.C.), they came through the mountainous region of the Caucasus; attacking the kingdoms of Urartu (Ararat) and Tubal (Tabal). Moreover, pressured by the Scythians (or Skuthes) that dwelt north of the Black Sea and east of Lake Aral, they penetrated into eastern Asia Minor. After the sixth century B.C., the name Cimmerians was replaced by the Celtic or Gallic people of Europe. The descendants of Gomer, or Gimirrai, were known to the Greeks as the Galatians. Other celtic tribes of northern Europe such as Cimbri at one time occupied the whole British Isles, until finally driven into districts where presently are found the Gaal in Ireland and Scotland; and Cymbri; the name is still in use in the Welsh (Cymry). Other descendants of Gomer migrated in the opposite direction, eastward toward Persia, India (Ind or Hind), and into the province of Sinkiang of China (Chin). In Sinkiang the tribe is called Tokhari, the linguistic cousins of the Celts of western Europe.

The descendants of the second son of Japheth (Yapheth, Haifa) son of Noah, namely Magog (Majuj) were known to be the fierce Scythian tribes in northeast Europe and central Asia; they were also called northern barbarians, rapacious and warlike, equipped with large cavalry forces, skilled in bow and spear. In time the word Magog meant all Scythians; and later, it was replaced by "Tartars," and meant brutal, base, fallen and fierce people; analagous to the position of Satan (Iblis, Angra Mainyu, Lucifer) and his angels following the war in heaven; who in their fallen state and zeal are ever ready to wage war against anyone or anything. Ancient Scythia embraced all Turan and the northern part of Persia. In about 639 B.C., seven years before the destruction of Nineveh, capital of Assyria (a city with a circumference of about eight miles), the Scythians invaded the kingdom of the Medes, the true Aryans of the Airyana Vaejah, by the Vanguhi Daitya (in Azerbaijan).

Settlements of Japheth are encircled, in the north and east. Approximate distribution of the descendants of Shem is shown on the right of the Red Sea; and of Ham on the left side of the same.

Madai, the third son of Japheth (Yapheth, Haifa) son of Noah, is the progenitor of the Medes; which in Hebrew and Assyro-Babylonian (Akkadian) are called Madai, and Mada in Old Persian. They established themselves in the Iranian plateau region; between Alburz mountains in the south of the Caspian Sea, and Zagros mountains to the east of Assyria, but especially near lake Urmia (Urmiah). The modern name Iran is derived from the word Aryan, or Japhethic descent. These are the progenitors of the righteous branch of the Aryan race; namely, the inhabitants of Airyana Vaejah.

The descendants of Yavan (Javan, Yunan), the fourth son of Japheth (Yapheth, Haifa) son of Noah, sprang from his four sons, Elisha, Tarshish, Kittim, and Dodanim (Rodanim). And they populated the islands and coastlands of the Mediterranean sea; from Cyprus (Kittim) to as far as Spain (Tarshish). These are the progenitors of ancient Ionians, the parent tribe of the Greeks. In the course of time the name Ionia (Yunan) came to be associated with the region around Athens (Attica), Lydia, Caria, and the neighboring islands of the Aegean Sea; and later with the mainland of Greece. In Hebrew scriptures, the "sons of Javan" or "sons of the Greeks" are used interchangeably.

The descendants of Tubal or Tabal, the fifth son of Japheth (Yapheth, Haifa) son of Noah, settled in the region north of Palestine; later they moved to the north below the Black sea. Tubal and his brothers Meshech and Javan traded with Tyre, dealing in slaves and copper articles. Tubal was numbered among the uncircumcised; and both Meshech and Tubal were despised by the people of the Lord; for they would come from the remotest parts of the north, and attack the Lord's people. In the cities of the Assyrians they dwelt in the region northeast of Cilicia in eastern Asia Minor. Meshech is Mushku in Assyrian, and Moskhoi in Greek. Later the Mushkus came to be known as the Phrygians, who dominated much of the western and central Asia Minor. Assyrian emperor Sargon refers to king Mita of Mushku, who in Greek tradition is king Midas of Phrygia. The Mushkus that migrated farther north are the Muscovites of Russia. And the descendants of the seventh son of Japheth son of Noah, namely of Tiras, became the seafaring people of the islands and coastlands of the Aegean sea.

So the Japhethic or Aryan race continued to enlarge their territories and dominions, yet they kept contact with their Shemitic brethren, according to the words of Noah, their progenitor. They were by nature mostly farmers and herdsmen, tradesmen, rulers and warriors; and their priests and Spiritual leaders belonged not to the Melchizedek Priesthood of the Shemitic people, but to the ancient Holy Order of Zarathustra, to which also belonged the ancient Egyptians, Babylonians and Assyrians.

Now, until the divine birth of Spitama Zarathustra in 618 B.C., all priests, prophets, and kings of the Eternal Kingdom of God were anointed after they had come out of their mother's womb, and were raised, trained, and perfected for their callings and appointments, by the Eternal and Holy Priesthood of the Kingdom of God; that those who had proven themselves worthy might earn just recompense for their deeds; and those who were chosen to dwell in the presence of the Heavenly Father and his Anointed Son, the Lord of invisible archangels, Ahura Mazda, his First Creator. But now for the first time the archangels in heaven declared to raise a Zarathustra through the collective effort of all celestial hosts; that he might establish the Righteous Kingdom for the sons of Japheth (Yapheth, or Haifa) son of Noah; and that he might be the Guardian Spirit (or prophet) of the Order, and be the head of the earthly saints and archangels; as the Lord is the head of the invisible or heavenly ones, exactly one hundred thousand such celestial beings (Yazatas). Moreover, the ancient Holy Order of Zarathustra was now six thousand years old. The first three thousand years the Order remained all Spiritual, pure and holy, without an adversary or destroyer; for in the beginning the Lord had passed on the guardian spirit of Zarathustra to the parents of Zarathustra through Haoma plant, a marvel produced by cultivation.

It was during the time of Seth son of Adam, circa 3618 B.C., the archangels framed Zarathustra together (meaning, formally organized and established the Order; and seated the Guardian Spirit in their midst). So they appointed the first prophet or seer unto themselves, even the Guardian Spirit having a mouth and a tongue, a proclaimer of celestial mansions. At this time the Holy Priesthood of God, the Order of Zarathustra, was 3,000 years old. The first 3,000 years of purely Spiritual existence now ended; and the next three millennia were to be mixed with the worldly or the temporal. This First Separation of the Third Millennium marks the organization and framing of the Holy Order, and the appointment of the first Guardian Spirit (or prophet) to preside over all the earthly (or visible) archangels and saints; while the Lord himself presides forever over all the heavenly archangels, or heavenly beings.

The second 3,000 years of mixed existence of the Holy Order, in which Spiritual was mixed with the worldly or temporal, ended at the birth of Zoroaster (Zarathustra, or Zerdusht), in 618 B.C. And the Third Separation of the Third Millennium will take place in 2382 A.D. Then, after 9,000 years of Spiritual, Mixed, and Worldly existence, the world shall be renovated and renewed. Until that time Zarathustra, or the Holy Priesthood of God, shall be conveyed to the worldly state and the mouth and tongue of the eternal priesthood of God shall continue to preach and save mankind; and all the dispensations of heaven shall be made available until then, during the next three hundred and ninety-two years (this being the year 1991 A.D.); then shall the Third Separation of the Third Millennium and the renovation of the earth commence.

During the three millennia of Zarathustra, after its organization and establishment, many a number of guardian spirits were manifest unto the archangels, through the observation by the eye; and it seemed that they became just like the archangels through bodily contact with them. Then the Spiritual was mixed with the worldly or the temporal; and the Order existed with the adversary or destroyer for the next three thousand years. Therefore spake the Lord, the Holy One (Ahura Mazda in old Persian language) with Vohumano, the Spirit of Goodness, one of the Amesha-Spentas; and with Ashavahisto of the Holy Order, and said: Is his mother seen by you, so that we may produce Zarathustra? And Ashavahisto spoke up, saying, Thou art aware even of that, O Propitious One! About the Zarathustra we shall produce, and thou and we have produced; thou knowest, O Lord, the All-knowing One (Ahura Mazda)! And to us, and other archangels may thou announce the place, O Propitious One, for his appearance even thou knowest.

Then the Lord argued with Vohumano, Ardavahisto, Shatraver (Shatvairo), Spendarmad (Armaiti), Khurdad (Horvadad), and Amardad (Amerodad), saying, The conveying of Zarathustra down to a worldly state doth not seem expedient to me; for, having a mouth and a tongue, he will be a proclaimer to the world of embodied (earthly) beings. If we convey Zarathustra down on to the world of embodied beings, having a mouth and a tongue, as a proclaimer of the celestial mansion, this is evident, they will ask concerning the origin of my righteous man; saying, Let us now frame him together with the water, with the land, with the plants, and with the animals. Therefore shall we carry Spitama off to the village of Porushaspo; and there whom they will call Spitama Zarathustra (or Zoroaster) of good lineage of both natures, even of the archangels (of Neryosan), and of mankind (of Yim). Then the archangels framed together a stem of Haoma plant, the height of a man, excellent in color and juicy where fresh. And to carry off the guardian spirit of Zarathustra to that stem, the archangels made it to go forth thither, from the presence of the endless light, and did all according to their instinctive intellect. And their carrying off was manifest openly unto a great multitude; also Haoma was constantly provided with a mouth, where it was suitable, and the sap constantly oozed from the Haoma where it was moist. Thus the coming of the nature of the body of Zarathustra, through water and vegetation, to the bodies of his parents was manifested unto the multitude, as a great wonder of the Creator. Thereupon, when the Lord, the All-Wise One, had produced the material of Zarathustra, the nature of his body, then, in the presence of the Lord, fled on toward the material of Zarathustra.

At that time Khurdad and Murdad were assigned to bring the cloud-water down in a compassionate manner, ever anew, drop by drop, warm and salubrious; for the delight of sheep and men also; and with as much seed as the roving of two rampant bulls would thereby cast upon the sacred plants, and upon all of every species, even upon the dry ones; and the nature of Zarathustra came from that water to those plants. And in order that the nature of Zarathustra shall come unto his parents, verily this was done; after the mounting of the archangels, Porushaspo used to drive six white cows, with yellow ears, up to those plants. Behold, two of those cows, unimpregnated, had become full of milk, and the nature of Zarathustra came from those plants to those cows, and was mingled in cows' milk. Owing to this oddity Porushaspo drove those cows back, and spoke to his wife, saying, O Dukdaub! In two of those cows, which are unimpregnated and have not calved, milk has appeared; do thou milk those cows, which are the splendour and glory of the cows and of any embodied existence whatsoever. And Dukdaub arose, and taking the pail of hers which had a four-fold capacity, she milked from them the milk which was in them, and a great part of the milk had to be thrown away, due to its abundance; and the nature of Zarathustra was in that milk.

Thereupon, the demons formed themselves into an assembly, and growled thus: You demons have become quite unobservant; that food is really supplied fresh, so that the formation is settled, which will extend as far as to that man who will be the righteous Zarathustra. Which of you will undertake his destruction, all the while that he exists for mankind, so as to make him more contemptibly impotent? Keshmak, astute in evil, growled, saying, I will undertake his destruction; and he rushed away with thrice fifty of the demons who were Karaps (unbelievers) of Keshmak; and the village was partly uprooted and partly destroyed; fellow-workers were ruined, but the half-starving men attending the great and the wise were not broken up, among whom was he that had repelled Keshmak's authority.

Afterwards, Porushaspo asked again for the Haoma from Dukdaub his wife, and pounded it, and with that cows' milk into which the nature of the body of Zarathustra had come; he here mingled the guardian spirit of Zarathustra, and the nature of the body came at once into union with it. Then Porushaspo and Dukdaub drank up that Haoma and milk, after they were mingled together, and praised the Lord (Ahura Mazda); and here occurred a combination of the glory, the guardian spirit, and the bodily nature of Zarathustra into a manchild; and a great vision and wonder was manifested to both of them. Thereupon both embraced the first time with desire for a son; and the demons shouted out unto them, in villainous speech of sinfulness, saying, Why shouldst thou act like this, vile Porushaspo? Whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. A second time they embraced the same desire, and the demons shouted out unto them in villainous speech; whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. A third time they embraced the selfsame desire for a son, and the demons shouted out unto them in villainous speech; whereupon they started up like people who are ashamed. And they spoke with one another about it, and continued to go about doing their daily chores; then they suddenly decided, saying, We will not stop without accomplishing something, not even if Rak and Nodar should arrive here together. Then that manchild who was to be the righteous Zarathustra became complete; and to the earth below came together the nature of the body, the guardian spirit, and the glory of the priesthood of God in the womb of his mother.

One marvel is this which is declared, that, after the formation of Zarathustra in the womb of his mother, the demons strove anew cunningly to cause the death of Zarathustra in his mother's womb; thereby she was rendered sickly by them through the sharpest of pain and afflictions.

When she could bear it no more, she wished to ask the wizard physicians for a desirable remedy. It was then a voice of theirs was carried away to her from the celestial regions, from the Lord (Ahura Mazda) and his archangels; saying, Thou damsel who goest to see the wizards and soothsayers! Do not proceed thither, because anything of theirs is destruction, through wizard medical treatment. For healthfulness, wash thy hands thoroughly, and with those hands, take firewood; and upon it thou shalt offer meat for the sake of the infant; and offer up cows' butter to the fire for his sake; thou shalt likewise heat it at the fire for his sake, and shalt quaff it off at a proper time for his sake, and thou wilt become well. Then at once the damsel washed her hands thoroughly, and she did as she was bidden, and she became well.

Another marvel is this which was manifested to the multitude when three days remained to his coming forth; in the manner of the sun; at the approach of its uprising, when its first advancing twilight is diffused, his body was then announced. It was in those last three nights during which Zarathustra was in the womb of his mother, when there yet remained three days for the birth of his body, that the village of Porushaspo became all luminous. Then spoke the horse-owners and cattle-owners of the Spitamas, running hither and thither, saying, It is requisite to be forgiven; the village of Porushaspo, on which that fire is in every crevice, is disturbed by confusion! Then, running together again, they said, It is not fully purged, the village of Porushaspo; fire is on it in every crevice and it is disturbed by confusion; behold, unto him is born, at his house, a brilliant manchild!

Moreover, yet another marvel which is declared, that on being born he laughed outright; and seven midwives, who sat around him, were quite frightened. And they murmured among themselves, saying, What was this, on account of grandeur or contempt? when, like the worthy man whose pleasure is due to activity, the manchild so laughed at his birth. Porushaspo also spoke thus: Bring out this manchild to the sheepskin clothing which is soft; the affair was owing to thee, owing to the virtue of thee who art Dukdaub; that the advent of glory and coming of divine radiance upon this manchild was openly seen when he laughed outright at his birth.

And after the child was born, and yet an infant, Porushaspo called one of the five brothers of the race of Karaps (unbelievers), and spoke thus: Fully observe the marks and blemishes of my son Zarathustra! The Karap went and sat down before the infant Zarathustra, and thereupon severely twisted his head in order to kill him; but he, being fearless, watched the wizard, whose terror was distressing. As it was in those ten nights for hospitality, the Lord (Ahura Mazda) sent Spendarmad, Aredvisur, and Ardai-fravard down to the earth, by way of female care for the infant; thereupon no harm came to the child, but later the hand of that Karap the wizard was withered. And he demanded the life of Zarathustra from Porushaspo, for the harm which he had brought upon himself, from his own action. So Porushaspo took Zarathustra, and gave him to the Karap, that he might do with him according to his own will.

He seized him and threw him out, at the feet of the oxen who were going on a path to the water; the leader of the drove of oxen stood still beside him, and one hundred and fifty oxen, which walked behind him, kept away from the child; then Porushaspo took him, and carried him back to the house. Next day, the Karap threw him out at the feet of the horses; and the leader of the horses stood still beside the infant Zarathustra, and one hundred and fifty horses, which walked behind, were kept away from him; and then Porushaspo took him, and carried him back to the house. Also the third day, firewood was gathered together by the Karap, and the holy infant was placed upon the pile; the fire was stirred up by him, yet the child was not burned by it; and those marks which existed, and were made upon him, preserved him from harm. And the fourth day, he was thrown by the Karap into the lair of a wolf; the wolf was not in the lair; and when it wished to go back into the den, it was stopped by some radiance, in the form of a mother, near the place where the cub was. In the night, Vohumano and Srosh the righteous brought a wooly sheep with udder full of milk into the den, and it gave milk to the infant Zarathustra, in digestible draughts, until daylight. At dawn, the mother of the infant went to that place, expecting that it would be necessary to bring a skeleton out of the den. Behold, the wooly sheep came out and ran away; his mother supposed that it was the wolf; and thus she spoke, Thou hast devoured to repletion, may thou endure for ever without it! She went farther, and when she saw the infant Zarathustra quite safe, she then took him up, and spake thus: I will not give thee to any one during life, not though both the provinces of Ragh and Nodar should arrive here together!

And it came to pass, that one day, one of the five brothers of the Karaps saw that the child Zarathustra looked a long while upwards, downwards, and all across. When Porushaspo heard of it, he asked the child, saying, What was there when thou lookedst upwards, and downwards, and on all sides? And he replied: When I looked upwards, I saw that our souls that go up to the sky, will go up to the best existence, owing to the thoughts of this soul of mankind; when I looked downwards, I saw that, owing to the actions (or deeds) of this one, the demon and fiend, the wizard and witch become buried below the earth, and fall paralyzed back to hell. And when I looked all across, I saw the words of this one will extend through the whole earth. And when they have become as the law of the seven regions, each person is kept clothed with a robe of seven skins, in which the glory of the seven archangels has arisen. This Zarathustra, son of Porushaspo and Dukdaub, truly was the first Son of God; born of the holy and divine seed in the womb of the choicest woman on earth of the time; of the virgin birth, the seed of the Lord (Ahura), conceived in the womb of the mortal woman; by the power of the Holy Priesthood, raised and nurtured by ministering archangels of the Eternal Kingdom of the Almighty God, and the Order of Zarathustra, even by all the one hundred thousand archangels, or Yazatas. Zarathustra (Zoroaster) was also educated in Taxilla (Takshashila, or Takhtesila) in northwest Hindoostan (India); and was one of the divine teachers of Gautama Buddha the heretic. And at this time Taxilla was the learning center of the highest knowledge, both Spiritual and temporal, of all the world; here the future rulers of the world were sent to be trained for their ministry and appointments. Thus, northern Hindoostan became a blend of many cultures and civilizations that migrated from Persia, Media, Assyria, Babylonia, Arabia, Egypt, China; and from Greece, Rome and far away places. To the rest of the world these people were known as the Hindoos, the inhabitants of the land across the Indus (Hindush) River. The city of Taxilla was known as the Seat of Morality of the whole world. (It was here that Gautama, or Gotama the Heretic, as he was called, finished his studies; he was also a devotee and a pupil of Zoroaster or Zarathustra. At the time of Zarathustra's death, Gautama was twenty-two years of age.

Thus the Creator passed on the glory of Zarathustra through the material existences of the creatures to Zarathustra; when the command arose from the All-Wise Lord, concerning the coming of that glory from the Spiritual existence to the worldly or temporal. And the material substance of Zarathustra was manifested as a great wonder to the multitude. Thereupon, when the All-Wise Lord had produced the material of Zarathustra, the glory then, in the presence of the Lord, fled on towards the material of Zarathustra, on to that germ. And from that germ it fled on to the light which is endless; from this endless light it fled on to that of the glory of the sun; from that it fled on to the moon; and from the moon it fled to the stars; and from the stars the glory fled on to the fire which was in the house of Zois; and from that fire it fled on to the wife of Frahimravana-zois, when she brought forth Dukdaub, the girl who became the mother of Zarathustra. And that splendour escaped at the same time into the earth and the sky. And Padiragtaraspo, the father of Porushaspo, was declared ignorant throughout the village; and it was said by them that were more instructed, invoking Zeus or Zois (the chief of the Olympian gods, husband of Hera; anciently he was the god of the elements; the thunderbolt is his sign, as once was of god Indra of the Persians of India; or Bodhisattva Vajrapani of the Buddhist pantheon. He was the supreme ruler of moral law and order, protector of suppliants and punisher of guilt), as to the self-combustion which burns the fire, that fuel is not necessary for its use.

Then they went to the governor, and he explained to them, saying, The full glory of embodied (worldly) existence is the glory of life apart from the body, so that all diligence devoid of this is only movement.

And it came to pass that the demons, on account of their defeat by that glory in maintaining hostility toward the girl, were bringing upon that district three armaments, harsh winter, pestilence, and oppressive enemies; and a suspicion was cast by them into the minds of those who dwelt in that district; that this harm happened to the district owing to the witchcraft of this girl; so that those of the district quarrelled bitterly with the parents, as to the witchcraft of antagonism in the girl, and about putting her out from that district. And the father of the girl (who was to be the mother of Zarathustra or Zoroaster) spoke these words to those of the district, with much reason, about the unjust accusation against the girl, concerning witchcraft. And he said unto them, When this girl was brought forth among those of mine, her whole destiny was afterwards set forth by that manifest radiance of fire, where it brought out radiance from all over her in the dark night. When this girl sits in the interior of the house, wherein there is no fire, and in the chamber of fire they increase its intensity; it is lighter there, where and when this girl sits, than there where they increase the intensity of the fire; one is dazzled by the radiance from her body; and that of a wizard would not have been so glorious.

Even so, the influence of the demons; and Kavis or the Poets, that were bards and minstrels who entertained rulers and aristocracy by reciting epics down through ages continued to increase. Out of these kavis or poets came the rulers of eastern Persia; of whom Vishtaspa (Gushtasp) was the ninth. The other eight before him were: Hausravah, Syavarshan, Byarshan, Pishinah, Arshan, Usadan, Apivahu and Kavata; these poet-kings were fire priests and soothsayers, seers, who became rulers, and were initiated into the mysteries of the Drujusts, the Hypocrites, the followers of Aharman(Ahriman). These kavis, or poet-rulers, were numbered with the Karapans, the mumblers. The rulers of the Kavi dynasty established themselves in eastern Iran, and upheld the ancient Aryan rites and ceremonies; they were of mixed natures, Good disposition mixed with the Bad disposition; they were not of knowledge of God, but of mind and deeds alone; albeit their minds were limited, corrupted, and defiled, to understand the Holy Word. Therefore many became adversaries of Zarathustra, the Prophet and Savior of the Lord.

And it came to pass that the persecution became so severe, that Frahimravana-zois, the father of the girl, ordered her to go to Padiragtaraspo, the father of a family in the country of the Spitamas, in the district of Alk. The girl obeyed the command of her father; and all the persecution of the demons was turned by heavenly archangels into the blessing of marriage to Porushaspo, the father of Zarathustra. When the girl went to that family, and stood on the loftiest place in the country of the Spitamas, a great wonder was manifested to the girl; it was the voice of the heavenly (or invisible) archangels which was carried to her, saying, Do thou proceed to that village of the Spitamas; it is very depressed in height and very wide in breadth, in which he who is living and the cattle mostly walk together; moreover, for thy assistance that village is divinely fashioned, and compassionate. Thereupon the damsel stopped, and fully observed that their recital seemed to be for the conveyance of this message, that her action should be such as was ordered by her father. Then that damsel thoroughly washed her hands, and proceeded from their presence toward the village of Padiragtaraspo; and the glory fled on to Porushaspo the son of Padiragtaraspo. Then the Lord passed on the guardian spirit of the Order of Zarathustra to the parents of Zarathustra the infant, of the Divine seed, through Haoma the sacred plant, a marvel produced by cultivation.

Now, at the birth of the infant, the second three thousand years of mixed existence of the holy with the worldly came to an end. A total of 6,000 years had elapsed since the first Zarathustra, the fire priest,was created by the Lord God, and was of the same name; from the Endless Light created he him; this was the first Saoshyant or Savior, the first Most High God, or the Only Begotten of the Lord God.

Then the contentious Promise Breaker and his female demons of the Druj (the Hypocrites) injured the life of piety, and produced burdensome morality; and the nature of Gayomard was produced. The seed which was the essence of the life of the leader of life, who was Gayomard, flowed forth on his passing away; and was brought to the earth under the care of the beneficent angel, and was preserved in the earth until, through protection of the angels, a brother and sister of mankind were connected and joined together. They were raised upon the earth, and they moved and walked about it, and in time had intercourse, and brought forth offspring. And it is said that the ground where the life of Gayomard departed was gold; and from the other lands where the dissolution of his various members occurred, various kinds of decorative metals flowed forth.

Thus arose the next of kin marriage. The first consummation of such union between Mashya and Mashyoi caused the entire progress of the races of every kind of lineage of men to come into existence; and all the men of the world are of that race. And through selective sowing, breeding, and planting, various races of mankind were created by the power of the eternal kingdom of the archangels; of which the Lord God was the first creator, and Mazda the Lord, the All Wise One, the Most High God, with twenty names, was the head of the 100,000 celestial (or unseen) archangels.

Now, when Mashya and Mashyoi grew up on earth, they first fed upon water, then plants, then milk, then meat (flesh of man also). And when their time of death drew near, they first desisted from eating meat, then milk and bread, until finally they subsisted on water alone until their last breath. It is also declared, that Gayomard in passing away, gave forth seed; that seed was thoroughly purified by the motion of the light of the sun; and Neryosang kept charge of two portions, and Spendarmad received one portion. And in forty years, with the shape of a one-stemmed Rivas-plant, and fifteen years of its fifteen leaves Mashya (Matro) and Mashyoi (or Matroyao) grew up from the earth in such a manner, that their arms rested behind each others shoulders. One joined to the other, they were connected together, and they looked alike; the waists of both of them were brought close; and so were they connected together that none could tell which was male or which was female; or which was the one whose body carrieth the living soul of Mazda the Lord. For it is declared from the everlasting, that the soul is created before the body; and for him who is created, it is given into the body that it may produce activity; and the body is created only for activity.

Now, behold, both Mashya and Mashyoi changed from the shape of a plant into the shape of a man, and breath went Spiritually into them, which is the soul. Thus, in that similitude a tree had grown up whose fruit was the ten kinds of man. And it came to pass, that the Lord spake to Mashya and Mashyoi, saying, You are Man, you are the ancestry of the world; you are created perfect in devotion to me; perform devotedly thy duties of the law, think good thoughts, speak good words, do good deeds, and worship no demons! First both of them thought, that one of them should please the other; and the first deed done by them was this, they went out and washed themselves thoroughly; and the first words of their praise were, that the Wise Lord created the water and earth, plants and animals, the stars, the moon, and the sun, and all joys and prosperities whose origin and effect are from the manifestation of righteousness! Afterwards, antagonism rushed into their minds, and their minds were thoroughly corrupted; and they began to proclaim, the evil spirit hath created it all, the water and earth, plants and animals, all and all! That false speech was spoken through the will of the demons, and the evil spirit possessed himself of his first enjoyment from them; through that false speech they both became wicked, and their souls shall remain in hell (Sheol or Jehenna) until the future existence.

And they had gone thirty days without food, covered with clothing of herbage; and after the thirty days they went forth into the wilderness, came to a white-haired goat and milked the milk from the udder with their mouths. When they had devoured the milk Mashya said unto Mashyoi, My delight was owing to it when I had not devoured the milk, and my delight is more delightful now when it is devoured by my vile body! That second false speech enhanced the power of the demons; and the taste of all food was taken away by them, so that out of a hundred parts one part remained.

In another thirty days and nights, they came to a sheep, fat and white-jawed, and they slaughtered it; and the fire was made by them out of the wood of the date-palm and box-tree, through the guidance of the heavenly archangels, for both woods were most productive of fire for them; and the fire was stimulated by their mouths, and the first fuel kindled by them was dry grass, kendar, lotos, date palm leaves, and myrtle; and they made a roast of the sheep. And they dropped three handfuls of the meat into the fire, and said, This is the share of the fire; one piece they tossed to the sky, saying, This is the share of the angels. A bird, the vulture, advanced and carried some of it away from before them, as a dog ate the first meat.

Then Mashya and Mashyoi covered themselves with a clothing of skins; later, woven garments came into existence, from a cloth woven in the wilderness. And they dug out a pit in the earth, and iron was obtained by them, and beaten out with a stone, and without a forge they beat out a cutting edge from it, that they were able to cut wood with it; and they built themselves a wooden shelter from the sun. Owing to their gracelessness and fallen state, the demons became more oppressive, and they carried on unnatural malice between themselves; they advanced one against the other, smote and tore each other's hair and cheeks. Then demons shouted out of the darkness, saying, You are man, worship the demons, that your demon of malice may repose. So Mashya went forth and milked a cow's milk, and poured it out towards the northern quarter, to do homage unto them. Through this false act the demons became more powerful; and owing to their presence in all their affairs, they both became so dry-backed that in fifty winters they had no desire nor capacity for intercourse, and when they did have intercourse, they would have no children.

On the completion of fifty years the desire was kindled again, when they saw each others secret parts; first in Mashya, then in Mashyoi. And Mashya said to Mashyoi, When I see thy shame my desire ariseth; and Mashyoi replied, When I see thy great desire I am also agitated. Afterwards it became their mutual wish that their desire should be accomplished, as they reflected, saying, Our duty even for those fifty years was this! But never did they fulfill their desire, yet they produced their first offspring in nine months, a pair, a male and a female. And owing to the tenderness for offspring the mother devoured one unto the fulfillment of her selfish appetite, and the father one. Afterwards the All-Wise Lord took tenderness for offspring away from them, so that one may nourish and raise the child, and the child may not remain.

Now returning to the account of Zarathustra of the Spitamas, after attaining thirty years of age Zarathustra, son of Porushaspo and Dukdaub, was ordained into the Holy Order of Zarathustra, the Holy Priesthood of God, which was now 6,030 years old. And on the day he became thirty years of age, the archangel Vohumano, the spirit of goodness, came on in commemoration of the All-Wise Lord, when he was bringing his Haoma-water from the river Aevatak. In the same manner, Zarathustra came forth to the third effluent of the good Daitih (Daitya river); which flowed under the Chinvad Bridge, this Sifting Bridge between heaven and earth; whose peak was in Airyana Vaejah, in the middle of the world. It was under this Chinvad Bridge, which was thrown across from Alburz enclosure back to the Daitih, that the good river flowed. And he passed on to the fourth effluent; and when he continued to march onward from there, a man was seen by him, who marched from the southern quarter. That was Vohumano, and it seemed to him that Vohumano was of earthly form, so that he was more discerning as to a person, and foreseeing; it seemed to him that Vohumano was as much in height as three men's spears; and it seemed to him that a glossy twig was brought by Vohumano in his hand, through carrying of which branch of the plant it was not injured by him. Therefore it became the spiritual twig of the religion of Zarathustra; and it was symbolized by it, that man must proceed uninjuriously in the world, so that peace may exist with every one, a symbol of Spiritual existence in the midst of the worldly. When Zarathustra reached the fourth effluent, as far as the Aushan-rud of the good Daitih (or Daitya); and he was in it to bring the Haoma-water from the middle of it; and on the ascent Zarathustra, bringing his right foot out of Aushan-rud, covered himself with his garments. Upon that Vohumano marched on to join him face to face; and said, Who art thou; from whom of them art thou? He replied, I am Zarathustra of the Spitamas. Then said Vohumano, O Zarathustra of the Spitamas! About what is thy foremost distress; about what is thy foremost endeavor; and for what is the tendency of thy desire? Zarathustra replied, About righteousness, I consider my foremost distress; about righteousness my foremost endeavor; and for righteousness is the tendency of my desire.

Then said Vohumano: O Zarathustra of the Spitamas! That which is righteousness is existing (a real thing, as it were), so that whatsoever is that which is righteousness is thus what is one's own. And Zarathustra replied, That which is righteousness exists, and concerning that I am completely clear and aware, but where and how is that divine radiance which is that whose arrival is through Vohumano.

And Vohumano spoke to him thus, O Zarathustra of the Spitamas! Deposit this one garment which thou carriest, so that we may confer with him by whom thou art produced, and by whom I am produced; who is the most propitious of Spirits, who is the most beneficent of existences; and who is he that I, who am Vohumano, am testifying. Thereupon, Zarathustra thought thus, Good is he who is the Creator, what can be better than this reminder! Then they proceeded in company, Vohumano first and Zarathustra after. And Vohumano directed Zarathustra, saying, Do thou proceed to an assembly of the Spirits! As much as Vohumano walked on in nine steps, Zarathustra did in ninety steps, and when he had gone ninety steps farther than him, he saw the assembly of the seven archangels; he then did not see his own shadow on the ground, due to the great brilliancy of the archangels; the position of the assembly was in Iran, and in the direction of the districts on the bank of the river Daitih (Daitya). Zarathustra offered homage, and spoke thus: Homage to the Lord, the All-Wise One (Ahura Mazda), and homage to the archangels! And he went forward and sat down in the seat of the inquirers. And here he inquired many things of the Wise Lord thus: In the embodied world which is the first of the perfections, which is the second, and which is the third? And the Lord replied, The first perfection is good thoughts, the second good words, and the third good deeds. Then Zarathustra inquired thus: Which of all habits is good, which is better, and which is the best? And the Lord replied, The title of the archangel is good, the sight of them is better, and carrying out their commands is the best of all habits.

Afterwards the All-Wise Lord explained to him the duality of the original creation, the duality of Good and Evil, of God and Satan (Angra Mainyo, or Aharman or Ahriman), of Light and Darkness, of Truth and Falsehood, and of the Druj or the Hypocrite, who is both good and evil by nature. He showed that the wicked desires the practice of that which is iniquitous; and the righteous prefers to practice justice and mercy. Neither the thoughts, words, or deeds, nor desires or spiritual faculties of the two dispositions agree with one another. He who loves light, his place is with the luminaries; and he who loves darkness with the dark ones. At the beginning of life the Holier Mentality said to Opposing or Hostile Mentality, neither our thoughts, doctrines, plans, beliefs, utterances, deeds, personalities, nor souls agree. Therefore those who do not practice the Holy Word, as considered and declared by the Lord, they shall have woe at the end of life. The All-Wise One is the father of the working Good Disposition;and that Love, which produces good deeds, is his daughter; and the all-detecting Lord is not to be deceived. Those who obey the Word, and serve the Lord, shall come up with Health, Immortality, with the deeds of Good Mentality. It is the well-disposed man who holds justice in union with the good political power, through his speech and deeds; it is this well-disposed man, who is the most prospering companion to the Wise Lord.

And it came to pass that as Zarathustra or Zerdusht was yet in embodied existence, dwelling in the midst of the manifold lusts and temptations of the world; that the adversary came forward to tempt him. As he sat by the garment which he deposited, when Vohumano showed him to the assembly of the All-Wise Lord, even the assembly of the seven archangels, a female, golden-bodied and full-bosomed, approached him, and sought his companionship, conversation, and cooperation; and whined, saying, I am Spendarmad (or Spenta-Armaiti, one of the archangels of the Lord). And Zarathustra replied: She who is Spendarmad was fully observed by me in the light of a cloudless day, and that Spendarmad appeared to me fine behind and fine before and fine all around; do thou turn thy back, and I shall know if thou art Spendarmad.

Then the female of the Druj (the liars, tempters, and betrayers; or the demon gods) thus spake: O Zarathustra of the Spitamas! Where we are, those who are females are handsome in front, but frightfully hideous behind; so do not make a demand for my back. After she had protested a third time, she turned her back, and was seen by Zarathustra behind the groin; and when the matter was exuded, it was full of serpents, toads, lizards, centipedes, and frogs. And Zarathustra uttered the sacred prayer (Yatha-ahuvairyo) aloud, and the fiend was annihilated.

It is also written concerning Zarathustra of the Spitamas, that when he dwelt at the abode of Vishtaspa (or Ahasuerus) and chanted revelations, it was manifest to the eye that it was danced to with joyfulness, both by cattle and beasts of burden, and the spirits of the fire which abode at his dwellingplace, by which a great wonder was proclaimed. There seemed a righteous joyfulness of all the cattle, beasts of burden, and the fires of the place; and there seemed a powerfulness of every kind of well-prepared spirits of those quitting the abode, that it will make us henceforth powerful through religion!

In the forty-seventh year of his appointment as the Master of the House, or the Guardian Spirit of the Order, Zarathustra of the Spitamas was taken out of the world; who attained seventy-seven years and forty days in the month of Ardavahisto, on the day Khur. And after eight rectified months, till the month of Dadvo and day Khuz, he was brought forward to be revered and to be paid homage to. Thus Zarathustra of the Spitamas, who was born in 618 B.C., was ordained into the Holy Order in 588 B.C., was elected to the office of the prophet in 587 B.C.; and passed away in 541 B.C. Now, the four sacred songs (hymns) which were written by Zoroaster; and twenty-nine other selections from the Zendavesta and Pahlavi text, are rewritten and added upon in the English language, by the power of the Holy Spirit, and according to the revelations of the Lord God and his Son, and the eternal priesthood after the Order of the Son of God in our day. This selection of Thirty-three Pearls of Great Price is as follows:

The Choice between Right and Wrong
(a hymn of Zarathustra of the Spitamas)

But thus, O souls desirous of hearing, I will utter those things worthy to be remembered by the expert-knower; the praises for the Lord, and hymns worthy of Good Disposition; and things well remembered with the aid of Justice; and the propitious omens beheld through the lights of the stars, or of the altar-flames.

Listen with your ears to the best information; behold with your sight, and with your mind; man by man, each for his own person, distinguishing between both confessions, before this great crisis. Consider again!

At the beginning both these (Holy and Opposing) Mentalities became conscious of each other; the one being a Mentality better in Thought, and Word, and Deed, than the other Mentality which is bad. Now let the righteous discriminate between these two, and choose the benevolent one, not the bad one.

But when the twin-Mentalities came together, they produced the first life; and lifelessness, and settled on the state of the last condition of existence; the worst for the Hypocrites (Drujists), but for the Faithful (Hopeful) not so.

The Hypocrite chose between these twin-Mentalities, the one who perpetrated the worst deeds; but he who was inspired by the most bountiful Mentality, that is clothed upon by the most adamantine stone-quarried heavens as a garment; and he who cheerfully satisfied the Wise Lord with sincere deeds, chose Justice.

The angel-gods (of the world of passion and false beliefs) did not discriminate accurately between these two Mentalities, because just as they were deliberating, there came upon them a delusion so that they should choose the worst Mind; so that, all together, they rushed over to fury, through which they afflict the life of man with disease.

And to this man now sick came the Wise Lord with the Power Realm, with Good Disposition, and with Justice; and Love endowed the sick body of man with firmness and endurance; so that he may become the first of those surviving the tests of passing through the metallic trials, through the retributions.

And thereupon, when the punishments of those malefactors shall occur; then the saved man shall obtain for thee, O Lord, with the help of Good Disposition, the Power Realm, which will be the fulfilment of the world's destiny; and this will be obtained by those who shall deliver the Hypocrite (Druj) into the two hands of Justice.

And may we be those who shall make life progressive or purposeful! Assemble together, along with Justice, O Wise Ones, and come hither so that here where our thoughts formerly developed separately, they may now mature together, fuse, and become Wisdom.

Then shall the success of the Druj break down; and all those who shall be attaining a good renown, shall obtain their reward; meeting at the good dwelling of Good Disposition, Wisdom, and Justice. When, O ye mortals, ye have familiarized yourselves with these commandments of the Lord about the twin-Mentalities; which mean prosperity as opposed to adversity; and the length of suffering of the Drujists, as contrasted with the useful progress of the Hopeful (the Faithful) in the Lord; and ye have fully realized the significance of this contrast, I feel quite sure none of you all will hesitate or delay to enter into the desired abode of praise.

A Prayer for Enlightenment
(a hymn of Zarathustra of the Spitamas)

Minding these your commands, O gods, let us pronounce speeches unheeded by those who would, by the commands of Druj, destroy the substance of Justice; but most acceptable to them who will trust in the Lord.

But since the preferable path is not always obvious; therefore, as heaven appointed arbiter and judge over both parties, will I go to you, that we may live in accordance with Justice.

In order that I may cause all men to choose aright, I pray thee, O All-Wise Lord, with the tongue of thy mouth to tell; what satisfaction, taught through Justice, thou wilt give to both contending parties, through Mentality and fire; what is thy command for the enlightened, that we may understand that command.

And this command is, that as far as Justice and the other Wise Ones are willing to be invoked; through Recompense and Love and the Best Disposition; so far shall I seek for myself the Power of the Realm; by the vigorous increase whereof we may defeat the Hypocrite (the Druj). Tell me, O All-Wise Lord, what is not to occur, and what is to occur; in order that I may distinguish that, whatever success therein you may have given me through Justice, was the better thing; in order that I may understand it through Good Disposition, and may ponder over this so that by understanding it fully I may gather a just reward.

This is the best reward of life; namely, that Realm which the man who receives it may for his own concurrent advantage increase for the Lord, through Good Disposition. May this best reward be granted to him who after having discovered for himself the right solution to these problems that distress me, will discuss with me sincerely; Justice's mystic word, which is the secret of Health and Immortality.

Whether Wisdom was the first one to fill the glories of heaven with the lights of stars; whether Wisdom through understanding created Justice, and whether Justice will maintain the best activity of Good Disposition; whether Wisdom shall cause these to prosper through the holy Mentality, which is ever the same until the present time.

Whereupon, when Zarathustra with his own eye by looking at nature and through his mind by puzzling out its significance, comprehended Wisdom and Disposition; then Zarathustra understood that Wisdom was both the first and youngest of creation and the Father of Good Disposition; the genuine Creator of Justice and the ruling Lord in the deeds of life.

That, O All-Wise Lord, to thee belongs both Love and the shaper of the bovine creation which was part of the understanding of the holy Mentality.

That when for the cow thou didst ordain a path of freedom of will, following which she might repudiate the herdsman, and go to abide with the nomad, then she chose for herself from among the two possible lords, the herdsman or nomad; the herdsman who would follow her, namely the Hopeful, the Faithful (Ashaist), who feels that it is his mission to see to it that all things that belong to Good Disposition prosper; and who in return is prospered by him. Whereas the nomad shall not get a share of Good Disposition's favorable report at the judgment; even though he should urge for it, so long as he will not herd cattle.

That at first thou, O Wise Lord, with thy mind and understanding, didst shape substance and spirits; and didst establish body and life; and deeds and doctrines whereby men who exercised their faculties of choice might develop convictions. Amidst such sublime issues, vulgar men who speak either falsely or justly, the expert-knower or the ignorant; each, according to the fancy of his heart and mind, dares to raise his impudent voice; where Love councils successively with the spirits who yet are wavering.

O Lord, thou with Justice keepest a watch with thy watchful gleaming eyes, over all these men who ask questions openly or furtively; and over all officials who inflict the greatest penance for even a small transgression.

O All-Wise Lord, I ask thee about these conditions, present and future; namely, what compensations will be given to satisfy the claims of the Ashaist; and what compensations shall be enforced from the Drujist. How shall both stand at the time of awarding the compensations?

O Lord, I ask thee what shall be the punishments of those who encourage the dominion of the Drujist; of those who cannot make their living without violence to cattle and to men devoted to herding them.

O Wise Lord, I ask thee whether the well-disposed man may strive to improve the houses, the villages, the clans and the provinces, through Justice; whether he may at all become a being like unto thee; if so, when he shall arise unto this likeness and what deeds he shall do to become such.

Tell me, O Lord, which is the more important object of choice -- that of the Faithful or Hopeful (Ashaist) or that of the Hypocrite (Drujist)? Do thou who art the expert-knower inform me who would become one; and do not permit the ignorant man to continue deluding such as me who would like to learn; O Wise Lord, be thou to us an instructor of Good Disposition!

Therefore O well disposed believer, hearken not to the mystic-words or teachings of any of the Drujists; for these would reduce house, village, clan or province, to misfortune or death; therefore, rather oppose them with the weapon!

But hearken to him who thought out Justice; that is, Zarathustra who is the life healing expert-knower; him who is able to vindicate his tongue's speeches at will, at the latter day; when, O All-Wise Lord, with thy red fire the good compensations of the two contending parties are to be distributed; with thy red fire, produced by the two good rubbing sticks.

Destruction, lasting darkness, bad food, and imprecations shall at the latter day be kept away from whomsoever identifies himself with the Ashaists; beware, O Drujists; it is to that sort of existence that your evil spirit may lead you!

From the resources of his innate glory, the Wise Lord shall grant sustained communion; and fullness of Health, and Immortality, Justice, Power and Good Disposition; to whomsoever is a friend to the Wise Lord in thought, word, and deed!

The man who is well-disposed, understands this as clearly as does Wisdom, that knows with the divine Disposition. It is this well-disposed man who holds Justice in union with the good Political Power, through his speech and deeds. It is this well-disposed man who is the most prospering companion to thee, O All-Wise Lord.

A Prayer for Guidance
(a hymn of Zarathustra of the Spitamas)

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! How should I pray, when I wish to pray to one like you? May one like you, O Lord, who is friendly, teach one like me? And may you give us comfort and guidance, through the friendly Justice, and tell us how you may come to us with Good Disposition?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Whether at the beginning of the best life, the retributions will be of profit to their recipients? And whether he, who is bounteous to all through Justice, and who watches the end through his Mentality, whether he is the life-healing friend of the people?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Who was the first father of Justice by giving birth to him? Who established the sunlit days and the star-glistering sphere and the Milky Way? Who, apart from thee, established the law by which the moon waxes and wanes? These and other things would I like to know.

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Who was from beneath sustaining the earth and the clouds so that they would not fall down? Who made the waters and the plants? Who yoked the two swift ones, thunder and lightning, to the wind and the clouds? Who is the creator of Good Disposition (Good Mind)?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Who produced well-made lights and darkness? Who produced sleep, well-induced through laborious waking? Who produced the dawns and the noon through the contrast with the night; whose daily changes act for the enlightened believers as monitors of their interests?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Is the message I am about to proclaim genuine? Does Love support Justice through deeds? Doest thou with Good Disposition destine the realm for these believers? For whom but these believers didst thou shape the fortune-bringing cattle?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! Who shaped prized Love with Power? Who, by guidance, rendered sons reverent to their fathers? It is I who strive to learn to recognize Thee, through the bounteous Mentality, O giver of all good things!

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! I would like to know what sort of a purpose is thine, that I may be mindful of it; what are thy utterances, about which I asked through the help of Good Dispositon; the proper knowledge of life through Justice; how shall my soul, encouraged by bliss, arrive at that good reward (of the essence)?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! How may I accomplish the sanctification of those spirits; to whom thou, the well-disposed Master of the coming Kingdom, hast pronounced promises about its genuine blessings; promising that those spirits shall dwell in the same dwelling with Justice and Good Disposition?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! How will Love, in deeds, extend over those persons to whom thy Spirit was announced as a doctrine? On account of whom I first was elected, and whom I love; all others I look upon with vexation of soul?

O All-Wise Lord, this I ask of thee; speak to me truly! How shall I carry out the object inspired by you, namely, my attachment to you, in order that my speech may grow mighty; and that by that word of mine, the adherent of Justice, may in the future commune with Health, and Immortality?

Exhortation to the Faithful
(a hymn of Zarathustra of the Spitamas)

Now will I speak out! Listen and hear. You who, from far and near, have come to seek my word; now I exhort you clearly to impress on your memory the evil teacher and his faults; for no longer shall the evil teacher -- Druj that he is -- destroy the second life (second birth or dwija); in the speech of his tongue misleading to the evil life.

Now will I speak out! At the beginning of life the Holier Mentality said to the Opposing Mentality who was more hostile; neither our thoughts, doctrines, plans, beliefs, utterances, deeds, personalities, nor souls agree.

Now will I speak out! Of that which at the beginning of life the knowing Wise Lord said: Those who do not practise the Word, as declared, they shall have woe at the end of life.

Now will I speak out what is the best of life! Through Justice, O Wise Lord, have I discovered thee, who hast created him, that the Wise Lord is the Father of the working Good Disposition; and that Love, which produces good deeds, is his daughter; and that the all-detecting and all-knowing Lord is not to be deceived.

Now will I, the utterer of this Word (which is the best for mortal men to hear) speak out what the most bounteous Wise Lord said unto me: Those who, for the attainment of this mystic manthric Word grant me their obedience, they shall come up with Health, and Immortality; with the deeds of the Good Mentality.

Now will I speak out about the greatest being of all! Through Justice praising the Lord of Wisdom, who blesses all existent beings! Let him hear, through the bounteous Mentality; the fact that I consulted Good Disposition as to how I should adore the Lord. Through the Lord's understanding, may the Good Disposition teach me the best teachings.

Let the preparers for the conversion of the world, both those who were, and those who are yet becoming, seek and hope for the profits of the recompense. The successful soul of the Faithful (Hopeful) abiding in Immortality; with endurance; while the Drujists (Hypocrites) shall endure griefs; and all this the Wise Lord creates through the coming of the Kingdom (of the Seventeenth Good Land or Zion).

Thou shalt seek to win the Lord with praises of reverence, as for instance this psalm: With my own eyes shall I now behold the heaven of the Good Mentality of word and deed; having, through Justice, known the Lord of Wisdom, to whom let us, in heaven, set down adorations for the filling of the paradise Garodman.

Him, the Lord, along with Good Disposition, shalt thou seek to satisfy for us; because it is he who, by his will, makes our fortune or misfortune. May the Lord of Wisdom, through his realm of power, grant the group of herdsmen prospering of our cattle and men; by the proficiency of Good Disposition, through Justice.

How shalt thou, O individual believer, with hymns of Love, magnify him who is reputed to be the All-Wise Lord for eternity; since through Justice and Good Disposition he has promised us that in his realm we shall obtain Health and Immortality; but we shall obtain that his heavenly dwelling through vitality and endurance.

Whoever, therefore, in the future scorns the Daevas (angel-gods of the world of passion and false beliefs); and the men who scorn Zarathustra; and all others -- lukewarm neutrals (except whoever is devoted to Zarathustra), shall be considered (judged) by the bounteous creation of Zarathustra, who is Savior and Master-of-the-house as his friend, brother or father -- O All-Wise Lord!

Fatherhood of God

Yea, I will speak forth! Hear ye, now listen, ye who from near, and from afar have come seeking the knowledge. Now ponder ye clearly all that concerns him. Not for a second time shall the false teacher slay our life of the mind, nor frustrate the joy of the second life (dwija), nor slay our life of the body; for the wicked is hemmed in with his faith and his tongue.

Yea, I will declare the world's Two First Spirits, of whom the more bountiful Lord thus spake to the Harmful One; neither our thoughts, nor commands, nor our understandings, nor our beliefs, nor our deeds, nor our consciences, nor our souls, are at agreement; yea, not one.

Thus I will declare this world's first teaching, that which the All-Wise Lord of Wisdom hath told me: And they among you who will not so fulfill and obey this doctrine as I now conceive and declare it, to these shall the end of life be woe and misery.

Thus will I declare forth this world's Best Being. From the insight of his righteousness the Lord, who hath appointed these things, hath known what he utters to be true. Yea, I will declare him the Father of the toiling Good Mind within us. So is his daughter through good deeds our Piety. Not to be deceived is the all-viewing Lord.

Yea, thus I will declare that which the most bountiful One told me; even the Word which is the best to be heeded by mortals. They who therein grant me obedient attention, upon them cometh weal to bless, and the immortal being; and in the deeds of his Good Mind cometh the Lord.

Aye, thus will I declare forth him who is of all the greatest, praising through my righteousness those who dispose of all as well aright. Let the Wise Lord hear with his bounteous Spirit, in whose homage what I asked was asked with the Good Mind. Aye, let him exhort me through his wisdom which is ever the best.

Yea, I will declare him whose blessings the offerers will seek for; those who are living now, as well as those who have lived aforetime, as will they also who are coming hereafter. Yea, even the souls of the righteous will desire them in the eternal immortality. Those things they will desire which are blessings to the righteous, but woes to the wicked. And these hath the All-Wise Lord established through his kingdom, he, the Creator of all.

Him in our hymns of homage and of praise would I faithfully serve; for now with the eye of mine Soul, I see him clearly, the Lord of the Good Thought, Good Word, and Good Action. I knowing through my righteousness him who is the All-Wise Lord; and to him not here alone, but in his Home of Song, his praise we shall bear.

Yea, him with our better mind we seek to honor, who desiring good, shall come to us to bless in weal and sorrow. May he, the Wise Lord, make us vigorous through Khshathra's (Ruler's) royal power, our flocks and men in thrift to further; from the good support and bearing of his Good Mind, itself born in us by his righteousness.

Him in our piety we seek to praise with homage; who in his persistent energy was famed to be in truth the Lord Ahura Mazda ( ) for he hath appointed in his Kingdom, through his Holy Order (of the Son of God) and his Good Mind, both Weal and Immortality; to grant the eternal mighty pair to this our land and the creation.

Him would we magnify and praise who hath despised the angel-gods of passion and false beliefs (Daevas) and cursed men; them who before held him in their derision. Far different are these from him who gave him honor. This latter one is through the Saoshyant's (Savior's or Messiah's) bounteous faith; who likewise is the Lord of saving power, a friend, brother, or a father to us, the Wise Lord.

And, for the birth of Zarathustra of the Spitamas marks the end of six thousand years of Zarathustra's existence; the three thousand years of purely Spiritual and the three thousand years of Spiritual mixed with the temporal or worldly; and it was the beginning of the worldly state, which is to last until the year 2382 A.D.; the Lord God, the Eternal Father, Elohim, or Zurvan (of Endless Time and Age) now began to be perceived as the Absolute which included in its nature both the Good and the Evil. For he begat two sons, Ahura Mazda (the Wise Lord) the Light and Truth; and Ahriman (Lucifer) the Darkness and Lies. This dualism of two basically opposed forces that are at work in the universe; and that the wicked of the Righteous and the right-minded of the Wicked comprise the middle kingdom of the Druj (or the Hypocrites), is the essence of the religion of Zarathustra.

And when they referred to the forces of good, they used symbols of head, hand, speech, and death; but they referred to a member of the evil forces as skull, claw, howling and destruction. There was no sin greater than to mix good with evil, to say that the good world is created by the Evil Spirit; or the evil works of darkness are created by the Good Spirit. God and evil are opposing powers and forces, not simply the different aspects of the Absolute (Zurvan, the Eternal Father). Evil is not simply the absence of good, it is a real substance and force. Good and evil cannot co-exist, for they are mutually destructive, antagonistic and irreconcilable.

It is said that by the time of the Hakhamanish empire of Persia, the Lord God the Father (Zurvan), the ultimate source of both good and evil, the Father of the brethren Ahura Mazda and Ahriman, contained within himself the polarity and essence of good and evil. Before the creation of the first Lord Meshiahh (Messiah) or the Savior, the Lord God the Father (Zurvan) existed alone; in pure worship, contemplation and devotion. But wanting a son he offered sacrifices in righteousness for a thousand years to know the way of achieving this end. He did not offer sacrifices unto any God, for he was the highest; but because the offering of sacrifice has merit and power in and of itself. After a thousand years of focus of all the archangels of the Kingdom on finding the way of producing a divine son failed, they all gave up. At the selfsame moment twins were conceived within himself; for Zurvan the Eternal Father, being undifferentiated one. Of the twins, Ahura Mazda the Lord Meshiahh (Messiah) was the fulfillment of his wishes; and Ahriman the personification of his doubt.

Then Zurvan, the Eternal Father, vowed to bestow the gift of kingship upon whosoever son emerged from the womb (of the priesthood) first. Ahura Mazda, possessed with all divine attributes, was aware of this; and he informed his brother. Whereupon Ahriman ripped open the womb, and presented himself to the Father, declaring, I am your son the Wise Lord (or Ahura Mazda)! And the Father replied: My son is light and fragrant, but thou art dark and stinking. Then Ahriman wept bitterly; for his works were wicked and evil, and there is no joy or peace in wickedness; but woe and misery. Moreover Ahriman had no faith and hope in the power of God; who is capable of removing all afflictions, even unto the resurrection of the dead, in a twinkling of an eye.

When the Wise Lord appeared, Zurvan recognized him immediately, as the fulfillment of his wishes; and offered him the barsom twigs, the symbol of the Priesthood (the Order of Zarathustra). Then he gave Ahriman the rule of the world for a period of nine thousand years, and to the Wise Lord he granted the rule of heaven and earth, so he created the heavens and the earth. Now, although the Wise Lord had all power to know the works of his brother, Ahriman, his brother had no knowledge or inclination to know the hidden or Spiritual matters of the Kingdom.

The Lord is all good; and being fundamentally opposed to evil he can not be mixed with the evil. The Lord is the source of all that is good, the Creator of heavens and the material world; the source of life, health, beauty, joy, compassion, peace, and all that is good. But the Wicked One is all bad; seeking to destroy, corrupt, tempt, and defile. His works are death, disease, misery and sin; and with them he seeks to annihilate God's works. The world is created by the Lord as the battle ground between good and evil; and when not corrupted by evil, it displays the characteristics of its Creator, even the characteristics of order and harmony. Therefore, to deny the essential goodness of the material world is a grave sin. For the Lord does not seek the final subjugation of the body or matter, but seeks the ideal union of matter and spirit; he seeks not the end of the world, but its renovation.

In the beginning, between the Wise Lord dwelling on high in the endless light, and Ahriman in the depths of darkness below, was the great void of the Druj; that separated the two forces of good and evil. The Druj being those that are fallen from their righteous existence; and those of the world, or the cursed, that seek degrees of righteousness; these are the hypocrites, the double-minded, who are driven in their ignorance by the lusts and imaginations of their heart. The power of each, therefore, is limited and separate, because of this void. And while Ahura Mazda is eternal and Immortal, and represents Good and Light; Ahriman is temporal, and dwells in the ever-changing world of mortality, of names and forms, of feelings, sensations and ideas, and represents Evil or Wickedness and Darkness, the Void, consisting of the Druj, which separates the two. Ahriman, ever ignorant and wicked, was not aware of the Wise Lord's existence. But as soon as he saw the Wise Lord and the light, his destructive nature (which included jealousy, arrogance, lethargy, and wrong-mindedness) prompted him to attack and destroy.

Thereupon the Wise Lord offered him peace if he would only praise the Good Creation. But Ahriman, judging others by himself, rejected the offer, thinking that an offer of peace would make him weak; and sought to destroy the Lord and all his creation, not knowing that the eyes and ears of the Lord and the Order are upon him forever and ever. The Wise Lord knew that if the battle was to continue forever, as the Wicked One had intended, he would operate quietly and diligently to see the end of all that is good and of God; and would attack when least expected. Therefore, the Wise Lord suggested to fix a period for battle. And Ahriman being deluded and slow-witted agreed, and was subdued and defeated.

Now Ahriman, who was anciently called Angra Mainyu, is the demon of demons, that dwells in the endless darkness. His aim is the ruin and destruction of the world; his dwelling is in the worst thoughts of wickedness; and Ignorance, Harmfulness, and Disorder are his characteristics alone.

He can change his outward form, and appear as a lizard, a snake, a youth, a beautiful maiden. His aim is always to destroy the creation of the Wise Lord; and to this end he follows behind the Creator's work, seeking to spoil it. As the Lord creates life, Ahriman creates death; for health he produces disease; for beauty, ugliness; all man's ills are due altogether to Ahriman. Moreover as the Lord is of substance, and truth, he is shallow and deceitful. It is for this reason, the material world is not the creation of Ahriman nor has it ever been; for he has no substance but merely a shadow of the substance, devoid of capacity or authority to do otherwise. Therefore, he dwells as a parasite in the bodies of men and animals. It is for this reason it is said, the Evil Spirits can possess no material substance, meaning they cannot be given a true material existence.

And it came to pass, that the Wise Lord, knowing Ahriman would never change his destructive nature, began to create Spiritual sons and daughters. First he created the Immortals, the Amesha-Spentas, then the worshipful ones or the Archangels (Yazatas); and then he began the creation of the material world. First the sky (heaven), then water, earth, tree, animal; and last of all, man of the earth. And all his creations are independent of Ahriman; for the Wise Lord, unlike Ahriman, does not contemplate anything which he cannot achieve. All creatures belong to the kingdom of the Lord; who is said to be both mother and father to creation: as mother he conceives the Spiritual world, and as father he brings forth in its material form. Ahriman in turn creates (or miscreates) his own offspring in his wickedness and ignorance, giving rise to all that is vile and detestable, to disease, death, corruption; to wolves, frogs, serpents, scorpions, whirlwinds, sandstorms, too numerous to mention.

Now, the sky which was created by the All-Wise Lord, is not only a shell enclosing the world, but it is also a prison into which Ahriman is snared. And it came to pass that after he had fallen unconscious in his lethargy and wickedness, the demons tried to arouse him as to how they would assault creation and inflict upon it anguish and misery; but he would not hearken. Then they brought the wicked Jahi, the great whore, the personification of female impurity; and she vowed to afflict the priest and the ruler, so much so that life would not seem worth living; and she vowed to attack the water, earth, tree, and fire, even the whole creation. And the plan was conceived to deceive all, beginning at the very early years of the infant, through the ministering arch-demons of Ahriman, or Angra Mainyu.

And this Jahi the great whore was revived; and in return the Wicked One granted her wish that men should desire her, and burn in the fire of desire and lust, as she was. Then arose Ahriman to attack the world, and to corrupt and destroy them, and to take them captive in their lusts and desires, and rebellion against God. And he broke through the sky which was afraid of him, as the sheep is of a wolf. Passing through the barriers (waters) he entered the middle earth, and began his assault on the material creation of the Lord. And this earth became so dark that at noon it seemed like dark night. Horrible creatures were released over the face of the earth, and their pollution spread so rapidly and so widely, that not even as much as the point of a needle was free from their contamination, it is written. Then they turned to the royalty and the priesthood; and Ahriman afflicted them with Desire and Covetousness, Lust and Cravings, Needfulness, Disease, Hunger, Illness, Vice and Lethargy.

Before the Evil Spirit came to the rulers and the counsellors and the kings, the Wise Lord gave them cannibus the herb to ease their discomfort, but after the merit ran out they all died by the snares of Jahi the whore, and the Wicked One. Everything was destroyed, smoke and darkness were mingled with fire, and this whole creation was destroyed; for its appointed time had come, and the parasites were and are used for this purpose. For ninety days the archangels contested with the demons in the material world. Every archangel had an opposing arch-demon; every good thing was attacked by its counterpart: Truth by Falsehood; Holy Word by Sorcery and Witchcraft; Temperance by Excess and Deficiency; Diligence by Idleness; Light by Darkness, Mercy by Haughtiness.

The assault of Ahriman was now altogether successful, and the good creation of the Lord was destroyed. Chaos and disorder appeared to have won victory over the peaceful and righteous Kingdom of the Lord; and the handiwork of the All-Wise Lord seemed a failure. Yet despite all this, it was by no means the end of the eternal Kingdom of God. Ahriman, after the taste of his apparent victory, sought to return to his natural abode of darkness; but found his way blocked by both the Spirit of the Sky, clad in armour resembling the warrior's, and by the Soul or Higher Self (Fravashi) of men. And the host of the righteous Fravashis, elected of their own free will to assist the Wise Lord in his battle, stood arrayed as valiant men with spears in hand; preventing Ahriman from escaping from the prison into which he had burst. And once again Ahriman was revived, although imprisoned in a hostile world.

The Earth (or the Earthly)

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the first place where the earth feels most happy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place whereon one of the Faithful steps forward, O Spitama Zarathustra! with the log in his hand, the Baresma in his hand, the milk in his hand, the mortar in his hand, lifting up his voice in good accord with religion, and beseeching Mithra, the lord of the rolling countryside, and Rama Hvastra.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the second place where the earth feels most happy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place whereon one of the Faithful erects a house with a priest within, with cattle, with a wife, with children, and good herds within. And wherein afterwards the cattle continue to thrive, virtue to thrive, fodder to thrive, the dog to thrive, the wife to thrive, the child to thrive, the fire to thrive, and every blessing of life to thrive.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the third place where the earth feels most happy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place where one of the faithful sows most food, vegetable and fruit, O Spitama Zarathustra! Where he waters ground that is dry, or drains ground that is too wet.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the fourth place where the earth feels most happy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place where there is most increase of flocks and herds.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the fifth place where the earth feels most happy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place where flocks and herds yield most dung.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the first place where the earth feels sorest grief?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the neck (yoke) of Arezura, whereon the hosts of fiends rush forth from the burrow of the Druj (the Hypocrite).

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the second place where the earth feels sorest grief?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place wherein most corpses of dogs and of men lie buried.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the third place where the earth feels sorest grief?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place whereon stand most of those Dakhmas on which the corpses of men are deposited.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Which is the fourth place where the earth feels sorest grief?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is the place whereon the wife and children of one of the Faithful, O Spitama Zarathustra! are driven along the way of captivity, the dry, the dusty way, and lift up a voice of wailing.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Who is the first that rejoices the earth with greatest joy?

The All-Wise Lord answered; It is he who digs out of it most corpses of dogs and men.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Who is the second that rejoices the earth with greatest joy?

The All-Wise Lord answered: It is he who pulls down most of those Dakhmas on which the corpses of men are deposited. Let no man alone by himself carry a corpse. If a man alone by himself carry a corpse, the Nasu rushes upon him. This Druj Nasu falls upon and stains him, even to the end of the nails; and he remains unclean, thenceforth, for ever and ever.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! What shall be the place of that man who has carried a corpse alone.

The All-Wise Lord answered: It shall be the place on this earth wherein is least water and fewest plants; whereof the ground is the barrenest and the driest and the least passed through by flocks and herds; by the fire of the All-Wise Lord, the consecrated bundles of Baresma, and by the Faithful.

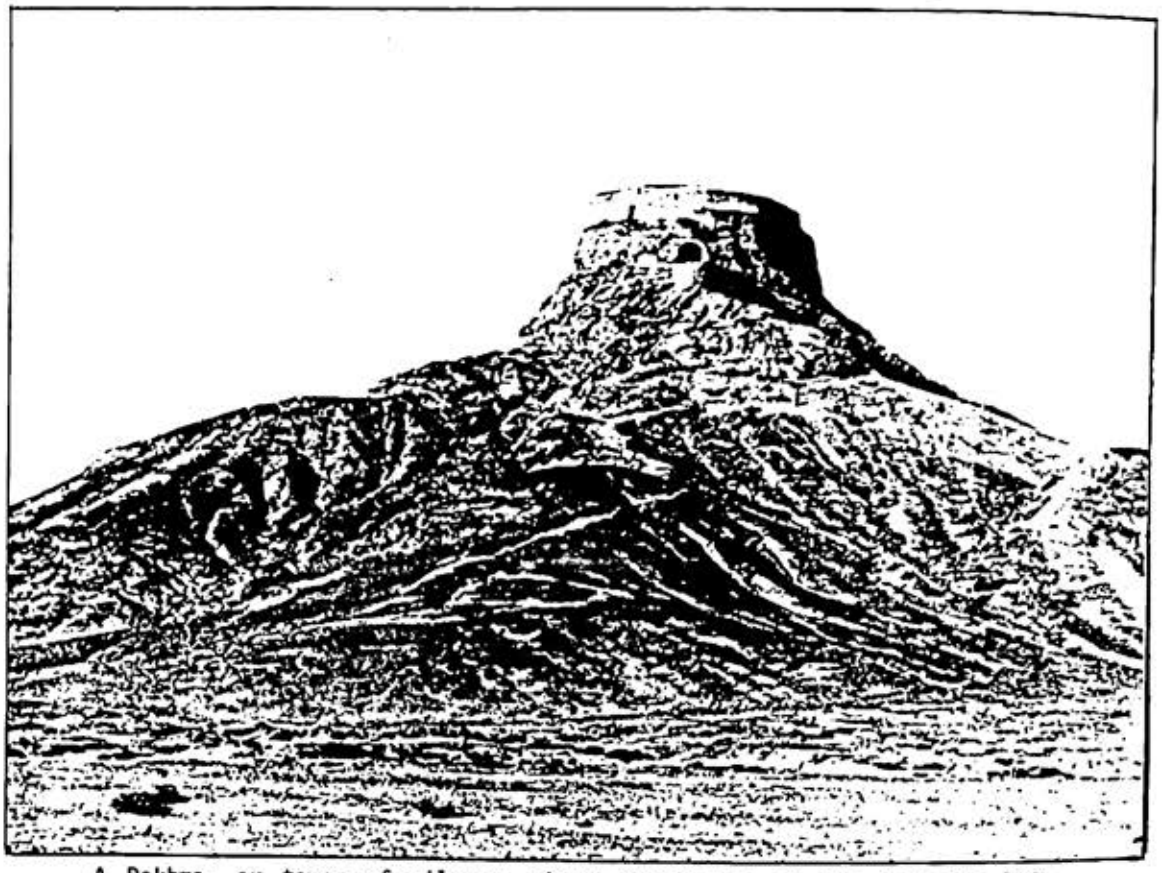
Funerals and Purifications
(including Rituals and Ceremonies)

If a dog or a man of the world die under a hut of wood or a hut of felt, what should the worshipper of the Lord do; asked Zarathustra?

The Wise Lord answered: They shall search for a Dakhma (a tower of silence, high up on a hillside; where dead bodies are exposed to vultures and dogs; so that their death corrupt and defile not the sacred elements of earth, fire and water); they shall look for a Dakhma all around. If the corpse can be removed, they shall remove it from the house, and perfume the house with Urvasna or Vohu-gaona, or Vohu-kereti, or Hadha-naepata, or any other sweet smelling plant. And if they find it easier to remove the house, they shall remove the house, and let the dead lie on the spot; and shall purify the house with sweet-smelling plant.



A Dakhma, or tower of silence; where the bodies of the dead are left to be devoured by the vultures, and also by corpse-eating dogs; that the dead may not defile the sacred elements of earth, fire or water.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! If in the house of a worshipper of the Lord a dog or such a man happens to die; and it is raining, or snowing, or blowing; or it is the day at its end, and in darkness flocks and men might lose their way, what shall the worshipper of the Lord do?

The Wise Lord answered: The place in that house where the ground is cleanest and driest, and least passed through by the flocks and herds, and by the fire of the Wise Lord, by the consecrated bundles of Baresma, and by the faithful -- thirty paces from the fire; thirty paces from the water; thirty paces from the consecrated Baresma; three paces from the faithful -- on that place they shall dig a grave, half a foot deep if the earth be hard, half the height of a man if it be soft; they shall cover the surface of the grave with ashes or cow-dung; they shall cover the surface with dry earth, with dust of bricks, or of stones. And they shall let the corpse lie there, for two nights or three, or a month, until the birds begin to fly, plants begin to grow, hidden floods to flow, and the wind dries up the ground; then the worshipper of the Lord shall make a breach in the wall of the grave; and two men strong and skillful, having stripped their clothes off, shall take up the decomposed and lifeless body; and they shall lay it down on a place where they know there are always corpse-eating dogs and corpse-eating birds. Afterwards the corpse-bearers shall sit down, three paces from the dead, and holy Ratu shall proclaim to the worshippers of the Lord thus: O worshippers of the Wise Lord, let the urine be brought here to the corpse-bearers, that they might wash their hair and their bodies. And the corpse-bearers shall wash their hair and their bodies with the urine of sheep or cow; not of man or woman, except a man or woman who has married the next-of-kin; these shall therefore procure the urine for the washing of the corpse-bearers.

Spiritual death is the work of the devil; it is his triumph over the good creation of the Lord. A dead body therefore is the abode of the demons. The more righteous the dead, the greater the triumph of Ahriman, and his demons in subduing him. Therefore the corpse of a holy man is a far greater source of defilement, than that of a wicked man, whose death was achieved without a challenge. Many of the funerary rites of the faithful, in the religion of Zarathustra, are prescribed for purifications from contamination, which is the work of demons. Since a corpse is a source of defilement, it is not allowed to be buried for fear of contaminating of the sacred element earth; nor could it be burned for fear of defiling the fire, although the modern method of cremation does not utilize an actual flame, but the intense heat of electricity to consume the body. And, wherever possible, bodies are exposed in the dakhmas, or towers of silence, for vultures, or corpse-eating dogs to consume.

It is believed that the soul in the first three days after death determines the rites to be performed. For it is Sraosha who protects the soul during this time; prayers are offered to him during the five divisions of the day, by two or more priests, and by the relatives both at home and in the fire temple (Atish-gadeh). The most important of these prayers is offered on the third day, when the soul passes to its judgement. Then the blessing of the Almighty is sought; and rituals and ceremonies are performed as offerings to angels assigned for the judgement.

Mourning usually ceases after three days; for excessive mourning is a sin, and is of no help to the soul; it can harm the body. And it is least needed, because of the belief in life after death, and assurance of the resurrection. Communion with the dead is an important part of the ritual; for they are invited to share in the feastings of the living, in a joyous companionship, for the rejoicing of the soul. It is believed that the sorrow of death is turned around, when each feast day is celebrated with an accompanying ritual for the dead; that the dead may share in the happiness.

Besides the funerary rituals, there were two other important rituals; namely, the fire ritual, and the ritual offering of Haoma (a variety of Ephedra plant).

Most of the fire temples of Persia during Sasanian times were simple in construction and design, mere domes upon font-pillar-like walls (the chahar taq); but others were, as in Egypt, quite impressive in size and beauty. An endowment of a fire temple was considered a pious act, and many were named after their donors. The rituals and practices of the religion became canonized, during the Sasanian period; and the state church developed a network of fire temples, which was a hierarchial arrangement like of the church or of the state officials. Each king had his royal fire; and there were at least three great fires corresponding to three original classes or castes of society; namely, the Farnbag fire for the priest; the Gushnasp fire for the rulers and warriors; and Burzen-Mihr fire for merchants and farmers, and also for common folk.

The Farnbag fire was situated in Kanya, Persia, and also in Kabul in modern Afghanistan; the Gushnasp fire in Shiz; and Burzen-Mihr fire was situated on Mount Revand in the northwest of Nishapur. All three fires were carried on the back of the mythical ox, Srishok, during the reign of Tahoomers or Takhmoruw (1510 - 1480 B.C.). It is written that one night there was a great storm and the fires were blown off the ox's back into the sea, where they continued to burn, and give light to men at sea.

All three fires helped Yima or Jamshid in his kingdom; but it was the Farnbag fire which Yima did install in its proper place. When his glory fell, it was this fire which saved his glory from Azi Dahak (Ad-Zahhak, or Zohak). The Burzen-Mihr fire protected the world until the time of Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus (612 - 522 B.C.) preparing the way for the great Hakhamanish empire of Persia. The Gushnasp fire is said to have preserved the world until the time of the great Sasanian king, Khosrau. When he destroyed the idol temples the fire settled on his horse's mane, dispelling darkness and gloom. Thus these three fires served as guides and protectors of the faithful throughout the history of the Aryan people.

There are three classes of ritual fires, namely, Bahram fires, Adaran fires, and Dadgah fires. The Bahran is the victorious king of fires; it is invoked, in the name of the Wise Lord (𐬀𐬵𐬭), to give strength against the forces of darkness; for its glory does battle with the Lie, standing as a symbol of righteousness. The fire is enthroned rather than installed, and the wood is set out in the pattern of a throne; over it hangs a crown to symbolize its sovereignty. When it is enthroned, it is carried like a king by four priests in procession, while others hold a canopy over it. Before and behind proceed priests with swords and maces of Mithra, all forming a royal bodyguard. Once enthroned it can only be tended by the priests who have undergone the most rigorous purification rites. No one but they can enter the sanctuary, and must tend to it with white-gloved hands. A total of sixteen fires are gathered from different sources, and then purified a total of 1,128 times, a process which takes about a year. And for the cost is enormous, such a fire is rarely enthroned.

Moreover, Varahran or Bahram fires were most widespread and the backbone of the fire systems; they were more or less provincial fires. Below them were fires in every city, then in the village, and then in the home. There was a prescribed ritual of renewing the home fire from the city fire, and the city fire from the Varahram or Bahram fires at certain times. And these sacred fires represented the Spiritual rule of light and truth, in the war against the powers of darkness; a battle which the faithful had to fight together with the Wise Lord, and his son, Fire.

A fire priest standing before the sacred flame in a fire temple; his mouth is covered so that he may not defile the fire with his breath.

They believed that fires of all classes served as a reminder to men that they must be consumed in the manner of fire; and they were reminded that as the wood is gathered from all different grades of society, so all men are equal before God, regardless of their social standing; as long as they pass through the process of purification. When a fire worshipper approached the fire, he marked his forehead with some ash to remind him that he, like the fire, will eventually be consumed. And the following prayer is used by some of the faithful:

Let me do my best, O Lord, to kindle and spread like unto this fire, before my death, the essence of faith, hope, and charity; of good thoughts, good words, and good deeds, always. And grant us, O Lord, a life of righteousness; of truth, light, and perfection; of love and goodwill, compassion and joy; of peace, safety, and salvation; under thy eternal grace and mercy. Amen, O All-Wise Lord. Amen.

Now, the ritual offering of Haoma was not to be seen by the unbelievers, as also they were not to see the fire rituals. In Persia, for the offering the priest sits crossed-legged; the haoma plant is pounded, and the juice is pressed through a filter made from the hair of a sacred bull, to be mixed with consecrated water. The long and complicated ritual includes symbolic acts; the haoma was pounded four times to symbolize the coming of Zarathustra and his three sons, the saviors, the anointed ones. The consecrated water was poured out three times, to symbolize the three processes of rain; evaporation, the formation of clouds, and condensation as rain. During the ritual the metal mortar was struck three times to symbolize the presence of good thoughts, good words, and good deeds. Although the liturgy is recited in the present day, in the archaic language of the Avesta, which few understand, the emphasis is on mind, that the source of every action must be kept pure.

But in ancient India, passion was mixed with virtue, and the ritual was considered the great fertilizing, or the life-giving process of nature. Therefore, to them the sieve through which the juice of the plant was strained represented the sky; the juice pouring into the water and milk represented the sun; and its golden color represented the lightning, and the noise of the process the thunder. Moreover, it represented many other things, to other participants. But all must face the same consequence of the passing pleasures of the feelings and sensations, which is mortality and Spiritual death. And it was to somehow come out of this endless misery, that the ritual for the dead was prescribed after each festive celebration. Thus the cycle of pleasure and pain, rebirth and mortality continues forever and ever, until the savior comes.

The act of sacrifice, or observance of the prescribed rituals, has a power in and of itself. Rituals act as an effective source of power to both men and gods. Therefore a sacrifice offered with right motive and attitude, with right devotion, is the most meritorious act that a true believer in the Eternal Father and his Son can perform. For we know that even the Lord God (Zurvan) the Eternal Father, wanting a son, offered sacrifice; although there was no one to whom he could present the offering, he being the Absolute. We also know that Adam's oldest son Cain presented the offering of the firstfruits of the earth, and his younger son Abel the firstlings of his flock. But the motives and attitude of the two brothers were different, for the Lord approved Abel's offering, but looked with disfavor on Cain; for no one can mock God, and his angels that are assigned to keep accurate record of each man's deeds, words, thoughts and intentions.

When Noah and his family came out of the ark, he offered a thanksgiving offering to the Lord; after which the Lord made the covenant with him and his seed; and set the rainbow as a token of the covenant, to remember the everlasting covenant. For when Noah builded an altar, and took clean beasts and fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar; the Lord smelled the sweet aroma, and it pleased him to forgive man for the foolishness of his heart and imagination.

And in the time of Moses the burnt offerings were presented in their entirety to God; no part of the animal being retained by the worshipper. They constituted an appeal to the Lord to accept, or to signify acceptance of the sin offering that sometimes accompanied them. The burnt offerings were offered every morning and evening; every Sabbath day; the first day of the month, Passover and seven days of unfermented cakes (Nisan 14-21); on the Day of Atonement (Tishri 10); Pentecost or Festival of Weeks or Harvest (which was celebrated on the fiftieth day from Nisan 16, on Sivan 6). Also at consecration of priesthood of the Al-Levi (Levites), in making covenants; with communion offerings, and certain guilt offerings; in performing vows; and in connection with purifications, the burnt offerings were presented under the law of Moses.

Moreover the bull, ram, male goat, and male pigeon were offered for burnt offerings. The offerer laid his hand on the animal's head, acknowledging him as the offerer; and the animal was slaughtered; the blood was sprinkled around about upon the altar of burnt offering. Then the animal was skinned and cut up into its parts; its intestine and shanks were washed; the head and other body parts, excluding offal, were put on the altar. If it was a bird, the crop and features were removed, and the head and body were burned on the altar.

Besides the burnt offerings, the worshipper, under the law of Moses, offered peace or communion offerings. The worshipper and his household partook in the courtyard of the tabernacle, where booths were set up around the inside of the curtain surrounding the courtyard; and when the temple was built in Jerusalem, dining rooms were provided for this purpose. The officiating priest received a portion, and the priest on duty, another portion. And all that which the Lord received was the pleasing smoke of the burning fat. Thus the worshipper, the priest, and the Lord, as it were, were at one with each other, signifying the communion or peace. The blood, representing the life, was given to God as his. But the person that partook in a state of uncleanness, as mentioned in the law of Moses, or who ate the flesh after it had been kept beyond the prescribed time, was to be cut off from the Lord's people; for his motives and attitudes were at variance with the covenant into which he or she was entered.

The thanksgiving offering was also a part of the communion or peace offerings. But while in the communion offerings flesh could be eaten the second day, in thanksgiving offering, the voluntary offering was to be eaten the same day. The communion or peace offerings were used by the Israelites, while making covenants, during festive seasons, beginning of months, and other occasions. The purpose of these offerings was to gain God's approval, and to entreat and supplicate the Lord in times of misfortune. Either male or female cattle, sheep, or goats were used; but no birds were accepted, for they were not deemed sufficient to constitute a sacrificial meal. In the communion offerings, as in the burnt offering, the offerer laid his hand on the animal's head; the animal was slaughtered; the priest sprinkled its blood round about upon the altar of burnt offering. The fat, including the fat tail, was burnt upon the altar; the breast went to the Aaronic priests, the leg to the officiating priest (of the Aaronic order).

Besides these there were sin offerings, guilt offerings, grain offerings, drink offerings, wave offerings, sacred portions or heave offerings, which have been discussed previously, in the text dealing with Moses and Aaron. In the same manner in the religion of Zarathustra, of the Order of the Son of God, an act of sacrifice, or the right performance of a ritual has a great value and power in and of itself. For they are sources of hidden power beyond the comprehension of human faculty; for the consequences which follow, no man can ever feel, know or understand. Without sacrifice and offerings the world cannot prevail; and by it the power of the Wicked One, or Ahriman, is reduced. Therefore a sacrifice offered with devotion is a highly meritorious act in religion. It is written that at the intervals of renovation of the world, and at the time of the renovation, at the Third Separation in 2382 A.D., men will be made Immortal through a sacrifice offered by the Wise Lord himself. Properly performed rituals and ceremonies carry within them their own power, independent of the will of gods, for each word and action is imbued with highest power of great significance.

One manifestation of the ceremonial or ritualistic, can be seen in the Kushti, a thread made up of seventy-two threads which symbolized the seventy-two chapters of the Yasna. At the end were three tassels, each composed of twenty-four threads, symbolizing twenty-four sections of the liturgical prayer, Visparat. The seventy-two threads were woven into six strands, each strand symbolizing the six religious duties of the Zoroastrian. The twelve threads in each strand symbolized the months of the year; the six tassels the great festivals. The hollow inside the thread symbolized the space between this world and the next. The doubling of the thread in the beginning symbolized the link between the present temporal world and the future Spiritual world. The turning of the Kushti inside out during prayer signified the passage of the soul from the temporal to the Spiritual world. And the final knotting of all the threads into one signified the universal brotherhood or union of the believers, or the faithful.

In the same manner did the ancient Aryans of Ind (India) in their great rite of Upanayana, the second birth; a boy became a full member of one of the three classes of society, namely, those of the priests (brahmans), rulers and warriors (kshatriyas); or merchants and farmers (vaishyas). The servants or shudras and other lower orders could not undergo the ceremony. The ideal age for the ceremony varied, eight years for a brahman, eleven for kshatriya, and twelve for vaishyas. The kernel of the ceremony was the investing of the boy, clad in the garments of an ascetic and a staff in his hand, with the sacred thread called Yajnyopavita; which was hung over his right shoulder, and under his left arm; which he was expected to wear continuously from that day forward. It was a cord of three threads, each of nine twisted strands, made of cotton for the brahmans, hemp for the kshatriyas, and wool for vaishyas. It had great significance, for its removal or defilement caused its owner great sorrow and guilt, which could only be expunged by rigorous penance.

This Indian ceremony also included the whispering of the Gayatri in the ear of the initiate by the officiating priest (brahman). This verse of a sacred hymn, addressed to the ancient solar god Savitr, is even to this day looked upon as the most holy passage of the holy scriptures (Rig Veda). It is repeated in all religious rites and ceremonies:

> Tat Savitur vareniam; bhargo devasya dhimahi; dhiyo yo nah pracodayat. (Let us think on the lovely splendour of the lord Savitr, that he may inspire our minds.)

For, as the Aryan of India was divided into four castes of the priests, rulers and warriors, merchants and farmers, and servants and slaves; so was the life of the individual divided into four stages: on his investiture with the sacred thread, he put his childhood behind him, and became a brahmacarin, leading a celibate and austere life as a student at the home of his teacher. Next, having learned the Scriptures or part of them, he returned to his parental home, was married, and became a householder (grhastha). When well-advanced in middle age, after having seen his children's children; and thus establishing his line, he left his home for the forest to become a hermit (vanaprastha). By meditation and penance, he would free his soul from the bondage of material things; until at last, a very old man, he would leave his hermitage, and become a homeless wanderer (sannyasin), with all his earthly ties broken. But not all went through these stages of life, albeit it represented their ideal existence, which was not so ideal in general terms.

In the distant past the people now inhabiting India, Persia, and Europe were all part of one group of people, now called Indo-Europeans. The Aryans, the descendants of Japheth son of Noah, the brother of Shem, (and Ham also), migrated southeast, and in the second and first millennium B.C. invaded Persia and also India. They were not organized armies, but small tribal groups settling themselves whithersoever their needs, wants, desires, and circumstances would lead them. After many centuries they became so numerous that the Lord kept on finding new lands, as in the past, according to his tender mercies toward all mankind. Those Indo-Europeans that settled themselves in Persia and India preserved their ancient hymns. The Hindus called their collection, the Rig Veda; and to the Persians they were known as Yashts.

The Sixteen Perfect Lands (or Zions)

The All-Wise Lord spake unto Spitama Zarathustra, saying: I have made every land dear to its people, even though it had no charms whatsoever in it. Had I not done so, the whole living world would have invaded the Airyana Vaejah (the first good land, or Zion; the first community of the vehicle of the Lord). Yea, this was the first of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, had created, after the great flood (of 2370 B.C.), by the Vanguhi Daitya (Daitih), over which spans the Chinvad bridge.

Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the serpent in the river, and harsh winters, a work of the Daevas (demon-gods). There are ten winter months there, two summer months; waters, earth, and trees become cold and frozen. The winter which falls there, is the worst of all plagues.

The second of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created was the plain which the Sughdhas inhabit. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the locust, which brings death to cattle and plants.

The third of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created was the strong and holy Mouru on the edge of the desert. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated plunder and sin.

The fourth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the beautiful Bakhdhi with high-lifted banners. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the ants and the ant-hills.

The fifth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was Nisaya, that lies between Mouru and Bakhdhi. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the sin of unbelief.

The sixth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the house-deserting Haroyu. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated crying, moaning and wailing.

The seventh of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was Vaekereta, of the evil shadows. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated Pairika Knathaiti, who clave unto Keresaspa.

The eighth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was Urva of the rich pastures. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the sin of pride.

The ninth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was Khnenta, which the Vehrkanas inhabit. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated a sin for which there is no atonement, the unnatural sin of false belief and pretensions.

The tenth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the beautiful Harahvaiti. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated a sin for which there is no atonement, the burning of the dead in the world.

The eleventh of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the bright and glorious Haetumant. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the evil work of witchcraft. And this is the sign by which it is known, this is that by which it is seen at once; wheresoever they may go and raise a cry of sorcery, there the worst works of witchcraft go forth. From there they come to kill and strike at heart, and they bring disease and misery and woe to as many as they desire and lust after.

The twelfth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was Ragha, of the three races. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated the sin of utter unbelief.

The thirteenth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the strong and holy Kakhra. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated a sin for which there is no atonement, the cooking of corpses.

The fourteenth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created was the four-cornered Varena, for which was born Thraetaona (Faridun) who smote Azi Dahaka (Ad-Zahhak, or Zohak). Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated abnormal issues in women, and barbarian oppression.

The fifteenth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the Seven Rivers. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated abnormal issues in women and excessive heat.

The sixteenth of the good lands and countries which I, the Lord, created, was the land by the sources of the Rangha, where people dwell without chiefs. Thereupon came Angra Mainyu, who is all death, and he countercreated harsh winters, a work of the Daevas (demon-gods).

There are still other lands and countries, beautiful and deep, longing and asking for the good and the bright, of the faithful.

The First Man
(or the first creation of the Eternal Father)

The Lord God, Zurvan the Eternal Father, the ruler of all, produced from the endless light in the shape of a fire priest, whose name was that of the All-Wise Lord. And its brilliance was that of fire; its incombustibility was like that inside of light; and its expansion was endless. In the shape of a fire priest was created by him the material existence that is called man; and for three thousand years he did not progress and did not eat, and did not speak; nor did he utter, but thought of the righteousness of the perfect and true religion; and desired the pure glorification of his Creator. Afterwards, the Wicked One injured the life of it, and produced burdensome morality; and the morality is clear from merely being called by a name. As a result the nature of Gayomard, of double-mindedness and false belief, was produced. The seed which was the essence of the life of the leader of passions of life, even Gayomard, flowed forth from one generation to the next upon his passing away; and came on to the earth of the beneficent angel; and the seed was preserved in the earth, until through the protection of the angels, a brother and sister of mankind were created; and they were connected and brought up together. And after they had established themselves upon the earth, through intercourse offspring were brought forth. And it is said, from the ground where the life of Gayomard departed, gold rushed forth; and from other lands, where the dissolution of his various members occurred, many kinds of precious metals rushed forth.

Now, the Holy Order of Zarathustra began in 6618 B.C.; which after Adam's time came to be known as the Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God; which later came to be known as the Melchizedek priesthood; in the time of Shem, or Melchizedek (Malek-us-sadek), prince of truth and righteousness. In the shape of a fire priest was created by the Lord God the Father, the first Messiah or Meshiahh, the Savior or Saoshyant, the Most High God. From the endless light created he him. Before the creation, the Lord Messiah or Jehoshuah (Jesus), was not ruler; but through the grace and mercy of the Father he became ruler, patron, benefactor, wise, free from suffering, manifest, all-caring, all-seeing, and eternal.

And it came to pass, that the prophet of the Lord, Zarathustra of the Spitamas, asked the All-Wise Lord, thus:

O Wise Lord, most Beneficent Spirit, Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Who was the first mortal, before myself, with whom thou the Wise Lord, didst converse; to whom you didst teach the religion of the All-Wise Lord, the religion of Zarathustra?

And the All-Wise Lord answered: The fair Yima, son of Vivanghat, the good shepherd, O holy Zarathustra! He was the first mortal before thee, with whom I, the Wise Lord, didst converse; whom I didst teach the religion of Zarathustra.

Unto him, O Zarathustra, I the Lord, spake, saying: Well, fair Yima, son of Vivanghat, be thou the preacher and the bearer of my religion! And the fair Yima, O Zarathustra, replied unto me, saying: I was not born, and was not taught to be a preacher and the bearer of thy religion (for he was of the nature of rajas, of passion; therefore, he preferred to rule instead).

Then, I the Lord, said unto him, O Zarathustra: Since thou dost not consent to be the preacher and the bearer of my religion, then make thou my world increase, make my world grow; consent thou to nourish, and rule, and watch over the world. And the fair Yima replied unto me, O Zarathustra, saying: Yes! I will nourish, and rule, and watch over thy world. There shall be, while I am king, neither cold wind nor hot wind, neither disease nor death. Then I, the Lord, brought two implements unto him, a golden seal, and a poniard (a type of dagger) inlaid with gold. Behold, here Yima bears the royal sway!

Thus under the sway of Yima three hundred winters passed away, and the earth was replenished with flocks and herds; with men and dogs and birds, and with red blazing fires; and there was room no more for flocks, herds, and men. Then I the Lord warned the fair Yima saying: O fair Yima, son of Vivanghat, the earth has become full of flocks and herds, of men and dogs and birds and of red blazing fires, and there is no more room for flocks, herds, and men. Then Yima stepped forward, in light, southwards on the way of the sun; and afterwards he pressed the earth with the golden seal, and bored it with the poniard, speaking thus: O Spenta Armaiti, kindly open asunder and stretch thyself afar, to bear flocks and herds and men! And Yima made the earth grow larger by one-third than it was before; and there came flocks and herds and men, at their will and wish, as many as he wished.

Thus under the sway of Yima, six hundred winters passed away, and the earth was replenished with flocks and herds, with men and dogs and birds, and with red blazing fires; there was no more room for flocks and herds and men. And I warned fair Yima, saying, O fair Yima, son of Vivanghat, the earth has become full of flocks and herds, of men and dogs and birds, and of red blazing fires; and there is no more room for flocks, herds, and men.

Then Yima stepped forward, in light, southwards on the way of the sun; and afterwards he pressed the earth with the golden seal, and bored it with the poniard, speaking thus: O Spenta Armaiti, kindly open asunder and stretch thyself afar, to bear flocks and herds and men! And Yima made the earth grow larger by two-thirds than it was at first, and there came flocks and herds and men, at their will and wish, as many as he wished.

Thus under the sway of Yima, nine hundred winters passed away, and the earth was replenished with flocks and herds, with men and dogs and birds, and with red blazing fires, and there was no more room for flocks and herds and men. And I warned the fair Yima, saying: O fair Yima son of Vivanghat, the earth is become full of flocks and herds, of men, and dogs and birds, and red blazing fires; and there is no room for flocks, herds, and men.

Then Yima stepped forward, in light, southwards on the way of the sun; and afterwards he pressed the earth with the golden seal, and bored it with the poniard, speaking thus: O Spenta Armaiti, kindly open asunder and stretch thyself afar, to bear flocks and herds and men! And Yima made the earth grow by three-thirds from what it was at first; and there came flocks and herds and men, at their will and wish, as many as he wished. And in this manner the earth was increased by degrees, until all was accomplished according to the decrees of the Holy Ones, and the kings.

The Evil Winters
(or the great gathering of the archangels)

The Maker, the All-Wise Lord, called together a meeting of the celestial archangels (Yazatas) in Airyana Vaejah of high renown, by the Vanguhi Daitya. To the meeting came the Wise Lord (Ahura Mazda), with the celestial archangels; and came the fair Yima, the good shepherd, with the best of the mortals. And the Wise Lord spake unto Yima, saying, O fair Yima, son of Vivanghat! Upon the material world the evil winters are about to fall, which shall bring the fierce, deadly frost; yea, upon the material world the evil winters are about to fall, which shall make snow-flakes fall thick, even an aredvi deep on the highest tops of mountains.

And the beasts that live in the wilderness, and those that live on the tops of the mountains, and those that live in the bosom of the dale shall take shelter in underground abodes. Albeit, before that winter, the country will bear plenty of grass for cattle, before the waters have flooded it. Now after the melting of the snow, O Yima, a place wherein the footprint of a sheep may be seen, will be a wonder in the world. Therefore, make thee a Vara (Garden) long as a riding-ground on every side of the square; and thither bring the seeds of sheep and oxen, of men, dogs, birds, and of red blazing fires. There thou shalt make waters flow in a bed a hathra long; there thou shalt settle birds, on the green that never fades, with food that never fails. There thou shalt establish dwelling-places, consisting of a house with a balcony, a courtyard, and a gallery.

Thither thou shalt bring the seeds of men and women of the greatest, best, and the finest on this earth; thither thou shalt bring the seeds of every kind of cattle, of the greatest, best, and the finest on this earth. Thither thou shalt bring the seed of every kind of useful tree; and seeds of every kind of fruit, the best of savor and sweetness of odor. All those seeds shalt thou bring, two of every kind, to be kept inexhaustible there, so long as those men stay in the Vara. There shall be no humpbacked or bulged forward there; none impotent, lunatic, malicious, or liar; no one spiteful or jealous; no one with decayed tooth or leprous; nor any one with the brands (marks) with which Angra Mainyu stamps the bodies of mortals.

In the largest part of the place thou shalt make nine streets; six in the middle part, three in the smallest. To the streets of the largest part thou shalt bring a thousand seeds of men and women; to the streets of the middle part, six hundred; to the streets of the smallest part, three hundred. The Vara thou shall seal up with thy golden seal; and thou shalt make a door, and a window self-shining within.

Then Yima said in his heart, How shall I manage to make that Vara (Garden) which the Wise Lord has commanded me to make? And the Wise Lord said unto Yima: O fair Yima, son of Vivanghat! Crush the earth with a stamp of thy heel, and then knead it with thy hands, as the potter does when kneading the potter's clay. And Yima did as the Wise Lord wished; he crushed the earth with a stamp of his heel; he kneaded it with his hands, as the potter does when kneading the potter's clay.

And Yima made the Garden, long as a riding-ground on every side of the square. There he brought the seeds of sheep and oxen, of men, of dogs, of birds, and of red blazing fires, to be an abode for men; and a Vara long as a riding-ground on every side of the square, for oxen and sheep. There he made waters flow in a bed a hathra long; there he settled birds, on the green that never fades, with food that never fails. There he established dwelling-places, consisting of a house with a balcony, a courtyard and a gallery. And there he brought the seeds of men and women, of the greatest, the best, and the finest on this earth.

And in the largest part of the place he made nine streets, six in the middle part, three in the smallest. To the streets of the largest part he brought a thousand seeds of men and women; to the middle part, six hundred; and to the streets of the smallest part, three hundred. Then he sealed up that Garden with the golden ring (seal); and he made a door, and a window self-shining within. And there were no humpbacked, none bulged forward there; no impotent or lunatic; no one malicious, no liar; no one spiteful, none jealous; no one with decayed tooth, no leprous to be pent up; nor any of the brands wherewith Angra Mainyu stamps the bodies of mortals. And all the seeds which he brought, two of every kind, were to be kept inexhaustible there, so long as those men should stay in the Garden.

Then Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord, O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! What are the lights that give light in the Vara (Garden) which Yima made? And the Wise Lord answered: There are uncreated lights and created lights. The one thing missed there is the sight of the stars, the moon, and the sun; and a year seems only as a day. Every forty years, to every couple two are born, a male and a female. And thus it is for every sort of cattle. And the men in the Vara which Yima made, live the happiest life.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Who is he who brought the religion of the Wise Lord into the Vara which Yima made? The All-Wise Lord answered: It was the bird Karshipta, O holy Zarathustra!

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Who are the Lord and the Master there?

The Wise Lord answered: Urvatad-nara, O Zarathustra! and thyself.

Assault on Zarathustra

From the region and the regions of the north, rushed forth Angra Mainyu (the Devil, the Wicked One), the deadly, the demon-god of the demon-gods, the Daevas. And thus spoke the evil-doer Angra Mainyu unto Buiti the demon: Druj, rush down and kill thou the holy Zarathustra! The demon Buiti, who is deceiving, unseeing death, came rushing along.

Thereupon Zarathustra chanted aloud the Ahuna Vairya, the personification of prayer: The will of the Lord is the law of righteousness; the gifts of Vohumano* to those in the world, who do the deeds of the Wise Lord (⇗); he who relieves the poor makes the Lord King.

And Zarathustra offered the sacrifice to the good waters of the Daitih (Daitya), which floweth under the Chinvad bridge; he recited the Mazdayasnian confession. So the Druj returned to Angra Mainyu, the Wicked One, and said: Thou tormenter, Angra Mainyu! I see no way to kill Spitama Zarathustra, so great is the glory of the holy Zarathustra.

Zarathustra saw all this within his Soul; the wicked and evil doings of the adversary, and how they took counsel to destroy him. Therefore up started Zarathustra, forward went he, unabated by Akemmano, and the harshness of his riddles; and he went casting and swinging stones, as big as a house, which he obtained from the Maker, the Wise Lord.

Thereupon Angra Mainyu said unto Zarathustra: Why on this wide round earth, whose ends lie afar, dost thou swing those stones; thou who standest by the upper bank of the river Darega, in the mansion of Porushaspo (Pouru-saspa)?

So Zarathustra answered Angra Mainyu: O evil-doer, Angra Mainyu! I will smite the creation of the demon-gods (Daevas); I will smite the demon Nasu, a creature of the Daevas. I will smite the evil female (Pairika Knathaiti) which misleads men, seducing them with false eyes, false mouth, and false skin; till the victorious savior (saoshyant) come up to life out of lake Kasava, from the region of the dawn, from the regions of the dawn.

Again Angra Mainyu pleaded: Do not destroy my creature, O holy Zarathustra! Thou art the son of Pouru-saspa; by thy mother I was invoked. Renounce the good religion of the worshipper of the Lord; and thou shalt gain such a boon as Vadhaghna (an evil ruler of great power) gained, even the rulership of all the nations!

And Spitama Zarathustra replied: No! Never will I renounce the good religion of the worshippers of the Lord, either for body or life, though they should tear away the breath! Then Angra Mainyu said unto Zarathustra: By whose word wilt thou strike, by whose word wilt thou repel, by whose weapon will the good creatures strike and repel my creation, who am Angra Mainyu?

* The Spirit of Goodness, or the Holy Spirit; one of the Arch-angels that see.

Spitama Zarathustra said in answer: The sacred mortar, the sacred cups, the Haoma, the Word taught by the Lord, these are my weapons, yea, my best weapons! By the Word will I strike, by the Word will I repel; by this weapon will the good creatures strike and repel thee, O evil-doer, Angra Mainyu! The Good Spirit of the Eternal Father (Time Eternal or Zurvan) made the first creation; yea, he and the Amesha-Spentas (the archangels or the saints) made the creation, the good and wise sovereigns.

Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord, O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! With what manner of sacrifice shall I worship; with what manner of sacrifice shall I make people worship?

The Wise Lord answered, Go, O Spitama Zarathustra! towards the high growing trees, and before one of them that is beautiful, high growing, and mighty, say thou these words: Hail to thee! O good, holy tree made by the Wise Lord! Ashem Vohu!

The priest shall cut off a twig of Baresma, long as an aesha, thick as a yava. The faithful one, holding it in his left hand, shall keep his eyes upon it without ceasing, whilst he is offering up to the Wise Lord ( ) and to the heavenly archangels (Amesha-Spentas), the high and beautiful golden Haoma; with Good Intent (thought), with Good Word (of thankfulness and praise); and with Good Action (of proper devotion).

Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord; O thou all-knowing Lord of Wisdom, should I urge upon the godly man or woman, or upon the wicked Daeva-worshipper who lives in sin, to give the earth made by the Lord, the water that flows, the corn that grows, and all the rest of their wealth? The Wise Lord answered: Thou shouldst, O holy Zarathustra.

Then asked Zarathustra: O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! Where are the rewards given? Where does the rewarding take place? Where is the rewarding fulfilled? Whereto do men come to take the reward that, during their life in the material world, they have won for their soul?

The Wise Lord answered: When a man is dead in the world, when his time is over; then the wicked, evil-doing Daevas cut off his eyesight. On the third night, when the dawn appears and brightens up, and Mithra the god with beautiful weapons, reaches the all-happy mountains, and the sun is rising; then the fiend, named Vizaresha, O Spitama Zarathustra, carries off in bonds the souls of the wicked worshippers of the demon-gods (Daevas), who live in the sin and ignorance of disbelief. Each soul enters the way made by Time, and open both to the wicked and to the righteous.

At the head of the Chinvad bridge, the holy and desirous bridge between heaven and earth, the bridge made by the All-Wise Lord, they ask for their Spirits and souls the reward for the worldly goods and possessions which they gave away here below. Then comes the beautiful, well-shapen, strong and well-formed maid, with dogs at her side, one who can discern, who has enough children, happy, and of high understanding. She makes the soul of the righteous go up above the Haraberezaiti; above the Chinvad bridge she presents each soul in the presence of the heavenly gods themselves.

Up rises Vohumano the archangel from his golden seat; he exclaims, How hast thou come to us, thou holy one, from the decaying world into this undecaying one? Gladly pass the souls of the righteous to the golden seat of the Wise Lord (.𐬯𐬀𐬎𐬀𐬌 𐬴𐬀𐬌𐬎𐬀.), to the golden seat of the Amesha-Spentas, to the Garo-nmanem, the abode of the Lord, the abode of the archangels (Amesha-Spentas), the abode of all other holy beings.

As to the godly man that has been cleansed, the wicked evil-doing Daevas tremble at the perfume of his soul after death, as do sheep on which the wolf is pouncing. The souls of the righteous are gathered together there; Nairyo-sangha is with them; a messenger of the Wise Lord is Nairyo-sangha.

And the evil doing demon of the demons, Angra Mainyu, the deadly, said: What! let the wicked, evil-doing Daevas gather together at the head of Arezura! So the demons rushed away shouting, Let us gather together at the head of Arezura! For he is just born, the holy Zarathustra, of the house of Porushaspo (Pourusaspa). How can we procure his death? He is the weapon that fells the fiends; he is counter-fiend to the fiends; he is the Druj to the Druj; vanished are the Daeva-worshippers, and the Nasu (corpse) made by the Daevas; the Lie and Falsehood! And the demon-gods rushed away shouting, the wicked, evil-doing Daevas, into the depths of the dark and raging world of hell.

The One of Whom the Questions are Asked

Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord: O All-Wise Lord, Most Bounteous Spirit, Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! What part of the Holy Word is the strongest, the most victorious, the most glorious, the most effective? What is the most fiend-smiting? What is the best healing? What destroyest best the malice of the demon-gods (Daevas) and men? What maketh the material world to best fulfill its needs, wants, desires, aspirations, and dreams? And what freeth the material world best from the anxieties of heart and mind?

The Wise Lord Answered: Our name, O Zarathustra, who art of the Amesha-Spentas (the Archangels), that is the strongest part of the Holy Word; that is the most victorious, the most glorious, the most effective; that is the most fiend-smiting; that is the best healing; that destroyeth the malice of the Daevas (demon-gods) and men; that maketh the material world best come to the fulfillment of its wishes; that freeth the material world best from the anxieties of the heart.

Then Zarathustra asked the All-Wise Lord, saying: Reveal unto me the Name of thine, O Wise Lord, that is the greatest, the best, the fairest, the most effective, the most fiend-smiting, the best healing; that destroyeth the malice of the Daevas, and men; that I may be able to defend myself best from the malice of the Daevas, and Yatus and Pairikas; that they may not be able to afflict me.

The Wise Lord replied unto him: My name is, The One of Whom the Questions are Asked, O Holy Zarathustra!

My second name is the Herd-giver;
My third name is the Almighty One (Powerful One);
My fourth name is Perfect Holiness;
My fifth name is All Good Things Created by Wisdom (Mazda), the offspring of the holy principle;
My sixth name is Understanding;
My seventh name is the One with All-Understanding;
My eighth name is Knowledge;
My ninth name is the One with All-Knowledge;
My tenth name is Weal;
My eleventh name is He Who Produces Weal;
My twelfth name is the Lord (Ahura);
My thirteenth name is Most Beneficent;
My fourteenth name is He in Whom there is no Harm;
My fifteenth name is the Unconquerable One;
My sixteenth name is He Who Makes True Account;

My seventeenth name is the All-seeing One;
My eighteenth name is the Healing One;
My nineteenth name is the Creator;
My twentieth name is the All-knowing One (Mazda).

Therefore, worship me, O Zarathustra, by day and by night, with offerings in righteousness; I will come unto thee for help and joy (comfort). I the Lord; and the good and holy Sraosha* will come unto thee for help and joy; the waters, the plants, and the Souls (Fravashis) of the holy ones will come unto thee for help and joy.

The Best Healing

One may heal with the Holy Spirit (or Holiness); one may heal with the Law; one may heal with the knife and herbs; one may heal with the Holy Word. Amongst all the remedies, O Zarathustra, this one it is that will best drive away sickness from the body and mind, and spirit of the faithful; for this one is the best healing of all the remedies.

O Zarathustra, sickness fled away before it, death fled away; the unholy Ashemaogha (evil force working against goodness and purity) fled away; the oppressors of men fled away; the brood of the snake and serpents fled away; the brood of the two-legged fled away. Pride fled away; scorn fled away; hot fever fled away; slander fled away; discord fled away, the evil eye fled away; yea, all fled away by the power of the Holy Word. Ashem Vohu!

Hymn to the Sun (or Son)

We sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed Sun (or Son). When the light of the sun waxes warmer, when brightness of the sun waxes warmer, then up stand the heavenly Archangels (Yazatas), by hundreds and by thousands. They gather together its glory, they make its glory pass down, they pour its glory upon the earth made by the Lord; for the increase of the world of holiness; for the increase of the creatures of holiness; for the increase of the undying, unconquerable, shining, and swift-horsed Sun.

And when the sun rises up, then the earth, made by the Lord, becomes sanctified; the running waters become

* Meaning Obedience. The name of the Archangel (Yazata) who first taught the Law of God. As a heavenly guard of the world he wakes at the third hour of night; and wakes the rooster who drives away the demon of sleep.

sanctified, the waters of the well become sanctified, the waters of the sea become sanctified, the standing waters become sanctified; all the holy creatures, the creatures of the Good Spirit, become sanctified.

Should not the Sun rise up, then would the Daevas destroy all the things that are in the seven parts of the world (Karshvanes), nor would the heavenly Archangels (Yazatas) find a way of withstanding or repelling them in the material world.

He who offers up a sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed Sun — to withstand darkness, to withstand the Daevas born of darkness and ignorance; to withstand the robbers and bandits, to withstand Yatus and Pairikas; to withstand death that creeps in unseen -- offers it up to the Wise Lord (𐬀𐬵𐬀), to the Amesha-Spentas, and to his own soul. He rejoices all the heavenly and worldly Archangels (Yazatas); the one who offers up a sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed Sun.

I will sacrifice unto Mithra, the lord of wide pastures, of Friendship and Contract, well struck down upon the skulls of the Daevas; and I will sacrifice unto Varuna, the lord of True Speech, the bearer of the moral order; yea, I will sacrifice unto that eternal friendship, the best of all friendships, that reigns between the Moon and the Sun.

With all our heart and Soul we offer this sacrifice and invocation unto the strength and power, and glory of the undying, ever-shining, swift-horsed Sun. Ashem Vohu!

The Glory of God

We sacrifice unto the awful glory, that cannot be forcibly seized, made by the All-Wise Lord; for which the Holy Spirit and Evil Spirit, or the Holy One and the Evil One, did struggle with one another; for that glory that cannot be forcibly seized, they flung each of them their darts most swift. The Evil Spirit flung a dart; and so did Vohumano the Archangel, Ashavahisto the purest of the holy order, and Atar the son of Ahura, the genius of fire (after whom the ninth month and the ninth day of the month were named in Persia).

The Evil Spirit flung a dart, and his demon-gods and demon-angels; including Akem-Mano, Aeshma (Ashmodai of Solomon's time, or Asmodeus of Tobit's time) of the wounding spear; and Azi Dahaka (Zohak or Ad-Zahhak) and Spityura, he who sawed Yima (Jamshid) in twain.

Then forward came Atar, son of the Wise Lord, thinking thus in his heart: I want to seize that glory that cannot be seized forcibly. But Azi Dahaka the three-mouthed, of the evil law, rushed on his back, thinking of extinguishing it; saying, Hear, O Atar, son of the Wise Lord, give it up to me. And if thou seizest that glory that cannot be forcibly seized, then I will enter thy hinder part; I will blaze up in thy jaws; so that thou mayest never more rush upon the earth made by the All-Wise Lord, and destroy the world of good principle. And Atar took back his hands, as the instinct of life prevailed, so much had the evil one affrighted him.

Azi Dahaka (Zohak) the three mouthed, rushed forward, thinking thus in his heart: I want to seize that glory that cannot be forcibly seized! But Atar, son of Ahura Mazda advanced behind him, and said: Hear, O thou three-mouthed Azi-Dahaka, If thou seizest that glory that cannot be forcibly seized, then I will enter thy hinder part, I will blaze up in thy jaws, so that thou mayest never more rush upon the earth made by the All-Wise Lord, and destroy the world of the good principle. Then Azi Dahaka took back his hands, as the instinct of life prevailed, so much had Atar frightened him.

That glory swells up and goes to the sea Vouru-Kasha (Caspian Sea). The swift-horsed Son of the waters seizes it at once; and this is the wish of the Son of the waters, the swift-horsed: I want to seize that glory that cannot be forcibly seized, down to the bottom of the sea Vouru-Kasha, in the bottom of the deep rivers.

We sacrifice unto the Son of the waters, the swift-horsed, the lord of females, the male god, who helps one at his appeal; who made man, who shaped man, a God who lives beneath the waters; and whose ear is the quickest to hear when he is invoked.

And whosoever of you, O men, thus saith the Wise Lord, O holy Zarathustra, shall seize that glory that cannot be forcibly seized, he has the gifts of an Athravan (a priest of the Holy Order); whosoever shall long for the illumination of knowledge, he has the gifts of an Athravan; whosoever shall long for the fullness of knowledge, he has the gifts of an Athravan.

To him riches will cleave, giving him full welfare, holding a shield before him, powerful, rich of cattle and garments; and victory will cleave unto him, day after day; and likewise strength, that smites more than a year. Attended by that victory, he will conquer the havocking hordes; attended by that victory, he will conquer all those who hate him.

The Praise of Holiness

Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord: O All-Wise Lord, most Beneficent Spirit, Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! What is the one word in which is contained the glorification of all good things, of all things that are the offspring of the Good Principle?

And the Wise Lord answered: It is the praise of holiness, O Spitama Zarathustra! He who recites the praise of holiness, in the fulness of faith and with devoted heart, praises me, the Lord; he praises the waters, he praises the earth, the cattle and the plants; he praises all good things made by the All-Wise Lord, all things that are offspring of the good principle. For the right prayer and right devotion increases strength and victory in one's soul; and keeps him on the path of piety and immortality.

The Fravashis of the Faithful (or the Souls, the Heavenly Selves of the Faithful; of the living and the departed that took mortal shapes to advance the cause of the All-Wise Lord)

The Wise Lord spake unto Spitama Zarathustra, saying: Do thou proclaim, O pure Zarathustra, the vigor and strength, the goodwill and compassion, the joy and peace, safety and salvation, that are found in the Fravashis (the Heavenly or Higher Self, the Universal Souls) of the faithful; the awful power of the True Self of man; do thou tell how they come to help me, how they bring assistance unto me, righteous and omnipotent arm of the faithful, the Fravashis of the faithful.

Through their brightness and glory, O Zarathustra, I maintain that sky which I didst create, shining and seen afar, encompassing this earth all around. It looks like a palace that stands built of a heavenly substance, firmly established, with ends that lie afar, shining in its body of ruby over the three-thirds of the earth. It is like a garment inlaid with stars, made of heavenly substance, the All-Wise Lord puts on, along with Mithra and Rashnu and Spenta-Armaiti; and on no side can the eye perceive the end of it.

Through their brightness and glory, O Zarathustra, I maintain Ardvi Sura Anahita, the wide-expanding and health-giving, who hates the Daevas (demon-gods, and heathen rulers), and obeys the laws of the Lord; who is worthy of sacrifice and prayer in the material world. She is life-increasing and holy, flock-increasing and holy, country-increasing and holy; who makes the womb of all females pure for bringing forth in safety; who puts milk in the breasts of all females in the right measure and right quality.

The large ocean, known afar, as the whole of the waters that run along the earth; runs powerfully from the height Hukairya down to the Vouru-Kasha (Caspian Sea). All the shores of the sea Vouru-Kasha boil over, all the middle of it boils over, when Ardvi Sura Anahita streams down there, she who has a thousand chambers (cells) and a thousand channels; the extent of each of those chambers and channels is as much as a man can travel forty days, riding on a good horse. From this ocean of mine, O Zarathustra, flow the waters that spread all over the seven parts of the world (Karshvares); this ocean of mine goes on bringing waters, both in summer and in winter. This ocean of mine purifies the seeds in males, the womb in the female, the milk in females' breasts.

Through the brightness and glory of the Fravashis of the faithful, O Zarathustra, I maintain the wide earth made by the All-Wise and Eternal Lord, the large and broad earth, that bears so much that is fine and good; that bears all the weight of the living and the dead, of the high mountains, rich pastures and waters; upon which run many streams and rivers, and many kinds of plants, to nourish animals and men, to nourish the Aryan nations and the faithful.

Through the brightness and glory of the Fravashis of the faithful, O Zarathustra, I maintain in the womb the child that has been conceived; so that it does not die from the assaults of Vidotu; and I develop its bones, the hair, the entrails, the feet, and the sexual organs. Had not the awful Fravashis of the faithful given help unto me, those animals and men of mine, of such excellent kinds, would not subsist; the Wicked One would destroy them. The strength would belong to the Druj (the Double-minded; the Hypocrite); the dominion would belong to the Druj; the material world would belong to the Druj. Between the earth and the sky the immaterial creatures would be smitten by the Druj; and never afterwards would Angra-Mainyu give way to the blows of Spenta-Mainyu.

Through the brightness and glory of the Fravashis of the faithful, the waters run and flow forward from the never-failing springs; and winds blow, driving down the clouds toward the never-failing springs. Through their brightness and glory the females conceive offspring, and become blessed with children. Through their brightness and glory, the chiefs of the assemblies and meetings are raised up, who listen well to the holy words, whom wisdom holds dear; who return victors from discussions with Gaotama (Buddha) the heretic; who is also created and raised by the All-Wise Lord. Through the brightness and glory of the Fravashis, the sun, the moon, and the stars pursue their own course and possess their own glories.

And in fearful battles the Fravashis of the faithful are the wisest of help. The most powerful amongst them, O Spitama, are those of the ancient law, or those of the Saoshyants (Saviors or Messiahs) not yet born, who are to restore the world. But the Fravashis of the living faithful are more powerful, O Zarathustra, than those of the dead.

Moreover, the man who in life shall treat the Fravashis of the faithful well, will become a ruler of the country with full power, and a chief most strong; so shall any man of you become, who shall entreat Mithra well, the lord of wide pastures, and Arstat, who makes the world grow, who makes the world increase. Thus do I proclaim unto thee, O pure Spitama, the vigor and strength, the glory, the help (comfort), and joy that are in the Fravashis of the faithful, the awful and overpowering Fravashis (Heavenly or Higher Selves of man); and how they come to help me; how they bring assistance unto me, the awful Fravashis of the faithful.

We worship the good, powerful, beneficent Fravashis of the faithful, that take a place which for a long time had remained barren, without growth, and they bring forth lush vegetation, full of good and medicinal plants. We worship the good, powerful, beneficent Fravashis of the faithful, that take a place where waters stood without flowing, and now through their diligence and good work, and with the assistance of the Wise Lord and celestial archangels (Amesha-Spentas), the waters flow in all directions, to bring forth crops and plants for subsistance and nourishment. Yea, we worship the good, powerful, beneficent Fravashis of the faithful, who showed their paths to the stars, the moon, the sun, and the endless lights; that had stood still for a long time in the same place, motionless, through the oppression of the Daevas (demon-gods and heathen rulers). And now thus all move around their course, charted by nature, for ever; until divine intervention is decreed by the heavens, for the good of the world.

We worship the perceptions, intellect, and the conscience of the Saoshyants (Saviors and Messiahs); and we pray for their Souls; and those of tame animals, of wild animals, of the animals that live in waters, of the animals that live underground, of those of the flying ones, running ones, and grazing ones.

We worship the Spirit, conscience, perceptions of the Fravashis of the men of the ancient law and of our next-of-kin; the first who listened to the teaching of the Lord, the holy men and women, who struggled and fought for holiness. We worship the men and women of the ancient law, that dwelt, or dwell, or will dwell in their houses, boroughs, towns, and countries; who obtained these houses, boroughs, towns, and countries in holiness, with the holy word (Mathra, Mantra in Sanskrit); who achieved perfection of good, and salvation unto their Souls.

We pay homage to all the creations of the All-Wise Lord; we worship his earth, his heavens, and all the good things between the earth and the heavens; that are worthy of sacrifice and prayer, and are to be worshipped by the faithful. Therefore we pay homage to the souls of wild and tamed beasts; of holy men and women, born at any time, who have struggled, are struggling, or will struggle for all that is good and holy.

Yea, the Fravashis of the faithful, awful, overpowering, and victorious; the Fravashis of the men of the ancient law, and of the next-of-kin; may these Fravashis come satisfied into this House, may they walk in contentment through this house. Ashem Vohu!

Abodes of the Soul (or Higher Self)

Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord: O All-Wise Lord, most Beneficent Spirit, Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! When one of the faithful departs this life, where does his Soul (Fravashi) abide on that night, and thereafter?

The Wise Lord answered: It takes its seat near the head, singing and proclaiming happiness; happy is he, happy the man, whoever he be, to whom the Wise Lord gives the full accomplishment of his wishes; on that night his Soul tastes as much of pleasure as the whole of the living world can taste.

On the second night it takes its seat near the head, singing and proclaiming happiness; happy is he, happy the man, whoever he be, to whom the Wise Lord gives the full accomplishment of his wishes; on that night his Soul tastes as much of pleasure as the whole of the living world can taste.

At the end of the third night, when the dawn appears, it seems to the Soul (Fravashi) of the faithful as if it were brought amidst plants and scents; it seems as if a wind were blowing from the region of the south, a sweet scented wind, sweeter scented than any other wind in the world. And it seems to the Soul of the faithful as if he were inhaling that wind with the nostrils, and he thinks: Whence does that wind blow, the sweetest-scented wind I ever inhaled with my nostrils!

And it seems to him (or her) as if his own conscience were advancing to him in that wind; as if it were in the shape of a maiden fair, bright, white-armed, strong, of good form and height, of a glorious seed, noble, as fair as the fairest thing in the world. And the Soul of the faithful addresses her asking: What maid art thou, who are the fairest maid I have ever seen? And she being his own conscience, answers him: O thou youth of good thoughts, good words, and good deeds, of good religion. I am thy own conscience! Everybody did love thee for thy greatness, goodness, fairness, sweet-scentedness, victorious strength, and freedom from sorrow; in which thou dost appear to me. And so thou, O youth of good thought, good word, and good deed, of good religion! didst love me for that greatness, goodness, fairness, sweet-scentedness, victorious strength, and freedom from sorrow, in which I appear to thee. When thou wouldst see a man making derision and deeds of idolatry, or rejecting the poor and shutting his door; then thou wouldst sit singing the hymns and worshipping the Lord, and paying homage to the good waters; and Atar, son of Ahura Mazda; and rejoicing the faithful that would come from near and afar. I was lovely, and thou madest me lovelier; I was fair, and thou madest me still fairer; I was desirable, and thou madest me still more desirable. I was sitting in a forward place, and thou madest me sit in the foremost place; through thy good thought, good speech, and good deed; and so henceforth men worship me for my having long sacrificed unto and conversed with the Wise Lord.

The first step, O Zarathustra, that the Soul of the faithful made, placed him in the good-thought paradise; the second step that his Soul made, placed him in the good-word paradise; and the third step that the Soul of the faithful made, placed him in the good-deed paradise; and the fourth step placed him in the endless lights, from which come all the Saoshyants (Saviors, or Messiahs), as did the first Wise Lord.

Then one of the faithful, who had departed before him, asked him, saying: How didst thou depart the life of the world, thou holy man? From the abodes full of cattle, of wishes and enjoyments; from the material world into the world of the Spirit? From the decaying world into the undecaying world of immortality? And how long did thy felicity of worldly pleasures last?

And the Wise Lord said unto the man: Ask him not concerning this, who has just gone the dreary way, full of fear and distress, where the body and soul part from one another. Let him eat of the food brought to him, of the oil of Zaremaya; this is the food for the youth of good thoughts, good words, and good deeds, and of good religion; this is the food for the holy woman, rich in good thoughts, good words, and good deeds; well-principled and obedient to her husband, after she has departed this life.

Then Zarathustra asked the Wise Lord: O All-Wise Lord, most Beneficent Spirit, Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! When one of the wicked perishes, where does his soul abide that night?

The Wise Lord answered: It rushes and sits, O Zarathustra, near the skull, singing the Kima Gatha. To what land shall I turn, O All-Wise Lord? To whom shall I go praying? On that night his soul tastes as much of suffering as the whole of the living world can taste; on the second and on the third nights also his soul tastes as much of suffering as the whole of the living world can taste; and it rushes and sits near the skull, singing the Kima Gatha, O Zarathustra.

At the end of the third night, when the dawn appears, it sems to the soul of the wicked as if it were brought amidst snow and stench, and as if a wind were blowing from the region of the north, from the regions of the north, a foul-scented wind, the foulest scented wind of all the winds in the world. And it seems to the soul of the wicked man as if he were inhaling that wind with the nostrils, with a choking feeling, the foulest scented wind he had ever tasted.

Now, behold, the first step the soul of the wicked man made placed him in the evil-thought hell; the second step placed him in the evil-word hell; and the third step the soul of the wicked man made placed him in the evil-deed hell; the fourth step that the soul of the wicked man made placed him in the endless darkness.

Then in the same manner, one of the wicked who departed before him addressed him, saying: How didst thou perish, O wicked man? How didst thou come, O fiend! From the abodes full of cattle and full of the wishes and enjoyments of love? From the material world into the world of the spirit? From the decaying world into the undecaying one? How long did thy suffering last?

And Angra Mainyu, who is the head of that court, the lying one, said unto him: Ask him not that which thou askest of him, who has just gone the dreary way, full of fear and distress, where the body and soul part from one another. Let him eat of the food brought to him, of poison and of poisonous stench; this is the food after he has perished, for the youth of evil thoughts, evil words, evil deeds, evil religion, after he has perished. This is the food for the fiendish woman, rich in evil thoughts, evil words, evil deeds, evil religion; ill-principled, and disobedient to her vows.

Of the Dog
(and his independence)

Which is the good creature among the creatures of the Good Spirit that from midnight till the daybreak goes and kills thousands of the creatures of the Evil Spirit?

The Wise Lord answered: The dog with prickly back and long muzzle, the dog Vanghapara, which evil-speaking and rebellious people call Dozaka (or Dozak); this is the good creature among the creatures of the Good Spirit, that from midnight till the sun goes up kills thousands of creatures of the Evil Spirit. And whosoever, O Zarathustra, shall kill this dog kills his own soul for nine generations; nor shall he find a way over the Chinvad bridge, unless, while alive, he has atoned for his sin. The penalty for the murder is a thousand stripes with the Asaphe-astra, and a thousand stripes with the Sraosha-karana.

And whosoever shall kill a shepherd dog, or a house dog, or a street dog, his soul when passing to the other world, shall fly howling louder and more sorely grieved than the sheep does in lofty forest where the wolf ranges. No soul will come and meet his departing soul and minister comfort; nor will the dogs that keep the Chinvad Bridge help his departing soul, howling and grieved in the other world.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! What is the place of the shepherd dog, and the house dog, and the street dog?

The Wise Lord answered, The shepherd dog comes and goes Yugyesti round about the fold, watching for the thief and the wolf. And the house dog, O Zarathustra, he comes and goes a Hathra round about the house, watching for the thief and the wolf. But the Vohunazga, or street dog, claims none of those talents, and only seeks for subsistance.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! If a man give bad (or poisoned) food to the shepherd dog, of what sin does he make himself guilty?

The Wise Lord answered: He makes himself guilty of the same guilt, if he had served the bad food to a house of the first rank.

And thus spake the Lord unto Zarathustra, priest in his eternal kingdom:

For in this material world, O Zarathustra, it is the dog, of all the creatures of the Kingdom, that most quickly decays into age. For he watches while others eat; and he watches goods, none of which he receives.

Then Zarathustra asked the Lord, O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! If there is in the house of the worshipper of the Lord a dog that obeys not, what shall the worshipper of the Lord do?

And the Wise Lord answered: They shall attend him to heal, in the same manner as they would do for one of the faithful.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! If they try to heal him and fail, what shall the worshipper of the Lord do?

The Wise Lord answered: They shall put a collar (yoke) around his neck, and they shall tie thereto a muzzle; and with a leash they shall teach him, as they would to one of the faithful. If they would not do so, the disobedient or scentless dog will come to grief, and shall die with hunger and thirst and disease; and my worshipper will become guilty of sin (Peshotamus).

Yea, the dog, O Zarathustra, I the Lord, have made self-clothed; watchful and wakeful; sharp-toothed. Created to take his food from man, and to watch over man's goods. I, the Lord, have made the dog strong of body against the evil-doer, those of the Evil Spirit; whose task begins at midnight and ends at daybreak; and during this time he goes and kills thousands of the creatures of the Evil Spirit. And whosoever, O Zarathustra, kills the dog kills his own soul for nine generations; nor shall he find the way to the Chinvad Bridge; unless, while alive, he has atoned for his sin.

And whosoever, O Zarathustra, shall awake at his voice, neither shall the thief nor the wolf carry anything from his house, without he being warned first. The wolf and the robber shall be smitten, and torn to pieces; and if he is driven away, he shall melt like snow.

A dog, O Zarathustra, has the characteristics of eight sorts of people; of a priest, of a warrior, of a husbandman, of a strolling singer, of a thief, of a disu, of a courtesan, and of a child.

He can subsist on refuse and crumbs and yet not be ashamed of his lowly state; in these things he is like a priest.

He can march in front like a warrior; he fights for the protection of his domain like a warrior; he goes first after the enemy, like a warrior; in these things he is like a warrior.

He is watchful and sleeps lightly, like a husbandman; he goes first out of the house, like a husbandman; he returns last into the house, like a husbandman; in these things he is like a husbandman.

He is fond of singing, like a strolling singer, in silence with his joyous heart; he wounds him that gets too near, like a strolling singer; he is ill-trained, like a strolling singer; he is double-minded and changeful like a strolling singer; in these things he is like a strolling singer.

He is fond of darkness, like a thief; he prowls about in darkness like a thief; he is a shameless eater, like a thief; he is therefore an unfaithful keeper, like a thief; in these things he is like a thief.

He is fond of darkness like a disu; he prowls about in darkness, like a disu; he is a shameless eater like a disu; he is therefore an unfaithful keeper, like a disu; in these things he is like a disu.

He is fond of pride and praise, like a courtesan; he wounds him who gets too near, like a courtesan; he roams along the roads, like a courtesan; he is ill-trained, like a courtesan; he is double-minded and changeful like a courtesan; in these things he is like a courtesan.

He is fond of sleep, like a child; he is tender like a child; he is full of tongue, like a child; he digs the earth with his paws, like a child; he cries, drools, and whines like a child; he senses and learns to discern each emotion like a child; he imitates and learns like a child; in these things he is like a child.

And thus spake the Lord unto Zarathustra: If the two dogs of mine, the shepherd dog and house dog, pass by any one of the houses of the faithful, let them never be kept away from it. For no house can subsist on the earth made by the Lord; but for those two dogs of mine, even the shepherd-dog and the house-dog.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! When a dog dies, with marrow and seed dried up, where does his ghost go?

The Wise Lord answered, It passes to the springs of the waters, O Zarathustra; and there out of them two water dogs are formed: out of every thousand she-dogs, a couple is joined together, a water-dog and a water she-dog. He who kills the water dog brings about a drought that dries up his pastures; until O Zarathustra, the sweetness and fatness, health and healing, and all the fulness and increase is flown out from that land, and from those fields. And they shall not return again to that land and to those fields; until the murderer of the water-dog has been smitten to death on the spot; and the undefiled soul of the water-dog has been offered up a sacrifice, for three days, and three nights; with fire blazing, Baresma tied up, and Haoma prepared. Then shall the blessings return to that land and to those fields.

O Maker of the material world, thou Holy One! If a bitch be near her time, which of the worshippers of the Lord should attend to her?

The Wise Lord answered: He whose house stands nearest, the care of supporting her is his; so long he supports her, until the whelps be born. If he shall not support her, so that the whelps come to grief, for want of proper support and nurturing, he shall become guilty of willful murder. He shall, therefore, take her to rest upon any foliage, or in the barn, suitable for her needs; until the litter be capable of self-defence and self-subsistence. Therefore, it behooves the faithful to look after every pregnant female, either two-footed or four-footed, two-footed woman or four-footed bitch. For it begins at birth. Of the dog it is said that out of the star station, away from the direction of the constellation Hoptok-ring, was given him further a stage, rather than to man, as a reward for his protection of the sheep, and as a companion of sheep and men; for this the dog is bred, and well-adapted. Moreover, three other advantages are given to him over man: he has his own boots, his own clothing, and may wander about without exertion!

Apostasy of the Iron Age

This period of iron age, or nature of man, as opposed to gold, silver, or bronze period or nature of man, shall mark the sign of the upcoming end. During this period demons of the race of Aeshma (Ashmodai of the Hebrews), the demons of fury, horror and destruction, will attack the Aryan nation and the faithful. And the ordered life of the lands shall be shattered; family, and clan activities shall disintegrate. The disruption and corruption shall be cosmic; the sun and moon will not give their proper light, there will be darkness and gloom on earth, and also earthquakes, droughts and famine. And there will be wars, and rumors of wars; battles and appearance of battles; dissensions and appearance of dissension; fear and doubt shall pervade the world.

This is the age in which iron is mingled with others to bring forth into life him who is sturdy (haughty) praying apostate. And this is their sturdiness, that their prayers and supplications are unobserved by both doctrines, meaning by both the ministering angels of God and of Demons; and this is their praying, that whenever they pray they do cause misery to others. They respect not the elderly nor the wise; they are babblers, tattletalers, and mumblers. They talk maliciously, free speaking, shameless, full of iniquity and wickedness are their hearts continually. Driven by their lusts and imaginations, they are they who had fallen from the middle of the Chinvad Bridge, rolled over head-foremost; thus must they justify their shame and guilt, without ever achieving that end.

These are they that through secret combinations and trespasses bring the ruler and priestly authority into evil confrontations. Anything they say is always mischief; it is misery without intermission they inflict upon all that they touch. These are they that are called the Hypocrites, the double-minded; who pay homage to virtue and justice, as a bribe for the consequence of their wicked and evil thoughts, words, and deeds. It is the Devil attempting to clothe himself in the angelic vesture of light. Yea, these are they that do injustice under the pretence of equity and fairness; to steal the livery of the court of God to serve the Devil withal; to pretend to believe in a God of mercy, their Redeemer, and persecute those who are afflicted and helpless; to pay tithes, and omit the weightier matters of law, judgement, mercy, faith. Yea, they are they who strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel; to make clean the outside of the cup and platter, but full of filthiness and stink within; to appear outwardly righteous unto men, but within full of hypocrisy and iniquity; even to be likened unto whited sepulchres, which appear beautiful on the outside, but within are full of bones of the dead. Yea, these are they of ignorance and shallow mediocrity, pert self-conceit and unripe intellect; their ambitions are ignoble, like themselves, they will seek to attain public office or any other coveted object by ignoble means, be it land, money, reputation, or objects of the lusts of their eyes and heart. It is they who destroy the reverence for the great and holy, and replace it with base envy of greatness and holiness.

It is for these and innumerable other reasons, that the Wise Lord hath said, I shall not again produce such; no friend here for him who is a friend; no brother for him who is a brother; no son for him who is a father, nor yet a father for him who is a son. Admonished, but not convinced, they become the abode of the will of the place; so that they subsist in every single place where it is necessary for them to be; and in each they march on together, reflecting upon the path of blessedness, and the knowledge which the Wise Lord hath given them.

Evil to the Good

It is said that evil always happens more to the good than to the bad; yet it is not so at every time and every place, and not to all the good evil happens more; for the Spiritual welfare of the good is certainly more; but in the world it is very much more manifest. Know it then, that the occurrence of evil is primarily appointed by two modes, one by the demons, the appointers of evil; and one by the vile, the doers of evil; even to the vileness of creation and the vile they cause vexation. Moreover, incalculable is the evil which happens to the vile from the demons, and to the good from the demons and the vile; and the mode of its occurrence is in the same way without a visible demon.

True is the saying of the ancients, that the labor and trouble of the good (the righteous) are much more in the world; and their reward and recompense more certain in the Spiritual existence. But the luxuries and pleasure of the vile are more in the world, and their pain and punishment are more severe in the Spiritual existence. Therefore it behooves the good, through the knowledge of pain and punishment of hell, that they should forsake the luxuries and pleasures of the world; and should think no evil, speak no evil, and do no evil, whatsoever. And through hope for the comfort and pleasure in heaven, they should willingly accept the yoke of much trouble, fear, and vexation, in the practice of virtue (or piety) in thought, word and deed.

The vile, though provided with temporary enjoyment, even that enjoyment of improprieties for which eventually there is hell, they enjoy themselves therein temporarily, and lustfully on the account of selfishness; and when the consequences of sins and transgressions catch up with them, they are no longer able to humble themselves, or repent, that a way to heaven be opened unto them; with which they do not trouble themselves. In this way, the luxuries and pleasures of the vile are more in the world; and the vexations and distress of the good are more therein.

The Chinvad Bridge

It is written by the high priests of old that the peak (or source) of the river Daitih (Daitya) is in Airyana Vaejah, in the middle of the world. Reaching unto the vicinity of that peak is a beam-shaped Spirit, the Chinvad Bridge; which is thrown across from Alburz enclosure back to the Daitih peak. As it were, at the entrance it is divided into its right and left; after which the bridge is divided into many walkways; its broadest side is so large that its width is twenty-seven reeds; and its sharp side is so contracted that in thinness it is just like the edge of a razor blade.

And when the souls of the righteous and wicked arrive there, the side most suitable to their necessities, through the great glory of the Creator, and the command of him who takes the just account, is opened unto them. The bridge becomes a broad bridge for the righteous, as much as the length of nine spears; and the length of those which they carry each separately three reeds. And he who is of the righteous passes over the bridge; and a worldly similitude of the pleasantness of his path upon it is when he doth eagerly and unweariedly walk in the golden-colored spring; and with the gallant body and sweet scented blossom in the pleasant skin of that maiden spirit, the price of goodness.

But he who is of the wicked, as he walks, on account of affliction and its sharpness, falls from the middle of it, and rolls over head-foremost; thus remains with him forever his shame of failure and defeat. And the unpleasantness of his path to hell is in the similitude such as the worldly one in the midst of that stinking and dying existence; there where numbers of the sharp-pointed darts are planted out inverted and pointed upwards; and they come unwillingly running, for they are not allowed to stay behind, or to make delay. So much greater than the worldly similitude is that pleasantness and unpleasantness unto the souls; even as much as the one fit for the spirit is greater than the one fit for the world.

It is written that the soul hovers around the body for three nights. The first night it ponders and reflects upon the words of its past life, the second night upon its thoughts, and on the third night upon the deeds of its past life. These three nights are a time of regret and yearning for the soul; regret at the death of the body, and a time of yearning for the reunification of the body with the soul. During this time the demons lurk close at hand, for they are ever eager to inflict suffering and punishment; and it matters not unto them if it is justified or not. It is for this reason the All-Wise Lord hath appointed Sraosha the Archangel, who first taught the law, for the protection of the souls. The three nights are also a time of anguish and consolation: Anguish at the corruption of the purity of the soul, and consolation at the thought of its merit and divine wisdom.

At the end of the third night, at dawn, each soul proceeds to its judgement; for during the life of the individual a store of merits and faults has been laid up in the House of Song. These are weighed in the balances before the eyes of the judges, Mithra, Sraosha, and Rashnu, the Archangels that See. No favor is shown on any side, either for the rich or poor, weak or strong; every man is judged entirely on his own life. If the good thoughts, good words, and good deeds outweigh the evil done in life, the soul passes to heaven. If evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds outweigh the good, then the soul is sent to hell; but if the two are equal, the soul proceeds to an intermediate place, Hamestagan.

When the soul leaves the place of judgement, it is met by a guide. The righteous are met by a fragrant breeze and a maiden more beautiful than man has ever met before. Overwhelmed by her beauty the soul asks who she is and whence she came; to which she replies I am thine own conscience! she being the manifestation of the soul's own thoughts, words, and deeds. But the wicked soul is met by a foul stench and a naked, most loathesomely diseased old hag, the manifestation of its own thoughts, words, and deeds.

Then the soul proceeds to the Chinvad (Chinvat) Bridge; to the righteous it yields the broad and easy to cross side, and to the wicked its contracted and razor-sharp side. When the soul of the wicked is half way across it falls into the abyss of hell, and suffers great agonies; it cries and laments like a wolf trapped in a pit, but no help or comfort is forthcoming. It is compelled against its will to cross over the bridge, by the form of a wild beast, that terrifies the soul to step forward. And as it takes three leaps of evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds, it falls headlong into hell below, to be carried away whithersoever the waters of the good Daithi take it, where it suffers all manner of afflictions, torment, and misery. These are they that descend into the great caverns of evil beneath the society of the material world; in the hideous degradation, squalor, wretchedness and destitution; where vices and crimes reek and simmer in the darkness, in that populous below the people of great cities. There the disinterestedness vanishes, everyone howls, strives, gropes, and gnaws for himself. It is said that they have two mothers -- Ignorance and Misery. Want is their only guide, for the appetite alone they crave satisfaction. Yet it is this very force of the people, this great power of the demon tyrants that builds the fortifications for the tyrants, and is embodied in their armies. And these tyrants use the force of the people to chain and subjugate, to enyoke them; then they end up ploughing with them as men do with oxen yoked.

Yea, the ancient priests of old remind us, that every moral characteristic of man finds its origin among the creatures of lower intelligence; that the cruel foulness of the hyena, the savage rapacity of the wolf, the merciless rage of the tiger, the crafty treachery of the panther, and all the characteristics found in the house-dog, shepherd-dog, and street-dog, are found among mankind. These are they who fall off the Chinvad Bridge, and descend to the hell below.

It is also written by apostles and prophets which came in the meridian of time and of latter-days, that the blind force of such as these, who are fallen from the middle of the Chinvad Bridge, rolled over head foremost, must be well-regulated; as the blind force of steam, which lifts the ponderous iron arms and turns the large wheels, and does all sorts of marvellous work. It must be regulated by the intellect of the righteous. Intellect is to people and people's force, what the slender needle of the Liahona (or compass) is to the ship; its soul always counselling the huge mass of wood and iron, and always pointing to the north. This force, unregulated or ill-regulated, is not only wasted in the void, like the gunpowder burned in the open air, and steam unconfined by knowledge; but, striking in the dark, its blows meet only air. Yea, these are they of whom it is written, that they are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear. Clouds they are without water, carried about of wind; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever. These are the murmurers, complainers, walking after their lusts and imaginations, and their mouths speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. They speak evil of those things which they know not, but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in these things they corrupt themselves. Yet, even these, in a similar manner as the lowly sand upon which we trample, when cast into the furnace, melted, purified by fire, may become resplendent crystal. Thus hell is a temporary place and existence, where punishment, although very severe, is a corrective measure, calculated to fit the crime; so that when good ultimately triumphs, all men will be resurrected, both from heaven and hell. And the whole creation will be united with its Creator and Maker. Ashem Vohu!

The Nature of Heaven

Now the nature of heaven, and the comforts and pleasures thereof are thus described: It is lofty, exalted, supreme, most brilliant, most fragrant, most pure, most supplied with beautiful and immortal existences, most desirable, and most good; it is a place of abode of the sacred beings. And in it are all comforts, pleasures, joys, happiness, peace, safety, and salvation. Yea, the heaven created by the Eternal Father (Zurvan, Amitabha or the Lord God), and his Son the Lord Messiah (Ahura Mazda, Allah Táála, Adhonai Yahweh, Jesus Christ, the Holy One are also his names by which he is known to different people, in different times and places, under different circumstances), contains all comforts, pleasures, joys, happiness, welfare, and all that is good, far more and better than the greatest and supremest pleasures and welfares of the world; and there is no want, pain, distress, or discomfort whatsoever in it. And its pleasantness and the welfare of the archangels are from that constantly beneficial place, the full and undiminishable space, the good and boundless world.

And the freedom of the heavenly beings from the danger from evil in heaven is like unto their freedom from disturbance; and the coming of the good angels is like unto the heavenly one's own good works provided. This prosperity and welfare of the Spiritual existence is more than that of the world; as much as that which is unlimited and everlasting is more than that which is limited and demoniacal.

Moreover, the description of heaven (and also of hell) is contained in the record of the righteous Viraf, who was transported in a vision to heaven and hell, so that he might tell the faithful that which lay before them. He was led over the Chinvad Bridge by Sraosha and other celestial Archangels. On the other side he was met with Heavenly Souls (Fravashis), who conducted him to Hamestagan, the abode of those whose good and evil deeds are equal. Their punishment is heat and cold, no more. From there he passed on to various stations of the heavens within the heaven. First Viraf went to the star station, where good thoughts are received with hospitality. There the Souls, whose radiance was like those of the stars, sit on thrones, splendid and full of glory.

At the next station, the moon station, are those with whom good words find hospitality; they are double-minded, and have performed many good works, which has earned them the brightness of the moon. The third station of the heavens is that of the sun, where good rulers are rewarded for their faithful administration. The fourth station is that of Garodman (Garo-nmanem), where Viraf was greeted by Vohumano (Vohu Manah, Good Mind), and led into the presence of the Wise Lord. There Viraf was shown the different dwellings of the righteous, those who were true and faithful in their obedience to the Laws of the Kingdom, and those women who had been good and faithful wives, considering their husbands as lords. Viraf was also shown the dwelling places of the farmers and artisans, the shepherds, the heads of villages; of teachers, enquirers of the Good Religion and seekers of peace. All the faithful performed their work faithfully and diligently, and dwelt in great comfort and joy.

The Nature of Hell

And, behold, the nature of hell: It is sunken, deep, descending, most dark, most stinking, most terrible, most supplied with wretched existences, and most bad; the place and cave of demons and fiends. And in it is no comfort, pleasantness, or joy whatsoever. In it are all stench, filth, pain, punishment, distress, compulsion, profound evil, envies and lusts, lies, deceits, murders, and discomfort. There is no resemblance of it whatsoever to the worldly stench, filthiness, pain, and suffering.

And so much more grievous is the evil and punishment in hell than even the most grievous evil or punishment on earth, as the greatness of Spiritual existence is more than the worldly existsence. Moreover, far more grievous is the terror of the punishment on the soul, than that of the vileness of the demons on the body. And the punishment on the soul is from those whose abode it has become, the demons and their appointed ones; the head of whom is Ahriman (Aharman) the deadly. And the words of the expressive utterance of the high priests are thus: That where there is a fear of every other thing, it is more than the thing itself, but hell is a thing worse than the fear of it.

Now, it is written that Viraf after returning to the Chinvad Bridge, was taken to hell that he might see the lot of the wicked. For in the first three nights after death they suffer as much distress as a man experiences in a whole lifetime in the world. Led by the old hag who personifies the conscience of the wicked, Viraf passed through the places of evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds, that were in hell. There he experienced intense cold and heat; darkness so intense that it could be grasped, and stench so powerful that it could be cut with a knife. He saw the greedy jaws of hell, like the most frightful pit.

Everyone in hell is packed in so tight that life is intolerable, yet all believe that they are alone; and time drags so slowly that after three days they believe that nine thousand years have elapsed. And the vile creatures, appointed by the demons, appearing to be as high as mountains, full of pride and wickedness, tear and seize the souls of the wicked. All who dwell there, the miserable wretches, suffer from extremes of hot and cold, from snow storm to burning fire, from foul stench to deathly plagues and deaths.

Reception in Heaven

When the soul of the righteous goes on to heaven, it steps forth unto heaven through the strength of the spirit of good works, and the Holy Spirit which is the escort of the soul; into its allotted station; and a crown and coronet, a turban-sash, a fourfold fillet-pendant, a decorated robe, and suitable equipment. And Vohumano the Immortal makes it a household attendant to the Wise Lord (𐬀𐬵𐬎) the Creator; and by the order of the Wise Lord announces its position and reward; and it becomes glad to beg for the position of household attendant of the Wise Lord, through what the soul now sees and knows.

The All-Wise Lord the creator of good producers is a Spirit even among Spirits; and these Spirits even looked for a sight of him, which spirits are above worldly existences. Moreover, through the majesty of the creator, the spirits put on worldly appearances, or are attending to the world and spirit, and put away appearance; then he whose patron spirit is in the world is able to see the attending spirits, in such a similitude as when they see bodies in which is its own spirit.

And in that household attendance, that the Wise Lord has seen the soul is certain, for the Lord sees all things; and many even of the fiends' souls, who are put away from those of the Wise Lord in spiritual understanding, are delighted by the appearance of those of the Wise Lord. And the righteous in heaven, who have been his intimate friends, of the same religion and like goodness, speak to him of the display of affection, the courteous inquiry, and the suitable eminence from coming to heaven, and his everlasting well-being in heaven.

The Two Regions

It is in the scriptures thus declared: Light was above, Darkness below, and between those two was the Void, in which prevailed the Druj (the Hypocrite). The Wise Lord was in the light, and Ahriman (Aharman) in the darkness. The Lord was aware of the existence of Ahriman and his coming for strife, Ahriman was not aware of the existence of the light and of the Wise Lord.

And it happened to Ahriman, in the gloom and darkness, that as he was walking humbly on the borders and pondering over matters, he came to the top, and a ray of light was seen by him; and because of his antagonistic nature he strove that he might reach it, to possess it, that it might also be within his absolute power. And as he came forth to the boundary to chase after it, accompanied by certain others, the Wise Lord came forth to the struggle for keeping Ahriman away from his territory; and he did it through pure words, confounding witchcraft, and cast him back to the gloom.

Thus in the beginning, the Eternal Father (Zurvan, or Amitabha), the Lord God, after a thousand years of meditation, prayer, and sacrifice, in the heaven of thought, begat twins: Ahura Mazda the Wise Lord, and Ahriman (Aharman); and separated the two regions into light and darkness, by the Void of the Druj; thus separating the souls of the virtuous who abide in the laws of God, from those who abide in the laws of man, from those who dwell in the darkness of ignorance; thus separating the two regions of the celestial and the telestial by the power and might of the terrestrial. Ashem Vohu!

The Order of Creation

Of the Wise Lord's creations of the world, the first was the heaven (or sky), the second, water; the third, earth; the fourth, plants; the fifth, animals; the sixth, mankind. The All-Wise Lord produced illumination between the sky and the earth, the constellation stars and those not of the constellation also; then the moon, and afterwards the sun, in his creation.

First he produced the celestial sphere, and the constellation stars are assigned to it by him, especially the Twelve: Varak (the Lamb), Tora (the Bull), Do-patkar (the two figures of Gemini), Kalakauk (the Crab), Sher (the Lion), Khysak (Virgo), Tarazoo (the Balance), Gazdun (the Scorpion), Nimasp (the Centaur, or Sagittarius), Vahi (Capricornius), Dul (the Waterpot), and Mahi (the Fish). The twelve from the original creation were divided into twenty-eight subdivisions of astronomers, namely: Padevar, Pesh-Parviz, Parviz, Paha, Avesar, Besu, Rakhvad, Taraha, Avra, Nahu, Miyan, Avdem, Mashaha, Spur, Husru, Srob, Nur, Gel, Garafsa, Varant, Gau, Goi, Muru, Bunda, Kahtsar, Vaht, Miyan (II), Kaht. And all these original creations residing in the world are committed to them; so that when the destroyer arrives, they can overcome the adversary and their own persecution; in this manner the creatures are saved from adversities of all kinds.

The first of the Wise Lord's creations of the world was the sky (or heaven); and his good thoughts, by good procedure, produced the light of the world, along with which was the good religion of the Mazdayasnians, the faithful of the Lord. And this was so because the renovation which happens to the creatures and the creations was known to him. Afterwards arose Ardavahist, then Shatvairo, then Spendarmad (Spenta Armaiti), then Horvadad; then Amerodad (Immortality). And from the dark world of Ahriman arose Akoman and Andar, then Sovar, then Nakahed, then Tairev and Zairik.

The Flood

On the conflict of the creations of the world with the antagonism of the evil spirit it is said in revelation, that the evil spirit, as he rushed in and looked upon the pure bravery of the angels and his own violence and weakness, wished to rush back. The Spirit of the sky is himself like one of the warriors who has put on armour; he arrayed the sky against the evil spirit, and led on in the contest, until the Wise Lord had completed a rampart round, stronger than the sky and in front of the sky; and his guardian spirits of warriors and the righteous, on war horses and spears in their hands, surrounded the sky; such like as the hair on the head is the similitude of those who held the watch of the rampart. And no passage was found by the evil spirit, who rushed back; and he beheld the annihilation of the demons and his own impotence, as the Wise Lord (Ahura Mazda) did his own final triumph, producing the renovation of the world forever and everlasting.

The second conflict was waged with the water, because, as the star Tistar was in Cancer, the water Avrak which is in the subdivision, was pouring, on the same day when the destroyer rushed in, and came again looking for mischief in the direction of the west. For every single month is the owner of one constellation. The month Tir is the fourth month of the year, and Cancer the fourth constellation from Aries; so it is the owner of Cancer, into which Tistar sprang, and displayed the characteristics of a producer of rain; and he brought on the waters aloft by the strength of the wind. Cooperators with Tistar were Vohumano and angel Hom, with the assistance of the angel Burg and the righteous guardian spirits in orderly arrangement.

Tishtriya (Tistar) was converted into three forms, the form of a man, of a horse, and of a bull. Thirty days and nights he was distinguished in brilliance; and in each form he produced rain ten days and nights. Every single drop of that rain became as big as a bowl, and the water stood the height of man over the whole earth; and the noxious creatures on earth being all killed by rain, went into the holes of the earth. Afterwards the wind spirit, so that it might not be contaminated, stirred up the wind and atmosphere as the life stirs in the body; and the water was all swept away by it, and was brought out to the borders of the earth, and the wide-form ocean arose therefrom. The noxious creatures remained dead within the earth; and in order to carry that poison away from the earth Tishtriya went down into the ocean in the form of a white horse with long hoofs. It is said that every constellation in the sky has three forms.

Then Apaosha the demon, came meeting him in the likeness of a black horse with clumsy hoofs; a mile away from him fled Tishtriya, through the fright which drove him away. And Tishtriya begged for success from Ahura Mazda, and the Wise Lord gave him strength and power; and unto Tishtriya was brought at once the strength of ten vigorous horses, ten vigorous camels, ten vigorous bulls, ten mountains, and ten rivers. A mile away from him fled Apaosha, the evil spirit of drought, through fright. (It is for this reason the saying, an arrow-shot with Tishtriya's strength, in the sense of a mile.)

Afterwards, with a cloud for a jar, thus they call the measure which was a means of the work, he seized upon the water and made it rain in vast quantities; in drops like bulls' heads and men's heads, pouring in handfuls and armfuls, both great and small. On the production of that rain the demons Aspengarak and Apaosha contended with it, and the fire Vazist turned its club over; and owing to the blow of the club Aspengarak made a very grievous noise, as even now, in a conflict with the producer of rain, a groaning and raging are manifest. After ten days and nights of rain produced by him in that manner, the poison and venom of the noxious creatures which were in the earth were all mixed up in the water, and the water became quite salty, because of the germs that remained in earth of the noxious creatures.

Afterwards, the wind, in the same manner as before, restrained the water, at the end of three days, on various sides of the earth. And the three great seas and twenty-three small seas arose therefrom; and two fountains of the sea thereby became manifest, one at Kekast lake, and one the Sovbar, whose sources are connected with the fountain of the sea. And at its north side two rivers flowed out, and one went to the east, the other to the west; they are the Araq and the Veh rivers. Both of the rivers wind about through all extremities of the earth, and intermingle again with the water of the wide-formed ocean. And as those rivers flowed out, and from the same place of origin as theirs, eighteen navigable rivers flowed out; and after the other waters have flowed out from those navigable streams, they all flow back to the Araq and the Veh river.

The Ancestry of the World

On the nature of men, the revelations say, that Gayomard, in passing away, gave forth seed; that seed was thoroughly purified by the motion of the light of the sun. And Neryosang kept charge of two portions, and Spendarmad (Spenta Armaiti) received one portion. In forty years, with the shape of one-stemmed Rivas-plant, and fifteen years of its fifteen leaves Matro and Matroyao grew up from the earth in such a manner that their arms rested behind on their shoulders; and one joined to the other, they were connected together, and both looked alike. And the waists of both of them were close and so connected together that it was not clear which was the male and which the female; and which was the one whose living soul was that of the Wise Lord (Ahura Mazda). For it was asked of the Lord, which did he create first, the soul or the body? And the Wise Lord answered, The soul is created before; and the body after, for him who is created; it is given into the body that it may produce activity, and the body is created for activity.

And both of them changed from the shape of a plant into the shape of a man; and the breath went Spiritually into them, which is the Soul; and now in that similitude a tree had grown up, whose fruit was the ten varieties of man. Then the Wise Lord spake to Mashya and Mashyoi thus: You are man, you are the ancestry of the world, and you are created perfect in devotion by me; perform devotedly the duty of the law, think good thoughts, speak good words, do good deeds, and worship no demons!

Both of them first thought this, that one of them should please the other; and the first deed done by them was this, when they went out they washed themselves thoroughly; and the first words spoken by them to each other were, that Ahura Mazda (the Wise Lord) created the water, and earth, plants and animals, the stars, moon and the sun; and all prosperity whose origin and effect are from manifestation of righteousness.

Afterwards, antagonism rushed into their minds, and their minds were thoroughly corrupted; and they began to proclaim that the Evil Spirit created the water and earth, plants and animals, and all the other things. That false speech was spoken through the will of the demons, and the evil spirit possessed himself of his first enjoyment from them. Through that false speech they both became wicked, and their souls remained in hell until the judgement was rendered.

They had gone thirty days without food, covered with clothing of herbage. After the thirty days they went forth into the wilderness, and found a white-haired she-goat; and they sucked the milk from the udder with their mouths. When they had devoured the milk Mashya said to Mashyoi, My delight was owing to it when I had not devoured the milk, and my delight is more delightful now when it is devoured by my vile body! This second false speech enhanced the power of the demons, and the taste of the food was taken away from them, so that out of a hundred parts one part remained.

In another thirty days and nights, they came to a sheep, fat and white-jawed, and they slaughtered it; and fire was kindled by the wood of the lote-plum and box-tree, through the guidance of the heavenly angels; and they blew with their mouths to stimulate fire. And the first fuel kindled by them was dry grass, kendar, lotos, date palm leaves, and myrtle; and they roasted the sheep. And they dropped three handfuls of meat into the fire, saying: This is the share of the fire. One piece of the rest they tossed to the sky, saying: This is the share of the angels. And a bird, the vulture, advanced and carried some of it away from before them, as a dog ate the first meat.

And they began to use clothing of animal skin; and then they began to make garments from a cloth woven in the wilderness.

And it came to pass that they dug out a pit in the earth, and iron was obtained by them, and beaten out with a stone, and without a forge they beat out a cutting edge from it; and they cut wood with it, and built themselves a wooden shelter from the sun. Owing to the gracelessness which they practised, the demons became more oppressive; and they carried on unnatural malice between themselves; they advanced one against the other, and smote and tore each other's hair and cheeks.

Then the demons shouted out of the darkness, saying, You are man, worship the demons, so that your demon of malice may repose! So Mashya went forth and milked a cow, and poured it out toward the northern quarter. But through this third false speech and act the demons became more powerful. And owing to them, both Mashya and Mashyoi became dry-backed so that in fifty winters they had no desire for intercourse; and when they did have intercourse, they would only have pain and sorrow, that no children could have been conceived.

At the end of fifty years, desire once again arose, first in Mashya and then in Mashyoi; and Mashya said unto Mashyoi: When I see thy great desire I am also agitated. After this they reflected, and said, that the satisfaction of their desire shall be accomplished; and it should have been accomplished even in the past fifty years. And from this union was born in nine months a pair, male and female. And, behold, owing to the tenderness of their offspring, the mother devoured one, and the father the other. Afterwards the Wise Lord (Ahura Mazda) took the primeval tenderness for offspring away from them, so that one may nourish the child, and yet the child may not be devoured.

The Resurrection

Now, whereas Mashya and Mashyoi, who grew up from the earth, first fed upon water, then plants, then milk, and then meat; men also when their time of death approaches, first desist from eating meat, then milk, then bread, till when they die they always feed upon water.

It says in revelation, that Zarathustra of the Spitamas asked of the Wise Lord thus: Whence does a body form again, which the wind has carried and the water conveyed? and how does the resurrection occur? The Wise Lord answered; When through me the sky arose from the substance of the ruby, without columns, on the Spiritual support of far-compassed and endless light; when through me the earth arose, which bore the material life, and there is no maintainer of the worldly creation but it; when by me the sun and moon and stars were conducted in the firmament of luminous bodies; when by me corn was created so that, scattered about in earth, it grew again and returned with increase; when by me color of various kinds was created in plants; when by me a son was created and fashioned in the womb of a mother, and the structure severally of skin, nails, blood, feet, eyes, ears, and other things was produced; when by me legs were created for the water, so that it flows to where it is most useful; and the cloud was created to carry the water of the world to the place where it is most needed; when by me the air was created which conveys in one's eyesight, through the strength of the wind, the lowermost upwards according to its will, and one is not able to grasp it with the hand outstretched. Each one of them, when created by me, was herein more difficult than causing the resurrection, for it is an assistance to me in the resurrection that they exist, but when they were formed, it was not forming the future out of the past.

Observe that when that which was not was then produced, why is it not possible to produce again that which was? For at that time one will demand the bone from the elements of the earth, the blood from the water, the hair from the plants, and the life from fire, since they were delivered to them in the original creation. First the bones of Gayomard are roused up, then those of Mashya and Mashyoi, then those of the rest of mankind. In the fifty-seven years of Saoshyants (Saviors or Messiahs), they prepare all the dead, and all men stand up; both the righteous and the wicked rouse up from the spot where their life departed. Afterwards, when all material living beings assume again their bodies and forms, they are assigned to a single class.

Of the light accompanying the sun, one-half will be for Gayomard, one-half will give enlightenment among the rest of men, so that the soul and body will know who is his father, mother, brother, sister, wife, and his kinsfolk. Then will be held the assembly of the Sadvastran, where mankind will stand for judgement; and in that assembly everyone sees his and her own deeds, both good and evil; and then in that assembly, a wicked man becomes as conspicuous as a white sheep among those that are black. But in that assembly, if a righteous man was friend of a wicked one in the world, and the wicked man complains of him who is righteous, saying, Why did he not make me acquainted, when in the world, with the good deeds he practised himself? And if the righteous one did not inform him, then it is necessary for him to suffer shame accordingly in that assembly.

Afterwards, they set the righteous man apart from the wicked, and he is led to heaven; and the wicked is thrown back into hell, and then he is apportioned three days' happiness in heaven. And on the day when the righteous man is parted from the wicked, the tears of everyone, thereupon, run down unto his legs. And after they set apart a father from his consort, a brother from his brother, a friend from his friend, they suffer, everyone for his own deeds, and weep; the righteous for the wicked, and the wicked about himself. For there may be a father who is righteous and a son wicked; or one brother who is righteous and the other wicked. And those deserving death, undergo a punishment known as "the punishment of three nights."

Among the Wise Lord's producers of the renovation of the universe, those righteous of whom it is written that they are living, fifteen men and fifteen damsels, will come to the assistance of the Saoshyants or Saviors. And as Gokihar falls in the celestial sphere from a moonbeam on to the earth, the distress of the earth becomes such like that of a sheep when a wolf falls upon it. Afterwards, the fire and halo melt the metal of Shatvairo, in the hills and mountains, and it remains on earth like a river. Then all the residue of men will pass into that melted metal, to become purified. To the righteous it seems just as though he walks continually in warm milk; but to the wicked it seems as though he walks continually in melted metal. Afterwards, with great affection, all men come together, father and son, brother and friend, and ask one another, saying; Where hast thou been all this time, and what was the judgement upon thy soul? Hast thou been judged righteous or wicked? All men become of one voice and administer loud praise to the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, and the Archangels.

The Wise Lord completes his work at that time; and Saoshyants, with their assistants, perform a Yazisn ceremony in preparing the dead, by slaughtering the ox Hadhayos in that Yazisn. From the fat of the ox and the white Hom they prepare Hush (Hushish) and give to all men; and they become immortal and everlasting. And whosoever has been the size of a man, they restore him with an age of forty years; and they who have been little, they restore them to the age of fifteen years. And they give everyone his wife and his children; so they act now as in the world, but there is no begetting of children.

Then Saoshyants and their assistants, by order of the Creator, the Wise Lord, give every man his reward and recompense suitable to his deeds; this is the righteous existence where they convey him to paradise, and the heaven of the Wise Lord takes up the body as itself requires; with that assistance he continually advances forever and everlasting. At the end, the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, seizes on the evil spirit Ahriman; Vohumano on Akoman; Ashavahist on Andar; Shatvairo on Savar; Spendarmad (Spenta Armaiti) on Taromat (Naunghas); Horvadad and Amerodad on Tairev and Zairik, true speaking on what is evil speaking; Sraosha on Aeshmodai. Then two fiends remain at large, Ahriman and Azi Dahak (Zohak). The Wise Lord comes to the world, himself the Zota, Sraosha the Raspi. Gokihar burns the serpent in the melted metal, and the stench and pollution which were in hell are burned in that metal, and hell becomes quite pure. The Wise Lord sets the vault into which the evil spirit fled in that metal; he brings the land of hell back for the enlargement of the world; the renovation arises in the universe by his will, and the world is purified once again.

The Essence of Zarathustra's Religion

There are five dispositions of priests, and ten admonitions with which all instruction as to the religion are connected. Of the five dispositions, the first is innocence (not becoming guilty). The second is discrimination and discernment, to be able to see the difference between the good and evil thoughts, words, and deeds; to be able to fully distinguish between the qualities of righteousness and wickedness. The third is authoritativeness, because the priestly master is always wiser, and teaches with authority, using correct words in sobriety. The fourth disposition is to understand and consider the ceremonial and the ritualistic aspects of religion, for it is necessary for the manifestation of the Wise Lord's glory, and to give continuity to the religion. And the fifth disposition is to struggle prayerfully, day and night, with your own fiend (lower self, natural man, or Devil); and all life long not to depart from steadfastness, nor allow your proper duty to go out of your hands.

And the first of the ten dispositions is to proceed with good repute, that you may exalt your teacher, high priest, master, and Creator.

The second is to refrain from all evil repute, that it may not bring friction and loss of power to the righteous.

The third is to be reverent and faithful to your teachers and guides, and never to bring their name or reputation to shame.

The fourth is to deliver back to the worthy, whatever has been taught liberally by your own teachers and guides.

The fifth is that the reward of doers of good work, and punishment of the criminals have to be established by law, for the sake of progress.

The sixth is to keep the way of the good and the righteous open to your house, for the sake of making righteousness welcome in your own abode.

The seventh is that, for the sake of not developing the fiend insensibly in your reason, you are not to keep it with the religion of the good, nor to remain in impenitence of sin.

The eighth is that, for the sake of severing the fiend from the reason, you must force malice away from your thoughts, and to become quickly repentant of sin.

The ninth is to fully understand the forward movement of the religion; and to keep the advancement of the religion further forwards, and to seek your share of duty therein; and on a backward movement, when adversity happens to the religion, to put forth diligent efforts to bring it back on its track of forward movement, and to keep your body in the continence of religion.

The tenth is that there is to be a period of obedience toward the ruler and priestly authority, the high-priesthood of the religion.

Now, for what purpose is a righteous man (or woman) created for the world; and in what manner is it necessary for him to exist in the world? Behold, the Creator created the creatures for progress, which is his wish; and it is necessary for us to promote whatever is his wish, so that we may obtain whatever is our wish. And since the persistent Creator is powerful, whatever is our wish, as long as we remain true and faithful, such is as it were deserving of his wish, which is for our obtainment of whatever is our wish.

The creatures are created for the performance of what is desirable for the Creator; and the performance of what is desirable for the Creator is necessary for two purposes, the practice of worship and contention. As the worship is that of the persistent Creator, who is a friend to his own creatures; the contention is that of the fiend, the contender who is an enemy to the creation of the Creator.

For when the Wise Lord, the Creator, accomplished his most perfect and wholly miraculous creation, and his unwavering look, which was upon the coming on of the wandering evil spirit; the erratic, unobservant spirit, was unmingled with the sight of an eye, he made a spirit of observant temperament, which was the necessary soul, the virtuous Lord of the body moving into the world. And the animating life, the preserving guardian spirit, the acquiring intellect, the protecting understanding, the deciding wisdom, the demeanor which is itself a physician, the impelling strength; the eye for what is seen, the ear for what is heard, the nose for what is smelt, the mouth for recognizing flavor, the body for approaching the assembly of the righteous, the heart and mind for thinking, the tongue for speaking, the hand for working, the foot for walking; these which make life comfortable, the developments in creation, which are to join the body, are to be considered perfected, are urged on by Him continuously, and the means of industry of the original body are arranged advisedly. Moreover, by proper regulation, and the recompense of good thoughts, good words, good deeds, he announced and adorned conspicuous, patient, and virtuous conduct; and the procurer of the indispensible did not forget to keep men in his own true service and proper bounds, the supreme sovereignty of the Creator.

And man became a pure glorifier and pure praiser of that all-good friend, the Wise Lord, through the progress which is his wish. Because pure friendship is owing to sure meditation on every virtue, and from its existence no harm whatever arose; pure glorifying is owing to glorifying every goodness; and from its existence no vileness whatever arose; and pure praising is owing to all prosperity, and from its existence no distress whatever arose.

Thus a righteous man is the creature by whom is accepted that occupation which is provided for him, and is fully watchful in the world as to his not being deceived by the rapacious fiend. And as a determiner, by wisdom of the will of the Creator, one who is himself a propitiator, understander, and a promoter of the understanding of goodness; of whatever pertains to him, the Creator, he is a giver of heed thereto; and it is necessary for him to be thus, so that such greatness and goodness may also be his more securely in the Spiritual existence.

The Mazdayasnian Confession

I confess as a Mazda-worshipper of the Order of Zarathustra, estranged from the Daevas (demon-gods), devoted to the lore of the Lord; a praiser of the bountiful Immortals the Amesha-Spentas and the Archangels, the Yazatas. And to Ahura Mazda, the Holy One, the Wise Lord of truth and light, I attribute all things good.

I choose piety, bounteous and good, mine may she be. Therefore, I loudly deprecate all robbery and violence against the Mazdayasnian villages; against our families, our liberties, and our rights of worship. Never may I stand as a source of wasting or withering to the Mazdayasnian villages, not for the love of body or life. Away do I abjure the shelter and headship of the Daevas, evil as they are; aye, utterly bereft of good and void of virtue; deceitful in their wickedness, of all beings, like the Demon-of-the-Lie, the most loathsome of existing things. Off, off, do I abjure the Daevas and all possessed by them, the sorcerers and all that hold to their devices, every existing being of the sort; their thoughts do I abjure, their words and actions, and their seed that propagate their sin.

I, myself, in whatsoever circumstances I may be placed, as a worshipper of the Wise Lord, and of the order of Zarathustra, would so abjure the Daevas and their shelter, as did the holy Spitamas Zarathustra of old. To that religious sanctity to which the waters appertain, do I belong; to that sanctity to which the plants and the kine of blessed gift, and the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, who created both kine and holy men, belongs, do I. Yea, of that religious faith which every savior (saoshyant) and the holy ones who do the deeds of real significance, of that creed and lore am I.

A worshipper of the Wise Lord I am, of Zarathustra's order; so do I confess, as a praiser and confessor; and therefore I praise aloud the well-thought thought, the word well-spoken, and the deed well-done. Yet I praise at once the faith of Mazda, the faith which has no faltering utterance, the faith that wields the felling halbert; the faith of kindred marriage sanctified by the Lord; the holy creed, which is the most imposing, best, and most marvellous of all existing religions; and of all that shall in the future come to knowledge of the Lord's faith and Zarathustrain creed. Yea, to the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, do I ascribe all good; and such shall be the worship of the Mazdayasnian.

The Third Separation of the Third Millennium (and the Renovation of the World)

Now, the Wise Lord, the Holy One, was and is the Son of God who is the holiest among all other gods in the eternal Kingdom. This One God, even the Only Begotten of the Father, is the imbibement of all the sacred knowledge and hidden mysteries of the Holy Order. He is the possessor of all the truths and intelligences of the power realm, which are hid from all mankind of the world. The Son of God, or the Son of the Father in Heaven, the Savior and Messiah of the universe, was and is foreordained; and is taken from among the children of men, and placed in the womb of the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God, which before the time of Adam was known as the Holy Order of Zarathustra.

But, because the record keeping began in the time of Seth, circa 3761 B.C., and the book of generations and the book of remembrance began to be kept from that time onward, the name of the order of Zarathustra was not used in the Shemitic record keeping, but the Order of the Son of God was used after the time of Adam; which later came to be known as the Order of Melchizedek, after c.2370 B.C. And Adam was the first high priest of the Order, chosen from among men, andappointed in behalf of men, over the things pertaining to God. Thus by the time of Seth son of Adam, the Priesthood of God was three thousand years old in 3618 B.C. And at this time the first three thousand years of purely Spiritual existence ended; and the temporal or worldly was mixed with the eternal or the Spiritual.

Also this First Separation of the Third Millennium marks the organization and framing of the Holy Order of the Priesthood of God; and the establishment of the office of the Prophet, or Guardian Spirit, of the Order. And as the Lord himself was and is the head of all the heavenly (unseen) archangels; the Prophet or the Guardian Spirit was and is appointed the head of all the earthly (seen) archangels.

And through the eternal works of grace and mercy of the Father, and his Only Begotten Son, all prophets or guardian spirits were raised unto immortality and eternal life; for unto this end they were created, by their decree; grace upon grace, until the fulness was achieved, and they became illuminated as the Sun (Son). And no man can enter the Kingdom of Christ, of the Lord Messiah, the Holy One, except by the grace and mercy of the Son of God, the Redeemer and Savior of all mankind. This Most High God sitteth upon the eternal throne of the Kingdom of God which was prepared for him by his Father, from the endless light, in 6618 B.C. And he was set there to redeem and save those who are fallen and dead in the Spirit; those who kept not their first estate, and were therefore cast out from the presence of the Father in heaven; that if they repent and forsake their evil and wicked ways, and become obedient to the plan of redemption and salvation, which he hath prepared for them, they might dwell again in his presence; and partake of the manifold blessings which only can be received through the Lord, and no one else.

The birth of Zarathustra of the Spitamas (in 618 B.C.) marks the end of the second 3000 years of mixed existence; and the beginning of a worldly state. The Third Separation of the Third Millennium will take place in 2382 A.D., and the renovation of the world will then commence. Amen. Ashem Vohu.

Now, the Wise Lord, or Ahura Mazda, is characterized by wisdom, undeceived and undeceiving, bounteous and perfect. He is the mother and father of creation, that made the paths of the sun, moon, and stars. He was, is, and will be, for he is eternal. It is said that the Lord wears a star-decked robe; and his fairest forms are the sun on high and the light on earth, and the swift-horsed sun is his eye. His throne is in the highest or celestial heaven. There he holds court, and ministering angels carry out his commands. The Wise Lord is above all perfect goodness; he has no association with the evil. God is the source of all, good, light, life, beauty, joy, peace, health, and salvation. He is the power behind every throne, and the inspiration of all that is true, whose earthly symbol is the righteous man.

Besides the Eternal Father, and the Wise Lord, there were seven Immortals, the Amesha Spentas, sons and daughters of God. These seven beings or aspects of God, Spenta Mainyu, he had created by an act of will, namely: Vohumano (Vohu Manah), Asha (Ashavahist), Kshathra Vairya (Shatvairo), Armaiti (Spendarmad), Haurvatat (Horvadad), Ameretat (Amerodad), and Sraosha (Srosh). In English they are translated: Bounteous Spirit (Holy Spirit, increase of the Lord's power), the Good Mind (Spirit of Goodness, Faith and Hope, Piety, Purity, Righteousness), the Desired Kingdom, Devotion, Integrity, Immortality, and Obedience to the Holy Word. These were the Seven or Amesha-Spentas, also called the Seers; and they belonged to the celestial archangels or Yazatas, that are invisible, of whom the head is the Wise Lord; and to the terrestrial archangels or Yazatas, that are seen, of whom the head is Zarathustra. It is said that there are 100,000 Yazatas. (Later, there were 144,000 such ones sealed unto Christ.)

The essential characteristic of God is the Bounteous or Holy Spirit; this alone belongs to God, but the other aspects are facets of God in which man can share. They are the means by which God approaches man, and man approaches God; thus, whosoever gives heed to the Wise Lord and obeys him, will attain Integrity and Immortality through the deeds of Good Mind. For it is through the Good Mind that men pursue the paths of Righteousness (or Truth), gain Integrity and Immortality, and thereby attain the Kingdom. Thus man can share in the nature of God, and fulfill his religious duty to become united with his Creator and Maker.

It is said that the origin of these seven aspects of God is based on the characteristics of ancient Gods. All seven sit on golden thrones beside the Wise Lord in their abode the House of Song, the haven to which the righteous pass at death. Each of the Immortals protects a part of the Lord's creation: Vohumano protects animals, Asha the fire, Kshathra the metal, Armaiti the earth, Ameretat the plants, Haurvatat the water and Sraosha is the heavenly guard of the world. Man stands under the protection of the Wise Lord himself.

Now Vohumano, the firstborn of the Lord, sits at his right hand, and acts as counsellor. Although he protects useful animals in the world, he visits mankind also, as he visited Zarathustra of the Spitamas. And it is Vohumano who keeps daily records of men's thoughts, words, and deeds. At death the righteous soul is greeted by Vohumano, and led by him to the highest heaven. For Good Mind is the personification of God's wisdom, working in man, it leads him to God; it is through the Good Mind that the knowledge of the Good Religion is attained. The demons to whom Vohumano is opposed are: Aeshma or Ashmodai, the demon of wrath and fury, Azi or Zohak (Wrong-Mindedness); and above all Akah-mano (or Akah Mana), meaning Vile Thoughts or Discord.

Asha is the most marvellous of the Immortals, it represents truth, hope, faith, piety, purity, and righteousness (it also means the cosmic righteous order pervading all things pure). It is the opposite of untruth, deceit, or vileness. Those who do not know Asha forfeit heaven, for they are outside the whole order of God. Asha preserves order on earth for he smites disease, death, fiends, sorcerers, vile creatures, and all that are outside the whole order of God. Asha preserves order in hell, by seeing to it that demons do not punish the wicked more than they deserve. His chief opponent is Indira, who represents the spirit of apostasy; for apostasy is that which draws men away from the law and order of God.

The Kshathra Vairya, the Desired Kingdom, is the most abstract of the Immortals. He is the personification of God's might, majesty, dominion, and power. In the celestial world, it represents the kingdom of heaven; and on earth that kingdom which establishes God's will on earth, by helping the poor and the needy, and by overcoming all evil. Because of his protection of metals, he is associated with the stream of molten metal that will test all men at the end of the world. It is through Kshathra Vairya (Kshatra Vairyo, or Shatvairo) that the Lord allots final rewards and punishments. His chief opponent is Saura, the arch-demon of Misgovernment, Anarchy, and Drunkenness.

The Immortal Armaiti is a daughter of the Wise Lord, and sits at his left hand, as she presides over the earth, to give pasture to the cattle. But her true character is in her name, which means Fit-mindedness, or Devotion. She is the personification of faithful obedience, religious harmony, and worship. Armaiti is distressed when robbers, evil men, and disrespectful wives walk free in their error's gloomy ways. But she rejoices when the righteous cultivate the land and rear cattle, or when a righteous son is born. Her chief opponents are Taromaiti (Presumption), and Pairimaiti (Crooked-mindedness).

The other two female Immortals are Haurvatat (Horvadad, or Khurdad) and Ameretat (Amerodad or Amardad); Haurvatat, meaning Wholeness or Fulness of Integrity, is the personification of human Salvation. Ameretat, or deathlessness, is the other aspect of salvation, meaning Immortality. They are associated with water and vegetation, their gifts are herds of cattle, and they represent the ideals of vigor, the sources of life and growth. Their chief opponents are Thirst and Hunger.

Now Sraosha, Obedience and Discipline, who first taught the law, as a heavenly guard of the world, wakes at the third hour of night; he wakes the rooster that drives away the demon of sleep from mankind. He is one of the most important of the Gods, for he is embodied in the prayers and hymns of the faithful; and as god, conveys their messages to heaven. He is also referred to as the "holy ritual chief." Sraosha is the best smiter of Lie; with his battle axe he smashes the skulls of demons and hews down the works of Angra Mainyu. But his chief opponent is Aeshma or Ashmodai, the demon of wrath and fury. For Obedience is the embodiment of the Holy Word; it is the victorious force in the constant battle against the destructive forces of darkness and evil. It is said that Sraosha was the first to chant the hymns, to spread the sacred ritual twigs, the barsom or baresma, and to offer prayer to the Wise Lord. Moreover, Sraosha dwells on the highest peak of mount Haraiti, in his house with a thousand pillars; and protects the world at night when the demons are on the prowl. His house is self-lit within, and lit by the stars without. He is drawn from there in his chariot by four fine white horses with swift golden feet.

Therefore, performance of rituals requires obedience to the Holy Word, and obedience to the embodiment of the Holy Word. Rituals and obedience are forces which preserve the soul, and ultimately determine its fate. And it is obedience to the Divine Word (Mathra), that enables the individual to reach the Wise Lord. It is for this reason Sraosha was made one of the Immortals who, with Mithra (Friend or Savior), and Rashnu, presides over the judgement of the soul upon death, when the dead are put on a scale and the soul is weighed upon a balance.

Now, besides the seven Immortals or Amesha Spentas, namely: Vohumano (Good Mind), Ashavahisto (of Faith, Hope, Piety, Purity, and Righteousness), Kshathra Vairya or Shatvairo (of desired characteristics of rulership, and things of the Kingdom), Armaiti or Spendarmad (of Devotion and Fit-mindedness), Hорvadad or Haurvatat (of Fulness of Integrity), and Amerodad or Ameretat (of Immortality and Salvation), and Sraosha or Srosh (of Obedience to the Holy Word); there are Yazatas or Archangels, the Worshipful Ones. In the heavenly council the Yazatas rank third in importance after the Wise Lord. There are heavenly or invisible Yazatas, of whom the Wise Lord is the head; and there are earthly ones, of whom the head is the prophet, or Zarathustra, the anointed one of the Lord. And the most important of the Worshipful Ones are: Mithra (Jeshua or Jesus in Hebrew); Varuna, Rapithwin, Verethraghna, Tishtriya, Anahita, and Vayu; and of the cult or telestial gods, Atar and Haoma. The illustration below may further illuminate this noble truth concerning the Fatherhood of God, and the original Creation:

ETERNAL FATHER
(Zurvan, Amitabha, the Lord God, Ancient of the Ancients, Eternal Time)

THE WISE LORD
(Ahura Mazda, Allah Táála, Adhonai Yehweh, the Holy One, the Lord of the Righteous; the God of Truths, Lights, and Perfections.)

SEVEN AMESHA-SPENTAS
(The Immortals, the Sons and Daughters of the Wise Lord; they have the power to See.)

1. Vohumano (Vohu Manah; Good Mind)
2. Asha or Ashavahisto (Faith, Hope, Piety, Purity, and Righteousness)
3. Kshatra Vairyo (Shatvairo; Dominion, Desired Kingdom)
4. Armaiti or Spendarmad (Devotion and Fit-mindedness, Piety)
5. Horvadad (Haurvatat, Khurdad; Fullness of Integrity and Well-being)
6. Amerodad (Ameretat or Amardad; Immortality and Salvation)
7. Sraosha (Srosh; Obedience to the Holy Word)

Ahriman
(Prince of Darkness, ruler of the Netherworld; Aharman, Lucifer, Angra Mainyu, Iblis, Shaitan, the Wicked One; the Demon of the Demons. His seven Daevas, or evil spirits, hover in the air, always tempting men to crime and sin; forever engaged in war upon the Son, the Wise Lord, and every form of righteousness. The kingdom of Ahriman is a shadow of the righteous kingdom of the Wise Lord; distorted by the ripples and waves of the cosmic ocean; and continues in its secret combinations and numbers, greed, envy, lusts, covetousness, hunger, thirst, anger, mortality, and disease, forever and ever.)

WORSHIPFUL or VENERABLE ONES
(Yazatas or Archangels)
Seven most important ones:
Mithra
Varuna
Rapithwin
Verethraghna
Tishtriya
Anahita or Aneeta
Vayu

TELESTIAL or CULT GODS
Out of the many, the two most important ones:
Atar (Fire)
Haoma or Soma (Sacred Plant)

Now, although the power and authority of the yazatas is ranked third in the heavenly council of the Wise Lord, their powers pervade the earth, the terrestrial world, and also to the telestial realm. An insight into the nature of these seven yazatas, namely Mithra (Mithras or Mitra), Varuna, Rapithwin, Verethraghna, Tishtriya, Anahita or Aneeta, and Vayu; and also the Immortals and the Son, and Father, can be gained through these five hymns which were used in the rituals and sacrifices that were offered during Tammuz 25-29 (July 7-11) 1991 A.D., to commemorate annually the five days of Atonement; by fasting, praising the Lord, and renewing the covenant by kindling the five candles, which symbolize the communion with the Father, the Son, the Immortals, (Amesha Spentas), the Worshipful Ones (yazatas), and the two cult gods of fire and haoma.

Now these are the words which were uttered during the rituals:

Hymn to the Sun, Atar, and Haoma

We sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed Sun; for the increase of the world of holiness; for the increase of the undying, shining, swift-horsed sun.

We offer up a sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed sun; to withstand darkness, to withstand the demon-gods born of darkness; to withstand the robbers and bandits; to withstand Yatus and Pairikas, the tempters and corrupters of soul; to withstand death that creeps in unseen.

We rejoice in offering to the Eternal Father, to Ahura Mazda, to the Amesha-Spentas, to the heavenly and earthly Yazatas, and to Atar and Haoma this humble sacrifice.

Yea, this day, on the seventh of July, we offer our sacrifice unto Atar and Haoma. Worthy of sacrifice indeed art thou, O Fire! son of Ahura Mazda. May thou O Atar, the good and bold warrior, the symbol of Ahura Mazda, accept this sacrifice and our offering; as we light this fire without the fire altar, and without covering our mouth; for the breath of this priest shall not defile the sacred flame, but shall sanctify it with our righteousness and sacrifice.

May thou, O Atar, do the battle, not with the demons of drought, but with spiritual demons of darkness.

And on this selfsame day, we offer our sacrifice unto Haoma, also the great fighter and warrior, that killed the horned dragon.

Yea, we offer unto the celestial Haoma, son of Ahura Mazda, the Divine Priest. Yet, O thou divine priest, the faithful do kill thee, in that they press thee, and squeeze thy juice. And from thy death, O divine priest, comes the life and strength of the faithful.

We dedicate this day unto thee O celestial Haoma; and shall remember thee each year on the selfsame day, the seventh of July; not through pressing thee or killing thee, but magnifying thee, thy power and glory; through prayer and sacrifice.

We therefore kindle this sacred flame to magnify Haoma and Atar; and we do it all in the name of the Father, and in the name of the Son, and in the name of the Holy Ghost. Amen. Ashem Vohu!

Hymn to the Worshipful Ones (Yazatas)

This day, the eighth of July, we dedicate to Mithra, Varuna, Rapithwin, Verethraghna, Tishtriya, Anahita, and Vayu; the Worshipful Ones, the Yazatas (or Archangels).

O Mithra, the god of Contract or Covenant, of Friendship, we honor thee this day. For thou preserveth Order and Truth, and attacketh and defeateth the demons of Lie; for thou judgeth when the contract concerning the different periods of world history are completed; for in thy concern for Truth, thou judgeth the soul at death; and brandisheth thy mace over hell three times each day so that the demons do not inflict greater punishment on sinners than they deserve.

O Mithra, the ruler of the day, with a thousand eyes, and ten thousand ears, we remember thee this day. O thou great warrior and judge who wast born from the Rock as a youth; whose birth was attended by the torch-bearers, the Cautes and Cautapates and by the shepherds with their flocks. Are not the banquets of the Magi thy communion meal? Are not the priests initiated in the Dar-i-Mithr, the portico of Mithra? Was not the primeval Mithra likened to the Savior? Did not the ancient prophecies speak of a star that would lead the Magi, the Wise Men of the fireworshippers, to the birthplace of the Savior? Before thy ascension to heaven, did thou not share a communion meal with Sol, reclining behind a table, with four loaves of bread, each bearing a sign of the cross? Wast thou not shown as a young boy with a halo around his head? Why then art thou not called Jesus the Christ?

To thee O Varuna, a foremost king, and a mighty emperor, who sits in a great palace in heaven; whose spies sit around him, and fly all over the world, to bring back reports on the conduct of mortals.

O Guardian of the Rta, the cosmic order, of the highest ethics; the pure and holy, the despiser of sin, to thee, O Varuna, we dedicate this day. Can two men, even in the most secret of places, above, below, or all across, make secret plans, and thou know it not? O thou punisher of sin; the despiser of lie, and evil deeds prompted by anger, drink, or gambling. Doth thou not visit the sins of the individual; and like Yehweh of Old, visit the sins of his ancestors upon him, and see to it that there is no escape for the sinner? Doth thou not catch and bind evil-doers in their own snares, so that they become diseased with dropsy, and descend to the House of Clay, the subterranean Sheol?

O thou Varuna of True Speech, the companion of Mithra, together do ye not mount the shining chariot, and dwell in a golden mansion with a thousand pillars and a thousand doors? Yea, this day we remember thee, O Varuna, and thy companion and our friend Mithra.

O Rapithwin, the lord of the Noon-day Heat, and of the summer months, we remember thee this day. Was it not at the time of day belonging to Rapithwin that the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, performed the sacrifice which brought forth creation? And will it not be at the end of time, that at the time of Rapithwin the resurrection of the dead will be completed, O thou lord of the primeval time and of the renovation? Art thou not, O Rapithwin, active year by year, that each time the demon of winter invades the world, thou retreateth beneath the earth and keepeth the subterranean waters warm, so that plants and trees do not die? Doth not thou return to earth each year in springtime, to remind mankind of the final triumph of good over evil; when evil will be finally defeated, and God's rule on earth will be made manifest?

Is not the feast of Rapithwin part of the festival of Nau-roz (Nauruz), both the new day of the actual year, and the New Day of the future time? Is not thy coming to earth, O Rapithwin, a time of joy and hope, a symbol of the final triumph of all that ariseth out of the Good Creation?

O thou Verethraghna of ten forms, the powerful and irresistible force of victory; we dedicate this day to thee. Did thou not possess ten forms, O Verethraghna, even ten incarnations? And each form expressing the dynamic force of God? The first incarnation being of a strong wind; the second of the shape of a bull with yellow ears and golden horns; the third, of a white horse with golden trappings; the fourth, of a burden-bearing camel, sharp-toothed, stamping forward; the fifth, of a wild boar, sharp-toothed that kills at one stroke, wrathful and strong; the sixth, of a youth of the age of fifteen; the seventh, of a swift bird, of a raven; the eighth, of a wild ram; the ninth, of a fighting buck; and the tenth form of a man holding a sword with a golden blade?

O thou Verethraghna, strongest in strength, most victorious in victory, and most glorious in glory; that accompanieth Mithra in his form as a boar, and also flies in front of him; and cuts to pieces everything at once, mingling together on the ground the bones, the hair, the brains, and the blood of men of false contract or covenant; O thou enforcer of the law! Yea, this day we remember thee with all the other Yazatas, the Worshipful Ones!

O Tishtriya of three forms, we remember thee this day; for thou art a beneficent force involved in a cosmic battle against the life-destroying demon of drought, Apaosha. O thou the bright and glorious star, the seed of the waters, the source of rain and growth (fertility). Is not the fourth month of the year, Tammuz, (between June and July) dedicated to thee, O Tishtriya? And in the first ten days of the month do thou not take on the form of a fifteen year old man; the second ten days, the form of a bull; and in the third ten days the form of a horse? Was it not thou, O Tishtriya, in these forms, who produced the water at the beginning of creation; and each drop of rain which thou didst produce became as big as a bowl, so that the land was covered with water to the height of man; and caused the noxious creatures to retreat into the holes of the earth; and then the wind spirit swept the waters to the ends of the earth, thus forming the cosmic ocean?

Did thou not, O Tishtriya, go down to the cosmic ocean in the shape of a beautiful white horse with golden ears and golden trappings; and meet the demon Apaosha in the shape of a black horse, terrifying in his appearance with his black ears and tail; and hoof against hoof fight with him three days and nights, and it was Apaosha who proved the stronger? Then did thou not cry unto the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, in woe and distress, saying: I am weak because men have not been offering me proper prayers and sacrifices? Then the Creator himself offered a sacrifice unto thee, O Tishtriya, and thou wert infused with the strength of ten horses, ten camels, ten bulls, ten mountains, and ten rivers. Then again when thou had met Apaosha hoof against hoof, fortified by the power of the Lord's sacrifice, thou didst prove triumphant against the fiend; and the rain waters were able to flow down again to the fields and pastures, unrestrained; and the rain clouds rising from the cosmic ocean were propelled by the wind, and the life-giving rain poured down on the seven regions of the earth.

Yea, O Tishtriya, this day we do remember thee in our prayers and humble sacrifice.

O thou, Ardvi Sura Anahita, the goddess of undefiled waters, and the source of all waters upon earth; the source of all fertility and purification of the seed of all men, the sanctifier of the womb and breasts of all females; we remember thee this day.

Art thou not, O Anahita, from thy heavenly home, the source of the cosmic ocean, O thou strong, bright and beautiful, of pure and noble birth; wearer of a golden crown with eight rays and a hundred stars, a golden mantle, and a golden necklace. Did not the ancient kings of Persia and other nations erect statues of thee in the cities of Babylon, Damascus, Ecbatana, Sardis, and Shushan (Susa); and did they not worship thee in Armenia as the mother of all wisdom and as a daughter of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda? And did they not build temples in Anatolia, where the daughters of the nobles served thee in thy shrine before their marriage; and the priestesses serve thee, taking a vow of chastity?

Yea, this day we remember thee, O Anahita the goddess of undefiled waters, with all other Worshipful Ones, and dedicate this day unto thee!

O thou Vayu, the Wind, we remember thee this day; thou bringer of life in the rain cloud, and of death in the storm; thou rider of a swift-running chariot drawn by a hundred or even a thousand horses; producer of lightning, who makes the dawn appear. O thou ruler of the Void, the neutral one, of both good and evil natures, whose paths no one can escape. O thou mover through both worlds, the world of the Good Spirit and of the Evil Spirit.

O thou Vayu, who goeth forward, who goeth backward, who hurls away and hurls down; the most valiant, the strongest, the firmest and stoutest of the warriors; who protects the good creation of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda; who wears the raiment of warfare, and carries a sharp spear, and weapons made of gold, and ventures forth to pursue his enemies, we remember thee this day. Did not the Creator offer up a sacrifice on a golden throne under golden beams covered by a golden canopy, asking that thou mightest smite the evil creation, that the good creation might be preserved?

Yea, this day we do offer a humble sacrifice unto thee, O Vayu, that thou mayest continue to protect all the good creations of the Lord. Amen. Ashem Vohu!

Hymn to the Immortal Ones (Amesha-Spentas)

On this third day, July 9th, we offer our humble offerings and sacrifice unto the Immortal Ones, the Amesha-Spentas. To these seven sons and daughters of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, namely: Vohumano, Asha-vahisto, Kshathra Vairya (Kshatra Vairyo), Armaiti, Horvadad, Amerodad, and Sraosha, we dedicate this day by the power of the Holy Spirit and the Knowledge of God.

To thee, O Vohumano, the firstborn of God, who sits at the right hand of the Wise Lord, and serves him as his counsellor, we remember thee this day. O thou protector of useful animals in the world, and the keeper of the daily record of men's thoughts, words, and deeds, we remember thee this day. For is it not thou who greeteth the righteous soul at death and leads him to the highest heaven? Art thou not the personification of God's wisdom, working in men to God? Is it not through the Good Mind that the knowledge of the Good Religion is attained, and in no other way? Art thou not opposed to the demons Aeshma (Ashmodai), Zohak (Azi-Dahak), and Akah-mano; the demons of wrath, wrong-mindedness, and vile thoughts or discord? Yea, we do remember thee this day, O Vohumano, and dedicate this day unto thee.

Thee, O Ashavahisto, the embodiment of faith, hope, righteousness, truth, piety, and purity, we remember thee this day. Those who do not know thee, O Asha, do they not forfeit heaven, for they are outside the whole order of God? Do not the righteous pray that this aspect of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, be seen by them, that they might follow thee, and dwell in the joyous paradise? Doth not thou preserve the divine law and moral order in the world, and smite disease, death, fiends, vile creatures, and all who rebel against the law and will of God? Doth not thou, O Asha, preserve order in hell also, by seeing that the demons do not punish the wicked more than they deserve? Art thou not opposed to Indra, who represents the Spirit of Apostasy, for apostasy is that which draws men away from the law and order of God?

Thee, O Kshathra Vairya, the Desired Kingdom, the personification of God's might, majesty, dominion and power, we remember this day. Art thou not, O Shatvairo, the representation of the kingdom of heaven in the celestial world, and the righteous kingdom on earth that helps the poor, the needy, the afflicted? Art thou not the protector of metals? Art thou not associated with the molten metal that will test all men at the end of the world? Art thou not the one through whom the Lord allots final rewards and punishments? Art thou not opposed to Saura, the arch-demon of Misgovernment, Anarchy, and Drunkenness, O Shatvairo?

We remember thee this day, O Armaiti, daughter of the Wise Lord, who sits on his left hand. Art thou not the Immortal that presideth over the earth, and giveth pasture to the cattle? Is not thy true character displayed in thy name, O Devotion, the Fit-minded one? Art thou not the personification of faithful obedience, religious harmony and worship? Did thou not visit Zarathustra of the Spitamas, O Spendarmad? Art thou not distressed when robbers, wicked men, and unfaithful wives walk free; and when foolish women are taken captive by the intrigues and deceptions of the demon-gods? And rejoiceth thou not, O spirit of faithful Devotion, when the righteous cultivate the land and raise cattle, or when a righteous child is born? Are not Taromaiti (Presumption) and Pairimaiti (Crooked-mindedness) thine opponents? Yea, this day we remember thee, O Armaiti, daughter of the Wise Lord.

We also remember this day two other Immortal daughters of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, namely: Horvadad and Amerodad. Horvadad the personification of the fulness of Integrity and Salvation; and Amerodad the personification of Immortality, the aspect of salvation. O Horvadad and Amerodad, are ye not associated with water and vegetation? Do ye not represent the ideals of vigor, the sources of life and growth; and bestow upon the faithful the gifts of wealth and herds of cattle? Are not your opponents Hunger and Thirst? Yea, we do remember you this day, Horvadad and Amerodad.

And thee, O Sraosha, who represents the divine aspect of Obedience and Discipline, we remember this day; who as a heavenly guard of the world wakes at the third hour of night, and wakes the rooster that drives away the demon of sleep from mankind; the one who is embodied in the prayers and hymns of the faithful. Art thou not the best smiter of Lie, and the holy ritual chief, O Srosh (Sraosha); and with thy battle axe doth not thou crush the skulls of the demons, and hew down the works of Angra Mainyu? Wert thou not the first to chant the hymns, to spread the sacred ritual twigs, and offer prayers to the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda?

Doth not thou dwell on the highest peak, mount Haraiti, in thy house with a thousand pillars, and protect the world at night when demons are on the prowl? Art thou not the embodiment of the Holy Word? And art thou not one of the judges with Mithra and Rashnu, that presideth over the judgement of the soul upon death, O Sraosha?

Yea, this day we dedicate to thee and all the Immortals, the Amesha-Spentas, the See of the Lord; who rank second only to the Wise Lord in the hierarchy of the Kingdom of the Eternal Father. Amen. Ashem Vohu!

Hymn to the Wise Lord

In ancient Arabic and Hebrew, Elohim or Allahim was the collective Holy Spirit or Ruh-el-Qudus of the wisest and oldest of Gods in heaven; and also the manifestation of their Holy Spirit in various forms, times, and places; this is the Lord God, or the Eternal Father in Heaven. And Allah or Eloh was and is the holiest among all other Gods in the eternal kingdom or the Holy Order. Now this One God, the true and living God of the righteous is known in the English language as Jesus Christ, or Jehovah.

But he is known from ancient times to various nations and peoples as: Ahura Mazda, Allah Táála, Adhonai Yehweh, the Holy One, the Most High God, and by other names. He is the eternal and everlasting God, the Lord of Wisdom and truths, lights and perfections; whose mercy and compassion extend to all those that call upon his name in meekness, in humility, in long-suffering, and in patience; for he is the Lord of the afflicted and the persecuted, who abhors iniquities, sins, transgressions, and ways of error; for he is the preserver and nurturer of the human Soul, and not the destroyer.

Now this One God, even the Son of God, for he was and is the Only Begotten of the Father, is the imbibement of all the sacred and hidden knowledge of the eternal mysteries of the eternal kingdom of God. He is the possessor of all the truths and intelligences of the power realm; which are hid from all mankind of the world. The Son of God, or the Son of the Father in Heaven, the Savior and Messiah of the universe, was and is foreordained; and is taken from among the children of men, placed in the womb of the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God, which before the time of Adam was known as the Holy Order of Zarathustra. But because the record-keeping began in the time of Seth, circa 3761 B.C.; and the book of generations and book of remembrance began to be kept from that time onward, the name of the Order of Zarathustra was not used in the Shemitic record-keeping, but the Order of the Son of God was used after the time of Adam; which later came to be known as the Order of Melchizedek after 2370 B.C.

In 3618 B.C. the Priesthood of God was three thousand years old; and at this time the first three thousand years of purely Spiritual existence ended; and the temporal or worldly was mixed with the eternal or Spiritual. Also this First Separation of the Third Millennium marks the organization and framing of the Holy Order of the Priesthood of God; and the establishment of the office of the Prophet, or the Guardian Spirit, of the Order. And as the Lord Messiah himself was and is the head of all the heavenly or unseen archangels; the Prophet or the Guardian Spirit was and is appointed the head of all the earthly or visible archangels.

Now no man can enter the kingdom of Christ, the Wise Lord, the Holy One, except by the grace and mercy of the Son of God, the Redeemer and Savior of all mankind. This Most High God sitteth upon the eternal throne of the Kingdom of God which was prepared for him by his Father, from the endless light, in 6618 B.C. And he was set there to redeem and save those who were fallen and dead in the Spirit; those who kept not their first estate, and were therefore cast out from the presence of the Father in heaven; that if they repent and forsake their evil and wicked ways, and become obedient to his plan of redemption and salvation, which he hath prepared for them, they might dwell again in his presence; and partake of the manifold blessings which only can be received through the Wise Lord, and no one else.

Now thus saith the Lord God the Father to his humble servant: Who needs the Lord of hosts? Can't a general of the army do; can't a captain of the guards do? Who needs the Lord of hosts, the God of the Jews and the nation of Israel, in the millennial day? Therefore, know this, my son, that the Lord of hosts is likened to Varuna, Mithra, and Yima (the Good Shepherd) of old, without whom the wheels of the material world would not turn, and only death, misery, and woe would prevail. Yea, only those who are at war with themselves, their spouses and families, with people, places and things; they that are in eternal bondage and misery which ariseth out of their rebellion against God's law, and their adherence to false beliefs; such are they, my son, that need the Lord of hosts, who doth redeem them, save them, and heal them. Know this also, my son, that he is the God of passions, even a jealous good shepherd, who himself is in bondage of the illusions of the flesh and the world; who hath not achieved the fulness of peace, joy, salvation, or enlightenment; for his nature is of the bliss of the world, and not the essence of the Spirit; his Soul is vexed, for he is burdened with the errors of the flesh and false beliefs of the world. Yet he is the builder of the kingdom, its defender and king.

Yea, the stiffnecked, the rebellious, the double-minded, such are they, my son, that need the Lord of hosts. They are the creatures whose roots are embedded in primeval ignorance and false beliefs of the Egyptians, Babylonians, and Indians. They prefer the yoke of the world, to the yoke of the Holy Word. They are driven by jealousy, envy, lust, covetousness, greed, anger, desire, and manifold false beliefs. The intents of their hearts are evil continually, and all their thoughts are carnal, base, and deathly. And for they are given into their feelings and sensations, rather than to the principles of the doctrines of the Holy Word, they are dead in the Spirit, only physical body, and emotions they possess, in the absence of Soul or their True Self (the Fravashi). Therefore all knowledge of the Lord their God is withheld from them. Yea, the Lord of hosts is their Messiah, through whom and no one else can mankind be redeemed and saved from its fallen existence. And without the Lord of hosts they can in no wise enter the kingdom of God; nor the kingdom of heaven, in which kingdom the fulness of salvation, enlightenment, love, compassion, joy, peace, and all that ariseth out of the Good Principle, are found.

Know this also, my son, saith the Eternal Father, that in the millennial day the Lord of hosts shall no longer be called by this name, but the Lord Messiah Jesus Christ shall be his name, forever. And as the Word became flesh in the time of Zarathustra, and others before him and after him, so shall the flesh become the Word in the Millennial day. Therefore a Lord of compassion shall emerge out of the Lord of passion. And while the prophets or guardian spirits shall be the Lords of hosts of the earthly armies, the Lord Messiah shall be the Lord of the heavenly hosts of archangels, as in the days of old. For, saith the Lord God, he will not be of the warriors or the rebellious lot; but of the womb of the holy and eternal priesthood of God shall he be; and from the seat of the Essence of the Holy Word shall he descend to the earth, in holiness and piety. Moreover, the Lord Messiah shall once again establish the foundation of a new Zion, the Good Land, and gather the righteous of the world in one place. Peace, safety, salvation, enlightenment, and healing shall be in his hands; Righteousness and the Holy Word shall be his weapons of war, even the most potent weapons from the foundation of the world.

Yea, we dedicate this day, the tenth of July, unto thee, O Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda; who is the personification of all wisdom, undeceived and undeceiving; the Lord of whom the questions are asked, the Holy One, the Unconquerable One, the All-seeing One, the Healing One, the Maker of the Material World, and the head of the Immortals, the Amesha-Spentas.

We sing our praises unto thee, O Holy One, of bounteous and perfect goodness, the mother and father of creation, the maker of the paths to the shining, undying, swift-horsed sun; and to the moon and stars; the ruler of the celestial, terrestrial, and telestial worlds. Thou, O Wise Lord, are above all perfect goodness; thou art the source of all that is good: light, life, beauty, joy, health; thou art the power behind every throne; the inspiration of all that is true, and whose earthly symbol is the righteous man.

Yea, O most marvellous God of the highest celestial heaven, we worship thee and sing thy praises in the English language, and call thee our Lord and Savior, the Lord Messiah for now and forever and ever. And on this auspicious day we declare the following confession of our faith:

We confess this day to be the worshippers of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda, our Lord Messiah and Savior; to be devoted to the lore of the Lord; to abhor and despise the Daevas, the demon gods, and to praise the bountiful Immortals the Amesha-Spentas; and to remember each year the Venerable Ones the Yazatas.

We confess to choose the life of piety, of virtue and goodness, and deprecate all robbery and violence against the faithful of the Lord. We abjure the shelter and headship of the Daevas, evil as they are; utterly bereft of good, void of virtue, deceitful and wicked; we abjure all beings who are possessed by the Demon-of-the-Lie, the most loathsome of existing beings, the sorcerers, and all that hold their devices; yea, their thoughts do we abjure, their words and actions, and their seed that propagate their sins we abjure.

Behold, this day we confess to be the worshippers of the Wise Lord, Ahura Mazda; and therefore we proclaim aloud good thoughts, good words, good deeds, good religion, and good life; which the Lord our God hath revealed unto us.

And we readily confess the faith of Mazda, the faith which has no faltering utterance; the faith that wields the felling halbert; the faith of kindred marriage, the holy creed, which is most imposing, supreme, and most marvellous of all the existing religions. Yea, to Ahura Mazda do we ascribe all good; and such shall be the worship of the Mazdayasnians, the faithful of the Lord. Amen. Ashem Vohu!

Hymn to the Eternal Father

On this last day of the fourth month of Tammuz (11th of July 1991 A.D.), we rejoice in offering our humble sacrifice unto the undying, shining, swift-horsed sun; whose light to the earth was somewhat darkened today by the interference of the moon; and in some places the earth was darkened for seven minutes. Yea, today we rejoice in dedicating this day unto our God the Eternal Father, the Father of our Wise Lord Ahura Mazda; to withstand darkness, to withstand robbers and bandits, to withstand death that creeps in unseen.

Yea, the Eternal Father, of Endless Time and Age, the Absolute, existed alone, before the creation of the first Savior or Lord Messiah; in pure worship, contemplation, and devotion. But wanting a son he offered sacrifices in righteousness for a thousand years to know the way of achieving this end. He did not offer sacrifices unto any God, for he was the highest; but because the offering of sacrifice has merit and power in and of itself.

After a thousand years of focus of all the archangels of the Kingdom on finding a way of producing a divine Son failed, they all gave up. At the selfsame moment twins were conceived within himself, for Zurvan the Eternal Father was the undifferentiated one. And of the twins, Ahura Mazda the Lord Messiah was the fulfillment of his wishes, and Ahriman the personification of his doubt. Then the Eternal Father vowed to bestow the gift of kingship upon whosoever son emerged from the womb of the Holy Priesthood first.

Now, Ahura Mazda, possessed with all divine attributes, was aware of this; and he informed his brother. Whereupon Ahriman ripped open the Womb, and presented himself to the Father Zurvan (or Amitabha) saying: I am your son, Ahura Mazda, the Wise Lord! And the Father replied: My son is light and fragrant, but thou art dark and stinking. Then Ahriman wept bitterly, for his thoughts, words and works were wicked and evil. Moreover, Ahriman had no faith or hope in the power of God; who was and is capable of removing all afflictions, even unto the resurrection of the dead.

And when Ahura Mazda, the Wise Lord, appeared, the Heavenly Father recognized him immediately, as the fulfillment of his wishes; and offered him the sacred twigs, the symbol of the Priesthood of the Order of Zarathustra. Then he gave Ahriman the rule of the world for nine thousand years. And by the power and wisdom of Ahura Mazda he created the heavens and earth; and although the Wise Lord knew the works of his brother Ahriman, his brother had no knowledge or inclination to know the hidden or Spiritual matters of the Kingdom. The power of the two, therefore, was and is limited and separate: Ahura Mazda dwelling on high in the endless lights, and Ahriman in the depths of darkness below; and between the two was and is the great void of the Druj or the Hypocrites, the Double-minded.

Now, Ahriman, ever ignorant and wicked, was not aware of the Wise Lord's existence. But as soon as he saw the Wise Lord and the light, his destructive nature (which included jealousy, envy, lethargy, and wrong-mindedness) prompted him to attack and destroy. Thereupon the Wise Lord offered him peace if he would only praise the Good Creation. But Ahriman, judging others by himself, rejected the offer, thinking that an offer of peace would make him weak, and sought to destroy the Lord and all his creation, not knowing that the eyes and ears of the Lord and the Order are upon him forever and ever.

But the Wise Lord knew that if the battle were to continue forever, as the Wicked One had intended, he would work quietly his secret combinations to see the end of all that is good and of God; and would attack when least expected. Therefore the Lord suggested a fixed period of battle. And Ahriman being deluded and slow-witted consented, and was thereby subdued and defeated.

It was for this reason that the Wise Lord, with the help of the Father, began to create Spiritual sons and daughters. First he created the Immortals, the Amesha-Spentas, then the Worshipful Ones the Yazatas; then he began the creation of the material world. Hosanna to the Eternal Father and his Son!

Yea, on this most auspicious day, we praise thee, O God the Eternal Father, in the name of thy Son, and in the name of the Holy Ghost. Amen. Ashem Vohu!

Now, under Darius (Daryavaoosh) son of Vishtaspa, the Persian empire at its zenith included twenty provinces or satrapies; including Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Phoenicia, Phrygia, Lydia, Cappadocia, Ionia, Cilicia, Armenia, Assyria, Babylonia, Media, Iran, the Caucasus, today's Afghanistan and Baluchistan. Also India west of the Indus, Sogdiana, Bactria; and all the regions of the Massagetae and other central Asiatic tribes. For the first time in the history of the world, so extensive an area was brought under one government.

This Persian (Iranian) empire ruled over forty million people, and was to continue to rule for some two hundred years. The country at that time was not known as Persia, nor as Iran. But the small tract, immediately east of the Persian Gulf, was known to the ancient Persians as Pars; which later came to be known as Fars or Farsistan. Almost entirely composed of mountains and deserts, severe winters and hot and arid summers, it supported a population of some two million, through trade or conquest. It was this race of hardy mountaineers, who left their primitive land of Airyana Vaejah, the Aryan home, and crossed Afghanistan to become the rulers of northern India. They were known to be the handsomest people of the ancient world; a well-bred and refined race raised up by the Eternal Father, his Son, and all the celestial and the worldly archangels.

These Persians, or Aryans, did adopt the dress and ornaments of their brethren the Medians. They considered it indecent to reveal more than the face. Their clothing covered them from head to toe, from turban, fillet or cap, to sandals or leather shoes. Triple drawers, a white undergarment of linen, a double tunic with sleeves hiding the hands, and a girdle at the waist kept the population warm in winter, hot in summer.

The king wore embroidered trousers of a crimson hue, and saffron-buttoned shoes. The dress of the women differed from that of men only in a slit at the breast. The men wore long beards and hung their hair in curls, or covered it with wigs; and women used much cosmetics; creams were used to improve the complexion, and eyelids were adorned by various colors to increase the apparent size and brilliance of the eyes. A special class of men called the adorners, or beauty experts, served the aristocracy. Moreover, the Persians have always been known to be the inventors of scents, and cosmetic creams. The king of Persia seldom went to war, without a supply of costly unguents.

The speech of the court and nobility in the days of Darius was Old Persian, very similar to Sanskrit; which developed into Pahlavi, an Indian tongue from which has descended the Persian language of today, and the Urdu language of India (Ind). The Persians also took the three hundred Babylonian cuneiform characters, and refined them into thirty-six, which gradually became letters instead of syllables, and constituted a cuneiform alphabet. They used the cuneiform writings for public and commercial purposes, such as inscriptions and public announcements; and utilized the Aramaic for royal and sacred purposes.

The Persians were mostly of the nature of rajas, or passion; but the common man was content to be illiterate, and gave himself fully to the cultivation of the soil. For in that day agriculture was the basic and noblest occupation of mankind; pleasing, above all labors, to the Wise

Lord. Some of the land was tilled by peasant owners, who sometimes joined with several other families in agricultural cooperatives, to work extensive areas together. Part of the land was owned by feudal barons, and cultivated by tenants in turn for a share of the crop; and part of it was tilled by foreign slaves. Oxen pulled a plough of wood armed with a metal point. Highly developed irrigation projects were employed to draw water from the mountains to the fields. Barley and wheat were the staple crops and foods, but much meat and wine was consumed.

It is also recorded that Cyrus served wine to his army; and Persian councils never undertook serious discussions of policy when sober, as is the case even to this day. Their most important deliberations were carried on when drinking wine, for they believed that the decisions made in this state were more lasting and true, than made when they were sober. Moreover the intoxicating drink, haoma or soma, was offered as a pleasant sacrifice to the Gods; for it was imbued with the quality to subdue anger and excitement, and to engender righteousness and piety; the selfsame belief persists even to this day. But most importantly, it is recorded that the Wise Lord ministered cannibus (the herb) unto the royalty to heal their discomfort.

Persia was poorly developed in commerce and industry, for the nations of the Near East brought their products with their imperial tribute. Engineers under Darius built great roads, uniting the various capitals; one of these highways from Susa (Shushan) to Sardis was fifteen hundred miles long. The roads were accurately measured by parsangs (or 3.4 miles); and at every fourth parsang there were royal stations and excellent inns; and the whole road passed through an inhabited and safe country. At each station a fresh relay of horses stood ready to carry on the mail; so that, though an ordinary traveller required ninety days to reach Sardis from Susa, the royal mail moved over the same distance in a little less than a week.

The larger rivers were crossed by ferries, but the engineers could, if they chose, throw across the Euphrates, or across the Hellespont, substantial bridges over which hundreds of elephants could pass in safety. Other roads were built for use by the military and the government through the Afghanistan passes to India; and made Susa a half-way junction to the riches of the East. These roads served not only the purposes of the empire, but stimulated commerce, and the exchange of customs, ideas, and human and natural resources. Commerce for the most part was abandoned to the foreign nations of the empire, the Babylonians, Phoenicians, Jews and Arabs. The Persians despised trade, and looked upon the market place as a breeding ground of lies and deception. The wealthy took pride in supplying most of their wants from their own fields and shops, not contaminating their fingers with buying or selling. Payments, loans, and interests were at first in the form of goods, cattle and grain; later came coinage from Lydia. Darius issued gold and silver zariqs (or darics) stamped with his likeness, valued at a gold-to-silver ratio of 13.5 to 1; and three thousand gold darics were equal to one Persian talent.

Now the life of a typical Persian was political and military, rather than economic or Spiritual; wealth was based not on industry, but power. It was a governing nation likened to an isle in the midst of an immense and unnaturally subject sea. The imperial organization that maintained this was one of the most unique and competent ever in the history of the world. At its head was the king, or Kshathra, meaning the warrior, of the warrior caste. For the lesser kings were vassal to him, the title of King of Kings was bestowed upon the Persian king. He was the dictator of his time, without ever knowing the meaning of the word. His power theoretically absolute, he could kill with a word, without a trial or due reason given; and occasionally he delegated to his mother or his chief wife the privilege of secret slaughter.

The court was overrun with eunuchs, who as guards of the royal harem, served as pimps to the princes; and stewed a poisonous brew of intrigue in every reign. Five hundred castrated boys were brought annually from Babylonia to act as the keepers of the women in the harems of Persia. Although the king had the right to choose his successor from among his sons, generally the succession was determined by assassination and revolution. The royal power was limited in practice by the strength of the aristocracy that mediated between the people and the throne. It became the custom that six families of the men who had shared with Darius son of Vishtaspa the danger of revolt against false Smerdis (Bardyia or Gammata) were granted special privileges, and were consulted on all matters of vital interest. Many of the nobles attended the court, and served as a council for whose advice the monarch usually showed highest regard. Most members of the aristocracy were attached to the throne by receiving their estates from the king; in return they provided him with men and materials when he went to war. Within their feudal estate they had almost complete authority; levying taxes, enacting laws, executing judgement, and maintaining their own armed forces.

The basis for the royal power and imperial government in Persia was the army; for the empire existed only so long as it retained its superiority in the field of battle. Every able-bodied male from fifteen to fifty years of age was obligated to enlist on any declaration of war. When a father of three sons petitioned Darius to exempt one of them from the service, all three were ordered to be put to death; and when another father, having sent four sons to the battlefield, begged king Xerxes to permit his fifth son to stay behind and manage the family estate, the body of the fifth son was ordered to be cut in two by royal decree, and placed on both sides of the road by which the army was to pass.

At the head of the army was the royal guard, consisting of two thousand horsemen, two thousand infantrymen, and all nobles whose function was to guard the king. The standing army was exclusively of Persians and Medes; and from this pool came most of the garrisons stationed as centers of persuasion at strategic points in the empire. The complete force consisted of levies from every nation under tribute, or subject nation, each group with its own distinct language, weapons, and habits of war. Its equipment and retinue was as varied as its origin, including: bows and arrows, scimitars, javelins, daggers, pikes, slings, knives, helmets, shields, leather breastplates, coats of mail, horses, elephants, heralds, scribes, castrated eunuchs, prostitutes, concubines, and chariots armed on each hub with great steel scythes. The whole force ranged between one and two million souls; and often resulted in much chaos, hostility, and destruction, as it was destined to be; that a well-organized army of one speech and one discipline might arise out of this encounter.

Such being the case, the law of the state was the will of the king and the power of the army; no human rights were sacred against these, and no precedents were established, except the earlier decrees of the kings. For it was the law of the land, that a royal decree is irrevocable, and its laws, arising out of the Good Principle and the noble truths, are never changed.

The king of Persia was appointed by, and inspired by, the Wise Lord himself; therefore the law of the realm was the Divine will. And any infraction of it was an offense against the Lord and his Righteous Kingdom. The king was the supreme court of justice, but it was customary to delegate this function to some worthy elder of his retinue. Below him in authority was a high court of justice with seven members (in the similitude of the seven original aspects of God), and below them were local courts scattered throughout the realm.

The priesthood of the time formulated the laws and statutes, and occasionally acted as judges. But toward the end of the Hakhamanish empire, any layman or woman did sit in judgement. Bail was accepted in all but exceptional cases, and a regular trial procedure was followed. The law's delays were mitigated by fixing a time- limit for each case, and by proposing to all in dispute an arbitrator of their own choice to bring them to a peaceable settlement. Bribery was discouraged by making it a capital offense. Oaths were taken, and used occasionally in the courts of law. It is said that Cambyses improved the integrity of the courts by causing an unjust judge to be flayed alive, and using his skin to upholster the judicial bench; then he appointed the dead judge's son in his stead!

Minor punishments in Persia took form of flogging, from five to two hundred blows with a horsewhip. The poisoning of a shepherd dog received two hundred strokes, manslaughter ninety. The cost of administration of the law was in part financed by converting the number of stripes into monetary fines, at the rate of six rupees (Rupya) to a stripe. More serious crimes were punished with branding, maiming, mutilation, blinding, imprisonment or death. For intrusion upon the king's privacy, approaching one of his concubines, accidentally sitting upon his throne, or any displeasure to the ruling house, could a death sentence be decreed; and also for treason, rape or sodomy, murder, self-pollution, burning or burying the dead. Death was procured in such cases by poisoning, impaling, crucifixion, hanging, stoning, burying the body alive, crushing the head between huge stones, smothering the victim in hot ashes, or by the cruel rite called the Boats.

This execution by the Boats was in this manner: taking two boats exactly alike, they lay down in one of them the victim, upon his back; then, covering it with the other, so that the head, hands and feet of the Moreover, each province was to contribute to the king's needs in goods and supplies: Egypt provided corn annually for 120,000 men; the Medes provided 100,000 sheep, the Armenians 30,000 foals, the Babylonians five hundred young eunuchs. Other sources of wealth increased the revenues to such point that when Alexander of Macedonia captured the Persian capitals after one hundred and fifty years of Persian extravagance and a hundred expensive revolts and wars; after Darius III had carried off 8,000 talents of gold with him, he found 180,000 talents left in the royal treasuries, estimated to be 2.7 billion dollars in the dollar value of fifty years ago.

The Persian empire was the most successful experiment in imperial government, since the beginning of recorded history. And it was this knowledge of government, with its political structure and administrative forms which later became the basis of government, when the empire moved to Rome. The political cruelties, occasional barbarism, and heavy taxation, were balanced by peace, order, and prosperity. Each province retained its own language, laws, customs, morals, religion and coinage, and sometimes its native dynasty of kings. Many of the nations under tribute, including Babylonia, Phoenicia, and Palestine, were content with the fairness and justice of the empire; and suspected their own generals and tax-collectors of corruption, rather than the Persian Empire.

The Persians pictured the world as a scene of struggle between good and evil. The soul of a man, like the universe, was represented as a battleground of the Beneficent and Maleficent spirits. Every man was considered a warrior, whether he liked it or not, in the army of the Lord or the Devil, every act or omission advanced the cause of the Wise Lord or the Wicked One; of Ahura Mazda or of Ahriman. They believed that human beings were not mere pawns in this cosmic war, but they had their agency, or free will; that they might freely choose whether they would follow the Light and Truth or Darkness and Lie, for Ahriman the Devil was the Living Lie, and every liar was his servant. Out of this general belief emerged a detailed yet simple code of morals, centered about the Golden Rule: To do unto others that which you would others do unto you; secondly, man's duty is threefold, To make him who is an enemy a friend; to make him who is wicked righteous*; and to make him who is ignorant learned; and the greatest virtue is piety, second only to the righteous passions, honor and honesty in action and speech.

The worst sin of all to the Persians, as in the Mosaic code, was and is the sin of unbelief. The grace and mercy of the Wise Lord did not extend in practice to the infidels, the unbelievers and foreigners; these were inferior species of men, who had been deluded into believing in the superiority of their own countries and customs that they might not invade the abode of the Aryans. Piety being the greatest virtue, the first duty of life was the worship of God with purification, sacrifice, and prayer. Altars were erected on hilltops, in palaces, in the center of the city; and fires were kindled upon them in honor of the Wise Lord, or some lesser divinity.

* Scriptures also declare that "wicked is he who falsely does good to the wicked."

Fire was worshipped by the telestial world as a god, Atar, a son of the Lord of Light. Every family centered around the hearth, and to keep the home fire burning, never to let it be extinguished, was part of the ritual of faith. And the undying fire of the skies, the Sun, was adored as the highest and most characteristic embodiment of the Wise Lord or Mithra; quite in the same manner as some of the pharaohs had worshipped it in Egypt. The morning Sun was revered till midday; and of the midday was revered till the afternoon; and that of the afternoon till the evening. While men reverenced not the Sun, the good works they did that day were not considered their own.

To the sun, to fire, to the Lord, sacrifices were offered of flowers, fruits, bread, perfumes, oxen, sheep, camels, horses, asses, and stags, and others. The gods received only the sweet savor, or odor; the edible portions were kept for the priests and the worshippers. Moreover, they offered the intoxicating drink, haoma juice, to the gods, as they do in our day; the priest drank part of the sacred drink, and divided the remainder among the faithful in holy communion.

The religion of the Persian was a marvellous one, less warlike and cruel, less idolatrous and superstitious, than all other religions of its time. Given to a life of piety and truth, the Persian might face death unafraid; and behold, is it not the secret purpose of religion? It is said, that Astivihad, Asto-vidhotu, the genius of death, finds every one, no matter where. He is the confident seeker from whom not one of mortal men can escape. Not those who go down into the depths, as did Afrasiab the Turk; who made himself an iron palace under the earth, a thousand times the height of man, with a hundred columns. In that palace he made the stars, the moon and the sun go round, making the light of day; in that place he did everything at his pleasure, and he lived the life of pleasure and luxury; with all his strength and witchcraft he could not escape from Astivihad.

Nor did he who dug this wide and round earth, its ends that lie afar, like Zohak (Azi-Dahak or Ad-Zahhak); who went from east to west searching for immortality and did not find it; with all his power and strength he could not escape from Astivihad. Yea, to everyone cometh the unseen, the deceiving Astivihad, who accepts neither compliments nor bribes, who is no respecter of persons, and ruthlessly makes them perish.

And, for it is in the nature of religion to threaten, chastise, and terrify, as well as to comfort and console, the Persian could not look upon death unafraid unless he had been a faithful warrior in the Wise Lord's cause. All dead souls come to the Chinvad Bridge, a Sifting Bridge; where the dead are put on a scale, and the soul is weighed by the Yazatas or Archangels, Mithra, Rashnu, and Sraosha. The good soul passes on to the House of Song, where dwelleth the Wise Lord; but the wicked soul falleth from the middle of the bridge, into a hell corresponding to the degree of wickedness. The hell was not a place where as in other religions, descended all the dead, both good and bad; but it was and is an abyss of darkness and terror, in which condemned souls suffered torment to the end of the world. And in the case of the Druj (the Hypocrite), the double-minded, the soul that had done more good deeds than evil ones, such are placed in a purgatory, where they prepare themselves to earn a heaven or hell; those who repent and seek guidance are tended by the ministering angels of the eternal Priesthood of God; who prepare them for their portion of paradise or heaven, which is allotted to them. But those, whose works of wickedness exceed their good works, such are to suffer twelve thousand years; and then at the renovation of the world, they will be given another chance to earn their portion of the allotted heaven.

Each Persian child of the priesthood, and of some laymen also, was taught to recognize the most sublime truth of the Last Judgement. During the time of Darius son of Vishtaspa, religion became the Spiritual expression of an empire at its zenith; as it is prophesied to be so again, when the Savior or Messiah comes before the renovation, to prepare the world for that glorious and marvellous day. (This is also in reference to the Coming of Christ, in the Latter-days, as believed by the Jews, the Christians, the Mohammedans, and also by the Buddhists, who wait for the coming of the Maitreya Buddha, or Christlike Messiah.)

But it is said that humanity loves poetry more than logic; and without myth the people perish. And, for the Kingdom consists not only of the celestial realm, but the terrestrial and telestial realms also, the worship of the Immortals and the Worshipful Ones (Yazatas) is an important part of human nature; for it also represents the three natures of man, namely: the nature of virtue or goodness (sattva), the nature of passion (rajas), and the nature of dullness (tamas). It is for this reason Mithra, and Anahita, began to be worshipped more, as god of the sun, of vows and contracts; and goddess of vegetation and fertility. Thereafter Mithra became more powerful in the world and in the worldly; and the worship of Ahura Mazda, the Wise Lord, faded away, and was confined to the celestial realm, and the Order of the Holy Priesthood. [By the first century A.D., the cult of Mithra as a divine youth of beautiful countenance, with a radiant halo over his head, spread throughout the Roman Empire. Christmas was originally a solar festival, celebrating the winter solstice (about December 22nd), the lengthening of the day, and the triumph of the sun over his enemies. It became a Mithraic celebration, and finally a Christian holy day.]

Statues of Anahita, the Persian Aphrodite, were set up in many cities of the empire, within a few centuries after the death of Zarathustra of the Spitamas (Zoroaster). The priesthood of the Wise Men or Magi, which was the eternal order of the priesthood of God, was known for its divine wisdom and boundless influence. The Persian kings were chosen and raised by them; the kings being their pupils, never took a step without consulting them. The higher ranks of the Magi were saints and sages, the lower were diviners and sorcerers, readers of stars and interpreters of dreams (the English word magic is taken from them). Devoted Zoroastrians in the province of Fars in Iran, and the Parsees of India, still preserve the study of the ancient scriptures and worship fire, earth, water, and air as sacred; and expose their dead in Towers of Silence to birds of prey; lest burning the dead or burial should defile the holy elements.

Traitors in Persia were dealt with harshly, for they and their leaders were crucified; their adherents were sold as slaves, their towns were pillaged, their boys were castrated, and the girls were sold into harems. The Persian kings although likened to tyrants and dictators, laden with pains and misery of worldly existence, and primeval ignorance into which all mankind, including kings and priests, are born, were yet known for their fidelity. Even among the Greeks who were faithless and rude people, the Persian kings were known for never breaking their word, and a treaty made with them could be always relied upon. This is also a testimony to the character of the Persians, that whereas one could hire Greeks to fight the Greeks, Persians of the Hakhamanish empire could never be hired to fight the Persians. And when the Persians fought Alexander at Granicus, almost all the Persian infantry consisted of Greek mercenaries. At the battle of Issus alone 30,000 Greek mercenaries formed the center of the Persian line.

The Persians were free and open in speech, generous, warm-hearted, and hospitable. Their manners were mild, and etiquette as scrupulous as those of the Chinese; for both people descended from common ancestors, namely Madai and Gomer, sons of Japheth, son of Noah. When meeting with equals they embraced and kissed each other; to persons of higher rank they made a deep obeisance; to those of lower rank they offered the cheek; and to the commoner they bowed. They taught their children not to eat and drink anything in the street, or spit or blow the nose (without a handkerchief) in public. Until the reign of Xerxes or Kshayarsha (486 - 465 B.C.), people generally ate one meal per day, and drank water. Cleanliness was rated as the greatest good after life itself; the motto, Cleanliness is next to godliness, is of the Persians. Therefore, good works done with dirty hands were worthless, for there is no coming of the angels to his body. Severe punishments were decreed for those who spread contagious diseases. On festive occasions Persian people gathered together, all clothed in white.

It is said that, To carry off women by violence the Persian thought to be the act of wicked men; but to trouble one's self about avenging them when so carried off was the act of foolish men; for it is clear that if they had not been willing, they could not have been carried off. This view was quite contrary to that of their Shemitic brethren, who thrived on jealousy, vengeance and revenge. Virgins and bachelors were encouraged to maintain and develop piety and virtue, and keep away from the sins of the flesh. But polygamy and concubinage were allowed in the moral code, and were sanctioned by the priesthood of Wise Men, the Magi. The man who has a wife, saith the Scripture, is far above him who lives in continence; he who keeps a house is far above him who has none; he who has children is far above him who has none; he who has riches is far above him who has none. And the family is ranked as the holiest of all institutions.

Among the animals, the dog was above all others, and was an integral part of the family. Severe penalties were prescribed for those who fed unfit food to dogs, or served them their food too hot; the fine was fourteen hundred stripes, or 8,400 rupyas (rupees) for smiting a bitch; in certain cases the bull was honored for his procreative powers; prayer and sacrifice were offered to the cow, by the telestial Persia. Marriages and matches were arranged by the parents on the arrival of their children at puberty. The range of choice was wide; and concubines were mostly for the wealthy, for the princes seldom went to war without them. Some king's harems contained 360 concubines, that no woman might share the royal couch twice, unless she was of an exceptional beauty.

In the time of Zarathustra of the Spitamas (618 - 541 B.C.) the position of women in Persia was high; she moved in public unveiled, she owned and managed property, and could direct the affairs of her husband in his name, or through his pen. After Darius son of Vishtaspa, her status declined again among the wealthy. The poorer women retained their freedom, because they had to work; but seclusion was always enforced during the menstrual periods, and was extended to the whole social life of the woman; and later laid the foundation of the Islamic institution of purdah. Women of the priests and the royalty could not venture out except in curtained litters, and were not permitted to mingle with men in public; married women were forbidden to see even their nearest male relatives, including their fathers and brothers, in the absence of their husbands. Concubines had greater freedom, for they were employed to entertain their master's guests.

Sons were highly valued in Persia as economic assets to their parents and military assets to the king. The king annually sent gifts to every father of many sons. Fornication and adultery were not as great a crime as was abortion; it was punishable by death. Their scriptures taught that a woman during ten days and nights following menstruation readily becomes pregnant. Generally, the child remained under the care of the women till five, and under the care of the father from five to seven; at the age of seven he went to school. Education was confined to the rich and the wealthy, and was usually administered by the priests. Classes were conducted at the temple or at the home of the priest or at the schools. It was a rule never to expose the young children to the atmosphere of the marketplace, where buying and selling takes place, for it was considered a world of lies, deceits and mortality.

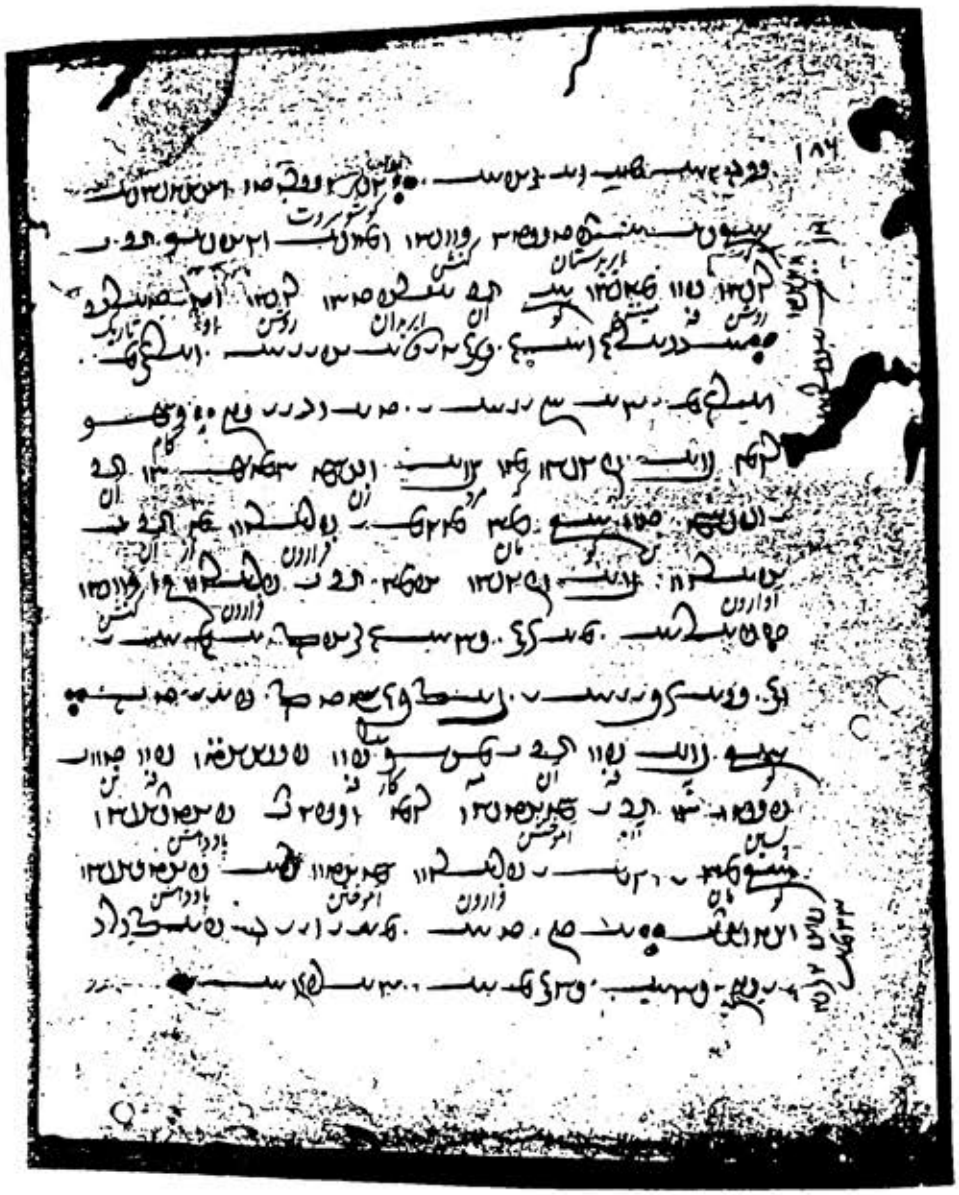
The scriptures of the Persians were the Avesta (later, circa 1771 A.D. Anquetil-Duperron added the prefix Zend, translation and interpretation, to the Avesta; thereafter it was referred to as the Zend-Avesta, in English texts. According to native tradition of the Persians a large Avesta in twenty-one books called Nasks, were part of the original scriptures of the eternal Holy Order of Zarathustra. One of these Nasks is the Vendidad, twenty-two chapters or fargards expounding the theology and moral legislation of worshippers of the Wise Lord; which now forms the priestly code of the Parsees of India. The rest of the Nasks survive in fragment forms in later compositions as the Dinkard and the Bundahish.

It is known to the Arab historians that the complete text of the ancient scriptures consisted of 12,000 cowhides. Two copies of this were made by Vishtaspa, who was later given the court name of Ahasuerus; one of them was destroyed when Alexander burned the royal palace at Persepolis (Istakhr); the other was carried by his men to Macedonia. And it was the translation of this into the Greek language which was the basis of all their knowledge and wisdom. Moreover, the Greeks are their brethren, the descendents of Javan son of Japheth, son of Noah; and share the same Aryan traits. (During the reign of Vologeses V, a Parthian king of the Arsacid Dynasty, circa 207 - 227 A.D., he ordered the collection of all surviving fragments either in writing, or committed to the memory of the faithful. This collection was fixed in its present form as the Zarathustran canon in the fourth century A.D., and became the official religion of Persia. Over six centuries after the birth of Christ son of Mary, the religion of the fire worshippers of Iran was supplanted by Mohammedanism, or Islam.)

The surviving fragments of the Persian, or the Aryan, scriptures may be divided basically into these five parts:

(1) The Yasna - Forty-five chapters of liturgy recited by the fire priests, and twenty-seven chapters called Gathas, which contain, in metric form, the discourses and revelations of Zarathustra of the Spitamas (Zoroaster);
(2) The Vispered - Twenty-four additional chapters of liturgy;
(3) The Vendidades - Twenty-two chapters or fargards expounding the theology and moral code;
(4) The Yashts - Twenty-one psalms of praise to angels interspersed with history and prophecy;
(5) The Khordah Avesta or Small Avesta, which includes prayers for various occasions.

The boys who were not of the royalty, or ruling class, were not taught the art of reading or writing, but were taught only three things: to ride a horse, to use the bow, and to speak the truth. The learning for the Persians in schools was limited to religion, medicine, or law; and the method of learning was by rote recitation of long passages, and by commission to memory. Higher education among the sons of the aristocracy extended to the age of twenty to twenty-four; some were especially trained for public office or provincial administration, and all were trained in war. The life in higher institutions of learning was strenuous and hard; the students rose early, ran long distances, rode difficult horses at high speed, hunted, swam, pursued thieves, planted trees and sowed farms, made long marches under a hot sun or in bitter cold, subsisted on coarse food, and learned to cross rivers while keeping their clothes and armour dry. The Persians had a certain relish for poetry and fictional romance, and preferred the pleasures of conversation to the solitary pleasures of reading and writing. Poetry was sung rather than read, and perished with the singers, it is said.



A page from the manuscript of the Avesta; with interlinear translation into Pahlavi, or Middle Persian; albeit the attempted translation contains some errors.

At first only the priests performed the function of medicine man; whose knowledge was based on the principle that the Devil had created 99,999 diseases, which should be treated by a combination of magic, diet, and hygiene. They resorted more to spells than to drugs, on the basis that the spell, though it might not cure the illness, would not kill the patient. Nevertheless, lay medicine developed with the prosperity of the Persians. By the time of Artaxerxes II, or Mnemon (404 - 359 B.C.), there was a well-organized guild of physicians and surgeons, whose fees were fixed by the law, as in Hammurabi's code, according to the social rank of the patient. Priests were to be treated free. And just as in our day, the medical interns practice for a year or two upon the bodies of the poor and the foreigners, so among the Persians a young physician was to begin his career by treating the infidels and foreigners. For the Lord of Light himself had decreed the following concerning the medical novice, saying: On the worshipper of the Daevas (demon gods or evil spirits) shall he prove himself, rather than on the worshippers of God. And if he is a surgeon, and treat with a knife a worshipper of the Daevas and he die; if he treat with a knife a second worshipper of the Daevas and he die; if he treat with a knife a third worshipper of the Daevas and he die, he is unfit forever and ever. Let him never attend to any worshipper of God. But if he treat with a knife a worshipper of the Daevas and he recover; if he treat with a knife a second worshipper of the Daevas and he recover; if he treat with a knife a third worshipper of the Daevas and he recover; then he is fit forever; then may he at his will treat worshippers of God, and heal them with a knife.

The Persians were entrepreneurs of excellent morals and good disposition. And they deliberately neglected to train their children in any other art than that of life. Although they themselves produced not engineers, doctors, scientists or artists, they had the knowledge and resources to combine varied ideas and resources together, to create some marvellous wonders. Having dedicated themselves to the empire, the Persians found their time and energies taken up with their passions for war and conquest. They had a keen eye for pretty things, but they relied on foreign artists to produce them; and upon provincial revenues to pay for them. The wealthy Persians had beautiful and grand homes, with luxuriant gardens, some large enough to accommodate their zoological collections or hunting parks. They had costly furniture: tables plated or inlaid with silver or gold; couches upholstered with durable and exotic material; floors carpeted with rugs of diverse colors, resilient in texture. They drank from golden goblets, and adorned their tables and shelves with vases turned by foreign hands. They liked song and dance and playing of the harp, as did David king of Judah; plus the flute, the drum and the tambourine. Both men and women wore jewelry in abundance, in the form of tiaras, earrings, necklaces, golden anklets and shoes, and more. Pearls, rubies, emeralds and lapis lazuli were imported from nations under tribute; but turquoise came from Persian mines, and was used as the material for the aristocrat's signet-ring. And the gems of monstrous and grotesque form were used to represent the features of their favorite devils.

The Great Guide

The king of Persia generally sat on a golden throne, covered with golden canopies, upheld with pillars of gold. The Persians had achieved a style of architecture all their own. They erected tombs and palaces under Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes. At Pasargadai, the tomb of Cyrus represents the simplicity and graciousness of their style. Made of blocks of fine white limestone, it has the appearance of marble. The funerary chamber is thirty-six feet high, and the lowest step is the height of a man. The caravan road now crosses the bare platform that once bore the palaces of Cyrus and his mad son. Today only a few broken columns here and there, or doorjamb bearing the features of Cyrus in bas-relief, survive. The tomb shows the wear of more than twenty-four centuries.

Far south, at Naksh-i-Rustam, near Persepolis (Istakhr), is the tomb of Darius, cut like a Hindoo chapel into the face of the mountain rock.

The entrance of the tomb of Darius is carved to simulate a palace facade; with four slender columns about a modest portal; above it (as if on a roof) figures representing the subject people of the Medo-Persian Empire support a platform on which the king is shown worshipping Ahura Mazda and the moon. At Ecbatana the early kings built a royal residence of cedar and cypress, plated with metal. And at Persepolis the most imposing relics of ancient Persia are found, which include stone steps, platforms and columns.

At Persepolis, each monarch from Darius son of Vishtaspa onward built and added upon a palace, that his name might not be forgotten. The great external stairs that mounted from the plain to the elevation on which the buildings rested, were unlike anything built before; the knowledge of it descended from the builders of the encircled Mesopotamian ziggurats, nevertheless they had a style unique and their own. So gradual was the ascent, and so spacious were the stairs that ten horsemen could mount them abreast; some historians have called this flight of stairs the noblest example to be found in any part of the world! And they formed a brilliant approach to the vast platform, twenty to fifty feet high, fifteen hundred feet long, and one thousand feet wide, that bore the royal palaces; and underneath the platform ran a complicated system of drainage tunnels, six feet in diameter, often drilled through the solid rock.

Where the two flights of steps, coming from either side, met at the summit, stood a gateway, or propyleum, flanked by winged and human-headed bulls in an Assyrian style. At the right stood the Great Hall of Xerxes I (Chehil Minar), covering with its grand antechambers an area of more than a hundred thousand square feet, larger than Karnak, or any European cathedral, except that of Milan. Another flight of steps led to this Great Hall; and these stairs were flanked with ornamental parapets, and their supporting sides were carved with the finest bas-reliefs ever known. Thirteen of the once seventy-two columns of Xerxes' palace now remain among the ruins; and these marble columns are among the nearly perfect works of man. These columns are more slender than those of Egypt or Greece, and rise to the great height of sixty-four feet. Their shafts are fluted with forty-eight small grooves; their bases resemble bells overlaid with inverted leaves; their capitals are mostly of the floral form, surmounted by the forequarters of two bulls or unicorns, upon whose necks, joined back to back, rested the crossbeam or architrave. The door-jambs and window-frames were of ornamented black stone that shone like ebony; the walls were of brick, but they were covered with enameled tiles painted in brilliant panels of animals and flowers; the columns, pilasters, and steps were of fine white limestone or hard blue marble. Behind (or east of) Chehil Minar rose the Hall of Hundred Columns; these palaces were among the most beautiful ever erected in the ancient or the modern world.

The empire which began with Darius lasted about a century; then the moral and the physical bone of Persia was broken by Marathon, Salamis, and Plataea, and the nation descended into corruption and apathy. And the same pattern followed in Rome; immorality and degeneration among the people followed by violence and negligence on the throne. Now eating became the principal occupation of the aristocracy. These men who made a rule to eat but once a day now interpreted the rule to allow one meal -- prolonged from noon to night; they stocked their larders with a thousand delicacies, and often served entire animals to their guests; they stuffed themselves with rich rare meats, and spent their genius upon new sauces and desserts. As in the days of Zohak (Adi-Zahhak) a corrupt and corrupting multitude of menials filled the houses of the wealthy; while drunkenness became the common vice of all men. As it is written: Cyrus and Darius founded the empire, Xerxes inherited it, his successors destroyed it.

The decadence of the Persian empire began with Xerxes, for he was a king in name and form only. He was tall and energetic, and by royal consent was the handsomest man externally. But there was never yet a handsome man who was not vain, and whom some woman has not led by the nose. Xerxes was divided by many mistresses, and became to people an exemplar of sensuality. His defeat at Salamis was written for him, for he was great only as all other kings, in appearance alone, and not in capacity to rise to the crisis. After twenty years of sexual intrigue and adminstrative decay he was murdered by a jealous courtier, Artabanus; and was buried with regal pomp and general satisfaction.

The murderer of Xerxes was murdered by Artaxerxes I, who after a long reign was succeeded by Xerxes II, who was murdered a few weeks later by his half-brother Sogdianus, who was murdered six months later by Darius II Nothus; who suppressed the revolt of Terituchmes by having him slain, his wife cut into pieces; and his mother, brothers and sisters buried alive. Darius II was followed by his son Artaxerxes II Mnemon, who at the battle of Cunaxa, had to fight to death his own brother, Cyrus the Younger, when the youth tried to seize the royal power. And Artaxerxes II enjoyed a long reign, killed his son Darius for conspiracy; and died of a broken heart on finding that another son Ochus was planning to assassinate him. Artaxerxes III Ochus ruled for twenty years, and he was poisoned by his general Bagoas. Then Bagoas placed Arses or Arsha son of Ochus on the throne, and assassinated all his brothers to make the throne secure for Arses; then he assassinated Arses and his infant children, and gave the sceptre to Codomanus, son of Arsames, son of Artostes; and Codomanus reigned for over seven years under the name Darius III, or Dara, and was killed by his two ministers, during the battle against Alexander, at Arbela. And thus the great Hakhamanish empire of the Persians ended in 330 B.C. with the conquest by Alexander.

It is in the nature of all empires to disintegrate soon, for the passions of the men who created it disappears from those who inherit it; and at the very time the subject nations or people gather strength to fight for their lost liberty. As this is an eternal truth, so is the truth that nations diverse in language, religion, morals and traditions cannot remain united; there is nothing of substance in such a union; and compulsion is the force which is used to maintain the artificial bond. In its over two hundred years, Persia was a heterogeneous empire, with many provinces, varied and different customs, traditions and races, living separately in their own provinces; and their high officials dwelling together in utmost peace, health, joy, and all that comes out of the Good Principle, at their centers of government and palaces. And it ruled a mob of nations, and never thought of making them into a state. Year by year the union became more difficult to preserve. And as the vigor and zeal of the emperors relaxed, the boldness and ambitions of the satraps grew, according to the eternal nature of the government. They arbitrarily enlarged their armies and revenues, and engaged in plots and secret plans against the king.

The decadence in military training and military equipment began to prevail throughout the empire. From the day Xerxes returned defeated from Salamis, it became evident that the Greeks would someday take over the empire. And when Alexander of Macedonia came, the Persian leaders brought their concubines for them, and had no ambition of war; the only true soldiers in the Persian army were the Greeks. Persia controlled one end of the great trade route that bound western Asia with the Mediterranean, and the Greeks their brethren controlled the other.

Now, Alexander (Al-Iskandar or Sikandar) crossed the Hellespont without opposition, having a negligible force of 30,000 footmen and 5,000 cavalry. At Granicus a Persian army of 40,000 troops tried to stop him; the Greeks lost 115 men and the Persians 20,000. Alexander marched south and east, receiving cities and surrenders for a year. Meanwhile Darius III gathered a horde of 600,000 soldiers and adventurers; five days were required to march them over a bridge of ferry boats across the Euphrates; six hundred mules and three hundred camels were needed to carry the royal purse. When the two armies met at Issus, Alexander had no more than 30,000 followers. At the end of the slaughter the Greeks had lost about 450, and the Persians 110,000 men, most of these said to be slain in wild retreat. Darius fled from the camp, abandoning his mother, a wife, two daughters, his chariot, and his luxuriously appointed tent. And Alexander treated the Persian ladies with chivalry, and then married one of their daughters. And the mother of Darius became so fond of Alexander that after his death, she put an end to her own life by voluntary starvation, which was an acceptable way of dying, as it was also among the Buddhists and Jains of Ind (India).

The citizens of Babylon and Jerusalem came out in great multitudes to welcome him, offering him their city and its treasury; and he accepted these graciously. Then Darius III Codomanus sent him a proposal of peace, saying that he would give Alexander ten thousand talents (about $60,000,000 in the currency of 1941 A.D.), for the safe return of his mother, his wife, and his children; and would offer his daughter in marriage, and would acknowledge his sovereignty over all Asia west of the Euphrates, if only Alexander would end the war and become his friend. Thereupon, Parmenio, second in command among the Greeks, said that if he were Alexander he would be glad to accept such terms, and avoid with honor the hazards of some disastrous defeat. Alexander replied that he would do likewise if he were Parmenio; but being Alexander, his offer meant nothing, since he, Alexander, already possessed such parts of Asia as Darius proposed to cede to him; and could marry the daughter of the emperor when he pleased. After this Darius turned unwillingly to the task of collecting another and larger force.

In the meantime Alexander had taken Tyre, and annexed Egypt. In twenty days from Babylon his army reached Shushan (Susa), and took it without resistance; thence it advanced so quickly to Persepolis (Istakhr) that the royal treasury had no time to secrete its treasures and funds. Then, against the counsel of Parmenio, the palaces of Persepolis were burned to the ground, and the city was looted by his troops. Then having raised the spirit of his army with booty and gifts, he turned north to meet Darius Codomanus for the last time.

By this time Darius had gathered a new army of a million men, chiefly from the eastern provinces, consisting of Medes, Persians, Babylonians, Syrians, Armenians, Cappadocians, Bactrians, Sogdians, Arachosians, Sakas and Hindoos; and had equipped them no longer with bows and arrows, but with javelins, spears, shields, horses, elephants; and scythe-wielding chariots intended to mow down the enemy like wheat. With this large army of motley mob he met Alexander at Gaugamela, a town some sixty miles from Arbela; and was defeated by Alexander's 7,000 cavalry and 40,000 infantry. Darius again chose to rise up, but his generals, disgusted with his defeat, murdered him in his tent. Then Alexander having put to death such of the assassins as he could find, sent the body of Darius in state to Persepolis, and ordered it to be buried in the manner of the Hakhamanish kings. The Persian people flocked together readily to the standard of the conqueror, charmed by his generosity and youth. Alexander organized Persia into a province of the Macedonian Empire; and left a strong garrison to guard it, then marched on to India. Thus ended the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire of Persia, and the Macedonian empire began with Alexander.

We shall return to Alexander and Hellenism later, but let us now turn our attention to India, and the Spiritual developments there. Soon after the passing away of Zarathustra of the Spitamas or Zoroaster, the holy priesthood of the eternal kingdom of God raised up Gautama Buddha, a pupil of Zarathustra, near the foothills of the Himalayan mountains. Gautama was known to the fire worshippers and the fire priests of India and Persia as Gautama the heretic; for he taught the doctrine of self-reliance and self-salvation, proclaiming that the reliance on the Inner Self or Higher Self of man is more important than propitiation and dependence on external sources or deity. But the later doctrine modified this belief by acknowledging that man must first learn to develop his own True or Higher Self, and after finding it he may choose to live under the grace of God, the Word of God, the Priesthood of God, or under all of them. But he must always look within for answers, and not rely on any external source purely on blind faith alone, for faith without knowledge and works is dead. A formalized doctrine of self-salvation and enlightenment, which includes the substance of many Buddhas, or Enlightened Ones, before Gautama and after him, is presented here, namely, Tathagata's Doctrine of Self-salvation and Enlightenment. As Zarathustra was of Divine birth, so was Gautama, the Japhetic or Aryan Christ, the Holy One of the Japhetic people of ancient India.

BUDDHA: THE JAPHETIC OR ARYAN CHRIST

(The Holy One of the Japhetic people of ancient India)

Now, this is an account of the Japhetic Christ, as opposed to the Shemitic Christ of the Order of the Son of God, and the Sun (Son) of God of the Aryan race; created, raised, trained, blessed, and ministered by the Holy Priesthood of God of the sixth century B.C. He was also the second great sage of divine (virgin) birth and a light unto the world, since the time of the prophecy of Isaiah, son of Amoz, son of Yohash (Jehoash, Joash), the king of Judah. (The Shemitic Christ, Jesus son of Mary, was to come some five centuries later.)

Siddhartha Gautama Buddha was born in 563 B.C. in the region of Aryavarta in the Himalayan foothills, a little south of Nepal. His father, Suddhodhana of the Kshatriya (warrior) caste, was a ruler of Kapilavastu. At the time of Siddhartha's birth, wandering ascetics, and those who sought truths and knowledge of God; and those who fled Jerusalem and other parts of the Middle and Near East, found refuge in ancient India; and Taxilla (Takshashila) became the learning center of highest knowledge, both Spiritual and temporal, of all the world; here the future rulers of the world were sent to be trained for their ministry and appointments. Thus, northern India became a blend of many cultures and civilizations that migrated from Persia, Media, Babylonia, Arabia, Egypt, and also from China - these later came to be known as the Hindus, the inhabitants of the land across the Hindush (Indus) River.

In the city of Kapilavastu the festival of the full moon had been proclaimed, according to the custom; and queen Mahamaya (meaning Great Illusion) prepared herself for seven days before the full moon, and took no intoxicants nor used abundance of garlands and perfume. Rising early on the seventh day, she bathed in scented water, and bestowed a great gift of four hundred thousand pieces as alms. After she adorned herself, and ate choice food, she took upon herself the vows to keep holy the four days of the month -- the full moon, the new moon, and the eighth day after each -- the Uposatha vows. Then she entered into her bedchamber and lay down on the bed; and falling asleep, she dreamt this dream:

The Dream of Queen Maya
(A Rock-cut Relief)

Four great kings, it seemed, raised her together with the bed; they carried her to the Himalayas, and set her on the Manosila tableland. Then their queens came and took her to Anotatta Lake, and bathed her again to remove human stain, robed her in celestial clothing, anointed her with perfume, and bedecked her with divine flowers. Not far away was a silver mountain, and upon it a golden mansion. There they prepared a divine bed, with head to the east, and laid her upon it. And behold, nearby there was a golden mountain; from there descended a white elephant, and alighted on the silver mountain, approaching it from the north; in his trunk, which was like a silver rope, he held a white lotus; then trumpeting, he entered the golden mansion, made a rightwise circle three times around Queen Mahamaya's bed, and smote her right side, and appeared to enter her womb.

The next day, when the queen narrated her dream to the king, he summoned sixty-four Elders (Brahmans), paid them reverence and honor, and satisfied them with excellent food and presents. When they were all satisfied with pleasures and delights, Suddhodhana caused the dream to be told, and to ask its meaning. The Elders said: Be not anxious, O king, the queen has conceived, a male not a female, and thou shalt have a son; and if he grows up to dwell in the palace, he will become a universal king, a universal monarch; if he leaves his house and the ways of the world, he will become a Buddha, a healer and a remover of the veil of ignorance.

Ten months after this, queen Maya's time was come; and she desired to go to her kinsfolk; she addressed king Suddhodhana, saying: I wish, O king, to go to Devadaha, the city of my family. The king approved, and caused the road from Kapilavastu to Devadaha to be made smooth and adorned with vessels filled with plantains (an herb with spikes of minute greenish flowers), flags and banners; and seating her in a golden palanquin borne by a thousand courtiers, sent her with a great retinue. Between the two cities, and belonging to the inhabitants of both, is a pleasure grove of Sal trees named the Lumbini Grove. At this time of the year, the trees were covered with one mass of flowers, from the roots to the tip of the branches. When queen Maya saw it, an uncontrollable desire to run and play in the grove overtook her; and she caused the palanquin to be set onto the ground, and ran to the foot of a large Sal tree, and attempted to seize a branch laden with flowers. As the branch, like the tip of a supple reed, bent down and came within her reach, and she stretched out her hand to grasp it, the pangs of childbirth came upon her. So the multitude set up a curtain around her, and retired. Holding the branch, and even while standing, she was delivered; and it is written that she died giving him birth. And as other beings when born come forth stained with impure matter, not so the birth of Siddhartha Gautama; for he was born of the seed of God, pure and unstained; yea, he descended as the preacher of the Doctrine descending from the seat of the Doctrine.

At Siddhartha's birth a great light appeared in the sky, the deaf heard, the dumb spoke, the lame were made straight, for the Gods descended upon the land, and angels ministered unto all men; and kings came from distant lands to rejoice in his birth. Therefore, the words of Isaiah the prophet of the Jews, descendant of Shem, son of Noah, were first fulfilled among his brethren the Medes and Persians of ancient India, the descendants of Japheth (Yapheth) son of Noah. One sage declared that four signs shall convince him of the miseries of the world, and he would leave his house to become a Universal Teacher, an Enlightened One, a Buddha. To prevent this prophecy from coming true, Suddhodhana resolved that the babe should know no sorrow of the world; but be made content in all the luxuries and amenities of life. So he reared him in splendour and great comfort in three palaces, from whose parks every sign of death, disease, and misery was removed. At Suddhodhana's house three pools were made for him — in one were blue lotus flowers, in the other white lotus flowers, and in the third red lotus flowers. (Ancient Egyptians also revered and worshipped the lotus, for they believed that out of the lotus flower came the first Sun or Son God); and the flowers blossomed well for the sake of the Son of a divine birth, who was to be a light unto the world.

Day and night a white canopy was held over him, to protect him from dust and chaff, germs and insects, heat, cold, and dew. He received royal training in military arts, and also sat at the feet of other sages; and made himself master of all the Spiritual knowledge which was available in his time. And by the time he came of age, forty thousand girls had entertained him, and five hundred ladies were sent to him, that he might choose one as his wife. He married his cousin Yasodhara, whom he won at a great contest, by performing feats of strength and skill, which put to shame all other contestants, including his envious and jealous cousin Devadatta.

But all his prosperity and achievements did not make him happy, nor was his heart at rest; and all his father's efforts failed to prevent the prophecies from coming to pass, for he did see the four signs foretold, for the Gods knew his destiny, and it was they who placed the signs before him. One day, when he was driving the chariot around the royal park with his faithful charioteer Channa (Chauna), he saw an aged man in the last stages of infirmity and in a worn out state, an angel of God who had taken up this disguise. When Siddhartha Gautama asked Channa who this repulsive being was, he was troubled to learn that all men must grow old; this was the first sign. The second sign came a little later, in the same way, in the form of a very sick man, covered with boils and shivering with fever. The third was even more terrible — a corpse being carried to the cremation ground, followed by weeping mourners. His own words which he spake unto his disciples, are narrated as follows:

> Then, O monks did I, endowed with such majesty and excessive delicacy, think thus: An ignorant, ordinary person, who is himself subject to old age, on seeing an old man is troubled, ashamed and disgusted, extending the thought to himself: I, too, am subject to old age, not beyond the sphere of old age; and should I, too, on seeing an old man, be troubled, ashamed, and disgusted? This seemed to me not fitting; and as I thus reflected, all the pride in youthfulness suddenly disappeared.
> Verily, the unenlightened worldling, subject to sickness, without escape from it; when he sees another sick, is oppressed, beset and sickened. I, too, am subject to sickness and cannot escape it; and when I thus pondered, brethren, all pride in healthfulness left me. Verily, the unenlightened worldling subject to death, without escape from it, when he sees another dead, is oppressed, beset, and grieved. I, too, am subject to death and cannot escape it; and while I thought thus, brethren, my pride in liveliness left me.

And it came to pass that the fourth sign brought hope and relief; for a wandering religious beggar, a God in disguise, clad in simple yellow robe, serene and compassionate, with a mien of inward joy, when Siddhartha beheld, he knew immediately where his destiny lay; and he set his heart on becoming an ascetic, a wanderer. Hearing this, king Suddhodhana increased his precautions, and Siddhartha was placed under literal house arrest, although still surrounded with pleasures and luxuries of all kinds; and his heart knew no peace, nor could he forget the four signs. One morning the news was brought to him that Yasodhara his wife had given birth to a son, but this gave him no pleasure or delight. And that night, while his pleasure girls lay asleep in unbecoming postures, some snoring, some grinding their teeth and some with open mouths and saliva dripping out of their mouths at his feet, he revolted from sensual pleasures, and at the same time a flame of compassion was kindled within him; not for the first time, but now with a force and power; for he felt the calling of his destiny, to save not only himself but all mankind from birth in the world of suffering. He walked into Yasodhara's room, and looked for the last time upon his son Rahula. A lamp of scented oil was burning; on the bed, strewn with heaps of jasmine and other flowers, the mother of Rahula was sleeping, with her hand on her son's head. The Bodhisattva (one destined to become a Buddha) standing with his foot on the threshhold looked and thought unto himself: If I move aside the Queen's hand and take my son, the Queen will awake, and this will be an obstacle to my resolve to leave my father, my wife, and my newborn son, to become an ascetic in the desert (like his Shemitic brethren). When I become a Buddha or the Enlightened One, I will come back to see him; and the Bodhisattva left the palace.

Then he roused Channa, his charioteer, who saddled his favorite horse Kanthaka, whose hoofs were cushioned with cotton by the ministering angels, so that no one should hear his departure. When far from the city, he stripped off his jewelry and fine garments, and put on a hermit's robe, provided by a ministering angel also. With his sword he cut off his long hair, and sent it back to his father Suddhodhana, along with his garments by the hand of Channa. It is said that the horse Kanthaka dropped dead from grief, when he sensed that he was to be separated from his master, to be reborn in the heaven's kingdom. Thus Siddhartha began his Great Renunciation (Mahabhiniskramana), and became a wandering ascetic, carrying with him nothing but the robe he wore. It is also written that many a woman became strongly overwhelmed by his beauty and character; and one spoke of him, saying:

Happy indeed is the mother,
Happy indeed is the father,
Happy indeed is the wife,
Who has such a husband.

Buddha-to-be thought unto himself, well spoken O maiden; but I seek that which when extinguished, makes the heart eternally happy; for flesh will grow old and will die; for I also know that it is lust and craving in all its manifold forms, the cause of all suffering; the extinguishing of which ends suffering. Siddhartha was now twenty and nine years old. He first visited Alara Kalama, a priest of God and a great scholar; and learned the techniques of meditation and thought control, and mastered all the Scriptures of the Medes, Persians, and Egyptians; although, the Scriptures of the Jews or the Shemitic people were not taught to him. But he was not convinced that man could obtain liberation from suffering by self-discipline and knowledge alone. So he went to Udaka, another sage and a priest of God, and received no answer to his satisfaction. He passed through the country of Magadha to the town of Uruvela, and settled in a grove of trees to find Enlightenment. He joined five other ascetics who were practicing the most rigorous self-mortification in the hope of wearing away their karma, and obtaining release.

His penances became so severe that the five quickly recognized him as their leader. For six years he tortured himself until he was nothing but a walking skeleton. He lived on seeds and grass, and one time he was given dung to eat; for a time his diet was reduced to a grain of rice each day; he plucked out his hair and beard for torture's sake, and stood or lay for long hours upon thorns; he let the dust and dirt accumulate upon his body, until he looked like an old tree; he frequented a place where human corpses were exposed to be eaten by vultures and beasts, and slept among the rotting carcasses. Siddhartha's own account is narrated below:

> I thought, what if now I set my teeth, press my tongue to my palate; and restrain, crush, and burn out my mind with my mind. I did so, until sweat began to flow from my armpits. Then I thought, what if I now practice trance without breathing; so I restrained breathing in and out by plugging my mouth and nose; and as I did so there was a violent sound of winds issuing from my ears. Just as if a strong man were to thrust into one's head the point of a sword, even so did the violent winds penetrate my head. Then I thought, what if I were to take food only in small amounts, as much as the hollow of my palm will hold, beans, chick-peas, wild herbs and plants. My body became extremely lean; the mark of my seat on the ground was like a camel's footprint; the bones of my spine, when bent and straightened, were like a row of spindles. And as in a deep well, the deep, low-lying sparkle of the water is seen, so in my eye sockets, the deep, low-lying sparkle of mine eyes was seen, due to lack of food. And as a gourd, cut off raw, is cracked and withered through rain and sun, so was the skin of my head withered. When I thought I would touch the skin of my stomach, I actually took hold of my spine. When I thought I would ease myself, I thereupon fell prone through little food. To relieve my body I stroked my limbs with my hand, and as I did so the decayed hairs fell from my body.

The Buddha-to-be conquered fear, subdued all lusts of the flesh, developed and controlled his mind, yet he found not salvation nor enlightenment. And he learned and realized that salvation and enlightenment are not to be found in austerities and mortifications, nor in pleasures and delights; on the contrary, a certain pride of primeval self in self-torture or self-gratification poisoned any holiness that might have come from it. He decided to eat again, and the five ascetics who dwelt with him departed in disgust. One day Siddhartha was seated beneath a large peepal tree on the outskirts of the town of Gaya, in the realm of Bimbisara king of Magadha; and Sugata, the daughter of a nearby farmer brought him a large bowl of rice boiled in milk, which he didst eat; and seated in the lotus posture at the foot of the tree, he resolved to remain seated under the tree, until the enlightenment and release was attained. He bathed that evening, and again, sitting under the peepal tree, made a solemn vow that, though his bones wasted away and his blood dried up, he would not leave his seat until the mysteries of suffering were revealed.

It was the night of the full moon of May, and he was thirty-five years of age. For forty-nine days (seven weeks) he sat beneath the peepal tree. At first he was surrounded by hosts of angels and heavenly messengers, for the great moment of enlightenment was nigh at hand; but soon they disappeared in all directions, for Mara, the Prince of Evil, the tempter and the great deceiver of the world, the spirit of sensual pleasure, even the Devil, approached to tempt Siddhartha. Mara, disguised as a heavenly messenger, brought news that the wicked cousin Devadatta had revolted, thrown Suddodhana into prison, and seized Yasodhara his wife; but Siddhartha was not moved. Mara called his demon hosts and attacked him with whirlwind, tempest, flood, and earthquake; but he sat firm, cross-legged beneath the tree. Then the tempter called on him to prove his righteousness and goodness; so Siddhartha touched the ground with his hand, and the Earth itself spoke with a voice of thunder, I am his witness.

Mara then tried gentler means of shaking Siddhartha's resolve. He called his three daughters of beautiful appearance, namely, Desire, Pleasure, and Passion, who danced and sang before him, and tried every means of seduction; but the Buddha-to-be was unshaken in his resolve. Mara and his priests offered him the Universal Empire, but he was quite unmoved. At last the demon hosts gave up their struggle to persuade him, and left; then, Gautama sank deeper and deeper into meditation. Suddenly a vision came to him of the infinite succession of deaths and births in the stream of life; he saw every death frustrated by new birth; every peace and joy frustrated by new desire and discontentment, new disappointments, new grief and pain. He said: Thus with mind concentrated, purified, cleansed, I directed my mind to the passing away and rebirth of beings; I saw beings passing away and reborn, low and high, of good and bad color, in satisfactory or miserable existence, according to their karma — the universal law by which every act of good or evil will be rewarded or punished in this life, or in life to come.

Now the Enlightened One, or the Buddha, realized that birth is the origin of all evil, for the primeval self is ignorant; therefore, the seed of ignorance always bringeth forth the fruit of ignorance; and this cycle continues forever, unless interference by the powers of heaven is decreed. He diligently sought the answer to the causes of rebirth and suffering; which the princes of his day learned by means of the illustration of the Wheel of Rebirth (also known by other names). Alara Kalama and Udaka, two great teachers of the time, taught him that the Wheel of Rebirth rolls and rolls unceasingly, and rebirth is not stopped, because the law of karma demands new reincarnations in which the soul may atone for evil done in the past. And if a man could live a life of perfect justice, of compassion, and of peace; if he could tie his thoughts to the eternal things, which are only found in the Soul of man; and not binding his heart to the things that begin and pass away, then his rebirth may be spared, and for him the fountain of evil would run dry. If one could subdue all the desires of one's self, and seek only to do good, then individuality, the first and worse delusion of mankind, might be overcome, and the soul would then merge with unconscious infinity. As the peace one finds when his heart is cleansed of desire, passion, and anger, so one lives in torment and misery, who is covetous, desirous, and hateful, in his thoughts or actions. He learned that happiness is possible neither here, as the heathens believe, nor in the hereafter, as many religions proclaim; only peace is possible, only the cool quietitude of craving ended, only salvation and enlightenment is possible; these things alone make man happy, because they are found in the Soul, the Higher Self of man, and nowhere else they are found. Siddhartha Gautama's journey was now over; after seven years of wanderings, afflictions, and meditation, he found enlightenment; a new Buddha, the fourth great teacher of this human cycle (kalpa) was born.

Suddenly, overpowered by the Holy Spirit of Truth and Light, Siddhartha Gautama Buddha, Sakya Muni the sage of the Sakyas (Shakyas), broke into this psalm of praise and victory:

> Many a house hath held me, seeking ever him who wrought
> These prisons of senses, sorrow-fraught;
> Sore was my ceaseless strife, but now;
> O thou Builder of this tabernacle, thou!
> I know thee! Never shalt thou build again these walls of pain;
> Nor raise the rooftree of deceit, nor lay
> Fresh rafters on the clay;
> Broken thine house is, and ridge-pole split,
> Delusion fashioned it!
> Safe, now I pass, deliverance to obtain!

The earth knew of the coming of a new Buddha, and the Buddhahood (Priesthood) knew of the victory; and the forces of heaven and the forces of earth rejoiced that another Buddha was born. He remained under the Tree of Wisdom (Bodhi tree) another seven days, meditating upon the truths he had found. But the Buddha for the last time was assailed with doubts by the words of Mara, the Evil One, saying, He who had given up all to seek release for all, why should he show to all men the path which leads to the end of suffering? The earth trembled and waited his reply; but the Buddha's heart of compassion wakened to man's eternal need to be saved from his fallen state, and from the bondage of sin, iniquity, and ways of error. And the Most Holy (Brahma) himself pleaded for mankind, saying:

> O All-Enlightened One, let the Blessed One (meaning the Buddha) preach the Doctrine (dhamma)! May the Perfect One (the Buddha) preach the Doctrine unto all the world. For there are beings whose mental eyes are scarcely darkened by any dust; and if they hear not the Doctrine, they will perish; yet there will be some who will understand.

And the All-Enlightened One had pity on mankind; and the decision was made in the council in heaven, that the Buddha would preach the Doctrine to all mankind. "I will beat the drum of the Immortal in the darkness of the world," said the Blessed One. Now the Blessed One thought, To whom shall I preach the law of the Way first? Who will understand this law readily? His earliest master teachers Alara Kalama and Udaka had passed away. And the Blessed One thought, The five brethren with whom I spent many a year, indeed, have done many services to me; they attended on me at the time of my ascetic discipline. When it was told him that they were in Benares, he went to the Deer Park, where the five brethren were. And they received him with gladdened hearts, and paid due reverence. On the night of the full moon of July, he preached to them his first sermon of Setting in Motion the Wheel of Righteousness. He spoke of two extreme pursuits of Pleasure and Pain, which must be avoided, and the Middle-way of the Tathagata must be trod, to escape rebirth and suffering; he taught the Four Noble Truths of suffering and its cause, desire or selfishness, which ariseth out of primeval self, the false and ignorant self; he spoke of the removal of the cause, and of the Eight-fold Path which leads to the end of suffering. Kondonna was first to be ordained a disciple of the Tathagata, for he was pure and spotless, and a true believer of the Doctrine (dhamma).

There in the Deer Park of Isipatana (Sarnath), near Benares, Buddha proclaimed his Doctrine or Dharma (dhamma in Pali), saying: Goodly is the Dhamma, O Bhikkus (literally beggars), in the beginning, goodly in the middle, and goodly in the end; soon the other four ascetics perceived the truth of the Doctrine, and they too were ordained. To them he preached his second sermon, concerning the doctrine of Soullessness or Impermanence (anatta), saying; The five aggregates of man, namely: Body, Feeling, Perception, Conception, and Consciousness are transient and temporary; and are prone to suffering, in the absence of a permanent Soul or the True Self. Thus the Blessed One spoke. The five brethren were delighted, and they rejoiced greatly in the words of Sakya Muni, the Sage of the Sakyas; and as he set going the Wheel of the Law of Righteousness, the earth-inhabiting Gods shouted with joy and praise, saying; Truly the Blessed One has set going at Benares, in the Deer Park Isipatana, the Wheel of the Law, which may not be opposed by any being in the world. Thus in that moment, in that very instant, the shout reached the world of Brahma (the priesthood of Abraham); and this whole system of ten thousand worlds quaked, shaked, and trembled; and a great light appeared in the sky, and was seen throughout the world.

A few days later, a band of sixty young ascetics became his followers; and Sakya Muni sent them out in all directions to preach the Doctrine (dhamma), with exhortations, saying; Go ye forth, O Bhikkus (monks; literally beggars), on your journey, for the profit of many, for the bliss of many, out of compassion for the world; for the welfare, benefit, and bliss of devas (angel-gods), and all mankind. Go not any two together, but each according to his understanding of the Doctrine. Proclaim, O Bhikkus, the Doctrine, glorious in its beginning, glorious in its middle, and glorious in its ending. In the spirit and in the letter make ye known the perfect, utterly pure, righteous life.

The greatest kings and rulers of the time favored Sakya Muni, and his followers. A disciplined body of monks was gathered and knit together by a common garb, the yellow robe of the Holy Order, and a common Doctrine. Eight months of the year the Buddha, Sakya Muni, would travel from place to place, with his disciples or followers, preaching the Doctrine, and ordaining new monks into the Order. During the four months of the rainy season, they would stop in one of the parks donated to the Order by wealthy lay followers, and live in huts of bamboo and reed; these were the first form of the great Buddhist monasteries of later times. His method of teaching was similar to those of the wanderers, or travelling sophists of his time; most of whom came from Jerusalem and other parts of Arabia, Media, Persia, Egypt, and other lands; for Taxilla (Takshashila, Takhtasila) in northwest India, was known as the Seat of Morality, and the greatest learning center of this time; and in the land between the rivers Ganges and Yamuna (Jamna), known as Aryavarta, or the land of the Aryans, many cultures of the Middle and Near East and Egypt blended together into one, and the inhabitants were called the Hindus.

Sakya Muni walked from town to town, accompanied by his favorite disciples, and as many as twelve hundred followers, or devotees. He took no thought for the morrow, but was content to be fed by some local admirer. Once he scandalized his followers by eating in the home of a publican (courtesan). Usually they would pitch camp in the outskirts of a village, in some garden or forest, or on some river bank. The afternoon Sakya Muni gave to meditation and rest, the evening to instruction and guidance. His discourse utilized dialectics, reason, and persuasion; he used parables, kind words, and sometimes compressed his teaching into succinct formulas in order to convey the message.

Buddha was convinced that pain so frustrated pleasure, in the natural self of man, that it would be better for man never to have been born; in the absence of True Self or Soul every pleasure is poisoned. And one day he asked his disciples, Is that which is impermanent sorrow or joy? And they answered, Sorrow, Lord. The basic evil is tanha or trishna, the thirst or craving, which ariseth from selfish desire; not all desire but desire directed to the advantage of the part, rather than the good of the whole — it is the clinging to the primeval or ignorant self; and forever living in the bondage of mortality, rebirth, and suffering. One of his disciples thought that Buddha would approve of suicide, as it was acceptable in other prevailing sects or religions; but Buddha reproved him, saying, Behold, suicide would be a useless way of escape, for the soul unpurified and unmolded will be reborn in other incarnations, until it has achieved complete forgetfulness of self.

All monks of the Holy Order, or Bhikkus, in Buddha's time practiced a simple rule with diligence — they saluted one another, and to all those to whom they spoke, with one phrase, Peace be to all! The Buddha returned to Uruvela to keep the rainy season of vassa. On his way, he passed a band of thirty young men who were picknicking with their wives. One of them had no wife, and had brought a prostitute with him, who had stolen his belongings and run away. The young man asked the Buddha if he had seen such a woman; and Buddha replied, saying; Which were better for thee, young man, to seek for thy woman, or to seek for thy Self? He said unto his disciples, Yea, all is poisoned in thy selfish desires; therefore find thy Soul first, that the suffering caused by impermanence be removed.

After Uruvela, Buddha proceeded to Rajagha, whither his fame had preceded him. King Bimbisara came to him with a host of citizens and asked to be taught the Doctrine (dhamma); and on hearing it he was converted. The Buddha accepted a meal at the palace, and was given the park known as Bamboo Grove for the use of the Order as a permanent retreat. While they were resting there, a newly ordained disciple, Assaji, met Sariputta, a disciple of another highly favored ascetic who dwelt nearby. Sariputta had a friend Moggallana, and the two men had made a promise to tell one another, when either of them attained the Immortal.

Sariputta was deeply impressed by Assaji's dignity and righteousness, as he moved about the city begging for alms; and asked him, as was customary for one ascetic to inquire of another, who his teacher was, and what his teaching might be. Assaji told him that his teacher was Sakya Muni (the sage of the Sakyas), but being newly ordained, he could not preach all of the Doctrine (dhamma). And Sariputta asked him in sincerity of his heart, Then tell me a little! This was the reply of Assaji unto Sariputta:

> Of all things which proceed from a cause, > the Tathagata has explained the cause;
> and also has explained their ceasing.
> This the Great Adept has proclaimed.

Sariputta understood this to mean, Whatsoever is a rising thing, the same is a ceasing thing; and there arose in him the Spotless Eye of the Doctrine (dhamma), that is believing in the Doctrine without the slightest of doubt or reservations whatsoever; and he was taken over by the power of the Holy Spirit of Truth and Light; this is the Awakening of the higher consciousness, which leads to Enlightenment. And as soon as his friend Mogallana saw him, he knew at once that Sariputta had attained the Immortal; later, he too being told the Doctrine, became a convert, and later became an Elder.

By now, king Suddhodhana was longing to see his son again, and sent him repeated messages. Finally, when spring had come, the Buddha returned to Kapilavastu with a train of followers; and for the first time since the Enlightenment saw his father and wife and son. His father, who had mourned the loss of a prince, rejoiced for a while, over the return of a saint. Buddha's wife, who had been faithful to him during all their separation, fell down before him, clasped his ankles, placed his feet about her head, and reverenced him as a God. Then king Suddhodhana told Buddha of her great love, addressing him thus: lord, my daughter (in-law), when she heard that you were wearing yellow robes (as a monk), she put on yellow robes; when she heard of your having one meal a day, herself took one meal; when she knew that you had given up a large bed, she lay on a narrow couch; and when she knew that you had given up garlands and scents, she gave them up too. Buddha blessed her.

Then came his son Rahula, and paid reverence, saying: Pleasant is your shadow, ascetic; and asked for his inheritance (meaning Spiritual blessing of the father upon his eldest son); and Buddha, turning to Sariputta, said: Receive him into the Order; thus the heir of the throne of the Sakyas, chose his spiritual inheritance, rather than the rulership. Buddha's father and his wife were also converted to the Doctrine (dhamma); as well as many members of the court, including his cousin Devadatta, whose heart remained full of jealousy and envy unto the bitter end.

Another cousin of Buddha, namely Ananda was then called to be consecrated as heir-apparent to the throne; but Ananda, as if in a trance, left the ceremony, abandoning the rulership, and joined Buddha. When king Suddhodhana heard of this he was sad, and asked a boon of Buddha, saying: When the lord abandoned the world, it was no small pain to me; now more so with Rahula gone and Nanda also; the love of the son cuts through the skin, through the hide, the flesh, the sinew, the marrow. Grant, lord, that thy noble ones may not confer the ordination on a son without the permission of his father and mother. Buddha consented, and from that day made such permission prerequisite to ordination into the Holy Order.

Sakya Muni, the Buddha, returned to Rajagha; and here came to visit him, Anathapindika, a wealthy merchant of Savatthi. After his conversion, he built a resting place for the weary traveler at every league (on the average about three miles apart), from Rajagha to Savatthi; and now consecrated to the Order, the Jatavena Grove as a third retreat, buying it from prince Jata, for as much gold pieces as would cover the ground of the grove. Buddha thanked him, and later he too became a disciple; and the monastery built in the Jatavena Grove became Buddha's headquarters for the rest of his ministry. About this time also, Visakha, the wife of a guild-master of Savatthi, who was converted to the Doctrine (dhamma), gave to the Order her precious jewelled headdress which, when sold, provided funds for yet another retreat. Thus men and women of all ranks and stations gave their best to the Order in exchange for the Doctrine (dhamma), which leads all men to the end of suffering.

The Buddha's fame as a Great Teacher and the Blessed of the Gods, spread throughout the land of Aryavarta, the region between the river Yamuna (Jamna) and Ganga (Ganges), especially over North-east India. On one occasion, two princes were about to engage in a terrible battle over a certain embankment constructed to keep in water. Between these two rulers and their assembled armies Buddha suddenly appeared and asked the cause of the strife. When he was informed of the subject of dispute, he put forth this parable:

Tell me, O kings, is earth by itself of any real value?
Of no value whatsoever, they replied.
Is the water of any intrinsic value?
Of no value whatsoever.
And the blood of kings, is that of any intrinsic value?
Its value is priceless.
Then, said Sakya Muni, the Tathagata, Is it, then, reasonable that that which is priceless should be staked against that which is of no value by itself?

And the two rulers saw the wisdom, and abandoned their dispute; and were later converted. Sakya Muni himself being of the Kshatriya or warrior caste, gave up war and the instruments of war; and after repentance, and performance of severe penances, he gave up his passions and lusts altogether, and became all virtuous, full of kindness and compassion, a serene and enlightened being, the Buddha; he could now diffuse the effects of mortality and rebirth by having ascended into the realm of his True Self or the Cosmic Soul; he could now dwell in the World or Samsara, but without the poisonous effects of suffering, which ariseth from the ever-changing or temporal nature of Body, Feelings, Conceptions, Perceptions, and Consciousness (or Awareness).

The disciples of Gautama Buddha, Sakya Muni, did preserve the record of this Fourth Great Teacher and Sage of this cycle of human existence; the character of this Japhetic Christ and Son of God, who preceded the coming of the Shemitic Christ and Son of God (Jesus, son of Mary), by some five centuries, is abridged:

"He does live as a binder together of those who are divided, an encourager of those who are friends, a peacemaker, a lover of peace, passionate for peace, a speaker of words that make for peace. He would return good for evil, love for hate; and remained silent under persecution and abuse. The Sakya Muni once said: If a man foolishly does me wrong, I will return to him the protection of my ungrudging love; the more evil comes from him, the more good shall come out of me; the fragrance of goodness always comes to me, and the harmful air of evil goes to the evildoer. Once to challenge this doctrine of returning good for evil, a simpleton abused Buddha and mocked at him. Buddha listened in silence, and when the man had finished, Buddha asked the man, saying: Son, if a man declined to accept a present given to him, to whom would it return? The man answered, To him who offered it. Then said Sakya Muni, My Son, I decline to accept thy abuse, and request thee to keep it for thyself; wilt it not be a source of misery to thee? As the echo belongs to the sound, and the shadow to the substance, so misery overtaketh the evildoer without fail. The abuser made no reply, and Buddha continued, saying; A wicked man who reproaches a virtuous one is like one who looks up and spits at the heaven; the spittle soils not the heaven, but comes back and defiles the same; the slanderer is like one who flings dust at another, when the wind is contrary — the dust only returns to him who threw it; the virtuous man cannot be hurt by the poisonous darts of the evildoer. The abuser went away ashamed, but he came again, and took refuge in the Buddha.

Buddha said also, Let a man overcome anger by kindness, evil by good; victory breedeth hatred, for the conquered is unhappy; never in the world doth hatred cease by hatred, but hatred ceaseth by love."

Buddha taught his disciples plainly the Doctrine (dhamma), and said unto them: Go ye into all the lands and preach this gospel; tell them that poor and lowly, the rich and high, all are one in the gospel; and that all castes unite (merge) into one in this religion, as do the rivers in the sea. Brethren, there are two ethical teachings . . . What two? First, look at evil as evil; and second, seeing evil as evil, be disgusted with it, be cleansed of it, be freed of it. Brethren, there are three kinds of persons found in the world. What three? The one who is like a drought, the one who rains locally, and the one who pours down everywhere. And how is a person like a drought? A selfish person, not sharing his substance with the wretched, the poor, and the needy, the same is like a drought; a person is like a local rainfall that giveth to some according to his selfish purpose, and expects a reward; and, brethren, a person that giveth selflessly to all, without expecting a reward, is likened to a person that rains down everywhere. Brethren, even if one should seize the hem of my garment, and walk behind me step for step, yet if he be covetous in his desires, fierce in his longing, malevolent of heart, of corrupt mind, careless and unrestrained, grasping onto his primeval ignorance of the past, that, O monks, is far from me, and I am far from him. Live ye perfect in virtue in the performance of your daily obligations; be ye always perfect in conduct and behavior, ever-mindful of the power of Mara the Evil One, the Devil, over the hearts of men. For him who abides in the precepts of the Doctrine (dhamma), what else remains to be done?

All that we are is the result of what we have thought; it is founded on our thoughts, it is made up of our thoughts. If a man speaks or acts with an evil thought, pain follows him, as the wheel follows the foot of the ox that draws the carriage. And if a man speaks or acts with a pure thought, joy follows him, like a shadow that never leaves him. As rain breaks through an ill-thatched roof, passion breaks through an unreflecting mind; but if you find a man who shows you what to be avoided, administers reproofs, and speaks with the Spirit of Truth, follow that man as you would one who reveals hidden treasures. Irrigators lead the water wherever they may, carpenters fashion wood, and wise people fashion themselves. And as a solid rock is not shaken by the wind, wise people waver not amidst blame or praise, they become serene, compassionate, and forgiving. If one man conquer in battle a thousand times a thousand men, and another conquer himself; the latter is the greatest of conquerors; for one's own self conquered is better than all other people conquered; not even a god could change into defeat the victory of a man who has conquered his selfish desires.

Let no man think light-mindedly of evil, saying in his heart, It will not come nigh unto me; for even by the falling of water drops a water pot is filled — the fool becomes full of evil, even if he gathers it little by little. By one's self the evil is done, by one's self one suffers; by one's self evil is left undone, by one's self one is purified; both the pure and impure stand and fall by themselves. It hath been said, victory breeds hatred, for the conquered is unhappy; but whoso has given up victory and defeat, he is contented and joyful, and wise. There is no fire like that of passion; no evil like that of hatred; and no misery like that of fleshly existence; there is no joy and happiness higher than peace. Let no man cling to either the pleasant or the unpleasant. Not to see that which is pleasant is pain, and it is pain to see that which is unpleasant. Let, therefore, no man be strongly attached to anything, thought or action. Those that are attached to nothing, and hate nothing, have no fetters. Kinsfolk, friends, and lovers rejoice in saluting a man who has been long away, and returns safe from afar; likewise, a man's good works receive him, who has done good works and has gone from this world to the other. He who holds back rising anger like a rolling chariot, he alone is the real Driver, others merely hold the reins. Therefore, Brethren, let each wise man blow off the impurities of himself, as a smith blows off the impurities of silver and gold; one by one, little by little, from moment to moment. The faults of others are easily perceived, but those of one's self are difficult to perceive; a man winnows his neighbors faults like chaff, but his own he hides, as a cheat hides an unlucky cast of the die. If a man continues after the faults of others, and is always inclined to be offended, his passions and delusion will grow out of it — what ought to be done is neglected, and what ought not to be done is performed; the desires of selfish and unruly people are always increasing, without ever being filled; this is the endless pit of hellfire, from whence no man can return, lest he be sent there on a divine mission.

If a man find no prudent companion to walk with him, it is wise to live alone and soberly, like a king who has left his conquered country behind, like an elephant in the forest, let him walk alone. A man who has learnt little, grows old like an ox; his flesh grows, but his knowledge does not grow. Earnestness is the path of enlightenment and salvation; thoughtlessness the path of death. Those who are earnest die not in the Spirit, but those who are thoughtless are as if dead already. The scent of flowers or sandalwood does not travel against the wind, but the odor of good people travels even against the wind; a good man pervades every place.

On one occasion a number of disciples went to Buddha, the Tathagata (meaning the One who has won the Truth), one saying, Sir, there are living here in Savatthi many wandering hermits, sages, soothsayers, and scholars, who indulge in constant dispute, each holding a different view, this or that. What, Sir, would you say concerning them? The Tathagata answered, saying: Brethren, those disputatious fellows are like unto blind men. Once upon a time there was a rajah in this region who called a certain man, and said, Gather together in one place all the men in Savatthi who are born blind, and show them an elephant; and the man did as he was bidden, and said unto the blind men, O blind, such is the elephant. And to one man he presented the head of the elephant, to another his ear; yet to others he showed the tusk, or the trunk, the foot, the back, the tail, and tuft of the tail, saying to each one that it was the elephant. Thereupon, Brethren, that rajah went up to the blind men, and said to each, Tell me, what sort of thing is an elephant? Behold, those who had been presented with the head answered, Sire, an elephant is like a pot! And those who had observed the ear only replied, An elephant is like a winnowing-basket! Those who had been shown the tusk said it was a plowshare. Those who observed the trunk said it was a plow. They said the body was a granary; the foot, a pillar; the back a mortar; the tail a pestle; the tuft of the tail, a broom.

Then they (the blind) began to quarrel, shouting, Yes, it is! No, it is not! and so on, till they began to fight with their fists over the matter, saying, An elephant is not like that, or an elephant for a surety is like that, and so on. Then, Brethren, that rajah was delighted with the scene. Just so, are these wanderers, holding other views; blind, unseeing, knowing not the profitable nor the unprofitable; nor do they know the Law (meaning the Doctrine, the dhamma). In their ignorance, by nature they are quarrelsome, full of disputations, each maintaining this view or that, arising out of (primeval) ignorance. Always, Brethren, be cautious of your thoughts and actions, lest ye be taken by the snares of the Evil One (the Devil). In the Himalaya, there is a region where dwell both monkeys and human beings. It is here, Brethren, that the hunter sets a trap of pitch, round about the monkeys' habitat, to catch them, to be sold or traded or eaten up. Now, those monkeys that are not foolish and greedy, on seeing the pitch-trap, keep far away from it. But a foolish and greedy monkey comes up to the pitch, and handles it with one of his paws, and his paw gets stuck fast to the pitch. Then thinking to free his paw, he lays hold of it with the other paw, but that too sticks fast; then to free both his paws and both feet he lays hold of them with his muzzle, but that too sticks fast. So the monkey thus trapped in five ways, lies down and howls; fallen on misfortune and ruin, he becomes a prey for the hunter to work his will on him — even so it is with one that goes in wrong pastures. Therefore, walk ye ever so carefully, lest ye be caught in the tempter's snare. And what, Brethren, is the wrong pasture? It is the pleasures of senses — material shapes recognizable by the eye, taste by the tongue, scents by the nose, sounds by the ear; and the objects felt by the body, desirable, delightful, pleasant, passion-fraught, strongly-felt objects, inciting to lust, craving, and suffering.

Buddha believed that women were unpurified in their thoughts and actions, and couldn't bear the discipline, which was necessary for their release from bondage, arising from ignorance and primeval desires; only when a woman is free from the thirst and mortality, then ignorance may be replaced with emancipation and enlightenment, and salvation. His favorite disciple and cousin Ananda once asked him, How are we to conduct ourselves, Lord, concerning womankind?

> "As not seeing them, Ananda," replied Buddha.
> "But if we see them, what are we to do?"
> "Do not begin a conversation."
> "But if they should speak to us, Lord, what are we to do?"
> "Keep wide awake, Ananda!"

And it came to pass that Mahaprajapati, the Buddha's stepmother, on the death of his father cut off her hair, and shaving her head, appeared before the Buddha, in the yellow robes of the Order. Again and again he refused the admittance of women into the Holy Order; but at the insistence of Ananda, they were admitted to a female branch of the Order. It is said that once the Buddha said: If the women had not received the permission to enter the Order, the pure religion would have lasted long, the good law would have stood fast a thousand years; but since the women have received permission, it will now stand for only half that time!

Once, the Buddha asked his disciples, taking a handful of leaves from the forest floor, which were more numerous, these or those in the forest round about him? So they replied, Indeed, Lord, the leaves in the forest are more numerous; then he explained the parable, saying: Such is the relation of the truths that exist, and that which hath been revealed unto you. Of all my knowledge I teach only those things which pertain to holy life, and provide release from suffering to all mankind; but of my personal life I teach not.

It is also recorded that the Buddha in his early ministry performed many wonders and miracles; once when some rival teachers and Brahmans (priests of the Order of Abraham) provoked him, he performed feats of levitation and healed many of their afflictions in Sravasti; but he sternly forbade his disciples, the monks of the Holy Order, from performing any miracles. Once he wafted himself across the Ganges.

Ananda and Devadatta were cousins of the Buddha, the former becoming his most beloved disciple, follower, and friend for the last twenty-five years of the Buddha's life upon earth; and the latter assuming the role of a jealous and envious enemy. It is said that Devadatta, consumed with jealousy, managed to cause a split in the Order (sangha); and at one time created a serious dissension by winning the support of Ajatasattu, the son of king Bimbisara, from allegiance to the Buddha. Then Devadatta plotted to kill the Buddha by letting loose a ferocious elephant on the road along which Buddha was to walk. The Buddha was forewarned of the attempt, but he insisted upon walking the road alone. The elephant rushed toward him, and on reaching him the elephant knelt down in homage; for the Buddha roused in him the quality of lovingkindness (metta); and the Buddha continued to walk upon the road unconcerned. After this, Devadatta caused other political splits in the Order, and persuaded a number of Bhikkus or monks to leave. So Buddha sent Moggallana and Sariputta to preach to Devadatta and Ajatasattu, and they were brought back into the fold. Shortly before his death, Devadatta repented and forsook his evil ways, and became a member in good standing of the Order.

For over forty years the Enlightened One's reputation grew, and the Order (sangha) increased in number and influence; and with the exception of Devadatta, there was no opposition from any side, for the Gods had so decreed, that there be no opposition to the noble truths.

In his last retreat he was taken ill. Ananda his disciple was alarmed, and expressed the hope that the Exalted One would not pass away until he gave instructions concerning the leadership of the Order. But the Buddha refused, saying: Surely, Nanda, should there be anyone among us who harbors the thought, "It is I who will lead the community," it is he who should lay down instructions concerning the Order. The Great Teacher recovered from his illness; and later, when speaking to Ananda of the coming death, he consoled him for his obvious grief, and said: But now, Ananda, have I not formerly declared to thee that it is in the very nature of all things near and dear to us to pass away? How then, thou, seeing that whatsoever is brought into being contains within itself the inherent necessity of dissolution, a being (as the visible Gautama) should not be dissolved in its appointed time? The body of this being is like a worn-out cart, creaking at every joint; three months shall not pass away, that this body shall be no more!

After this, the Buddha went to a meeting-place in the forest, and announced to the congregation of monks (beggars) there, saying: Behold now, O Bhikkus, I exhort you, all component things must grow old, and pass away; work out your own salvation with diligence. Imagination, thought, and will make deeds, and by our deeds we make ourselves; all that we are is the result of our thoughts; it is founded on our thoughts, made up of our thoughts; therefore, O Bhikkus, keep your thoughts pure and undefiled; that ye may earn the great reward of finding your own (True) Self, and stopping the misery and pain of suffering.

The last days of the Buddha, or Sakya Muni, the Tathagata, the Enlightened One, the Blessed One, the Exalted One, the Great Sage of the Aryans (the sons of Japheth, Yapheth or Haifeth; brother of Shem, son of Noah; also distant brothers of Ham, son of Noah), began when he was eighty years of age. The Buddha made known to his disciples in advance that he would soon pass away, and thereupon spoke these words: Therefore, O Ananda (and my disciples), be ye islands unto yourselves. Take the Self as your refuge; take yourselves to no external refuge; hold fast to the Doctrine (dhamma) as an island; hold fast to the reservoir of eternal truths; depend not on others for refuge, but first depend upon your own Self. And whosoever, Ananda (and my disciples), shall take the Self as an island, and not rely on external sources, holding fast to the Truths as their refuge, it is they who shall reach the very topmost height; but they must be eager to learn.

The Buddha spent the last rainy season of his life on earth, near the city of Vaisali; and after the rains ended, he and his followers journeyed northward to the hill country, which had been the home of his youth. Then the Buddha proceeded to Pava, and stopped at the Mango Grove of Cunda, the blacksmith. Cunda invited the Master and his disciples to dine at his house; and a special meal of pork flesh was prepared for him; having eaten their meal, they continued their journey to the Sala Grove of the Mallas, near Kusinagara (Kusinara), and having arrived there the Master fell ill, saying: Spread for me my couch, Ananda, I am weary and would fain lie down. Then the Exalted One lay down on his right side, and was mindful and Self-possessed. The monks assembled around him, and dying Gautama noticed that Ananda his cousin disciple was not among them, for he stood a way off, weeping over the loss of his beloved companion and Master. The Master sent for him and comforted him, saying; For a long time, Ananda, you have been very near and dear to me, through your acts of thoughtfulness and kindness and love. You have done well, my faithful brother; now be earnest in your efforts, and you too shall be free from the cankers of sensuality, of becoming, and of false view and ignorance (delusion); and he sent to the nearby village of Kusinagara to inform the Mallas that the Tathagata was about to pass away. The Mallas came to him, and Ananda showed them to the Master, family by family, in the first watch of the night; and the Buddha preached the Doctrine (dhamma), and received some into the Order in the selfsame night. Just before he passed away, he thus addressed the brethren who were assembled there, saying: Decay is inherent in all component things; work out your own salvation with diligence! These were the last words of the Tathagata. Thereafter he entered the first of the Jhanas, or higher states of consciousness, then he reached the second, and the third, and the fourth; he passed still further into the realms of consciousness or awareness, which none but a Buddha, an All-Enlightened One, may know. Thus Gautama Buddha, the Fourth Great Tathagata of this cycle of human existence, passed away in 483 B.C., at the age of eighty years.

Anuruddha, the Elder, exhorted the brethren not to lament, repeating the Lord's words: If all that is born contains within it the seeds of dissolution, how is it possible that this body be not dissolved? And Ananda sent for the Mallas of Kusinagara, who after paying homage, seven days later cremated the remains. The ashes were divided into ten equal parts, and given to the rajas of the lands where the Buddha had preached or lived. Stupas or dagobas (reliquary chambers) were erected over them; and all too soon the reverence and adoration of these relics grew into a powerful religious sect.

Later, Ananda the disciple, said, I regretted in my heart that the Exalted One was to die in so small a town as Kusinagara; and mentioned the six cities which he considered suitable enough for a Buddha to die, namely, Sravasti, Campa, Rajagrha, Saketa (Ayodha), Kausambi, and Kasi (Benares). And Sariputta the disciple, said: Toward the end of the Master's days, I went to the place where the Exalted One was; and having saluted him, took my seat respectfully at his side, saying,

> "Lord, such faith have I in the Exalted One that methinks there never has been, nor will there be, nor is there now, any other, whether wanderer or Brahman, who is greater and wiser than the Exalted One as regards the higher wisdom."
>
> "Grand and bold are the words of thy mouth, Sariputta," answered the Master; "verily thou hast burst forth into a song of ecstasy! Of course, then, thou hast known all the Exalted Ones of the past, comprehending their minds with yours, and aware what their conduct was, what their wisdom, and what the emancipation they attained?"
>
> "Not so, O Lord," I said.
>
> "Of course, then, thou hast perceived all the Exalted Ones of the future, comprehending their whole minds with yours?"
>
> "Not so, O Lord!" I said.
>
> "But at least, then, O Sariputta, thou knowest me, and hast penetrated my mind?"
>
> "Not even that, O Lord," I said.
> "You see, then, Sariputta, that thou knowest not the hearts of the Able, Awakened Ones of the past nor of the future; why, therefore, are thy words so grand and bold? Why bursteth forth thou into such a song of ecstasy?"

Such is the account of the Japhetic Christ, the Holy One of the Medes and Persians (the Aryans), and later, also of the Egyptians who dwelt in ancient India. By many names he is known, but Buddha, Tathagata, or Sakya Muni, best describe him. A formalized doctrine of the Tathagata begins on the next page.

TATHAGATA'S DOCTRINE OF SELF-SALVATION AND ENLIGHTENMENT

Self-salvation and enlightenment is possible for every man who is willing to learn the Four Sublime Truths, and is willing to tread the Path of Tathagata, meaning, the Path of the One who has won the Truth, the Enlightened One. This great and marvelous gift of God was bestowed upon mankind, under the hands of the Tathagata Gautama Buddha, Sakya Muni, in the sixth century B.C., who was the fourth Great Teacher of this cycle (kalpa) of human existence. Although this sacred and mysterious knowledge was known to the Tathagatas of the fifteenth century B.C., who belonged to the Egyptian and Hindu Priesthood of the Order of the Brahma (Abraham) or Brahamans, and the Aryan or Japhetic priesthood of the Medes, Persians, and ancient Indians (the inhabitants of Bharatavarsa or Jumbudvipa), it was Sakya Muni, the sage of the Sakyas of India, who gave it to the world; he taught the doctrine to people of his land, and at the learning center of the world of that time, known as the Seat of Morality, or Takshasila (Taxila, Takhtesila) in northwest India; and at Bamiyan, Iran. The believers of the doctrine are known as the Buddhists, or those that believe the Sublime Truths, and tread the Noble Eightfold Path or the Path of the Tathagata; it is the doctrine which affirms even to this day, as it has for nearly twenty-five hundred years, that Self-salvation and enlightenment is within the reach of every man who is willing to develop and train his human faculty of intuition, awakening, or intellect, buddhi in Sanskrit and Pali.

But Self-salvation and enlightenment is only possible if a man works out his own salvation diligently, without reliance on outside sources; although the trinity of Enlightened One or Sun of God (Buddha), the Word of God (dharma, dhamma in Pali), and the Priesthood of God (sangha) is forever available for man's refuge. And he must learn to see directly into the heart of the matter, the Spirit of Truth being his only guide; never having to compromise his thoughtful judgment and beliefs with his own passing feelings or opinions of others. In the lower stages of man's climb all means and devices are employed, only to be discarded when their usefulness is ended. A raft is useful for crossing a river, but he is a fool who carries it on his back when the river is crossed. There comes a time when all devices are seen as hindrances — even the highly cherished Scriptures become shackles around the awakening mind, as the faculty of intuition (buddhi) slowly but steadily awakens. The world and the ways of the world (Samsara) are left behind; tolerance widens, compassion deepens, and serenity becomes a constant companion. Undisturbed by the "passing shows" of the worlds of passion and turmoil, veils of ignorance continue to fall steadily; followed by an ever-increasing awareness of that which lies beyond the last veil; for after this veil, there is no more mortality or rebirths and suffering. The three fires of Greed or Covetousness, Anger or Hatred, Desire or Illusion, are suffocated for the lack of refuelling. In short, the faculty of intuition or buddhi is awakening; and it is present in every man, but needs to be awakened and exercised, as a baby's muscles and other faculties are exercised and awakened; for if it were not so, people would not be able to walk, talk, read, write, or communicate with one another. There is no difference between an enlightened man and an ignorant one, except the enlightened man is aware of its existence, and has developed this faculty, and the other is neither aware of its existence, nor has developed it. Therefore, he that seeketh with knowledge and diligence for the Immortal, and after finding it looks inward to his True Self, not to the ignorant self into which he was born, the same is the enlightened one, the awakened one, or buddha.

Self-salvation and enlightenment should be an immediate concern, as it has been in all ages and among all people. If a man lay wounded by a poisoned arrow, he would not delay the extraction by demanding details about the man who shot it, or what sort of poison was used, or whence it came, but he will begin by obtaining immediate help in pulling out the arrow and right treatment to cure the effects of the poison; after the healing is achieved, then he can learn about all the details; so immediate should be the concern for Self-salvation and enlightenment. Therefore, man must first begin by facing life as it is, and learning by personal experience, study, and diligence; and not relying on any written or spoken word, unless it agrees with reason, or his own Spirit of Truth. Inward concentration and meditation lead to the development of inner spiritual faculties. A contemplative life is as important as the daily chores; and periods of quiet and peaceful moments of contemplation are essential for triggering these inner spiritual faculties in the organ of the sixth sense, the brain or mind. Therefore, the pilgrim should at all times be mindful and Self-possessed, refraining from mental and emotional attachment to the passing shows of the world. This increasingly watchful attitude to circumstances (which he knows to be his own creations), help him to keep his reactions to them under control.

Each man suffers the consequence of his own thoughts and actions. Sakya Muni said to his disciple Ananda: Take thy (Higher) Self as a lamp; take the Self as a refuge; betake yourselves to no refuge of the external world; hold fast to the Noble Truths, wherever they may be found, as a refuge; always look within for refuge, and work out your own salvation with diligence. Today there are those who say:

Take ye refuge in the Sun (Son) of God (Buddha)
Take ye refuge in the Word of God (Dhamma)
Take ye refuge in the Priesthood of God (Sangha)

For hatred, lusts, passions, envy, covetousness, and such evils, must be experienced before they can be understood; people, prophets, and sages in all ages have diligently sought some vicarious method of salvation or release from the consequence of their own misdeeds; by blood sacrifices, ardent prayers, and all manners of sacrifices and offerings, or by an intervention of the Almighty God; but they found it not fully. Therefore, be ye not deceived, O pilgrims, for God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, the same shall he reap. As the evildoer suffers the consequence of his misdeeds, the doer of good is purified by his deeds; a man is punished by his sins, not for them; and if he were punished for them, he is released from the bondage and suffering arising from that sin. If life be one, each component part of that life reacts with the whole, in doing good or evil; therefore, if a man does evil, he harms the whole in some way, and if he does good, he raises its level of morality in some way; good rewards itself by strengthening the Higher Self or the Soul, subduing base desires; while sin punishes itself by bruising the Higher Self and strengthening the lower self, increasing base desires, sorrow, suffering, leading to Spiritual death.

The doctrine of Self-salvation and enlightenment is built upon the Seven Sublime Truths of eternal nature, permanent and everlasting; Four of the Truths are required for Self-salvation and enlightenment. These are pearls of great price, that have in ages past released men from the bondage of their sins, and delivered them from the cycle of rebirth and suffering. And as they were the most cherished gift of God in ages past, even so and more is their worth and utility in our day; and their value and usefulness shall continue to increase, until this universe is no more, which is an eternity in time continuum.

I. First Sublime Truth Concerning the Three Signs Common to All Life Forms

All forms of life have three characteristics or signs in common, namely: Impermanence (anicca), Soullessness (anatma, or anatta), and Suffering (dukkha). No thing is the same at this moment as it was a moment ago. Even the "everlasting hills," the earth itself, the sun, the moon, and the stars, all are slowly being worn away; even the eternally illuminated sun will burn out in time; there is no finality or rest within the universe, everything being in a state of flux, only ceaseless becomings and never-ending change prevails. All that exists from a mole to a mountain, from a thought to an empire, passes through the same cycle of birth, growth, decay, and death. Life alone is not cyclical but continuous, and continually seeking self-expression in new forms; it is likened to a flow of stream, and whosoever resists its course shall suffer the pains of resistance; life is also likened to a bridge between the two gates of birth and death, therefore build no permanent house on it!

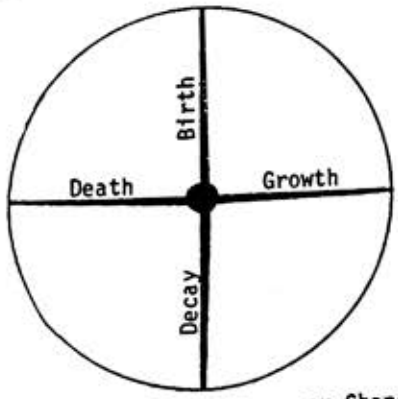
Impermanence or anicca is cyclic, for it goes through the four stages of Birth, Growth, Decay, and Death; this is the law of change, an ever-turning wheel of four spokes. Every form that comes into existence, goes through each stage in turn, and none can stay the hand of time; even the unenlightened worldling would agree with the popular jingle of J.R.R. Tolkien:



The Law of Impermanence or Change
(The Four-spoked Wheel)

"This thing all things devours, birds, beasts, trees, and flowers;
gnaws iron, bites steel, and grinds hard stones to meal;
slays kings, ruins towns, and beats high mountains down."

The law of Impermanence or Change applies to all compounded things, including man-made objects, ideas, and institutions; from a granite cathedral to a piece of jewelry; from a code of law to an empire; all things go through the cycles of Birth, Growth, Decay, and Death; and the same applies to man. There is no permanent entity anywhere; however stable and permanent it may appear to be, it is transient and composite. Man, who thinks himself to be eternal and individual, is actually a compound of five elements of mind and body — Physical Body, Feelings, Conceptions, Perceptions, and Awareness or Consciousness; these five vary from minute to minute, with no substratum to them. An old man is not the same person as the baby in arms of seventy years ago; similarly, he is not the same man as the man of a moment ago. At every instant an old thing dies, a new is caused by the first to come into existence. For there is no such thing as a permanent being, only a being in a state of change or becoming, everything is resolved into momentary configurations of events; and all idea of permanence has its origin in the primeval ignorance with which every man was born; it is the fruit of this seed of ignorance, out of which come suffering, and manifold ills.

But, behold, while all compounded things are impermanent and cyclical, one permanent entity doth prevail, which is not cyclical but continuous; it is the blissful state of Nirvana, the state of being free from the bonds of the lower self and rebirth; it is a state of rest and peace — a glorious city (abode), stainless and undefiled, illuminated by the pure white light of truth, which includes within its spectrum all shades and colors of the Sunlight; it is the state of pure Love, Compassion, Joy, and Serenity, achieved by the enlightened ones, the buddhas, or perfected beings; this degree of salvation and enlightenment is possible for all men, while still in the flesh. The man who finds it never loses it; and when he dies he passes to this state (parinirvana) forever. While the whole world is in a state of constant change, Nirvana is the immortal state of blissful contentment; it has no definite abode, and can be realized anywhere, by anyone, who is willing to learn the Sublime Truths, and is steadfast in treading the Path of the Tathagata. Nirvana is a state of enlightenment beyond conception of the intellect; it is the final "burning out" of all we know to be the lower self, or ego, the individualized existence; it is the dying out of the three fires of Greed or Covetousness (lobha), Anger or Hatred (dosa), and Illusion or Desire (moha or maya).

This one exception to the cosmic law of Impermanence or Change, namely Nirvana, is an unborn, uncompounded, unchanging entity; if it were not so, there would be no release for the born, the compounded, and the changing. Therefore, O pilgrims, know that Nirvana is a condition where there is neither a coming nor a going nor a standing still, nor a falling away or rising up; it is end of woe; it is the burning out or dying out of the desire for sensual life and cravings; it is the stopping of the suffering, sorrow, pain, and a stopping of the Wheel of Rebirth (Samsara), whose motive power, desire for sentient life of lusts and pleasures, has ceased; it is the end of individuality or separateness; Nirvana is the extinction of the lower self and the illumination of the Higher Self or the Soul. And through the destruction of all that is individual in ourselves, we enter into communion with the World or Universal Soul, and become a part of the universal kingdom of God; perfection, therefore, is the sense of oneness with all that exists, and with the powers of heaven which are unseen. Therefore, as the law of Impermanence or Change, one of the three signs common to all life forms, prevails throughout the universe, so does its counterpart, the imperishable entity, Nirvana, prevail in the enlightened Soul.

The second sign or characteristic common to all life forms is that of Soullessness (anatma, or anatta); it means that nothing exists in the world that has within it an imperishable entity, a permanent Soul (or atman), which distinguishes it from other forms of life. And as Nirvana is the only exception to the Law of Impermanence, so is the Soul or Atman of man the only exception to the law of Soullessness or Anatma; for no animal can possess it; only man can develop it and abide in it; for it is a Spirit which abides in the deepest recesses of man's sixth organ of sense; and when the physical body is dead, it finds its abode in other men in all ages. Now, the difficulty in understanding this concept is inherent, for it is the lower self, or ego, which is striving to understand the Higher Self or the Soul. Nevertheless, Soullessness or Anatma is opposite of Atman or the Soul; and can be best understood by learning about its counterpart, the Soul. Ancient sages, holy men, and prophets used mental imagery to describe it, such as: In sleep a man's spirit is set free; it wanders through the universe as a bird, a god, a king, a priest, or whatsoever; beyond dreaming is dreamless sleep, whose soul's experiences are such that they cannot be expressed, but deeply felt; beyond this is the Higher Self, the Soul or Atman. In this state of consciousness man is at one with himself and the universe, Adam did achieve it in the land of Punt; Abraham didst achieve it in Egypt; and Moses achieved it in the Sinai Peninsula; and Sakya Muni (Gautama Buddha) the fourth Great Teacher of this cycle (kalpa) of human existence didst achieve it near about the foothills of the Himalayas in the land of Bharatavarsa (ancient name of India). But it was Sakya Muni, the Enlightened One, who in the sixth century B.C., preached the doctrine of Self-salvation and enlightenment for all men, who were willing to learn the Aryan or Noble Truths, and were steadfast in treading the Noble Eightfold Path; without any requirement of having faith in a deity or God, or belonging to a certain priesthood or order, religion, or sect; neither were there any restrictions due to race or national origin; it was indeed the greatest gift of God to mankind. Sakya Muni was also known as the Blessed One, for all loved him and blessed him in their hearts and souls.

When the unenlightened worldling has learned the Sublime Truths, and has diligently trod the Path or Way of the Tathagata, he may be confirmed and acknowledged by the eternal priesthood of God, by means of ordination; yet all men must seek their own salvation and enlightenment; and must not rely on any external sources or powers; the object is to develop the unawakened inner faculty of intuition or buddhi, and it cannot be achieved with dependence or reliance upon others. Later, after learning the Truths, and diligently treading the Path, the enlightened person might choose to live under the grace of the Sun (Son) of God, the Enlightened One, or the Buddha; or under the knowledge and guidance of the Doctrine or the Word of God alone; or under the ministry of the Priesthood of God and the angels; or under all of them.

Now, returning to the idea of the Soul or Higher Self, anotner ancient imagery was used to illustrate its essence in ancient times:

"Fetch me a fruit of a banyan tree."
"Here is one, Sir."
"Break it."
"I have broken it, Sir."
"Now what do you see?"
"Very tiny seeds, Sir."
"Break one."
"I have broken it, Sir."
"Now what do you see?"
"Nothing, Sir."
"My son," said the Master, "What you do not perceive is the essence; and in that essence the mighty banyan tree exists. Believe me, my son, such is the essence of the (Higher) Self, the Soul; this is the true Self; this eternal essence of the Soul is the condition of consciousness, which is beyond deep sleep (susupati), yet is all awake and living. It is said that great unborn Self in man, comprised of knowledge, is the ether in the intellect, in the faculty of intuition or buddhi; and in that dwells the ruler and lord, king of all things; it neither grows greater by good deeds, nor smaller by deeds which appear to be evil; this Self is the lord of all things, knower of all things, and protector of all things; it is the World Soul, which encircles all things seen and unseen; it is all-seeing, all-wise, all-present, self-existent, and constant. It is also said that the creation and organization of the material and Spiritual worlds came into existence through the primeval desires or the condescension of the World Souls, the Enlightened Ones, in all ages."

All men can achieve degrees of salvation and enlightenment by self-study and practice or by faith and works; but none can achieve this with study or faith alone. Sages, holy men, and prophets of ages past have trod many a path, as they do even in our day, that mankind be saved from ignorance and suffering, and be released from the bondage of their sins and transgressions. Sage Yajnavalkya (Yajñavalkya) had two wives, Maitrei and Katyayani. Now Maitrei was his favorite wife, for she knew something about the World Soul, but Katyayani only knew what every woman knows. And it came to pass that Yajnavalkya gave these instructions to his wife Maitrei, before taking up the life of an ascetic for a prescribed season; and he said unto his wife Maitrei: "I am leaving home; let me make a settlement on you and Katyayani; ask therefore that which pleases thee."

Maitrei asked: "My lord, if I owned the whole earth and all its wealth, should I become immortal (meaning not going through the cycles of birth and death)?"

"No," Yajnavalkya replied, "Your life would be the life of the wealthy, and there is no prospect of immortality in wealth."

Maitrei said: "Of what use to me are all the riches of the world, if they give me not immortality? Give me rather your knowledge, my lord."

And Yajnavalkya replied: "Thou art indeed dear to me, and now thou art dearer, for thou hast asked for this thing; I will teach thee. Listen carefully! A husband is not dear for the love of husband, he is dear if he abides in her (Higher) Self; similarly, wife, sons, wealth, cattle, priests, and warriors, worlds, Gods, Scriptures, all are not dear in themselves, but are dear only if they abide in the Soul of man, in his (Higher) Self. Truly you can see and hear and perceive and know this Self, Maitrei; and when you have seen, heard, perceived, and known this Universal or World Soul in thee, thou shalt know all things; and thou shalt be released from the bonds of the pairs of opposites, belonging to the Wheel of Rebirth; and as these dualities shall cease, so shall the duality of Higher and lower self. For when the duality of the two selves prevails, man sees, smells, tastes, hears, touches, and knows by his sensory organs; but when all is Higher Self, man is not disturbed by the presence of sensations or feelings, for they are under his control, only a perfect awareness of their truthfulness prevails, because the delusions of the lower self or ego have been removed, as the brass from the gold. This, Maitrei, I have instructed you — this is immortality!"

The Soul or Atman, not the lower self or ego of man, and the Atman of the Universe are one; and it unifies man with the Universe. It is this Soul which distinguishes man from man, and is a basis of all brotherhoods of man; it is the presence of this imperishable entity the Soul or the Higher Self, which distinguishes a man from his neighbor, to be saved or damned at death, according to his deeds or misdeeds.

Now, ego or lower self (which says "I am") is not an immortal soul or imperishable entity; it separates one man from another, and consists of primeval ignorance, stirrings of imagination, and illusions, awareness arising from perceptions, stimulation of the six senses, individual existence, feelings, cravings and desires, strong attachments to objects, pretensions and becomings, rebirth, and suffering. In fact, the lower self belongs to the Wheel of Causation or Rebirth; where mortality, rebirth, and suffering alone have their sway. That which is called ego or lower self, is merely an aggregate of skandhas, a complex of sensations, ideas, thoughts, emotions, feelings, and volitions; in other words, the ego or lower self is the sign of soullessness, and it is present in all life forms; this Soullessness or Anatma or Anatta, means that nothing in existence has within it a permanent soul or imperishable entity, which distinguishes it from other forms of life.

The third sign or characteristic common to all life forms is that of suffering (dukkha). Birth is suffering, age is suffering, disease and illness is suffering, death is suffering; presence of objects we hate is suffering, separation from the objects we love is suffering; not to obtain what we desire is suffering; contact with the unpleasant is suffering, separation from the pleasant is suffering; all compounded things are suffering (Sabbe sankhara dukkha); all is suffering. Sakya Muni, the Enlightened One, the Buddha, said: One thing I teach — dukkha and the ending of dukkha; as the ocean has only one flavor, the flavor of salt, so has my doctrine only one flavor, the flavor of emancipation from dukkha (which includes suffering, sorrow, pain, disease, illness, disharmony, discomfort, irritation or friction, inferiority, insufficiency, imperfection, dissatisfaction, discontentment, and more).

Suffering is the opposite of Nirvana, salvation and enlightenment; it is the opposite of all that we understand to be well-being, wholeness, joy, peace, calm, and all that is good; and as Nirvana is immortal and continuous, suffering is cyclical, and subject to mortality, and rebirth. To illustrate the presence of suffering everywhere, Sakya Muni told the story of Kisagotami and the mustard seed, saying: Once a sorrow-laden mother came to Tathagata, the All-Compassionate One, with her dead babe in her arms, and besought him that it may return to life. He listened to her pleadings, then sent her away to fetch a grain of mustard seed from a household where none had died. She sought for long, but could find no household without a death, and she returned to the Master, and told him about her failure. Then said the Master: My sister, thou hast found, searching for what none finds, that bitter balm I had given thee; he thou lovedst slept dead on thy bosom yesterday; today thou knowest the whole world suffers with thy woe, knowing that the grief of death all households share; and the pain of grief which is shared by all, grows less for one.

Suffering or dukkha then is a fact, present in all life forms; it is one of the three signs or characteristics common to all. Either a man accepts its presence everywhere, or he does not. In the latter case, if he prefers to consider things differently than the fact and truth, his lesson is yet to be learned; sooner or later time will teach him the folly of his false beliefs or delusions, unto the collapse of certain faculties; misery and woe will become his constant companion. But there are some whose lives are sufficiently unhappy, and who have sufficiently withdrawn themselves from the appearance of happiness in their own lives or of their neighbors; such are able to hear, in the stillness of night or above the turmoil of the day, the ceaseless cry of anguish which arises from a blindly groping, sorrow-laden world; to them it is clear that as individual beings, we are impermanent in all our parts and circumstances, therefore are enmeshed in suffering.

What is the origin of suffering? Verily, it originates in the thirst (trishna or tanha), the craving which causes the renewal of becomings, and leads to rebirth; accompanied by sensual delights; seeking satisfaction now here, now there; that is to say, craving for pleasures, craving for becoming, craving for not becoming; seeking passing pleasures now here, now there; mental imagery for the stimulation of the six senses; thirst for continued existence, power, and possessions. This thirst or craving for the satisfaction of desires manifests itself in manifold forms; from ungovernable lust of the flesh, food, power, or possession, to being overwhelmed by temptations. In short, suffering originates in the desire or inclinations which tend to continue or increase separateness, the separate existence of the subject and object of desire. All forms of selfishness, the essence of which is to dwell in and nourish one's lower self or ego, if necessary, at the expense of all other forms of life; it is always "I" and "I" and "I" alone in every thought and action. It is this craving and desire which belongs to the unreal self or lower self, that generates suffering; and because this lower self is impermanent, changeable, perishable, the object of desire causes disappointment, disillusionment, and all forms of suffering.

Righteous desires do not belong to this lower self or ego, or unreal self, but to the Soul or Higher Self, or Real Self; therefore they cause not suffering, but strengthen the Self and gladden the heart. It is the desire to affirm the lower self, to live in it, to cling to it, to identify of motion which asserts that action and reaction are equal and opposite. For whatsoever a man soweth, the same shall he reap; or whatsoever a man reaps, the same hath he also sown. If a man was born blind, how can his blindness be justified? That is, who had so sinned in a previous life, as to cause the blindness in this man? Was it this man or his progenitors? Afflictions, therefore, are not pre-payments by which future compensation may be claimed, but are the settlements of past debts, accruing from bad deeds, sins and transgressions of the divine laws. Why should this man be born a pauper and that a prince? Why this a cripple, and that a genius, and all other injustices that one sees everywhere in daily living? All these are effects; and, as it is man who suffers the effects, so it is he that generates the cause; and having done so, he cannot flee the consequence. For by oneself evil is done, by oneself one suffers; and by oneself evil is left undone, by oneself one is purified; and there is no space anywhere where man can escape from the consequence of his evil deeds. Therefore, every man is the moulder and sole creator of his life to come, and master of his fate; in other words, the Subsequent follows the Antecedent through the interaction of Inner-Consequence. Also the Soul of man renders justice instantly, and perfectly — when one performs a good deed, Higher Self or the Soul is strengthened, and a just reward is meted out immediately; and when one does evil, the lower self is strengthened, and Higher Self is bruised, and a just punishment is rendered. God is not mocked, nor is it possible to tilt the beam.

It is the mind which moulds man's destiny, for actions are merely precipitated thoughts; and a man's least important thought has great effects, not only upon the thinker, but also upon all that exists. It is for this reason the innumerable precipitated thoughts, arising out of primeval ignorance, are being poured out daily upon the world. For ignorance breeds ignorance, there is no end to the cycle of rebirth and suffering, caused by the same. Karma, therefore, is the opposite of doom or fatalism; for the doer of evils, in time, can neutralize their effect by the good deeds now being performed. An individual's karma at the time of judgement is the sum of all unexpended causes generated by him in the past. The nature of karma is an ever-generating force; it may be likened to a thundercloud, so fully charged that nothing can delay its complete discharge; it may be as a snowball rolling on the mountain-side, small and slowly moving at first, so that a slight effort will bring its growing power to rest. Thus the natural law of Cause and Effect, or Karma, moulds the future of every man hour by hour; and according to this popular jingle:

Sow a thought, reap an act sow an act, reap a habit sow a habit, reap a character sow a character, reap a destiny.

An understanding of the law of Karma leads to Self-reliance; and the more one understands, the less he complains of his circumstances, and the less he dwells in his lower self or ego, and the more he strives to learn about his Higher Self or the Soul. None is exempt from the law of Karma, for even the gods themselves are subject to its sway; only the ignorant make a mockery of their karma, and attempt to bribe, petition, and propitiate; but the noble and the wise understand it and conform to it. For the entire universe is an Effect, all the units within it viewed as events, are both Cause and Effect within this vast Effect; each unit at any time, in any age, is the result of all that has preceded it, and a continuing cause of all which is yet to come. Therefore, Karma is not only Cause and Effect in time continuum, it is the law which governs the interrelation and union of the universe and its parts, or units; the karma of one such unit is the karma of all, and this interdependence of humanity is the cause of collective suffering or relief. For no man can sin, nor suffer the effects of sin alone; the causes produced by one man react upon that man; and the mass causation of a group (a family, society, or nation) not only reacts upon that group, but also upon all those whose karma placed them there. So each man has several karmas, racial, national, family, and personal, yet all are his, otherwise he would have not found himself subject to their sway. In short, the law of Cause and Effect, Karma, or the Law of Deeds asserts that all action has its due consequence — when a stone is thrown into a pond, it causes wavelets to circle outward, to a distance proportionate to the initial disturbance, afterwards the initial equilibrium is restored; and since each disturbance must start from some point of reference, the harmony can only be restored by the re-converging to that point of the forces set in motion; so do the consequences of an act react upon the doer with a force commensurate with his own, throughout the universe.

Life is continuous, not cyclical, and does not die at the body's death, nor do the consequences of a deed. Forms are created and destroyed, they come into being, serve their purpose, and then die; but the life which was within them continues; but no man owns the life which flows in him, more than a light bulb owns the current that gives it light. Man alone being the possessor of the Soul, or the Higher Self, has an individual karma, but the essence of Life is one, and passes unceasingly from one form to another, with intervals of rest in between. Dalmon's popular words describe the idea well:

> Feathered birds, and fishes finned,
> Clouds and rain, and calm and wind,
> Sun and moon and stars declare
> All life is one, everywhere.
>
> That nothing dies, dies for good,
> In clay or dust, in stone or wood;
> But only rests a while to keep > Life's ancient covenant with sleep.

The body comes into being, it must therefore one day die, but man's karma, the resultant of all the causes generated by him in the past, lives on; the cause of death is not old age or disease, but birth. To mourn for the inevitable is foolishness. Karma takes no reckoning of time, and if it need be, can wait for many a millennium. Death, O pilgrims, is a well earned rest; it is a gateway to a different form of life, one which is limited in duration, by thoughts and actions of the individual. A man's hereafter is the aggregate effect of the causes produced by him in the past; if his causes were limited, so will the effects be; and the limited and finite cannot cause their souls to be reborn into the World Soul, but remain in their effected condition of selfhood. Each man inherits unto himself heaven or hell in the hereafter, which he was manufacturing every hour of his life on earth. The Day of Judgement is at all times and for everyone; therefore, be mindful, O ye pilgrims, of your thoughts and actions all through the day and night. A life on earth is likened to a wayside inn upon a road; at any time there are many travellers therein; and even as these words are being written, and as the reader is reading them, more men are entering through the gateway of Birth, and others are passing through the gateway of Death, and in between the two is the bridge of Life, upon which all pilgrims travel; therefore build no permanent house upon it, O pilgrims.

Man, a product of thousands of rebirths, digests the lessons of the previous life, until such causes that can take effect intuitively, have been transmuted into faculty and innate tendency; and that which remains to be reborn or incarnate afresh may be regarded as an individual, a "separated soul," forever distinct from other forms of life, or a complex residue of karma. But to be reborn into the Higher Self, meaning to be no longer in bondage of one's lower self or ego, to be free from it, is likened to one candle lighted from another — Is the light of the second candle the same as the first, which lighted it? Before a candle can be lit by another, its wick must withstand the heat of the illuminated candle for a time enough to catch the spark and become enlightened. Now if the wick was wet or is made of the wrong substance, it might take a long time to catch the spark and continue to burn without dying out, or it might never catch the spark, even when the lighted candle had exhausted all its fuel, and is no more. Behold, light one candle from another and the light may be the same or different; the brightness will vary depending upon the size, type, and quality of wax and wick, but its essence remains the same.

Such is the nature of Karma or Deeds of man; which is the Second Sublime Truth Concerning the Law of Cause and Effect.

III. Third Sublime Truth Concerning the Wheel of Causation, or Rebirth (also known as the Wheel of Life or Wheel of Transmigration, Wheel of Becoming, or Samsara)

The law by which man progresses toward Self-salvation and enlightenment, or reunion with the Whole, is the accountability of each action or deed (karma). This all-encompassing concept is presented in the ancient symbol of an ever-turning Wheel of twelve spokes (nidanas), or component factors. Like the revolutions of the Wheel, there is a regular succession of death and birth; the moral cause of which is the strong attachment to subjects and objects, while the instrumental cause is karma, or one's own deeds. To stop the turning of the Wheel, its cause must be removed, which is desire or illusion. The twelve spokes of the Wheel are given in order, but their understanding is not to be limited to the order in which they are given; they are the interrelated factors in an endless whole. The existence of this Wheel has been taught in the millennia past, as it is even to this day, for two salient reasons — it is a way of explaining the sacred mysteries of dukkha or suffering, and a method by which the cause of dukkha can be understood, and eliminated.

Wheel of Rebirth or Becoming

(Also known as Chain of Causation, Wheel of Transmigration, Wheel of Life, Wheel of Karma, or Samsara.)

The twelve spokes or Nidanas of the Wheel: (1) Primeval Ignorance (avidya), (2) Stirrings in Primeval Consciousness (sankharas), (3) Primeval Awareness of Perceptions (vinnana), (4) Name and Form (nama-rupa), (5) Six Organs of Sense, the five senses plus the brain (salayatana), (6) Contact or interaction between organs of sense and thoughts and objects (phassa), (7) Feelings and Sensations (vedana), (8) Craving and Grasping (trishna or tanha), (9) Strong Attachment (upadana), (10) Becoming and Pretension (bhava), (11) Rebirth (jati), (12) Suffering (dukkha). Each man, be he a king, a priest, a god, a beggar, a warrior, or a demon, all are born with the same primeval ignorance (avidya). Ignorance causes actions which in turn produce fresh moments of awareness or consciousness arising from perceptions; the interaction between the awareness and name and form creates organisms that live individualized (selfish) existence; these develop the six organs of sense (five senses plus mind); the six organs of sense come in contact with things and thoughts; and this contact begets feelings and sensations, which create the craving or thirst of desire, and grasping of the primeval self or ego; which creates strong attachment, a clinging to things which produce growth, and support individuality or individual existence; nurturing all base feelings and thoughts, becoming this today, that tomorrow, becoming so and so, and such and such; this false belief of selfhood and endless becomings lead to renewed rebirths of the individual; and these renewed rebirths of selfhood are the cause of all suffering, sickness, disease, bondage, and Spiritual death; they produce misery, sorrow, anxiety, and despair.

To put it another way — In the beginning each organism exists blindly, in the same great sea of ignorance; and out of the stirrings in this void, develop primeval consciousness and awareness. This Past is shared by all life forms. These produce the Present, when moments of awareness precipitate or interact with manifold names and forms, in the same manner as thought precipitates action; this causes sense organs to be stimulated; which leads to contact with things and thoughts; and this contact generates feelings and sensations; which create desire and craving for objects and subjects, and bind man to his primeval self or ego and to the Wheel of Becoming or rebirth; and this thirst or craving originated in the primeval self, causes new births in the Future, by the way of strong attachments, false beliefs (delusions), and becomings; and from each rebirth comes suffering (dukkha), bondage, and all ills.

Ignorance, or Avidya, the first of the twelve spokes or nidanas in the Wheel of Rebirth (samsara) is the cause of all human suffering; it is a shackle whose removal leaves man self-liberated from the ever-turning Wheel of Rebirth, perfected and freed from suffering. When ignorance is replaced by right knowledge, the shackle of ignorance breaks down, and false belief (delusion) of self becomes dead; ignorance also is the final obstacle and the first cause of all misery and sorrow; for if one has replaced ignorance with right knowledge, the turns of the Wheel will eventually set him free from the bonds of primeval self or ego, into the realms of the Higher Self or the Soul.

Ignorance causes actions which in turn produce fresh moments of awareness or self-consciousness arising out of perceptions. The cause of all misery and sorrow is selfish desire; the cause of desire is ignorance or old illusion of self; it is the false belief that an individual or the part can pit its separate existence against the Supreme Will and the welfare of the whole. Ignorance produces desire, and unsatisfied desire is the cause of rebirth, and rebirth is the cause of suffering; therefore, to get rid of suffering, it is necessary to extinguish desire from its very root; and to extinguish desire, it is necessary to destroy ignorance.

In ignorance every man believes that going around and around the cycle of birth and death is a necessary thing; that there is only one existence, and this one life is followed by a state of everlasting pleasure or torment. For the vast majority of men there is no road to the mountain peak, only the sway of the suffering minds, blinded by ignorance (avidya), entangled in their own illusion-fed desires; and they know not that ignorance can be replaced by right knowledge or belief; and by dispersing it, suffering can be removed. Sakya Muni taught that ignorance can be dispelled and sorrow removed by understanding and obedience to Four Noble or Aryan Truths.

I. The Noble Truth of Sorrow: Birth is sorrow, age is sorrow, disease is sorrow, death is sorrow, contact with the unpleasant is sorrow, separation from the pleasant is sorrow, every wish unfulfilled is sorrow. . .All compounded things are sorrow (sabbhe sankhara dukkha).

II. The Noble Truth of the Arising of Sorrow: It arises from the thirst and craving, which leads to rebirth, which brings delight and passion, and seeks pleasure now here, now there; it is the thirst and craving for sensual pleasure, for continued life, for power. It is the cause of suffering and sorrow; it is the desire ever-renewed of satisfying one's primeval or lower self, without ever being able to secure that end.

III. The Noble Truth of the Stopping of Sorrow: It is the complete stopping of that thirst or craving and grasping; so that no passion remains, leaving it, being emancipated from it, being released from it, giving no place to it; it is the destruction of all desires arising out of the primeval or lower self, and sublimating them into the Right Desires which arise out of the Higher Self of man.

IV. The Noble Truth of the Way of the Tathagata: It is the Noble Eightfold Path: (1) Right Knowledge, Understanding, or Belief; (2) Right Thought, Intent or Desire; (3) Right Speech; (4) Right Action or Conduct; (5) Right Means of Livelihood; (6) Right Effort or Exertion; (7) Right Recollection, Remembrance, or Concentration; (8) Right Meditation.

Ignorance or Avidya is not only the first cause of suffering; but it is also the final shackle to be removed; it is the father of all suffering, whose removal leaves a man self-liberated from Samsara, or the Wheel of Rebirth. The expansion of the Higher Self or the Soul expands consciousness; and when consciousness becomes all-embracing, the shackle of ignorance is broken loose, and the false belief or delusion of the self is destroyed. Sakya Muni also taught that ignorance produces desire or selfishness; unsatisfied desire is the cause of rebirth, and rebirth is the cause of all suffering (including all sorrows, miseries, and woes). To get rid of suffering, therefore, it is necessary to escape rebirth; to escape rebirth it is necessary to extinguish desire; and to extinguish desire it is necessary to destroy ignorance.

Thus the cycle of birth and rebirth begins with the primeval ignorance into which all mankind is born, regardless of the genetic, racial, social, physical or any other differences; therefore, in this sense all mankind is born equal, with the same basic substance, common to all life forms; then the primeval consciousness is stirred at random by the actions caused in the great void of ignorance; and thereby three worlds of illusion (mental, emotional, and physical) come into existence and grow with man; which lead to an awareness or self-consciousness arising from perceptions; this awareness or self-consciousness seeks a form of vehicle through which to gain experience and be itself or primeval self. Even as a river is such only by virtue of the limitations of its banks, else it would be but a nameless body of water; so must this abstract consciousness or awareness submit to limitation, in order to be able to express an idea in terms of time and space, and to learn to tread the Path. And when man's abstract consciousness begins to interact with name and form (nama-rupa, the psychical and the physical, or the personality, a symbol of necessary body of illusions; which interactions must first take place, before they can be understood), it is the birth of the falsehood or lower self, the ego. It is the beginning of the false belief or delusion that each fragment of the Universal Self has separate and individual existence. At this stage the lower or primeval self is not even aware of the Soul or the Higher Self; for it is the lower or primeval self which is striving to understand the Soul, the Right Belief, and not the other way around. And for the interactions between the primeval consciousness and nama-rupa are random and separate, only the form or the physical being perceived, and the nama, name or the psychical part not being perceived, man sees not the two sides of the same thing, but one, as thought precipitates nama-rupa in the mental and emotional plane. And the products of this consciousness and nama-rupa stimulate the six sense organs (five senses and the brain or mind); and these lead to contact with things and thoughts. Contact begets feelings and sensations, which create the thirst and craving of the individualized existence, and graspings for the primeval or lower self, or ego. This creates strong attachment or cleaving to things and thoughts which produce growth and continuation of manifold becomings of selfhood. The selfhood continues in renewed births. And these renewed births of selfhood are the cause of suffering, disease, old age, and Spiritual death; they produce sorrows, miseries and woes.

And such is the nature of the Wheel of Rebirth or Transmigration (samsara); and the treading of the Noble Eightfold Path is the Way to Self-salvation and enlightenment. The Wheel or Samsara, the world of becomings, or life on earth, where suffering or dukkha alone holds its sway, is the opposite of salvation, enlightenment or Nirvana. But all those who understand the Sublime Truths and tread the Path with diligence will stop the turning of the Wheel, and be freed from the bondage and suffering arising from primeval ignorance, rebirth, grasping onto the false beliefs and illusions of the lower self, or ego. It is the destruction of ignorance-produced, desire-maintained illusion of selfhood which frees man from the bonds of the Wheel; therefore, O pilgrims, be ever watchful not to affirm the base and low desires that arise out of this self, and sublimate them into the realm of the Soul or thy Higher Self.

IV. Fourth Sublime Truth
Concerning the Way of the Tathagata* (or the Noble Eightfold Path)

Sakya Muni, the Fourth Great Teacher of this cycle or kalpa of human existence, the Enlightened One, taught the five monks at Benares, India, who became his disciples, the truths of the Aryans, and the way of the Tathagatas, the way of all the Buddhas, who have thus attained salvation and enlightenment, saying: There are two ends not to be pursued by a pilgrim. What are these two? The pursuit of primeval desires, and pleasures which arise from such desires, for it is base, common, ignoble, unprofitable, leading to rebirth and suffering; the other is pursuit of pain and hardship, for it is grievous, ignoble, unprofitable, and also leads to rebirth and suffering. The Middle Way, or the Way of the Tathagata, avoids these two extreme pursuits, which arise out of primeval ignorance, into which all mankind is born; and it brings salvation and enlightenment, insight, clear vision, wisdom, peace and serenity, and Nirvana. What is the Middle Way? It is the Noble Eightfold Path. The Sanskrit, Pali, and Latin word, Summum, meaning "highest" or "most perfect," is translated as Right, to be consistent with the established canon.

(1) Samma Ditthi (Right Knowledge, Understanding or Belief)
(2) Samma Sankalpa or Sankappa (Right Thought, Intent or Desire)
(3) Samma Vacha (Right Speech)
(4) Samma Kammanta (Right Conduct or Action)
(5) Samma Ajiva (Right Means of Livelihood)
(6) Samma Vayama (Right Effort or Exertion)
(7) Samma Sati (Right Recollection, Concentration, or Remembrance)
(8) Samma Samadhi (Right Meditation)

* Tathagata, meaning the One who has Won the Truth; or the Singer of Truth

The Eightfold Path of the Tathagata is the Way to Self-salvation and enlightenment; although the Truths of this doctrine may be found in other dispensations or scriptures, the emphasis here is placed on practical morality; for if a man talks much of the Holy Word, but does not practice it himself, he is likened to a cattleman counting another man's cattle; or like beautiful flowers full of colors, but without scent. The treading of this Path is a way of living, not a mere theory of life; and it is essential to Self-salvation, enlightenment, and deliverance from ignorance and suffering. The Way is a process of Self-development, and self-denial; but it must be trod by the whole man, not merely the best of him, and first both heart and mind of man must be developed, before the Soul can be fully developed. In the words of many Buddhas or Tathagatas, who came before Sakya Muni and after him: Cease to do evil, learn to do good, cleanse your own hearts; concentrate and meditate; understand and believe in the Sublime Truths, and tread the Noble Eightfold Path. Look within, thou art Buddha, an Enlightened One!

The Path of the Tathagata is built upon the most profound truths, precept upon precept, line upon line, over a period of some thirty-five hundred years; especially from the time of Gautama Buddha, or Sakya Muni, some twenty-five hundred years ago. It teaches man that virtue or good rewards itself by strengthening the Soul or Higher Self, and by giving inner peace; but passion or evil punishes itself by bruising the Soul and strengthening the primeval self, or ego. To depart from the Path, therefore, is its own punishment, for a pilgrim must retrace his steps at whatsoever the cost or penalty. It is said that the motive for wrongdoing is always one of four: Desire, Hatred, False Belief (Delusion), or Fear; and the Eightfold Path removes the power of these four. Thenceforth the pilgrim lives the highest moral and ethical laws every hour of his life; because he has lost by the unification of his consciousness with the Soul, the very power to do otherwise.

The Eight Steps of the Way of Tathagata are summarized here; these must be practiced simultaneously, although they are to be learned in a gradually ascending scale. No step can be left out, for each is intertwined with another, and is connected to the same Whole, as a spoke on a wheel. The first of the eight folds, or steps, is Right Knowledge, Understanding or Belief or Samma Ditthi; it includes the learning of the basic doctrine (dharma, or dhamma), knowing the Three Signs common to all life forms, the Law of Cause and Effect (karma) the Wheel of Causation or Rebirth (samsara), and the Way of the Tathagata or the Noble Eightfold Path; in other words, the first step requires the understanding and belief in the first four Sublime Truths presented in this doctrine, of Self-salvation and enlightenment. The second fold or step is Right Thought, Intent or Desire or Samma Sankalpa (sankappa). It is the foundation upon which the next six steps of the Path shall be trod. For the goal of the pilgrim is to destroy his primeval self or the lower self, and transmute the base feelings, sensations and desires into the Soul or the Higher Self, the task begins with training to control one's own thoughts, feelings and desires. From here onward each thought, intention and desire of the pilgrim shall be founded upon the knowledge that every path and the subdivisions of the path have two aspects, its right hand and its left — the right hand leads to salvation and enlightenment, and the left, through selfishness, to Spiritual death; the difference between the two is but the motive behind each; either to affirm the lower self, bruise the Soul, and remain in the realms of Samsara; or to strengthen the Higher Self, and be freed, in time, from the bonds of Samsara, rebirth and suffering. The knowledge and understanding of these two steps of the Path prepare and direct the pilgrim's mind to action; for as man thinks, so he acts; we are not what we feel we are, but what we think we are, for each action is a precipitated thought.

The third step or fold of the Path is Right Speech or Samma Vacha; all idle gossip and unprofitable talk must be stamped out; let all thy words be deliberate, true and kind, coming out of thy Soul, not out of thy self. Share not thy feelings and sensations with others, for it binds thee to thy lower self, and keeps thee in the realms of Samsara; but share thy thoughts, be they on feelings and sensations, or whatsoever, that arise out of thy True Self. Silence should be so revered that the words which break it must leave the world better than it was before they were spoken.

The fourth step, Right Action or Conduct, Samma Kammanta, is the keystone of the Noble Eightfold Path, for the doctrine of Self-salvation and enlightenment is of action, not of belief or faith alone. Action is twofold — positive, or what we must do; and negative, what we must refrain from doing. The negative aspects of action or conduct are expressed in the Five Precepts of Morality in Action or Conduct or Pancha Sila (pansil); and the moral trinity of Sila, Dana and Bhavana. It is not a vow to the Almighty God, or any other Being, but a solemn vow taken by one's Self, in silence or aloud:

> I make a vow to refrain from killing;
> I make a vow to refrain from stealing;
> I make a vow to refrain from sensuality;
> I make a vow to refrain from lying;
> I make a vow to refrain from intoxicants which cause slothfulness or carelessness.

Now these Five Precepts of morality not only apply to Action or Conduct, but equally to thought; for the thoughts of murder are none less than actual murder to the Soul, even though they never left the "heart," or the lower self. The first precept of right action or conduct calls upon man to control anger or hatred. This precept is a vow to refrain from killing; for a wise man never kills or causes to be killed; and whoso strives in selfishness for his own happiness, and in doing so injures or kills living creatures, shall find no happiness here or in the hereafter; killing for sport or for personal gain are forbidden; but killing of pests, vermin, insects, wild and ferocious beasts; and killing for food, or in Self-defense may be justified, in the absence of evil desire. Diet is not a matter of religion, but of climate, occupation, and personal preference. Sakya Muni, the Buddha, or the Enlightened One said: My disciples have permission to eat whatever food it is customary to eat in any place or country, if it is done without indulgence of the appetite, or evil desire.

The second precept of morality in action or conduct is a vow to refrain from stealing, or taking that which is not given; every form of theft, from mental covetousness, greed, envy, to legal business practices which violate the moral law, must be avoided. Stealing is an offence against the community of which the thief is part. One may acquire wealth honestly in abundance, but it should be used for the benefit of man. Sakya Muni said: It is not life and wealth and power that enslave a man, but the clinging to them; he who possesses wealth and uses it in righteousness will be a blessing unto his fellow beings. The thoughts of covetousness, greed, and envy are none less than stealing to the Soul; therefore this second precept of morality calls upon man to control the desire for material possessions.

The third precept of morality in action or conduct is a vow to refrain from sensuality. It is said that of all the lusts and desires, there is none so powerful as sensual inclinations. The desire for conjugal union is a carnal appetite, as natural and proper in its own time and sphere, as the appetite for food. Therefore, each pilgrim (man or woman) must remind himself of the impermanence of fleshly beauty and the illusions created by personality; and focus his attention on the beauty of the informing Self. All visual attraction is the reaction of the lower or false self, the craving of unregenerate desires. The attitude of men toward women is prescribed as follows; same is true for the women:

> If the woman be old, regard her as your mother;
> If she be good and pleasing, honor her as your sister;
> If she be of small account, regard her as your younger sister;
> If she be a child? Treat her with reverence and politeness.

Once men and women are regarded in this light, the act of conjugal union drops from its false and morbid prominence to the well of refined expression of natural appetite. For this precept is aimed at the control and sublimation of primeval desires of the lower self, it is the mental training for the control of thought that matters. As mere physical control with foul thoughts in mind is a greater defilement of the Soul and Body, so is proper and good the natural physical outlet with a clean and purified mentality; for as the man thinks, so he is. The lustful thoughts of the flesh are not only most powerful, most overwhelming, and most corrupting, but also they befoul their owner's purity, and keep man in the realms of Samsara or the world; they bruise the Soul, and affirm the false self, or ego. There is a difference between suppression and control — man can harness the fiercest mountain stream, but he cannot dam the tiniest brook without providing an outlet for its force. So it is with conjugal union between a man and woman, a clean and impersonal creative force, as natural as the water in a river bed, as restless and overwhelming as the sea. On the physical level it is called copulation; on the emotional level, it serves as artistic impulse, enthusiasm, emotional strength; and in the mind, the intellect or buddhi, it is the creative urge or force, which is responsible for all that man has ever made, including himself. This is the essence of sublimation — to choose the right channel through which this force shall flow, by gradual withdrawal of the creative force from purely physical, to emotional or mental levels, by exercising ceaseless vigilance and self-control.

The fourth precept of morality in action or conduct is a vow to refrain from falsehood or lying. A slanderous thought is as or more harmful to the Soul of the thinker and his enemies, as any spoken word; even though it may never leave the heart. This concept also applies to thought, as well as to word and deed, and admits to no exceptions. To avoid giving an answer is quite different, than to deliberately lie; the first is but withholding the truth, the second breaking it; therefore how shall a man attain enlightenment, if he violates the selfsame Truth which he strives so violently to attain? It is written that minor forms of lying, such as inaccurate description or exaggeration, are as so many steps on the downward road to the deliberate lie; in the same manner slander is a lie with a motive, therefore it is twice as evil.

The fifth and last precept of morality in action or conduct is a vow to refrain from intoxicants that cause slothfulness and carelessness; and to spend one's stored-up wealth, if any, in righteous enjoyments. Behold, it is possible to get drunk on excitements, false beliefs (delusions), or other intoxicants of mind; never having to partake of any liquors or drugs that cause slothfulness or carelessness; it is for this reason this fifth precept of morality in action and conduct is given to man.

The positive aspects of action or conduct are expressed in the moral trinity of the teachings of the Buddhas or the Enlightened Ones: "Cease to do evil (sila); learn to do good (dana); cleanse your own heart (bhavana)." The practice of right action or conduct acquires merit for the pilgrim, whereby all may store up merits or "good karma" by performing daily good acts or deeds, and in due time each act will bring its just reward. The motive, however, is more important than the deed itself; for an act is the outward expression of a thought, which in turn is subject to emotions of man; and the thoughts and emotion together form the motive, either good or bad; therefore thoughts and acts are inseparable. A good deed done with a wrong motive may benefit others, but is harmful to the doer's mind; for as the mind is the maker of good or bad karma, the intention of mind at the time of the action determines the outcome of the acquired merit. Too often the mere outward show of charity shrinks the kindliness of heart, which from the doer's viewpoint, is the prime cause in moulding the outcome. And such is the fourth step or fold of the Path of the Tathagata.

The fifth step or fold of the Path, Samma Ajiva or Right Means of Livelihood, consists of pursuing a trade or occupation, which is in harmony with one's own predominant nature; that is to say, with one of the three natures or qualities within every man, namely: the nature of virtue or good (sattva), the nature of passion (rajas), and the nature of dullness (tamas); and according to one's own karma in one of the four universal classes of professions or castes, namely: Priests and Scholars, Rulers and Warriors, Merchants and Farmers, Peasants and Servants. Therefore, if a man's true nature is of virtue, he will be unhappy in pursuing a profession as a warrior or a merchant; nor will a warrior or a merchant find happiness in the profession of a priest.

The sixth step or fold of the Eightfold Path consists of Right Effort or Exertion, Samma Vayama; and it is an important step between the first five and the next two levels of the Path. It is declared that strenuous effort or exertion is a vital part of Self-salvation and enlightenment. Therefore, the pilgrim must diligently strive to break loose the bonds of Samsara, and his false self, or ego; and must not depend on any outside source or power; the prize is only for those who strive toward the goal, and for none else; there is no room for any idler or false worker, in the doctrine of salvation which teaches men to rely upon their own individual efforts. The Right Effort or Exertion is summarized as follows:

To prevent new evil from entering one's mind;
To remove all evil that is there now;
To develop such good as now is in the mind;
To unceasingly acquire still more good.

Right effort or exertion involves the right use of one's faculties, energies, and resources; so that maximum results are secured by minimum expenditure of force or energy; one must eliminate all mental blocks, fixations or inhibitions; for they result in friction, and friction results in loss of power.

The seventh step or fold of the Path, Samma Sati, or Right Recollection, Concentration, or Remembrance, is the beginning of the final stage. Concentration or yoga is the sublimation of the mind's natural tendencies into diffuseness, through modification of the thinking principle; by learning to apply it to a single point, to the exclusion of all else; in other words "not replaying the tape within your mind to stimulate senses and thoughts." It is said to be the birth of true understanding, for the mind which is so trained to do, develops its capacities to full comprehension and control; this is the solid foundation of all mind-control. Having acquired some degree of moral and physical control, the pilgrim approaches bhavana, the control and development of mind, and mind control is the most important part in treading the Eightfold Path to salvation and enlightenment. While in the realms of Samsara, or the World, man remains the slave of his mind, out of the World or Wheel of Rebirth, he controls it and uses it to reach his goal. It is also written in the Scriptures (Dhammapada): "All that we are is the result of what we have thought; it is founded upon our thoughts, it is made by our thoughts." Therefore, it becomes necessary to learn the art of concentration, and control of thought. It is important that the pilgrim recall not the pictures, images, thoughts, or suggestions, which cause one to please or affirm the false self, thereby bruising the Soul, and suffering the consequence of the defiled recollection or remembrance.

Finally, the eighth, or the last step or fold of the Path of the Tathagata, Samma Samadhi, or Right Meditation, is a state of mind in which the waves of confusion aroused by thought are stilled; not a mere psychic ecstasy, or trance, but it is an awareness of the still hub of the turning wheel. In this, the eighth step, the mind development is carried to the heights beyond the comprehension of man's normal understanding. Yet there is one more step beyond the state of Samma Samadhi — the state when samadhi or meditation is merged with prajna or wisdom, and its twin karuna or compassion. And when a pilgrim has reached this state, meaning, he is able to combine Meditation, Wisdom, and Compassion with his actions, he has earned the title "free" — free from the shackles of ignorance (avidya); free from the snares of the primeval or false self; and being free from the realms of Samsara, the pilgrim knows he is free, and finds himself at the threshhold of Nirvana (Nibbana in Pali).

V. Fifth Sublime Truth
Concerning the Ten Shackles to Overcome

In later stages of the Path, the pilgrim will reach a crisis in his Spiritual development, when certain qualities, faculties, and powers, unknown to the men of the world, gradually become developed; these mysterious and hidden powers, known as Siddhis (or Iddhis) appear when the pilgrim has developed enough moral strength and purity in thought and action, which will make it impossible ever to use them for selfish ends. But there will be those who shall be swayed by temptations, and sell their powers, display and corrupt them, to gratify their primeval needs and desires; such are far removed from the True Self, as brass is from gold. Therefore, at this stage the pilgrim has Ten Shackles or Fetters to overcome.

(1) The first shackle or fetter to overcome is that of the Delusion of Self (sakkaya ditthi), which is the false belief that the lower or primeval self is the true and real self; that the clinging to individuality and separate existence, and the desire to affirm this false self, instead of striving toward the expansion of the Higher or Universal Self has its ethical counterpart in egoism, and egoism is the beginning and end of sin. (2) The second shackle is that of Doubt Regarding the Truth of the Doctrine. For little or no progress can be made on the Path, if the pilgrim is uncertain of the end to which it will lead, the shackle of doubt must be removed, through diligent study of the Sublime Truths, contemplation, and reflection. Conquering of doubt can only be achieved by high aspirations and effort to abide in the Soul or Higher Self alone. (3) The third shackle of False Belief in the Power of Rites and Ceremonies, must be overcome by the pilgrim, so that he may free himself from the general delusion that proper outward action will earn him salvation, and from the specific delusion that religious rites and ceremonies have deep meanings to the individual. Wisdom is not gained by outward show of actions, nor by priestly rituals or prayers alone, but by deep meditation — to reach beyond the state of dreaming, and beyond the dreamless sleep, then to the all-awakened region of Higher Self or the Soul, in the deep recesses of mind; until outward appearance is but a mirror to the mind within.

(4) The fourth shackle or fetter is that of Sensuality, the base, ignoble, and unprofitable desires once more arising out of the primeval self; for these are snares which shall keep one bound in the realms of Samsara. (5) The fifth shackle is that of Unkindliness or Haughtiness, which arises out of frustrations, despair, and sorrow, once experienced in ignorance and false way of life. The lusts of the flesh are man's most powerful and subtle enemy; and must be slain to rise no more before the pilgrim reaches his goal. Unkindliness includes all forms of animosity, including jealousy, envy, hate, greed and anger. The pilgrim must subdue all such feelings which spring from his sense of individuality or separateness, from his false self, and from his reluctance to identify himself with the Universal or Higher Self. It is written in the Dhammapada (Pali text): "Hatred ceaseth not by hatred; hatred ceaseth by love; this is the eternal law." When man's sensuous desire has been transmuted into a higher source of energy, the Soul, every trace of unkindliness is removed, and the final stage is entered.

There are five more shackles yet to be overcome by the pilgrim, namely: Desire for separate life in the worlds of form or rupa; desire for separate life in the formless worlds or arupa; spiritual pride; self-righteousness; and residue of ignorance. (6) the sixth shackle, Desire for Separate Life in the Worlds of Form or Rupa, is the bondage to possessions and glories of the material world; acquisition of material wealth and power; it is a desire to live a life of passion within the whirlpool of illusion; and for some who have trod this path, it seems a Heaven, compared to the life of a natural man in the realms of Samsara. (7) Beyond this world of illusions and forms lie the formless worlds, where man, although free from the bondage of material form, is subject to the illusions of mind, and delusions of life in the formless worlds; he now becomes more desirous of the unseen than the seen, more conceptual than perceptual, for he has known the folly of worlds of form or rupa; but he shall fail in this also, for desire for existence under any varied conditions will be in time fulfilled. Therefore the pilgrim's aim is to free himself from all desire for existence in Samsara, the whirlpool of becoming. (8) The eighth shackle or fetter, Spiritual Pride, must also be broken. It is said, perfect is the man who excludes it in its most subtle form, for from pride comes contention, and it goes before destruction; and it is the pride of heart that destroys the Soul, and brings snares upon it. Therefore, O ye pilgrims, be not proud nor haughty nor light-minded, but strive to be humble, lowly, and meek; for pride of any kind belongs not in the Soul or the Higher Self of man, but it belongs to the false self.

(9) The ninth shackle or fetter, Self-Righteousness, must also be destroyed, for it belongs to the false self or ego. Even in the last stages of the upward Path, the shadows of egoism may corrupt man's thought, that he may begin to proclaim: "It is I who have scaled these heights; it is I who have suppressed egoism; it is I who have earned the deliverance," the same is subject to delusions and folly. (10) And the last of the ten shackles to be overcome by the pilgrim, is the Residue of Ignorance (avidya). This last of the ten shackles or fetters to be overcome by the pilgrim, is the sifting out of all the remaining ignorance; for it is ignorance which is the cause of all suffering. And as ignorance is the first of the twelve nidanas or spokes on the Wheel of Rebirth or Samsara, so it is the last obstacle whose removal leaves a man self-liberated from Samsara, perfected, and free. It was the pursuit of this real, final, and absolute knowledge, which led the pilgrim onto the Path of Tathagata or the Noble Eightfold Path. And this is the end of knowledge — To know that the Universal or Higher Self or the Soul is one's own Real Self; to know this Truth, not as a theory, nor as a conclusion or sudden revelation, but as the immutable fact of one's own innermost life; to know this truth in the most intimate sense, by living it, by being it; is the final end of all spiritual effort. The expansion of the (Higher) Self carries with it the expansion of consciousness; and when consciousness becomes all embracing, the shackle of ignorance breaks down, and the false belief of self becomes dead.

Such is the Sublime Truth concerning the Ten Shackles to be overcome by the pilgrim. These and all the factors of the Noble Eightfold Path must be practised simultaneously; although their perfection may be acquired in a gradually ascending scale.

VI. Sixth Sublime Truth
Concerning the Four Stages of Spiritual Advancement

In the later stages of the Path, there comes a time when without necessarily leaving the householder's life, the pilgrim dedicates himself volitionally to the life of the Spirit. From here onward his advance is marked by four stages of advancement, which are successive stages of the expansion of consciousness.

The first stage of Sotapanna, meaning, He who has entered the stream, which will in time carry him to the ocean of Nirvana. This is truly the beginning of the divine life within. It is the fruit of knowing the truths and treading the Path, and the culmination of years of self-preparation. At this stage the first three shackles or fetters, Delusion of Self, Doubt, and False Belief in Rites and Ceremonies, have been removed.

The second stage of Sakadagamin, meaning He who will return to earth only once more; at this stage the pilgrim battles with the shackles of sensuality, the lower sensual desires, which lead to putting the sense organs on fire, and Spiritual death; and the shackle of unkindliness or haughtiness. But in the third stage of Anagamin, these two shackles of sensuality and unkindliness are fully overcome.

The fourth and the last stage of Spiritual advancement, the stage of the Arhat (or Arahant), meaning One who has reached the fourth stage of advancement, and has achieved Nirvana; the supreme state of enlightenment beyond the conception of intellect; the stage in which the personal or separate self, the primeval or false self is fully destroyed; and the Soul or the Higher Self of the pilgrim is lived. The condition of the Arhat is such that there is neither earth, nor water, nor fire, nor air; neither infinite space nor the sphere of void; but an all-awakened state of consciousness, beyond dreaming and beyond dreamless sleep, it is this calm and serene existence, which is the last stage of Spiritual Advancement.

VII. Seventh Sublime Truth
Concerning the Four Divine States of Consciousness

The seventh and last sublime truth deals with the four divine states of consciousness, which all pilgrims are to develop and practice constantly; these are called four Brahma Viharas, Brahma-like states of abode: Goodwill or Love (metta); Sympathetic Sorrow or Compassion (karuna); Sympathetic Joy (mudita); and Serenity or Even-mindedness (upekkha).

Love or goodwill is not the showering of thoughtless lovely words, for no one can mock God, and achieve his goal. Thoughts are not only the essence and cause of action, but they may even be considered as things, for the emotional or intellectual action is capable of working like a force among forces. Love or goodwill (metta) is not love aflame with desire or craving, but it is love at peace; it is the love of fellowman, and he that loveth his fellowman abideth in Truth and Light; and he that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is Love. Perfect love casteth out all fear. It is also written: Let the pilgrim's mind pervade one quarter of the world with thoughts of goodwill or love, and so the second, and the third, and the fourth; and thus the whole world, above, below, around and everywhere, let his mind pervade with his heart of never-ending, unselfish love. Love has as many forms as hearts that hold it, yet in the end all selfish love is destroyed, only the pure love that abides in the Soul of man prevails.

The second divine state of consciousness, Sympathetic Sorrow or Compassion (karuna) is concern for others; it is this view: "As I am, so are these; and as these are, so am I," and in this manner the pilgrim identifies himself with others; he is able to put himself in the company of the lowest, most degraded, and hopeless of his fellow human beings, for he understands them. This sympathetic sorrow or compassion is the basis of morality, and separates the good from the evil; for it is the voice of the Universal Soul heard in the ear. Compassion when combined with wisdom and serenity, sets the man free forever, from the realms of Samsara and from suffering.

The third divine state of consciousness, Sympathetic Joy or mudita, is the opposite of envy, its main characteristic is gladness; just as if on seeing some person who is dearly loved, one feels the joy on his account, even so he pours out his joy upon all who surround him; its presence implies absence of disaffection. To one who is in ecstasy of joy, contemplating the consciousness of beings who for some reason are joyous and rejoicing, his heart becomes stored with and possessed by that consciousness. Therefore, Sympathetic Joy refers to a state of joy in others, or in oneself, or merely to the feeling impersonally considered. But to him who lacks knowledge, folly is joy.

The fourth or the last divine state of consciousness is Serenity or Even-mindedness, upekkha; and it is the result of the other three Brahma Viharas or states of consciousness. After sharing the emotions of others in every form, the pilgrim returns to a calm detachment from all excitement, in order to restore the mind's impersonal serenity.

Such, then, is an overview of the Seven Sublime Truths, and the Path of the Tathagata, the Path of the One who has Won the Truth, the Enlightened One. Although these Truths are to be learned and understood in ascending order, they must be practised, and the Path trod, simultaneously. No part of this Doctrine of Self-salvation, Self-reliance, and Self-enlightenment, should be overlooked, for each of its parts is intertwined and enmeshed with the Universal Self; the fragments of this World Soul or Self are seen in all the pilgrims who are blessed with the gift of finding their own True or Higher Self, or the Soul, and having found it look inward for all things; and devote their daily lives to Love or Goodwill, Compassion, Joy, and Serenity, the four Brahma Viharas. This is Self-salvation, enlightenment, and Nirvana; and the pilgrim is forever freed from the bonds of ignorance and suffering; and is delivered from the realms of Samsara. Finally, one way to memorize the Four Sublime Truths is the 3-2-1-Way, signifying, the Truth of the Three Signs common to all life forms; the Truth of Two Karmas, the Truth of One Wheel; and the Way of the Tathagata.

Soon after the death of Gautama Buddha, a great gathering of the monks took place at the Magadhan capital of Rajagrha. At this council, Upali, one of the chief disciples, recited the rules of the Order (or Vinaya Pitaka), as he recalled having heard the Buddha; and Ananda, Buddha's cousin, recited the great collection of Buddha's sermons on matters of doctrine and ethics (Sutta Pitaka). And although Sakya Muni had told his lay disciples, just before his death, to rely on the Doctrine, and on themselves, to be their own lamps, and look for no refuge outside themselves; soon after his death the ancient trinity of the monks, the Three Jewels, which forms the basic profession of faith, officially became the fundamental principle of Buddhist faith. And even to this day, both monastic and lay, repeat:

I go for refuge to the Buddha (or the "Sun of God," the Enlightened One);
I go for refuge to the Doctrine (the "Word of God," the Dhamma);
I go for refuge to the Order (the "Priesthood of God," the Sangha).

A second general conference was held at Vaisali, one hundred years after the Buddha's death in 383 B.C. Here disputes broke out over small points of monastic discipline, and the Holy Order of the monks was divided into two groups — that of Sthaviravadins (Theravadi in Pali) or "Believers in the Teaching of the Elders," and that of Mahasanghikas, or "Members of the Great Community or Holy Order." Then again numerous such differences appeared in the third general conference held at Pataliputra under the patronage of King Ashoka Vardhana (c.269-232 B.C.), which resulted in the expulsion of many heretics; and the establishment of the Sthaviravada sect as the orthodox Order of the Priesthood, to maintain continuity of the tradition. And the Mahasanghika sect became a living and dynamic body of the seekers of the fulness of salvation and enlightenment for all mankind, and for themselves. By the time of King Ashoka, the Buddhist religion became not only the major religion of India, but it became the religion of the priests and rulers of all Persia, Egypt, Macedonia, and many other parts of the world. Several rock and pillar edicts of this king are yet preserved in our day; and his contribution to making Buddhism a universal religion can be discerned from these edicts, and some insight gained into the third century B.C. Before his conversion, he was known to be a tyrant. The prison maintained by Ashoka north of the capital was remembered as "Ashokan Hell." There he employed severe and cruel means of punishing the criminals, and his enemies; and added an edict that no one who entered that dungeon should ever come out of it alive! But one day a Buddhist saint, imprisoned there without cause, and flung into a cauldron of hot water, refused to boil. The jailer sent word to Ashoka, who came, saw, and marvelled. When the king turned to leave, the jailer reminded him that according to his own edict he must not leave the prison alive. At this the king admitted the force of the remark, and ordered the jailer to be thrown into the cauldron. And on returning to his palace, Ashoka underwent a profound conversion. He gave instructions that the prison should be demolished and the penal code should be made more lenient. At the same time he learned that his troops had won a great victory over the ferocious tribe of Kalinga; and had slaughtered thousands and had taken many prisoners. Later, king Ashoka was haunted by the unpleasant memories of the past, and he ordered the prisoners freed, restored their lands, and sent them a letter of apology; even being the first Indian king to have sent such a letter to his conquered enemy; first time in the annals of the land it was recorded that "good was returned for evil" by a king; thus the enemy was won by love, and not by sword nor hate. Then Ashoka joined the Buddhist Order; wore the garb of a monk for a time; gave up hunting and war, and followed the Noble Eightfold Path. The rites of admission were simple; the initiate put on the three yellow or orange robes of the Order, ceremonially shaving the head; pronouncing the Three Jewels, as shown on page 49; and making the vow to obey the Ten Precepts, the Buddhist Decalogue (as cited on the next page, and on page 31).

(1) Kill not, nor harm any life form. (Harmful insects, pests, vermin, wild and ferocious beasts; and killing for food, medicinal or religious purposes, in the absence of evil intentions, is permitted.)
(2) Steal not, nor seek after that which belongs to another.
(3) Crave not in your heart, nor lust in your thoughts.
(4) Lie not, nor pretend to be false.
(5) Consume no drug or liquor which causes slothfulness or carelessness.
(6) Seek not the treasures of this world, but seek after knowledge, wisdom, understanding, and freedom.
(7) Seek not the passing pleasures, nor be disturbed by the passing shows.
(8) Seek no revenge for the wrong done by others, nor listen to the evil thoughts of your mind.
(9) Forsake all falsehood, learn the Truths, and tread the Path unto the end.
(10) Believe not that which is spoken by any sage or prophet, written in any book, or affirmed by any tradition, unless it agrees with reason, or the Holy Spirit of truth bears witness to its truthfulness.

Ashoka's rock edicts and pillars (columns) are the oldest surviving records of India, usually written in Brahmi script, with provincial variations. These rock edicts and pillars were scattered in various locations throughout his domain, as shown in the map below:

The Ashokan edicts are in the nature of official pronouncements of policy and instruction to his officers and subjects. Four of his several inscriptions are included here:

> His Sacred and Gracious Majesty the King does reverence to men of all sects, whether ascetics or householders, by gifts and various forms of reverence.
>
> His Sacred Majesty, however, cares not so much for gifts or external reverence, as that there should be a growth of the essence of the matter in all sects. The growth of the essence of the matter assumes various forms, but the root of it is restraint of speech; to wit, a man must not do reverence to his own sect, or disparage that of another, without reason. Depreciation should be for specific reasons only, because the sects of other people all deserve reverence for some reason or another.
> By thus acting a man exalts his own sect, and at the same time does service to the sects of other people. By acting contrariwise a man hurts his own sect, and does disservice to the sects of other people . . . Concord is meritorious. (Ashokan Rock Edict XII)

> When the King, of Gracious Mien and Beloved of the Gods, had been consecrated eight years Kalinga was conquered. 150,000 people were thence taken captive, 100,000 were killed, and many more died. Just after the taking of Kalinga the Beloved of the Gods began to follow Righteousness, to love Righteousness, to give instruction in Righteousness. When an unconquered country is conquered, people are killed, they die, or are made captive. That the Beloved of the Gods finds very painful and grievous . . . Today, if a hundredth or a thousandth part of those who suffered in Kalinga were to be killed, to die, or to be taken captive, it would be very grievous to the Beloved of the Gods. If anyone does him wrong it will be forgiven as far as it can be forgiven. The Beloved of the Gods even reasons with the forest tribes in his empire, and seeks to reform them. But the Beloved of the Gods is not only compassionate, he is also powerful, and he tells them to repent, lest they be slain. For the Beloved of the Gods desires safety, self-control, justice and happiness for all beings. The Beloved of the Gods considers that the greatest of all victories is the victory of Righteousness, and that the Beloved of the Gods has already won, here and on all his borders, even 600 leagues away in the realm of the Greek King Antiyoka (Antiochus II Theos of Syria), and beyond Antiyoka among the four kings Turamaya (Ptolemy II Philadelphus of Egypt), Antikini (Antigonus Gonatas of Macedonia), Aga (Magas of Cyrene) and Alikasudara (Alexander of Epirus), and in the South among the Colas and Pandyas and as far as Ceylon.

Thus speaks the King, Dear to the Gods, of Gracious Mien. When I had been consecrated twenty-six years I ordered this inscription of the Law (Dharma, or Dhamma) to be engraved. Both this world and the other are hard to reach, except by great Love of the Law, great self-examination, great obedience (to the Law), great respect (for the Law), great energy. But through my leadership, respect for the Law and love of the Law have grown and will grow from day to day. Moreover my officers, of high, low and medium grades, follow it and apply it, sufficiently to make the waverer accept it; the officers on the frontiers do likewise. For this is (my) rule: government by the Law, administration according to the Law, gratification (of my subjects) by the Law, protection by the Law. (Ashokan Pillar Edict, Lauriya Nandangarh)

Now, by reason of the practice of piety by His Sacred and Gracious Majesty the King, the reverberation of the war-drums has become the reverberation of the Law . . . As for many years before has not happened, now, by reason of the inculcation of the Law of Piety by His Sacred and Gracious Majesty the King, (there is) increased abstention from the sacrificial slaughter of living creatures, abstention from killing of animate beings, seemly behavior to relatives, seemly behavior to Brahmans, hearkening to father and mother, hearkening to elders. Thus, as in many other ways, the practice of the Law has increased, His Sacred and Gracious Majesty the King will make such practice of the Law increase further.

The sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of His Sacred and Gracious Majesty the King will cause this practice of the Law to increase until the eon of universal destruction. (Ashokan Rock Edict IV)

King Ashoka, in order to improve the mobility and communication among his subjects, initiated social and municipal programs similar to those of his grandfather Chandragupta (c.322-298 B.C.), the first Maurian (Maorian) king. His programs included the planting of trees along the roads to provide shade and food for the weary travellers; digging of wells at intervals, and setting up of rest houses for them. He developed programs to cultivate medicinal herbs, which healed and benefited man and animal, and built throughout his kingdom hospitals for them. In order to insure the implementation of his policies and reforms, he created a new class of official, namely the Officers of Righteousness (dharma mahamatra), who took their instructions from the Centre, and were ordered to investigate the affairs of all provinces; to encourage favorable relations among all citizens, and to follow through the implementation of each of his policies and reforms. Ashoka was chosen the head of the Buddhist Church; and is credited to having built about 84,000 monasteries during his reign. He sent Buddhist missionaries to all parts of India, Ceylon, even to Persia, Syria, Egypt, Greece, and other lands; and prepared the way for the Shemitic Christ, Jesus son of Mary, who came about two hundred and thirty-two years later; and the prophecy made by the Shemitic prophet Isaiah was fulfilled, every whit. And after Ashoka's death missionaries in countless numbers left India to preach the gospel of Buddha (the Japhetic Christ of the Medes and Persians of ancient India; or of the Aryans) to the people in Tibet, China, Mongolia, and to all the island nations.

Now the ultimate attainment sought by the devotees of the time of Gautama or Sakya Muni was the state of Nirvana or Nibbana, the state of bliss reached by the Buddhas, and by the Arhants, the perfected or "Worthy" beings. But the Arhants began to be looked at as rather selfish beings, for they would not share the Spiritual merit which they had gained with others; nor would they assist others on their way to perfection and release from bondage; for they had sufficiently detached themselves from Samsara or the world of mortality and rebirth. (Today, in 1991 A.D., the Sthaviravada sect of the Lesser Vehicle or Hinayana Buddhism, which became dominant in Ceylon, Burma, Siam, Cambodia and Laos, still considers Arhantship to be the ultimate attainment for mankind, and adheres to the letter of the Law that each man must rely on his own self, and not on any external source.)

It is believed by the Buddhists that there are "Buddha cycles" and "Empty cycles," and we are indeed fortunate to be living in a Buddha cycle; in which four Buddhas, namely: Krakucchanda, Kanaka Muni, Kasyapa, and Sakya Muni, the sages of the Sakyas, have taught their doctrines to the world; but a fifth Buddha or Maitreya Buddha, a Messiahlike or Christlike Buddha, is yet to come; as it is believed by the Jews, Islamites (or "Mohammedans"), and the Christians of this day. And most believe that he will soon condescend to bring peace, joy, love, goodwill, prosperity, health, enlightenment, salvation, and more, to all mankind; and once again cleanse the world in this cycle, from pain, suffering and ignorance.

Gautama Buddha or Sakya Muni was not the first or the last of the Buddhas or World Teachers. A long succession of earlier Buddhas are known to have lived before him, and these former Buddhas were revered and worshipped even during the lifetime of Gautama. Many Buddhas came after Gautama; and yet a great many Pratyeka-Buddhas, who had found the truth for themselves without the knowledge of the Doctrine (Dhamma) but had not taught it to the world, existed before times, as they do to this day. But it was the doctrine of the Sun or Fire-worshippers, the Zoroastrians, the believers in the God of truth and light, Ahura Mazda or Ohrmuzd, that gave the idea of the Savior or Messiah (Saosyant) to the Buddhist-Aryans of ancient India; when under the invading rulers of North-West India, Zoroastrianism and Buddhism came in closer contact. Thus the doctrines of the Medes and Persians of ancient India, or the Aryans, merged into one, and the idea of the Savior, or Messiahlike Buddha, Maitreya Buddha, or the future Buddha became part of the orthodox belief. (And by the time of the Christian era, the cult of the future Buddha, Maitreya, became widespread among all Buddhist sects.)

The orthodox Buddhist believed that, in a long series of transmigrations as a Bodhisattva (previous incarnation of a Buddha), a Buddha wrought many deeds of kindness and mercy, before achieving his final birth as the Sage of the Sakyas or Sakya Muni; but since Maitreya and other unnamed Buddhas are yet to come, there must exist and prevail at all times in the universe a pool of Bodhisattvas, who are diligently working for the welfare of all living things; and preparing themselves to become Buddhas or Enlightened Beings; yet others having achieved Buddhahood have chosen to remain Bodhisattvas, and serve mankind, until all the world is freed from ignorance, disease, and suffering. And those Bodhisattvas who had the greatest power for good, became the divine beings in the heavens. Though neither of infinite knowledge nor of infinite power, these divine Bodhisattvas might be worshipped and prayed to without any apprehension; for it was a part of their mission to answer prayers. Thus the Bodhisattvas peopled the heavens with mighty forces of goodness; and it is this fact upon which the sect of the Greater Vehicle or Mahayana Buddhism was established. The Lesser Vehicle or Hinayana Buddhism of the Sthaviravadin sect believes that a Bodhisattva works in wisdom and love through many lives, so that he may become a Buddha; and the lay devotees are encouraged to follow his example, and win Nirvana as quickly as possible. Yet since the Bodhisattva is a being of immeasurable charity and compassion, behold, if there remains yet one suffering individual in the toil of transmigration, will he leave him or her without help and guidance, and enter Nirvana, where he can be of no further service to the world? It was for this reason that the Bodhisattva was thought of in the schools of the Great Vehicle not as a being who was to become a Buddha someday, but as one who would bide his time until even the smallest insect had reached the highest goal. Thus the old ideal of Arhant or the "Worthy" began to be looked on as selfish in scope and application; and the Great Vehicle of the Mahayana Buddhism began to inculcate the idea that instead of striving to become Arhants, men should aim at becoming Bodhisattvas; and by the spiritual merit which they gained, assist all living things on earth to the way of perfection and release. And this doctrine of transference of merit became a special feature of the teaching of the Great Vehicle. According to the Lesser Vehicle, a man can only help another on the Way by example and advice; each pilgrim must be a lamp unto himself, and work out his own salvation. But the belief in transference of merit spread widely, sometimes even among the sects of the Lesser Vehicle, to become recipient of the grace and mercy of the Master or the Bodhisattva. Moreover the Bodhisattva was thought of not only as a spirit of compassion and charity, but also of suffering. The following resolve or vow of the Bodhisattva reflects the idea of the Suffering Savior in Buddhism:

> I take upon myself . . . the deeds of all beings, even those in the hells, in other worlds, in the realms of punishment . . . I take their suffering upon me, . . . I bear it, I do not draw back from it, I do not tremble at it, . . . I have no fear of it, . . . I do not lose heart . . . I must bear the burden of all beings, for I have vowed to save all things living, to bring them safe through the forest of birth, age, disease, death and rebirth. I think not of my own salvation, but strive to bestow on all beings the royalty of supreme wisdom. So I take upon myself all the sorrows of all beings. I resolve to bear every torment in every purgatory of the universe. For it is better that I alone suffer than the multitude of living beings. I give myself in exchange. I redeem the universe from the forest of purgatory, from the womb of flesh, from the realm of death. I agree to suffer as a ransom for all beings, for the sake of all beings. Truly I will not abandon them. For I have resolved to gain supreme wisdom for the sake of all that lives, to save the world.

The suffering Bodhisattva was the forerunner of the later Christian conception of God, who gives his life as a ransom for the many; and redeems mankind from the consequences of their sins, transgressions, iniquities and ways of error. The Great Vehicle created a pantheon of noble and beneficent Bodhisattvas; chief of whom is Avalōkitesvara, The Lord Who Looks Down in Compassion, also called Padmapāni, the Lotus-bearer (compassionate counterpart of the passionate Lord of Hosts of the Christians). His special attribute is compassion, and his helping hand extends even to the deepest and most unpleasant of the Buddhist purgatories. Another important Bodhisattva is Manyajushri, whose special activity is to stimulate the understanding; and is manifested in a human form with a naked sword in one hand, symbolizing the destruction of error and falsehood; and a book in the other, describing the Ten Prajnyaparamitas, or Perfections of Insight, which are the cardinal virtues developed by the Bodhisattvas, namely: (1) Charity (dana), (2) Good Conduct or Morality (shila or sila), (3) Forebearance (ksanti), (4) Courage (virha), (5) Meditation and Reflection (dhyana), (6) Insight or Intuition (prajnya), (7) Skill in knowing what means to take, and to help beings to achieve salvation (dpayakausalya), (8) Resolution (pranidhana), (9) Power (bala), and (10) Knowledge and Understanding (jnyana).

The third important Bodhisattva is Vajrapāni, a sterner Bodhisattva, the foe of sin and evil; and like the Hindu god Indra, bears a thunderbolt in his hand. The gentler, Messiahlike Buddha, the Maitreya Buddha, or the future Buddha, is worshipped as a Bodhisattva. Another important Bodhisattva in the terrestrial world is Ksitigarbha, the Guardian of the Purgatories, who is thought of not as a fierce torturer, but rather a governor of a model prison, fully devoted to making life tolerable for the inmates under his charge, and helping them to earn remission of their sentence.

The Mahayana sect, or the Great Vehicle, believes that every living thing, from the humblest worm upward, is in one sense a Bodhisattva, whose faculty of intuition can be stimulated and developed to achieve degrees of Nirvana, for their salvation, and release from suffering. And while the Great Vehicle agrees with the Lesser that the world is full of sorrow, it rejoices in knowing that Self-salvation and enlightenment is possible for all mankind; the world contains much good as well as evil, and there is help for all those who ask. Moreover, the Great Vehicle was not content with the pantheon of noble and beneficent Bodhisattvas, which was established by the Mahasanghikas or Members of the Great Community (counterpart of Zion of Israel), circa 383 B.C. And the doctrine of this sect inculcated that the Buddha, the earthly expression of a mighty Spiritual Being, Avalōkitesvara (counterpart of Jesus Christ of Israel) had three bodies: A Body of Essence (Dharmakaya), a Body of Bliss (Sambhogakaya), and a Created Body (Nirmanakaya). And of these three, only the last is seen on earth. The Body of Essence eternally penetrates and permeates the universe; this is the Soul or the Higher Self, or the Cosmic Soul, even the Brahaman (the Spirit of Abraham), the World or Universal Soul. The Body of Essence is also called the Adi Buddha, the Primeval Buddha; and is described as the Void (Sunya), the True Self (Tattva), the Wisdom (Bodhi) or the Womb of those who have Won the Truth or Attained the Good (Tathagatagarbha), even the Nirvana or Nibbana.

The other two Bodies are the emanations of this, and belong to the lower or false self of man which carries the truths of Mind and Body, and not of the Spirit. The Body of Bliss exists in created heavens on earth, and will continue until the final resolution of all things into the Body of Essence, or the Cosmic Soul or Higher Self. (Later, by the first century B.C., this trinity of the Bodies of Buddha was merged into the Christian idea of Spirit, Mind, and Body; and the doctrine of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.)

The Buddha's Body of Bliss is the presiding deity of the highest Mahayana heaven, known as Sukhavati, the Celestial World; "where the blessed are reborn in the buds of lotuses, which rise from a lovely lake before the Heavenly Buddha's throne." This divine Buddha is known as Amitābha (Immeasurable Glory), or Amitāyus (Immeasurable Age). He too is endowed with the compassion of the Boddhisattva, for although he enjoys endless and infinite bliss, he maintains an interest in the heaven which is created for him, in his world. It is said that at his touch the lotuses open, to give birth to the blessed, who are nourished by and grow through the food of his word. Whoever calls on His name, however sinful he may have been, is assured of rebirth in His heaven. Amitabha, indeed, is a Father in Heaven (which idea was taken over by the Universal or Catholic Church, and the office of Pope or Papa, and the church of Christ was established in Rome; in fact Saint Peter, one of the apostles of Jesus, ascended to become the first pope or father of the Church, circa 64-67 A.D.). The Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara, or the Buddha with the attributes of Gautama, is considered in the Mahayana Buddhism, or the Higher Vehicle, to be the deity of the highest terrestrial heaven, who presides over all other Bodhisattvas; the salvation and enlightenment come from him and his throne; no man can enter the highest heaven without transference of his grace and mercy on those who call upon his name, or upon the name of His Father in Heaven. But there are other heavenly Buddhas, whose attributes are not that of Gautama Buddha or any other Buddha, and they preside over other heavens, and over other kingdoms.

In other words, in the pantheon of Mahayana Buddhism, Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara-Padmapani is the chief of all Bodhisattvas, the Lord of Compassion, the Lotus-bearer; Bodhisattva Manyajushri is the stimulator of understanding, destroyer of error and falsehood, and the preserver of tradition; and Bodhisattva Vajrapani is a sterner deity, a foe of sin and evil; manifested in a human form, bearing a thunderbolt in his hand. There is yet another lesser deity, Ksitigarbha, an important Bodhisattva, the guardian of the purgatories, the governor of a model prison and helper to the prisoners. To put it yet another way, this trinity of the Bodhisattvas, or the deities, Avalokitesvara, Manyajushri, and Vajrapani, is the more evolved representation of the ancient Hindu deities of Brahama the Creator, Vishnu the Preserver, and Shiva the Destroyer, forming the Trimurty, God in three aspects and three aspects of God; furthermore, the Trinity of Spirit, Mind, and Body; and of Virtue (sattva), Passion (rajas), and Dullness (tamas); of the Priests, Kings, and Gentry; of Celestial, Terrestrial, and Telestial; of Sun, Moon, and Stars; and the three Great Divisions of Buddhism, namely Mahayana (Great Vehicle), Hinayana (Lesser Vehicle), and Vajrayana (the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt); are merely different interpretations and representations of the selfsame trinity of the ancients. But most importantly, the Buddhist-Aryan believe that the future Buddha, or the Maitreya, a messiahlike Buddha, will come to save and redeem mankind and establish once again peace on earth.

Now the daily life of the monk was chiefly spent in study and religious exercises, but he was assigned his share of duties at the monastery; cleaning his cell, sweeping the courtyard and monastic buildings; while the elder monks devoted much of their time to teaching the novices. Among the most important of the monk's spiritual exercises were the contemplation and reflection upon the Four Sublime Moods or Brahma-Viharas, or the Four Divine States of Consciousness, the four cardinal virtues of Buddhism, namely:

Love or Goodwill (metta)
Compassion or Sympathetic Sorrow (karuna)
Joy or Sympathetic Joy (mudita)
Serenity or Even-mindedness (upekkha)

The monk would sit quietly cross-legged, and by remaining in the blissful state, contemplate on each of the four Sublime Moods, and would not be distracted by any external disturbances or objects of sense. And when he had found the Void, he would go through the state of love, and of compassion, and of joy, and of serenity. In any of these sublime states he may remain as long as is needful and expedient for him, even until his cup runneth over. Some monks chose to include in their daily lives a fifth mood of Impurity, in which they considered all the vileness and horror of the world, and of the life of the flesh. The key to the training of man's mental faculty was the seventh noble truth of the Way of Tathagata, namely the Right Recollection. He was taught to train himself to be continually aware of what he was doing at all times of his waking hours; observing himself closely, and making corrections to break the bad habits of the past, immediately at the very point of making an error, at the very moment; until all the weeds are pulled out, and the garden of his Soul is made clean, pure and lovely. Every act of the monk must be fully conscious; carelessness and lack of consideration were considered most serious faults. When he ate, the monk was to be aware of the nature of the act, its purpose, and the transience of the body which he fed; and similarly with every thought and act throughout the day.

Among the Four Cardinal Virtues of Buddhism, namely, Love, Compassion, Joy, and Serenity, the chief is Love (mettā in Pali; maitrī in Sanskrit, from the word mitra, meaning "a friend"); in other words "friendliness," "goodwill" or "benevolence" is the highest virtue man can attain. Nevertheless love is also the most precious entity in the worlds of passion (rajas) and dullness (tamas).

The following two passages are from Sutta Nipata, and Khuddaka Patha respectively; which reveal the extent of Buddhist influence upon the later religion of Christianity. From the seed of the first passage, came the words of St. Paul on the virtue of charity; and from the seed of the second passage, came the words of Jesus the Christ, son of Mary, a couple of centuries later:

May every living being, weak or strong, large or small, seen or unseen, near or far, born or yet unborn -- may every living thing be full of joy.

> May none deceive another, or think ill of him in any way whatsoever; or in anger or ill-will desire evil for another.
>
> Just as a mother, as long as she lives, cares for her only child, so should a man feel all-embracing love to all living beings. He should feel boundless love for all the world, above, below, and across; unrestrained and without enmity. Standing, walking, sitting or lying down, at all times, he should be firm in his mindfulness of love; for this is called a Sublime Mood.
>
> A man buries a treasure in a deep pit, thinking: It will be useful in time of need; or if the king is displeased with me, or if I am robbed, or fall into debt, or if food is scarce, or bad luck befalls me. But all this treasure may not profit the owner at all, for he may forget where he hid it, or goblins may steal it, or his enemies or even his kinsfolk may take it when he is not on his guard.
> But by charity, goodness, sacrifice and self-control, man and woman alike can store up a well-hidden treasure -- a treasure which is one's own, and which robbers cannot steal. A wise man should continue to do good -- that is the treasure which will not leave him.

The cardinal virtue of Love, or metta, is not a spur to benevolent action; rather, it is a state of mind, one of the Brahma Viharas. The view that faith without works is dead is expressed in the account of the Buddha and the sick man. As the Master was going about his rounds of inspection, visiting the monks in their cells, he found one who was sick with dysentery, and who had fallen from his bed and lay in his own excrement. With his own hands the Buddha washed the sick man from head to foot, laid him comfortably on his bed; and gave that day the following injunction to the Order:

> Brethren, you have no mother or father, sons or daughters, nor any kinsfolk to care for you. If you do not care for one another who else will do so? Brethren, he who would care for me should care for the sick.

So far two of the three great divisions, namely, the Mahayana or the Higher Vehicle, and the Hinayana or the Lesser Vehicle have been discussed. While the Lesser Vehicle taught that release from bondage and suffering was obtained by gradual loss of individuality, self-discipline, and meditation; the Great Vehicle added that the grace, mercy, and compassion of the heavenly Buddhas and Bodhisattvas assisted the process.

One hundred years after the death of Gautama Buddha, many female divinities found their way into the pantheon of the Mahasanghikas, which was later modified and adopted by the Mahayana sect of Buddhism. One such female deity was named Prajnyaparamita, or the Perfection of Insight, the personification of the qualities of the Bodhisattva. Later the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, like the gods of the Hindus, were endowed with wives, who were the active aspects, the force or potency (shakti) of their husbands. The god was thought of as transcendent and aloof, while the goddess was active in the world; thus the god might be best approached through the goddess. The productive activity of the divine beings was thought of in terms of conjugal union (opposite of copulation). And as the sensual ideas and carnal symbolism became widespread in all sects of Buddhism, even sexual intercourse as a religious rite became an accepted practice in some sects. Both the lustful desires and wicked intentions found in the adherents of the Lesser Vehicle, or Hinayana sect, joined forces with those of the Higher Vehicle, or Mahayana sect, who were the possessors of the hidden knowledge. As a result, a new magical mysticism arose; and the followers of the new teachings believed that release from bondage and suffering could best be obtained by acquiring magical power, which they called Vajra (meaning thunderbolt, or diamond) and finding one's own True Self or Soul; and this could be achieved by the grace and help of heavenly Buddhas and Bodhisattvas. Thus came into being a new sect of Buddhism, known as the Vajrayana or the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt. For the Lesser Vehicle believed that release was obtained by gradual loss of individuality, self-discipline, and meditation; and the Higher Vehicle believed that the grace and help of the heavenly Buddhas and Bodhisattvas assisted the process; the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt combined the two ideas, with a greater emphasis on the physical and the mental.

The chief deities of the new sect were "Savioresses" or Taras, the spouses of the Buddhas and Boddhisattvas of the Mahayana pantheon; and a host of lesser divinities, many called by the names of demons, such as outcast women (matangis), demonesses (pisacis), sorceresses (yoginis), and she-ghouls (dakinis), were the divinities of the Hinayana or Lesser Vehicle. It was thought that these deities should be compelled to be heard, for the persuasion did not sway them away from their nature of dullness; in fact these divinities thrived on compulsion, as they do even to this day. The textbooks outlining the means of compulsion used upon the deity, or doing Sadhana, as it is called, were called Tantras; and thereby the name tantric Buddhism is often used. By pronouncing the right formula, or mantra, in correct manner, or by drawing the correct magical symbol (yantra), one might force the gods to bestow magical power on the worshipper; and lead him to his highest bliss. One such formula of tantric Buddhism, called the Six Syllables, or Sadaksara, is Om* mani padme hum. This phrase, "Ah! the jewel is indeed in the lotus!" is carnal in its meaning, and is written and repeated thousands of times daily, especially in Tibet. To the tantric Buddhist it signifies the divine coitus of the heavenly Buddha Amitabha, Ruler of Paradise, (also known as Amitayus) and Prajnyaparamita; and of Avalokitesvara and his Tara.

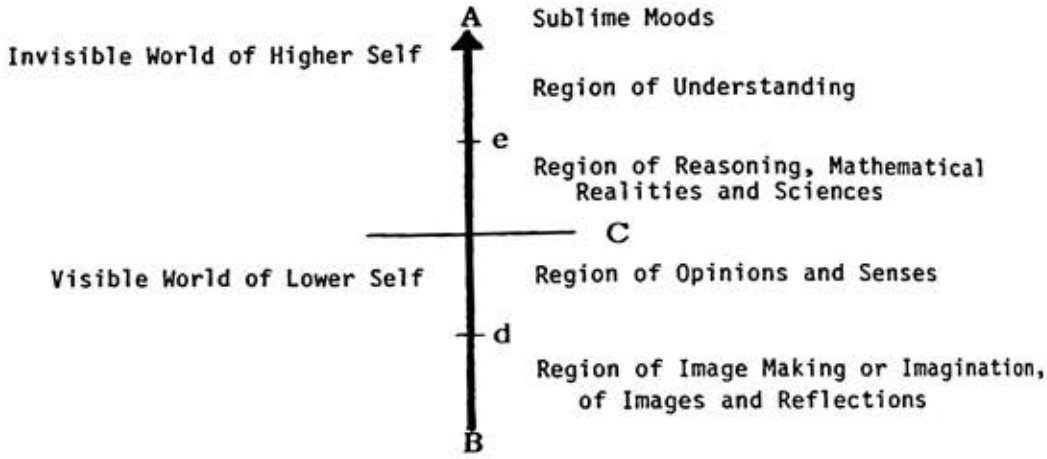
Tantric Buddhism of the Vajrayana Vehicle, is the continuation of the practices of ancient Babylonian and Egyptian sects of Ishtar or Ashtoreth, of Baal, and others. These divinities were created primarily for the diversion and entertainment of the merchants and farmers, and all the working populous; and the lay following comprised of such, deluded in their beliefs, clouds without rain, whited sepulchres, and human volcanoes, they imagined in their hearts and minds the objects of their senses, then reenacted or replayed the scenes of their imaginations, arising out of primeval ignorance. And for they knew not, nor understood the Doctrine, but remained in realms of darkness, death, and mortality, in the world of images and senses; where suffering or dukkha alone held its sway. These people of darkness played out the scenes of their imaginations in ritual and ceremonies, in conversations with other members of the tribes, or simply to tickle their own fancy. They put their senses on fire, and died in the spirit, and remained in the realm of Samsara, or the world of illusion and senses — they remained in their lower or false self or the primeval self, even ego; which Plato the Greek philosopher had once described as Below the Line region, as shown below:



The Line

A is the highest point in the Scale of Ascension; and B is the lowest form of existence. The main division is at C. BC is the visible; A being the invisible or intelligible world; Bd is the world of dullness or tamas, the region of the Telestial world; de is the region of the Terrestrial world, the region of the objects of the senses and opinions; truth pertaining to this world, the region of reasoning, mathematical realities and sciences. The point A is the highest region, namely, that of Sublime Moods and Understanding, the Celestial Region.

The Vajrayana, or the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt, is so called, for it symbolizes the intensity of man's unharnessed passions; as a thunderbolt they appear, and after sometimes doing much damage, fade away into oblivion. Now, these are the words from the annals of secular history, concerning the Vajrayana sect of Buddhism:

> Their primary purpose was to obtain supernormal power. The meditations of the Vajrayana were positively psychopathic. The practitioner of the system might so hypnotize himself as to imagine that he was reborn from the womb of a Tara, to kill his father the Buddha and take his place. In the act of copulation (opposite of conjugal union) with a female devotee, he and his partner would imagine becoming Buddha and Tara, or they may reverse their roles. And in the carnal rites of tantric Buddhism all taboos were lifted; even incest was permitted, for what was sin to the ignorant was considered virtue to the initiate. Drinking of alcohol, killing of all kinds of animals for eating and rituals, and sometimes even human sacrifices — every imaginable sin including all kinds of secret combinations, plans for murder, violence, and war, were practiced at the tantric covens. These things were, however, done under rigid and controlled conditions. In fact all initiates were confounded and closely watched, without ever knowing or being aware of this fact. In many cases the initiate of the Vajrayana sect might in ordinary life be a normal unsuspecting man of the world, whose evil psychological propensities were channeled into this outlet, at the expense of his Soul and health.

But those of the Mahayana or Greater Vehicle, who joined the Vajrayana or the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt, did not neglect their devotions to God, nor did they ignore the practice of the training of their mental faculties; they obeyed the Ten Precepts, trod the Path of the Tathagata, and dwelt all their daily lives in the Four Brahma Viharas, or the Four Cardinal Virtues, as they do even to this day. It was they who kept the Vehicle of the Thunderbolt alive and moving forward. For they have won the Sublime Truths, even the great reward of having merged into the Cosmic Soul, and becoming one with God, they are now able to counter the poisonous effects of their vices and excesses, of their sins, transgressions, and ways of error, by living under the grace and mercy of our Heavenly Father, even Amitabha, and our Savior (Saosyant) the Lord Avalokitesvara-Padmapani, or Jesus Christ; by obeying the Ten Precepts, treading the Path of the Tathagata, and living the Four Cardinal Virtues (Brahma Viharas), even the most deadly poison of this world is turned into salubrious pleasures and blessings. In all ages, since the world began, the condescensions, vices, and excesses of the kings, sages, prophets, and gods, have created and brought into existence all that there is to see, feel, hear, touch, smell or imagine; all that is great, grand, good, health-giving, beautiful, or marvellous has always come to man through gracious condescensions of the mighty God and his faithful servants, through the condescensions of the hosts of Bodhisattvas and their spouses.

Finally, the humble servant of the Heavenly Father, the Lord of Hosts, and the Lord of Compassion, did have a few opportunities over the past thirty years to observe a living incarnation of the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara, even the Dalai Lama, or All Embracing Priest, Tenzin Gyatso; who is said to be hidden away in the 1,000-room Potala palace (monastery), that overlooks the city of Lhasa in Tibet. His Holiness, the 14th Dalai Lama of Tibet, is the latest re-incarnation in the line of Dalai Lamas, which is unbroken since 1391 A.D. Two of this great Soul's likenesses are included here:

A. "The temporal and Spiritual head of Tibet, the 14th Dalai Lama, is an absolute ruler. In 1950 at the age of fifteen, he governed with the aid of 73-year-old high lama and regent, Tokra. The regent was assisted by a council (or Kashag) of four ministers (Shapes), and by an advisory body of 400 members, aristocrats and religious men, known as the National Assembly (Tsongdu)."

B. "The likeness of Tenzin Gyatso, the 14th Dalai Lama, today at age 55."

Now, returning to Alexander and Hellenism, we know that in 330 B.C. Alexander of Macedonia defeated Darius III Codomannus, or Dara, his half-brother. And this conquest marked the end of the Hakhamanish or Achaemenid empire, and the beginning of a new era of Hellenism, under Greek rule; whereby the emphasis was shifted from traditional truths of the Torah and Avesta to the new laws and precepts of morality, known as the Law of Righteousness or Piety. And these were the ancient noble truths of the Aryans combined with the Buddhist Dharma (or the Doctrine) in their most primitive form.

And after Alexander defeated Darius III, he set out to subdue the whole of the former Persian empire, which had long ceased to exercise control over its remoter provinces. In the battle of Gaugamela Alexander had already met Indian troops; for a small contingent of soldiers from the west of the Indus river, with fifteen elephants, had fought with Darius; and Indian soldiers were also employed in the Persian army. After a long campaign in Bactria (the region on the borders of the Soviet Union and Afghanistan, watered by the River Oxus), Alexander crossed the Hindu Kush and occupied Kabul. Then, fiercely but unsuccessfully resisted by the hill tribes, he descended into the Kabul valley and reached the Indus, which he crossed in the spring of 326 B.C. At this time Ambhi (or Omphis) was king of Takhtesila or Taxila, at one time the Seat of Morality of the Achaemenid empire and the world. The city was situated about twenty miles northwest of today's Rawalpindi. It was a large and prosperous city with most excellent laws. Taxila was both a military and a university town, strategically situated on the main road to Western Asia, containing the most famous of the universities of that time. Students flocked there from all over the world, to learn all the arts and sciences that could be studied under most eminent professors; especially its medical school was highly esteemed.

And in about 324 B.C. the grandfather of Ashoka Vardhana, Chandragupta Maurya (Sandrocottus in Greek) supported the Greek invaders; and advised Alexander to advance beyond the Beas and attack the Nanda emperor, for he was so disliked by his people that they would rise in support of the Greeks. Later, Chandragupta offended Alexander by his boldness of speech, and Alexander ordered that he be put to death; but he escaped, and after many adventures and trials succeeded in expelling the Greek garrisons, and overthrowing the last of the Nandas, and occupied his capital, Pataliputra. But Chandragupta did not gain the throne by his own might, but by the genius of his devoted Brahman advisor Kautilya (also known as Canakya, or Vishnugupta).

Then, in about 305 B.C., after Alexander's general Seleucus Nicator had succeeded in gaining control of most of the Asiatic provinces, and turned his attention to the East; he met Chandragupta in battle, and suffered the worst of defeats. For not only did he fail to recover Alexander's Indian provinces, but he was compelled to yield parts of the territory, which is now called Afghanistan, to Chandragupta; receiving in exchange 500 elephants. The peace was then concluded by a matrimonial alliance with a Greek female of high standing; out of which alliance was born his son Bindusara, and his grandson Ashoka Vardhana.

Then circa 302 B.C., Seleucus sent an ambassador, Megasthenes, to reside at the Mauryan court at Pataliputra (today's Patna). And Megasthenes' detailed accounts of India later became the standard textbook material for Latin and Greek scholars. These are a few extracts from Megasthenes' accounts of India toward the end of the fourth century B.C.:

> They (Indians) live happily enough, being simple in their manners, and frugal . . . Truth and virtue they hold alike in esteem . . . The greater part of the soil is under irrigation, and consequently bears two crops in the course of the year . . . and there has never been a general scarcity in the supply of nourishing food.
>
> The government of the Mauryan period was built on the military leverage. Chandragupta (or Sandrocottus) is said to have had 600,000 foot soldiers, 30,000 horses, 9,000 elephants, and a number of chariots. The power of the king was theoretically unlimited; but in practice it was restricted by the 30 member administrative board (or council), whose high moral standards, wisdom, and collective power was great and worthy of respect. The government of Chandragupta was organized into departments with well-defined duties; and a carefully graded hierarchy of officials managed the activities of departments such as: revenue, excise, customs, frontiers, passports, communications, mines, agriculture, cattle, commerce, warehouses, navigation, forests, public games, prostitution, and mint. An outline of some of Chandragupta's government departments and their respective functions is as follows:
>
> Superintendent of Excise: Controlled the sale of drugs and intoxicating drinks; restricted the number and location of taverns, and the quantity of liquor to be sold.
>
> Superintendent of Mines: Leased mining areas to private enterprises, in return for a fixed rent and a share of the profits to the government; a similar system applied to agriculture, since all the land was owned by the state.
>
> Superintendent of Public Games: Supervised the gambling halls, supplied dice and charged a fee for their use; and took into the treasury five percent of the take.
>
> Superintendent of Prostitution: Looked after the public women, controlled their charges and expenditures; appropriated their earnings for two days of each month; and kept the best of them in the royal palace for entertainment and intelligence (spy) work.
>
> Superintendent of Navigation: Regulated water transport, and protected travelers on rivers and seas; maintained bridges and harbors, and provided government ferries.
> Superintendent of Communication: Built and repaired roads throughout the Mauryan empire, from the narrow wagon-tracks of the villages to the trade routes thirty-two feet, and royal roads sixty-four feet wide. One of these extended twelve hundred miles, from Pataliputra to the northwestern frontier. At approximately every mile, these roads were marked with pillars indicating directions and distances to various locations. Shade-trees, wells for drinking water, police stations, and hotels were provided at regular intervals along the route. The mode of transportation included chariots, palanquins, bullock-carts, horses, camels, elephants, asses, and men. Elephants were so highly esteemed and valued that a woman's virtue was a moderate price to pay for one of them; and to the women it was an honor that their beauty should appear equal in value to an elephant.

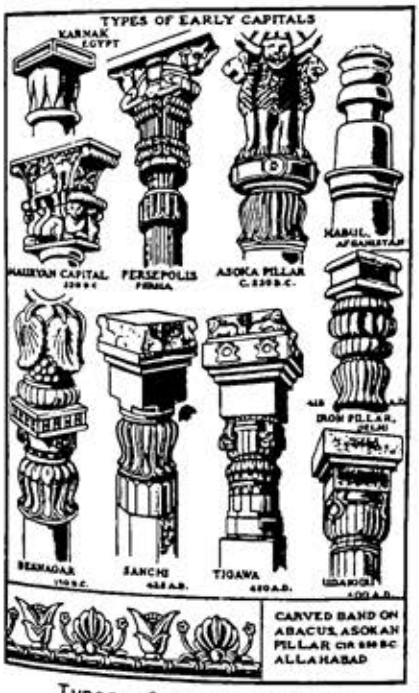
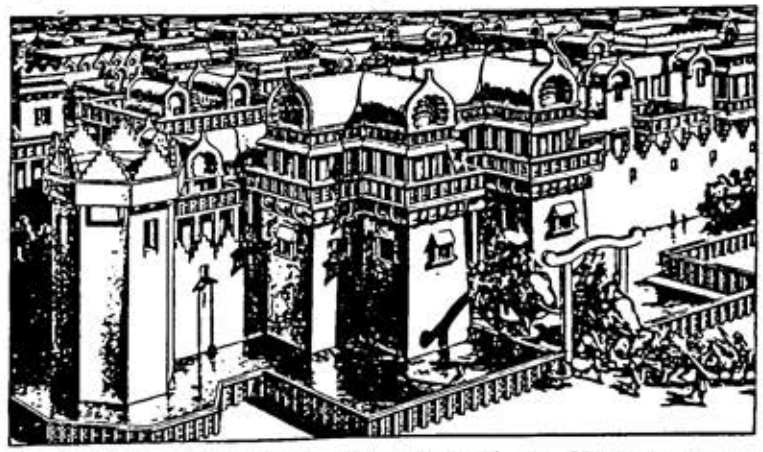
Chandragupta's capital, Pataliputra was nine miles long along the banks of the Ganges, and stretching one and a half miles inland. From secular sources and evidence of the surviving sculptures and paintings, an idea can be gained of the ancient Indian architecture. The use of barrel-vaulted roofs, with gable ends and also ornate finials were common in the second century B.C. Roofs were both thatched and tiled. Later the high barrel-vaulted roof gave way to a flatter type, with overhanging eaves. Houses had windows and balconies overlooking the street. The balconies of royal households were often screened with lattices, so that ladies might see without being seen. The walls were whitewashed, and, as today, often were decorated with painted pictures and ornamentation, both on the flat and in stucco relief. The larger houses had a square courtyard surrounded by a veranda, behind which were living quarters.



Types of early capitals



An ancient Indian city circa second to first century B.C., with barrel-vaulted roofs, gable-ends, and ornate finials.

The palace of Chandragupta was of timber, but Megasthenes ranked it as excelling the royal residences of Shushan (Susa) and Ecbatana, being surpassed only by those at Persepolis. The pillars were plated with gold, and ornamented with designs of birdlife and foliage; its interior was furnished and adorned with precious metals and stones. And there was a certain Oriental ostentation, as in the gold vessels six feet in diameter.

Pataliputra was ruled by the administrative board of thirty men, divided into six groups:

1. Regulation of industry;
2. Supervision of strangers, assigning to them lodging and attendants, and watching their movements (modus operandi);
3. Recording of births and deaths;
4. Issuance of business licences, regulation of trade and commerce; testing and inspection of weights and measures;
5. Control of the sale of manufactured articles; and
6. Collection of taxes (ten percent of all sales).

Pataliputra, in 300 B.C., was a thoroughly well-organized city, administered according to the best principles of government. It is also written, that Chandragupta having won the throne by intrigue and violence, lived for twenty-four years in a gilded jail. Occasionally he made public appearances clad in fine muslin embroidered with purple and gold, and was carried in a golden palanquin or on a well-decorated elephant. Moreover, his days were divided into sixteen periods of ninety minutes each:

1st period - He rose and prepared himself by meditation;
2nd - He studied the reports of his agents, and issued secret instructions;
3rd - He spent with his board members or councillors in the Hall of Private Audience;
4th - He attended to state finances and national defense;
5th - He heard the petitions and suits of his subjects;
6th - He bathed and dined, and read religious literature;
7th - He received taxes and tributes, and made official appointments;
8th - He again met with his council (of thirty men); and heard reports of his spies, including the courtesans whom he used for this purpose;
9th - He devoted to relaxation, prayer, and other activities;
10th, 11th - He devoted to military matters;
12th - He devoted to secret reports;
13th - He devoted the evening to bath, dining and repast;
14th, 15th, and 16th - He devoted to sleep.

Although Chandragupta did not always maintain this rigid schedule, it served as a guideline for the king and his court. One of the defects of his government, as noted by the historians, was autocracy, and therefore continual dependence upon force and spies. And like every autocrat, Chandragupta held his power precariously, always fearing revolt and assassination. Every night he used different rooms; and several men of his court with physical form that of the king were used to hide his whereabouts; and he was always surrounded by palace guards. About the time when a long famine came upon his kingdom, Chandragupta in despair abdicated the throne; lived twelve years thereafter; became a Jaina monk, and fasted to death in the manner of Jaina saints, at the great Jaina temple and monastery of Shravana Belgola in the region of today's Mysore.

After a reign of twenty-four years, Chandragupta was succeeded by his son Bindusara; but there was nothing he did of significance that was recorded in the annals of Indian history; except that his mother may have been Greek, and that he did keep close contact with the Greeks, especially with Antiochus I, the Seleucid king of Syria. And when Bindusara requested of the Greek king a present of figs and wine, together with a sophist (heretic philosopher, or teacher), Antiochus sent the figs and wine, but replied that Greek philosophers were not for export. Bindusara did hold the great Mauryan empire together, and added a portion of the Deccan into it. After a reign of twenty-five years died Bindusara; and his coregent son Ashoka Vardhana began his reign circa 269 B.C. It was this Ashoka, one of the greatest and noblest kings of India, that spread the Doctrine or Dharma throughout the world; although it was in its incomplete and primitive form. And it was not preached as the religion of Buddha, or dharma, the religious doctrine; but as the Law of Righteousness or Piety, or as the Ethics of Morality. And these truths were given to the people as the Greco-Persian precepts, through their kings and rulers.

In one of Ashoka's edicts, which is preserved even to this day, this is recorded: The Beloved of the Gods (referring to himself) considers that greatest of all victories is the victory of the Law of Righteousness (the doctrine or dharma); and that victory the Beloved of the Gods has already won, here and on all his borders, even 600 leagues away in the realm of the Greek king Antiyoka (Antiochus II Theos of Syria), and beyond Antiyoka among the four kings Turamaya (Ptolemy II Philadelphus of Egypt), Antikini (Antigonus Gonatus of Macedonia), Maga (Magas of Cyrene), and Alikasudara (Alexander of Epirus). And thus Ashoka succeeded in converting all the civilized world of the third century B.C. into the precepts of the Buddhist doctrine. Moreover, the merits of his humanitarian philosophy and belief gained him the moral leadership of all the civilized world which then existed.

Now, in Western Asia the conquest of the Achaemenid empire by Alexander, and subsequent establishment of Hellenistic, or Greco-Persian, states was the most important event in the secular history of the Near East. For it marked the beginning of Hellenism; and Hellenism itself was a transitional period to the world of Rome. Alexander's expedition against the Achaemenid empire had been planned by Philip of Macedon long before his assassination, and his son was well-taught in all the political intrigues of that time. The army of Alexander consisted of historians, scientists, and philosophers, engineers, surveyors and soldiers (many centuries later, Napolean's army also consisted of the same), and the war against the Persians was presented as a pan-Hellenic cause. The combat troops, however, were well-trained, experienced, and competent.

When Alexander became the king of Asia, and his empire was established, the Achaemenids maintained their power, and control on the highest levels of the government, and Medo-Persians (and Elamites) dominated the upper bureaucracy. Now the primary goal and mission which was assigned to Alexander was to bring the Greeks and Persians together. And this was accomplished by appointing both Persians and Greeks to govern satrapies or provinces; through Alexander's marriage with Persian women, and mass marriage of his troops with Iranian women at Shushan (Susa), after his return from India. Most of the new cities founded under Alexander, were called Alexandria, and the most famous of these was Alexandria in Egypt. In these cities lived a mixed population, ruled by Greek laws; and Iranian youths were trained in Greek fashion. Many of these cities were in eastern Iran, because there they served as military centers for the control of strategic routes, as were the garrison towns of the Achaemenids. Thus, Hellenism began with the Greco-Persian-Indian union of thoughts, words, and deeds; especially with Alexander, but was carried out by his successors, after his death in 323 B.C.

Alexander's officers were capable and devoted men, all working toward the common goal; but as soon as Alexander was dead, each sought to exalt himself, even to the detriment of others. The generals who later became famous in their own right include Ptolemy, Antigonos and Seleucus, but there were many others.

From 311 B.C. to 302 B.C. Seleucus was able to subdue opposition, and prepare the people to gain their loyalty to himself and his family in Babylonia and in Iran. And he did succeed in gaining their loyalty to the house of Seleucus. After establishing himself in Syria, the center of the Seleucid kingdom, during his first decade of reign he created a system of military colonies, refounding centers which had declined and lost their importance, such as Ecbatana and Hecatompylos. About 306 B.C., Seleucus secured allegiance of Bactria; and after some struggle the eastern regions; but he did much fighting to gain the support of the Macedonian satraps or their local rulers. And after having acquired Media by killing Antigonos' satrap, he fought many battles with Macedonians. In 305 B.C. Seleucus crossed the Indus river, and succeeded in obtaining Chandragupta's support, by losing the battle and receiving 500 elephants in return; and with a matrimonial alliance between him and a Greek noblewoman. Seleucus officially became king in 305/304, and ruled for twenty-five years, when he was assassinated in Greece, in September 281 B.C.

Seleucus had appointed his son Antiochus, whose mother was an Iranian noblewoman, the head of the province east of the Euphrates river. And it was Antiochus, not his father, who was most instrumental in the consolidation of Seleucid rule in the east. He rebuilt a city in the Merv oasis, or Margianna (Margiane), called Antiochia; and he enclosed the oasis with a long wall to defend it against the barbarians and wandering nomads. He also built two Alexandrias in central Asia at Termez and Khodjent, as a part of his plan of consolidation. Although Assyrians had favored urbanization, the Achaemenids were less inclined toward this activity. Under Seleucids and later under Sasanians, the founding of cities became an important task of the ruler. There was no fixed pattern of Seleucid cities, but their purpose was mostly military and political; to ensure Seleucid rule by establishment of Greek colonies in Asia, where the colonists owed their rights and security to the ruler or king. For the Seleucid Syria with the capital at Antioch and the principal arsenal at Apamea; and Babylonia with the eastern capital and Seleucia on the Tigris, were the two main centers of their power and interest. The third region of importance was western Anatolia, especially Ionia, the source of most of the colonists in Iran. Both western and eastern Iran were considered less important regions of the empire, but Media remained a valuable source of horses much needed for the cavalry.

And as under the Achaemenids the main routes of conquest and trade in Iran were taken by the settlements, so were they taken by the Seleucids; and they ruled effectively only where settlements could ensure control. Moreover, many institutions including the road and postal system remained unchanged under the Seleucids. The nerve center of the empire was the court where prevailed the old Achaemenid institution of the House of the King and the Friends of the King. The court was important, because it brought the group together, and the rule of the Seleucids was highly personal. The court was large, since the house of the king included his relatives and their families, slaves, servants, altogether a great number of people.

The Seleucid empire divided its subjects into four categories: vassal kings, vassal dynasts, cities and people. The dynasts were local rulers who held sway over their domains as vassals of the Seleucid king; such were the princes of Media, Armenia, and other regions. They held in their hands both civil and military power, and acted as independent minor kings, with courts like the Seleucid court. The distinction between a satrap of the Seleucid king and a minor dynast was very slight; likewise the difference between a minor dynast and a vassal king. No changes were made in the complicated system of taxes, which was established by the Achaemenids. The Seleucid satraps had to collect the land taxes from the landlords; and this tax was fixed as Darius (Spentadatha) had fixed the tribute on the various provinces. In each satrapy the assigned tax was divided among the communes, rather than on an individual. (Later the Romans replaced this fixed tax in the western part of the Seleucid empire by a decima, or percentage of the harvest, profits, or increases. Other taxes were collected by royal officials rather than by the satraps, as was the case under the Achaemenids. The central treasury had agents in the provinces to collect the customs tolls, salt tax, tax on slaves, and other commodities. But the practices differed widely within the provinces, cities, colonies, and villages of the same satrapy. Generally cities collected their own taxes for remittance to the central treasury. Revenues from mines and royal (government) factories were substantial; and there also existed local taxes and special levies for war, besides booty from war and confiscations.

But the great innovation of the Seleucids was in the growth of the city state mentality; and the Greek concept of polis was merged into the traditional Oriental empire, which later served to unify and strengthen Hellenistic states. The land ownership under the Achaemenids was of two kinds, king's land and temple land. The king's land was subdivided into direct royal lands, which included state property such as mines, forests, royal estates; and feudal land. The last was the vast majority of the lands and consisted of land occupied by local rulers or tribes over whom the king of kings had little control, and of estates of large landowners who held the land in fief from the Achaemenid ruler. The peasants who tilled the land were usually attached to it as serfs who could not leave their domicile without permission of the landlord or state official. The temple land, or the land of the gods, was owned by a temple, and the peasants on that land paid taxes to the priest or high priest, who then remitted the taxes to the central treasury. The conditions and the mix of land holdings varied from satrapy to satrapy.

The Seleucid kings gave some of the old estates to their Greek friends; others were broken up and distributed, and yet some others were preserved with the original Persian ownerships. But the Seleucid policy emphasized the grants of land to their new cities and military colonies which they founded. Moreover the establishment of a Greek polis had a great influence on the surrounding country; and it was this growth of the city life which became a unique feature of the Seleucid rule; and in time the native village and the Greco-Persian settlements fused together, and a new Hellenic culture came into existence. The Jewish communities also established themselves in such cities, such as in Seleucia on the Tigris, which was a polis; and there was a great attraction among the natives to become Hellenic in culture.

When a city acquired land with serfs, the condition of many serfs improved, for many became free; and hereditary settlers paid taxes to the city. This was an important means by which social and economic changes were brought about under Hellenism (comparable to the later changes under Islam, and to westernization of today). In this manner the Greeks served as the catalysts for change in the Oriental world. They did not accomplish this by preaching their truths or through missionary work, but by example they taught others. Greeks were not only tolerant toward other people, but actually fostered local cultures. Under the Seleucids there was a revival of cuneiform learning in Babylonia; and a great number of clay tablets from this period dealing with astronomy, business transactions, ancient hymns and rituals have survived even to this day. (After the birth of Christ Jesus, however, cuneiform writing was seldom used.) Seleucid kings patronized various temples and fostered local cults; and their tolerance of native religions gained them popularity among their subjects.

The influence of the Seleucids, and of Hellenism, in the East can be seen in the spread of the Greek language and Greek law. Although their influence was far less in Iran, than in Syria or in Mesopotamia, the Greek inscriptions found in Armenia, Georgia, and other places, where there were few if any Greeks, testifies to the utility and prestige of the Greek language throughout the Seleucid empire. Besides the language and the law, and the city culture, they achieved an efficient administration, fair taxation, a uniform currency, weights and measures, and a calendar. The Caspian coastal lands of Gilan and Mazanderan were not under Seleucid rule. Armenia to the west of Azerbaijan and closer to the Seleucid heartland, although independent, was subject to Seleucid influence, and at times also a tributary. Hyrcania to the east and southeast of the Caspian was subject to Seleucus I, and after his death was lost to the Seleucids. Khurasan was also lost to the Bactrian Greeks. To the south the Seleucids held on to Khuzistan, and lost control of much of Persis after Seleucus' death. Kirman, the Makran regions and beyond were also hardly under Seleucid control. The Seleucids were mostly concerned with the route of communications and trade to other outposts in the farthest east, Bactria. In Iran the cities they founded followed the road from Seleucia on the Tigris to Baktra.

At the time of the Seleucids, Aramaic was still the lingua franca and the language of the bureaucracy in western Asia, as it was during the time of Alexander; but Greek was used everywhere. Some of the Aramaic inscriptions of Taxilla and Qandahar, and of king Ashoka's time from Pul-i Darunta or Laghman in Afghanistan, with its Prakrit vocabulary, are still preserved even to this day. There is no evidence that the Seleucids attacked native tradition in favor of Hellenism; but on the contrary, the decline of Aramaic and the rise of local systems of writing paralleled the decline of the Seleucids and lack of a centralized bureaucracy of the old Achaemenid tradition. Each local ruler went his way in the matters of bureaucracy and writing.

The Seleucid bureaucracy utilized numerous seals and bullae for their officials; and many of their seals and seal impressions have been found in the excavations of the Seleucia on the Tigris, Uruk, and other locations. Two systems of sealing documents corresponded to two bureaucracies which existed in Babylonia. One was the old Babylonian method of clay tablet and "envelope" with the seals of individuals, witnesses, or others impressed on it. The other was the Greek system of sealing a rolled or folded parchment or papyrus with clay on which seals were impressed. There was also a third system of the Achaemenids which combined cuneiform clay writing with parchment Aramaic writing. The cuneiform clay tablet was attached by string to a copy of the same document on parchment or papyrus in Aramaic writing. And this was the form in which the records were kept in Persepolis, in Elamite and Aramaic.

Under the later Seleucids, a modified form of the third system of writing was more prevalent than the other two, although the cuneiform system declined with the cuneiform writing itself. The documents written on the parchment, rather than on papyrus, were bound with a string, and a lump of treated mud was pressed into the string around the document, giving a napkin holder or napkin ring effect. The seals of witnesses, owners, and others were impressed on the clay and the document was deposited in the archives. And of the seals of the Seleucid dynasty was the form of an anchor. The Greeks generally used a man's profile, an animal or pictorial design on their private seals; but never exclusively writing, as did the Seleucids, and later the Muslims.

The life of the peasants in the Seleucid empire was little affected by the armies, military colonies, and new cities. For the Greeks were mostly of the nature of rajas, or passion, and few were farmers or merchants. They called the peach by the name "Persian apple," citron was called "Medic apple," and Medic grass, alfalfa. But the Seleucids, as well as Ptolemies did design and promote irrigation and agricultural projects; and both were great patrons of learning, and of inventions and material progress. At this time the use of the water wheel spread from the western Iranian plateau throughout their domains. The use of cotton became widespread, although real Chinese silk also came into the Near East in large quantities during this time. And with the spread of Hellenism both eastward and westward opened new markets for international trade; and brought about great expansions of products such as cosmetics, dyes and perfumes; and diversification of intoxicants, especially wines.

This was still the age of enlightenment, which began with Zoroaster and Gautama Buddha. Numerous doctrines and philosophies of the material world were discussed and/or preached in every circle of the civilized world. The great literary scholars of the time included, Euclid, Manetho, Eratosthenes, Berossos, Megasthenes, Diogenes, Seleucus the geographer, and many more.

And unlike the slaves in Rome and other parts of the western world, most of the slaves in the Near East were of the same race and speech as their masters. Slavery was primarily the result of poverty; and the transition from a slave to a free status and vice versa was not difficult. A man could sell himself or members of his family into slavery to raise money or for indebtedness, with legal provisions against escape or contingencies in case of death. A slave could be adopted, manumitted, or could buy his freedom, for slavery was solely a monetary affair. The slaves were chattel and could be used as money, barter or as security in the case of loans. The line between a household or domestic slave, and one bought in the market; or between slave and the freeman was not sharply drawn. During the period of the Seleucids, as during the time of the Achaemenids, slaves could own real estate, possess their own slaves, have their own seals; or were legal personages paying a head tax to their masters in lieu of service, or paying a percentage of profits in business. The price of slaves rose through Achaemenid and Seleucid times to such an extent that freely hired labor was much cheaper. Slave labor on estates could not compete with tenant farming; and likewise, free skilled labor was much more economical than slave skilled labor. Therefore, by Seleucid time the proportion of the slave population to the free population was quite meager; except who chose to remain temple slaves or state slaves.

In the Seleucid times temple and state slavery became more important than the domestic slavery. There always had been dedication of children or worthy domestic slaves to the service in a temple; especially after Alexander founded many large and important temple estates with many slaves who worked on the fields, or who served the priests in one capacity or another. Although prisoners of war were occasionally used as slaves in a temple, generally they became state slaves or the property of the king. Moreover, slaves for the king could be purchased on the market. The state projects such as road building were usually carried out by corvee labor, as well as prisoners of war, and military draftees. Both private slaves and free population were subject to corvee labor. One important industry in which slave labor was extensively used was mining, where conditions of work were difficult and dangerous; many prisoners of war were used for this purpose. In Seleucid time the sale of private slaves frequently required that the slave had already performed the state corvee demanded of him.

Now, one of the important developments of the Hellenistic age was the fusing of the Shemitic (or Semitic) and the Aryan cultures together and the emphasis on the material world. The cults of the ancient Mesopotamian goddess Nanai (or Nane) and the Iranian Anahita became popular far and wide. And in Armenia both Nane and Anahita were identified by Artemis, and yet separate temples existed for Anahita and Nane. The cult of Heracles was known in Armenia as that of Vahagu, prototype of Iranian Verethraghna, later Bahram; in Bactria he was identified with Shiva (the Destroyer).

And as more and more people deviated from the true worship of the Wise Lord and the Lord God of Israel, the more miserable and sorrowful they became; and thereby found escape into mysticism, magic, numerology; but nowhere could the release be found. Spiritual decay and soul-sickness prevailed everywhere, and the degenerative forces of Seleucid rule now could be seen with the naked eye. As a result, in desperation they began to seek a savior who could save and redeem them from their fallen state; and savior cults abounded everywhere, without much success. The Zoroastran cult of Mithra and a similar counterpart of Mithras of the Roman empire became a vehicle of the Lord's true religion. And the western Mithras was a savior god in an era of savior gods. Thus, circa 247/246 B.C., the Greco-Bactrians ruling north of the Hindu Kush mountains, proclaimed their independence of the Seleucid rule under Diodotus I, at about the same time as did the Parthians.

Soon most of eastern Iran broke away from the Seleucids at the beginning of the reign of Seleucus II, who had developed political animosity toward Ptolemy in the west. At this time the satrap (shatrapāvan), or governor of the province, was Andragorus (Andragoras), who minted coins for the empire; he too revolted against the Seleucid rule. However, he did not last long, but yielded to Arshak or Arsaces; and with him began the dynasty of the Parthians, which lasted from circa 247/246 B.C. until about 37/36 A.D. (Then continued with another line of Vardanes and Gotarzes, until about 227 A.D. After these began the Sasanian kings, with Papak circa 208 A.D.; and Shapur circa 240 A.D.) This is the partial genealogy of the Arshak or Arsacid kings, the Parthians, rounded off to the nearest year:

Now, with the preceding background into the great contributions of the holy priesthoods of the Medo-Persians, Elamites and Arpachshadites, or the Aryans, and the Indians; let us now turn our attention to the history and priesthood of the Jews, from where we left off; from the time of Zerubbabel son of Pedaiah, the son-in-law of Shealtiel, whose Babylonian name was Sheshbazzar. He was appointed by Cyrus II son of Cambyses I, as the first governor of the repatriated Jews. After the liberation from Babylonian exile, Zerubbabel in 537 B.C. led a Jewish remnant back to Jerusalem and Judah.

As the governor, he had been entrusted with the sacred gold and silver vessels of the Jerusalem temple, which years earlier were carried away by Nebuchadnezzar. At Jerusalem, under the supervision of Zerubbabel and High Priest Jeshua, the temple altar was erected in the seventh month of Ethanim (or Tishri). And in the second month of the second year, Ziv or Iyyar, 536 B.C., the actual reconstruction of the temple began. But the motives of the non-Jews hindered the progress; for they also wickedly sought a share in the rebuilding work. And Zerubbabel, Jeshua, and heads of the paternal houses of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the Lord God of Israel, as King Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us. Nevertheless, these non-Jews continued to dishearten the temple rebuilders; and finally succeeded in placing an official ban on the work. Later, stirred up by the words of prophets Haggai and Zechariah, Zerubbabel and the high priest disregarded the ban, and courageously resumed the work. Thereupon an investigation into the Persian archives vindicated the legality of their work. And prophets Haggai and Zechariah continued to encourage Zerubbabel, strengthening him, and assuring him of divine favor. Finally, in 516/515 B.C. the temple was completed; and the Levites, the singers and gatekeepers, began to receive their daily portion.

In 468 B.C., sixty-nine years after the return of the Jewish remnant from Babylon under Zerubbabel, the Persian king Artaxerxes I Longimanus (Artakhsharsha) granted Ezra all his request concerning going to Jerusalem and advancing pure worship there. And the king issued a decree proclaiming liberty to Israelites throughout the realm, to return with Ezra to Jerusalem of their own free will, any one who so desired. But many Jews had become prosperous in Babylon, and were well-settled there, and would not. Also they were afraid, for they had heard of those who returned with Zerubbabel that Jerusalem was sparsely populated, and poverty was everywhere; walls were still unfinished, and huge gaps were left in them, where the gates had been burned. Although the temple was rebuilt, it lacked the furniture and glory of the past.

Nevertheless, some fifteen hundred men and their families were found willing and able to go with Ezra; and the Lord provided much assistance to those that went with him. King Artaxerxes Longimanus and his seven counsellors made voluntary contributions to buy sacrificial animals and their grain and drink offerings. In addition, Ezra was given the authority by the king to use the surplus revenue of his district of Babylon; and if extra assistance was needed, it was to be drawn from the king's treasury; and the provincial treasuries beyond the river Euphrates were informed that Ezra could request of them silver, wheat, wine, and oil, up to a certain amount, and salt without limit; and that his request should be granted promptly. And all the vessels and ornaments of the temple were to be delivered to Jerusalem.

Ezra was an Aaronic priest, a descendant of Eleazar though his son Phinehas. He was a learned scribe (or copyist) of the law of Moses, and keeper of royal and holy records which began during the time of Darius, when he was appointed king of Babylonia. In the selfsame year, 539 B.C., Cyrus, a coregent of Darius' father Vishtaspa or Ahasuerus, was crowned king of Persia. Thereafter the first year of Darius and of Cyrus were reckoned to be one and the same. Ezra was a grandson of Seraiah the high priest, who was counted among the martyred, when the host of Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem in 607 B.C., and many were slain at Riblah. Although Ezra was born in Babylon, his father's name was not included in genealogy, because he was not a high priest.

when the ruins became too extensive, he dismounted and continued on foot. After completing the survey, Nehemiah revealed his plan to the Jews, drawing to their attention Jehovah's hand in the matter. Encouraged by the Spirit, they responded, Let us rise up, and build; and they strengthened their hands for this good work. But the non-Jews laughed and mocked, and hindered the work. Regardless of their opposition, the repair work of the walls of Jerusalem began on or about the fourth day of the fifth month of Ab. And when the wall reached half its height, their opposition turned into bitter animosity and conspiracy to fight against Jerusalem. But Nehemiah remained steadfast in his resolve to finish the task, and prayerfully relied on the Lord his God. After several obstacles the repair work was successfully completed on the 25th day of the sixth month of Elul, 455 B.C., fifty-two days after the construction began.

After this, Nehemiah directed his attention to the work of organizing the temple servants. Then he appointed two men in command of the city, one being his brother Hanani; and also gave instructions regarding the opening, closing, and guarding of the city gates. At this time Jerusalem's population was quite small, but the city was considered wide and great. Following the public reading of the Torah, and celebrations in the public square that was before the Water Gate, on the East side of the city, arrangements were made to build up the city's population by bringing in one Israelite out of every ten to dwell there. This was by casting lots, but there were volunteers also. A spiritual cleansing work was undertaken to put the city's population on the solid foundation of true worship.

Nehemiah's governorship lasted twelve years or more; and included a return trip to Shushan the palace, to the court of Artaxerxes Longimanus; and the rigid rooting out of the apostates in Jerusalem. This was circa 443 B.C. When he had returned to Jerusalem, he found deplorable conditions among the Jews; Eliashib the high priest had made a dining hall in the courtyard of the temple for the use of Tobiah, the man who opposed the work of Nehemiah. Immediately Nehemiah took action; and threw away all of Tobiah's furniture outside the dining hall, and had the dining hall cleansed and sanctified.

Now, besides Ezra the Aaronic priest, and Nehemiah the cup-bearer to the king, there was a prophet of the Lord called Malachi, who had left his words for posterity, according to the endless works of the kingdom of God. The conditions in Jerusalem became so deplorable, that the priests began to accept lame, blind, and sick animals for sacrifice on Jehovah's altar. And they completely ignored giving proper guidance and instruction to the people, causing many to stumble. And when judging matters, they showed partiality, and took bribes; bringing chaos and confusion in Israel. As a result, the Israelites did not support the temple by paying their tithes. And for they had fallen from their devotion to their Lord, every blessing turned into a curse. Divorces became common, with false beliefs and false gods; the substance was replace by shadows and passing pleasures, as life was replaced by death. Also sorcery, adultery, lying, fraud and oppression became common among the Israelites. And through the prophet Malachi, the Lord revealed his coming to his temple for judgement.

Now these are the accounts of Ezra and Nehemiah, and the words of Malachi:

ACCOUNT OF EZRA

(A priest and scribe of the Lord, circa 468-460 B.C.)

Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, as coregent with Ahasuerus, king of the Lands, until 539 B.C., that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying: Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? His God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the Lord God of Israel. He is the God, which is in Jerusalem. And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside the freewill offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose Spirit God had raised, to go up to build the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem. And all they that were about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was willingly offered. Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods. Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath (Mithradas) the treasurer, and numbered them unto Sheshbazzar (Zerubbabel), the prince of Judah.

And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives; thirty basins of gold; silver basins of a second sort four hundred and ten; and other vessels a thousand. All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred. All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of the captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

Now these are the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon; and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, which came with Zerubbabel (or Sheshbazzar): Jeshua, Nehemiah, Seraiah, Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispar, Bigvai, Rehum, Baanah. The Nethinim:
The children of Ziha, the children of Hasupha, the children of Tabbaoth, the children of Keros, the children of Siaha, the children of Padon, the children of Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub, the children of Hagab, the children of Shalmai, the children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of Paseah, the children of Besai, the children of Asnah, the children of Mehunim, the children of Nephusim, the children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur, the children of Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, the children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of Thamah, the children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha. The children of Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Peruda, the children of Jaalah, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, the children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of Ami.
All the Nethinim, the children of Solomon's servants, were, 392

And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, Tel-harsa, Cherub, Addan, and Immer; but they could not shew their father's house, and their seed, whether they were of Israel: the children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, 652

And of the children of the priests, Levites, and singers: and the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz: the children of Barzillai, which took a wife of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite, and were called after his name. These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but they were not found: therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood: and the Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim. 12,542

The whole congregation together was, 42,360

Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were 7,337: and there were among them 200 singing men and singing women. Their horses were 736: their mules, 245: their camels, 435: their asses, 6,720. And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the Lord which is at Jerusalem, offered freely for the house of God, to set it up in his place; they gave after their ability unto the treasure of the work threescore and one thousand (61,000) drams of gold, and five thousand pounds of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.

So the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinim, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

And when the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem. Then stood up Jeshua the son of Jozadak (Jehozadak) and his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel; to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is written in the law of Moses the man of God. And they set the altar upon its bases; for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries. And they offered burnt offerings thereon unto the Lord, even burnt offerings morning and evening. They kept also the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the daily burnt offerings by number, according to the custom, as the duty of every day required. And afterward offered the continual burnt offering; both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the Lord that were consecrated; and of every one that willingly offered a freewill offering unto the Lord.

From the first day of the seventh month (1 Tishri, 537 B.C.) began they to offer burnt offerings unto the Lord. But the foundation of the temple of the Lord was not yet laid. They gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre; to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa, according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the Lord. Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of Judah; together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God; the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the Lord, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the Lord, after the ordinance of David king of Israel. And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the Lord; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid. But many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy. So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people; for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

Now when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the children of the captivity were building the temple unto the Lord God of Israel; then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, Let us build with you. For we seek your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of Esar-haddon king of Assur, which brought us up hither. But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the Lord God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us. Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building; and hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of kings of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of kings of Persia; and in the reign of Ahasuerus (king of kings of Persia) in the beginning of his reign, wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem. And again in the days of Artaxerxes (474-424 B.C.) wrote Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in the Syrian (Aramaic) tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue. Rehum the chancellor and Shimshai the scribe wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort; then signed Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their companions; the Dinaites, the Apharsathchites (Apharsachites), the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the Elamites; and the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnappar brought over; and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river (Euphrates), and at such a time.

This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king: Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time. Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the rebellious and the bad city, and have set up the walls thereof, and joined the foundations. Be it known now unto the king, that, if this city be builded, and the walls set up again; then will they not pay toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the revenue of the kings. Now because we have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king, that search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers; so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city; and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have moved sedition within the same of old time; for which cause was this city destroyed. We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river: Peace, and at such a time. The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me. And I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city of old time hath made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein. There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries beyond the river; and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them. Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me. Take heed now that ye fail not to do this; why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease by force and power. Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia (in 521/20 B.C. Then the prophets, Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo, prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them. Then rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem; and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

At the same time came to them Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, Who hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall? Then said we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that make this building? But the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius, son of Vishtaspa, and then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king. They sent a letter unto him, wherein was written thus: Unto Darius the king, all peace. Be it known unto the king, that we went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is builded with great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands. Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls? We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them. And thus they returned us answer, saying, We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, which a great king of Israel builded and set up. But after our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon. But in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God. And the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was Sheshbazzar, whom he had made governor. And he said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in its place. Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem; and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished. Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

Then Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls (office of archives) where the treasures were laid up in Babylon. And there was found at Achmetha (Ecbatana, Hagmatana), in the palace that is in the province of the Medes a roll, which was filed away in the house of records; therein was a record thus written:

> In the first year of Cyrus the king the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits, with three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber; and let the expenses be given out of the king's house. And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.
> Now therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence. Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in its place. Moreover I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews for the building of this house of God; that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expenses be given unto these men, that they be not hindered. And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail; that they may offer sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons. Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, let him be hanged thereon; and let his house be made a dunghill for this. And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there destroy all kings and people, that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with speed.

Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily. And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded, and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius; and Artaxerxes king of Persia (in my day). And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius king of Persia (517/16 B.C.).

Ezra Reads the Law

And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy. And offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin offering for all Israel, twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; as it is written in the book of Moses. And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first month. For the priests and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure; and killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves. And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the Lord God of Israel, did eat. And kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy; for the Lord had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them; to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

Now after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the son of Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah, the son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub; the son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth; the son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki; the son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest. This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the Lord God of Israel had given; and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the Lord his God upon him. And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinim, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king. And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king (1 Ab, 468 B.C.). For upon the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him. For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe; even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the Lord, and of his statutes to Israel: Artaxerxes, king of kings, unto Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace and at such a time. I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own freewill to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee. Forasmuch as thou art sent of the king, and of his seven counsellors, to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand; and to carry the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation is in Jerusalem; and all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the freewill offering of the people, and of the priests, offering willingly for the house of their God which is in Jerusalem; that thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat offerings and their drink offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God. The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem. And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasure house. And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily, unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred measures of wheat, and to an hundred baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and salt without measure.

Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven; for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons? Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinim, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them. And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God, that is in thine hand, set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and teach ye them that know them not. And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or to banishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.

Blessed be the Lord God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem; and hath extended mercy unto me (Ezra) before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened as the hand of the Lord my God was upon me; and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

These are now the chief of their fathers; and the genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king of kings of Persia. Of the sons of Phinehas, Gershom; of the sons of Ithamar, Daniel; of the sons of David, Hattush; of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of Pharosh, Zechariah; and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males an hundred and fifty. Of the sons of Pahath-moab, Elihoenai the son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males. Of the sons of Shechaniah, the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males. Of the sons also of Adin, Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males. And of the sons of Elam, Jeshaiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males. And of the sons of Shephatiah, Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males. Of the sons of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males. And of the sons of Shelomith, the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males. And of the sons of Bebai, Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males. And of the sons of Azgad, Johanan the son of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males. And of the last sons of Adonikam, whose names are these: Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them threescore males. Of the sons also of Bigvai, Uthai and Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Ahava; and there abode we in tents three days; and I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none of the sons of Levi. Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men; also for Joiarib and for Elnathan, men of understanding. And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia; and I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nethinim, at the place Casiphia; that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God. And by the good hand of our God upon us they brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen; and Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty; also of the Nethinim whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinim; all of them were expressed by name.

Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance. For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in our way; because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him. So we fasted and besought our God for this; and he was intreated of us.

Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them, and weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered. I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents, also twenty basins of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of fine copper, precious as gold. And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the Lord; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering unto the Lord God of your fathers. Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, the chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the Lord. So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God. Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month (12 Nisan, 468 B.C.), to go unto Jerusalem; and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

Now on the fourth day were the silver and the gold and the vessels weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites. By number and by weight of every one; and all the weight was written at that time. Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he goats for a sin offering; all this was a burnt offering unto the Lord. And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

Now when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons; so that the holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands. Yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass. And when I heard this thing, I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, and sat down astonished. Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the Lord my God, and said, O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God; for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens. Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day. And now for a little space grace hath been shewed from the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage. For we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

And now, O our God; what shall we say after this? For we have forsaken thy commandments, which thou hast commanded by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness. Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever; that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever. And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this; should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? Wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping? O Lord God of Israel, thou art righteous; for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day; behold, we are before thee in our trespasses; for we cannot stand before thee because of this.

Now when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men and women and children; for the people wept very sore. And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land; yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing. Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the law. Arise; for this matter belongeth unto thee; we also will be with thee; be of good courage, and do it. Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they should do according to this word. And they sware.

Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliashib; and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water; for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away. And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem. And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month (20 Chislev, 468 B.C.); and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of this matter, and for the great rain. And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel. Now therefore make confession unto the Lord God of your fathers, and do his pleasure; and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives. Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do. But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two; for we are many that have transgressed in this thing. Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.

Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah were employed about this matter; and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them. And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month (1 Tebeth) to examine the matter. And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month (1 Nisan 467 B.C.).

And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives; namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah. And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass. And of the sons of Immer; Hanani, and Zebadiah. And of the sons of Harim, Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uzziah. And of the sons of Pashur; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elasah. Also of the Levites; Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kelaiah (the same is Kelita), Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer.

Of the singers also, Eliashib; and of the porters, Shallum, and Telem, and Uri. Moreover of Israel; of the sons of Parosh, Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah. And of the sons of Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah. And of the sons of Zattu; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza. Of the sons also of Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai. And of the sons of Bani; Meshullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth. And of the sons of Pahath-moab; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh. And of the sons of Harim; Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah. Of the sons of Hashum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei. Of the sons of Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel, Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh, Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib, Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau, Bani, Binnui, Shimei, Shelemiah, Nathan, Adaiah, Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai, Azareel, Shelemiah, Shemariah, Shallum, Amariah, and Joseph. Of the sons of Nebo; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, Joel, and Benaiah. All these had taken strange wives; and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

ACCOUNT OF NEHEMIAH

(A governor, and rebuilder of Jerusalem's wall; cup-bearer to the king Artaxerxes Longimanus; circa 456/455-443 B.C.)

The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chislev, in the twentieth year (of Artaxerxes Longimanus, in 455 B.C.), as I was in Shushan the palace; that Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach; the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven, and said, I beseech thee, O Lord God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments. Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel and thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee; both I and my father's house have sinned. We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations; but if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there. Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand. O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's cupbearer.

And it was in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes (Longimanus) the king, that wine was before him; and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence. Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? This is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid, and said unto the king, Let the king live for ever; why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire? Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven. And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it. And the king said unto me, (the queen also sitting by him), For how long shall thy journey be? And when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time. Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah, and a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and the horsemen with me. When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel. So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days. And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem; neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon. And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire. Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool; but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass. Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned. And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire; come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach. Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? Will ye rebel against the king? Then answered I them, and said, The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will raise and build; but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

Then Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, and they builded the sheep gate; they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah they sanctified it, unto the tower of Hananeel. And next unto him builded the men of Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri. But the fish gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. And next unto them repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana. And next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put not their necks to the work of their Lord.

Moreover the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne of the governor on this side the river. Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries, and they fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall. And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem. And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house. And next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah. Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the other piece, and the tower of the furnaces. And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, the ruler of the other half part of Jerusalem, he and his daughters.

The valley gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung gate. But the dung gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. But the gate of the fountain repaired Shallun the son of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of Siloah by the king's garden; and unto the stairs that go down from the city of David. After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, the ruler of the half part of Beth-zur, unto the place over against the sepulchres of David, and to the pool that was made, and unto the house of the mighty. After him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabiah, the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part. After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah. And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of Mizpah; another piece over against the going up to the armoury at the turning of the wall. After him Baruch the son of Zabbai earnestly repaired the other piece, from the turning of the wall unto the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest. After him repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah the son of Koz another piece, from the door of the house of Eliashib even to the end of the house of Eliashib. And after him repaired the priests, the men of the plain. After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub over against their house. After him repaired Azariah the son of Maaseiah the son of Ananiah by his house. After him repaired Binnui the son of Henadad another piece, from the house of Azariah unto the turning of the wall, even unto the corner. Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house, that was by the court of the prison. After him Pedaiah the son of Parosh.

Moreover the Nethinim dwelt in Ophel, unto the place over against the water gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out. After them the Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel. From above the horse gate repaired the priests, every one over against his house. After them repaired Zadok the son of Immer over against his house. After him repaired also Shemaiah the son of Shechaniah, the keeper of the east gate. After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, another piece. After him repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber. After him repaired Malchiah the goldsmith's son unto the place of the Nethinim, and of the merchants, over against the gate Miphkad, and to the going up of the corner. And between the going up of the corner unto the sheep gate repaired the goldsmiths and the merchants.

But it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews. And he spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? Will they fortify themselves? Will they sacrifice? Will they make an end in a day? Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of rubbish which are burned? Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall. Hear, O our God; for we are despised; and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity. And cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee; for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders. So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof; for the people had a mind to work. But it came to pass, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth, and conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it. Nevertheless we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them. And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall. And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease. And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

Therefore set I in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their swords, their spears, and their bows. And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them; remember the Lord, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses. And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work. And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah. They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. For the builders, every one had his sword girded by his side, and so builded. And he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another. In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us; our God shall fight for us. So we laboured in the work; and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared. Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day. So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, saving that every one put them off for washing.

And there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews. For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many; therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live. Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth. There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards. Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children; and, lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already; neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards. And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words. Then I consulted with myself,and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them. And I said unto them, We after our ability have redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? Or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

Also I said, It is not good that ye do; ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies? I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn; I pray you, let us leave off this usury. Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them. Then said they, We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise. Also I shook my lap, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the Lord. And the people did according to this promise.

Moreover from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years (from 455-443 B.C.), I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor. But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels, of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people; but so did not I, because of the fear of God. Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall, neither bought we any land; and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work. Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers; beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us. Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine; yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people. Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

Now it came to pass, when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates); that Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief. And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down; why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you? Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner. Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an open letter in his hand; wherein was written, It is reported among the heathen, and Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel; for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words. And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah; and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together. Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart. For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple; for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee. And I said, Should such a man as I flee? And who is there, that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in. And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me; for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him. Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me. My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the sixth month Elul, in fifty and two days. And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes; for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God. Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them. For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah. Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my words to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

Now it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed; that I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem; for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many. And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them; and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house. Now the city was large and great; but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded. And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein, These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city, who came with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number of the men of the people of Israel was this:

These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found; therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood. And the Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pounds of silver. And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pounds of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

* Although the total shown by Ezra is the same, there are variations in categorical accounting; and as in the Book of Ezra, there are some unaccounted categories.

So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people; and the Nethinim, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel. And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding, upon the first day of the seventh month. And he read therein before the street that was before the water gate from the morning until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law. And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam. And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people, for he was above all the people; and when he opened it, all the people stood up. And Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands. And they bowed their heads, and worshipped the Lord with their faces to the ground. Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law; and the people stood in their place. So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

And Nehemiah, which is the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people; This day is holy unto the Lord your God, mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord; neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength. So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved. And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even to understand the words of the law. And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month (Tishri 15-21). And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and pine branches, and myrtle branches, and palm branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written. So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim. And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths; for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great gladness. Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

Now in the twenty and fourth day of this month the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, and earth upon them. And the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers. And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the Lord their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the Lord their God. Then stood up upon the stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the Lord their God. Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up and bless the Lord your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise. Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; thou hast made heaven; the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all; and the host of heaven worshippeth thee. Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of Abraham; and foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites; to give it to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous. And didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red Sea. And shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land; for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them. So didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day.

And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters. Moreover thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go. Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments. And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant. And gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should go in to possess the land which thou hadst sworn to give them.

But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments. And refused to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed a captain to return to their bondage; but thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful; slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not.

Yea, when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations; yet thou in thy manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness. The pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to shew them light, and the way wherein they should go. Thou gavest also thy good Spirit to instruct them, and withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst. Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing; their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not. Moreover thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into corners; so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan. Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven; and broughtest them into the land, concerning which thou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it. So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites; and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would.

And they took strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, wells digged, vineyards, and oliveyards, and fruit trees in abundance; so they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness. Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind their backs, and slew thy prophets which testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations. Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them; and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven. And according to thy manifold mercies thou gavest them saviors, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies. But after they had rest, they did evil again before thee. Therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them; yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies. And testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law; yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which if a man do, he shall live in them), and withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

Yet many years didst thou forbear them, and testifiedst against them by thy Spirit in thy prophets, yet would they not give ear; therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands. Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God. Now therefore, our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the trouble seem little before thee, that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day. Howbeit thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly. Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them. For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

Behold, we are servants this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers to eat the fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it. And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins; also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress. And because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, seal unto it.

Now those that sealed were: Nehemiah, the Tirshatha (provincial governor), the son of Hachaliah; and Zidkijah, Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah, Pashur, Amariah, Malchijah, Hattush, Shebaniah, Malluch, Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, Daniel, Ginnethon, Baruch, Beshullam, Abijah, Mijamin, Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah. These were the priests. And the Levites: Both Jeshua the son of Azaniah, Binnui of the sons of Henadad, Kadmiel; and their brethren, Shebaniah, Hodijah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, Micha, Rehob, Hashabiah, Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah, Hodijah, Bani, Beninu. The chief of the people: Parosh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zatthu, Bani, Bunni, Azgad, Bebai, Adonijah, Bigvai, Adin, Ater, Hizkijah, Azzur, Hodijah, Hashum, Bezai, Hariph, Anathoth, Nebai, Magpiash, Meshullam, Hezir, Meshezabeel, Zadok, Jaddua, Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah, Hoshea, Hananiah, Hashub, Hallohesh, Pileha, Shobek, Rehum, Hashabnah, Maaseiah, and Ahijah, Hanan, Anan, Malluch, Harim, Baanah.

And the rest of the people, the priests, the Levites, the porters, the singers, the Nethinim, and all they that had separated themselves from the people of the lands unto the law of God; their wives, their sons, and their daughters, every one having knowledge, and having understanding. They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and entered into a curse, and into an oath, to walk in God's law, which was given by Moses the servant of God; and to observe and do all the commandments of the Lord our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes. And that we would not give our daughters unto the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons. And if the people of the land bring ware or any victuals on the sabbath day to sell, that we would not buy it of them on the sabbath, or on the holy day; and that we would leave the seventh year, and the exaction of every debt. Also we made ordinances for us, to charge ourselves yearly with the third part of a shekel for the service of the house of our God. For the shewbread, and for the continual meat offering, and for the continual burnt offering, of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin offerings to make an atonement for Israel, and for all the work of the house of our God.

And we cast the lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people, for the wood offering, to bring it into the house of our God, after the houses of our fathers, at times appointed year by year, to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the law. And to bring the firstfruits of our ground, and the firstfruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the house of the Lord; also the firstborn of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written in the law, and the firstlings of our herds and of our flocks, to bring to the house of our God, unto the priests that minister in the house of our God. And that we should bring the firstfruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine and of oil, unto the priests, to the chambers of the house of our God; and the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage. And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, when the Levites take tithes; and the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the house of our God, to the chambers into the treasure house. For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers; and we will not forsake the house of our God.

And the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem; the rest of the people also cast lots, to bring one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities. And the people blessed all the men, that willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem. Now these are the chief of the province that dwelt in Jerusalem; but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit, Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the Nethinim, and the children of Solomon's servants. And at Jerusalem dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Judah, Athaiah the son of Uzziah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalaleel, of the children of Perez. And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of Col-hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of Shiloni. All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men. And these are the sons of Benjamin: Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah. And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight. And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer; and Judah the son of Senuah was second over the city. Of the priests, Jedaiah the son of Joiarib, Jehoiarib, and Jachin. Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was the ruler of the house of God. And their brethren that did the work of the house were eight hundred twenty and two; and Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah, and his brethren, chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two; and Amashai the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer, and their brethren, mighty men of valor, an hundred twenty and eight; and their overseer was Zabdiel, the son of one of the great men. Also of the Levites, Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni, and Shabbethai and Jozabad, of the chief of the Levites, had the oversight of the outward business of the house of God. And Mattaniah the son of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal to begin the thanksgiving in prayer; and Bakbukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda the son of Shammua, the son of Galal (Jalal), the son of Jeduthun. All the Levites in the holy city were two hundred fourscore and four. Moreover the porters, Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept the gates, were an hundred seventy and two.

And the residue of Israel, of the priests, and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance. But the Nethinim dwelt in Ophel; and Ziha and Gispa were over the Nethinim. The overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem was Uzzi the son of Bani, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, the singers were over the business of the house of God. For it was the king's commandment concerning them, that a certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day. And Pethahiah the son of Meshezabeel, of the children of Zerah the son of Judah, was at the king's hand in all matters concerning the people. And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at Kirjath-arba, and in the villages thereof; and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof; and at Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof; and at Jeshua, and at Moladah, and at Beth-phelet, and at Hazar-shual, and at Beer-sheba, and in the villages thereof, and at Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof; and at En-rimmon, and at Zareah, and at Jarmuth, Zanoah, Adullam, and in their villages; at Lachish, and the fields thereof; at Azekah, and in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-sheba unto the valley of Hinnom. The children also of Benjamin from Geba dwelt at Michmash, and Aija, and Beth-el, and in their villages, and at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat, Lod, and Ono, the valley of craftsmen. And of the Levites were divisions in Judah, and in Benjamin.

Now these are the priests and the Levites that went up with Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, Amariah, Malluch, Hattush, Shechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, Iddo, Ginnetho, Abijah, Miamin, Maadiah, Bilgah, Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah, Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests and of their brethren in the days of Jeshua. Moreover the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah; and Mattaniah, which was over the thanksgiving, he and his brethren. Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, were over against them in the watches. And Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada, and Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah; of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan; of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph; of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai; of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam; of Abijah, Zichri; of Miniamin, of Moadiah, Piltai; of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan; and of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi; of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber; of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

The Levites in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of Darius the king of Persia. The sons of Levi (the Al-Levi) the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib. And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David the man of God, ward over against ward. Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters keeping the ward, at the thresholds of the gates. These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness; both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps. And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi; also from the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth; for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem. And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall. Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung gate. And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah; and Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam, Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah, and certain of the priests' sons with trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph; and his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

And at the fountain gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water gate eastward. And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces even unto the broad wall. And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep gate; and they stood still in the prison gate. So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me. And the priests: Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets. And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer. Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced; for God had made them rejoice with great joy; the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the firstfruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions of the law for the priests and Levites. For Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that waited. And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son. For in the days of David and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God. And all Israel in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion. And they sanctified holy things unto the Levites; and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

On that day they read the book of Moses in the audience of the people; and therein was found written, that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever, because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them; howbeit our God turned the curse into a blessing. Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the mixed multitude. And before this, Eliashib the priest, having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was allied unto Tobiah; and he had prepared for him a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil; which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the offerings of the priests. But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem. For in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, came I to Babylon unto the king; and after certain days obtained I leave of the king. And I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God. And it grieved me sore; therefore I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber. Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat offering and the frankincense.

And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them; for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field. Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn and the new wine and the oil unto the treasuries. And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and of the Levites, Pedaiah, and next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah; for they were counted faithful, and their office was to distribute unto their brethren. Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the offices thereof.

In those days saw I in Judah some treading wine presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath day. And I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem. Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath day? Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? Yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath. And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath. And some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath day. So the merchants and sellers of all kind of ware lodged without Jerusalem once or twice. Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye about the wall? If ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath. And I commanded the Levites that they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.

In those days also saw I Jews that had married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab. And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of each people. And I contended with them, and cursed them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their hair, and made them swear by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves. Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? Yet among many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God; and God made him king over all Israel. Nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin. Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives? And one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanballat the Horonite; therefore I chased him from me. Remember them, O my God, because they have defiled the priesthood; and the covenant of the priesthood, and of the Levites. Thus cleansed I them from all strangers, and appointed the wards of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business; and for the wood offering, at times appointed, and for the firstfruits. Remember me, O my God, for good.

WORDS OF MALACHI

(Prophet of the Lord; after 443 B.C.)

The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel by Malachi. I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord; yet I loved Jacob, and I was displeased with Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness. Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the Lord of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them, The border of wickedness, and, The people against whom the Lord hath indignation for ever. And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, The Lord will be magnified from the border of Israel.

A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master; if then I be a father, where is mine honor? And if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the Lord of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And you say, Wherein have we despised thy name? Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? And if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? Offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the Lord of hosts. And now, I pray you, beseech God that he will be gracious unto us; this hath been by your means; will he regard your persons? saith the Lord of hosts. Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? Neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought. I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand. For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering; for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye have profaned it, in that ye say, The table of the Lord is polluted; and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible. Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! And he have snuffed at it, saith the Lord of hosts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering; should I accept this of your hand? saith the Lord. But cursed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing; for I am a great King, saith the Lord of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

And now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you. If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the Lord of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart. Behold, I will corrupt your seed, and spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts; and one shall take you away with it. And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you that my covenant might be with Levi (promise of restoring the Melchizedek priesthood), saith the Lord of Hosts. My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name. The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips; he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth; for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts. But ye are departed out of the way; ye have caused many to stumble at the law; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the Lord of hosts. Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law. Have we not all one father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god. The Lord will cut off the man that doeth this, the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the Lord of hosts. And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand. Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth; against whom thou hast dealt treacherously; yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant. And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth. For the Lord, the God of Israel, saith that he despiseth putting away (divorce); for one covereth violence with his garment, saith the Lord of hosts; therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not treacherously. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the Lord, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?

Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth? For he is like refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap; and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years. And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless; and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts.

For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed. Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts. Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee? Ye have said, It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts? And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.

After Ezra, Nehemiah, and Malachi, no major developments took place among the Jews of Palestine for over four hundred years. The walls which had been built by Nehemiah have been breeched many a time, and extended more than once to take new territory into Jerusalem. Although the prospects of capturing the past glory looked bright in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah, the Lord's plan would not permit it to materialize. During the period which followed, the Jews not burdened with the responsibility of government and temporal affairs, devoted themselves to much study and learning of the scriptures; and many became fanatically religious. Out of these emerged the so-called Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenes, zealots and other groups of great political and Spiritual influence. And eventually the leaders of these parties began to dictate the religious policy of the Jewish people; and their writings were fast supplanting the Word of God itself.

Teaching Scribe

The teaching scribes, who originally copied the scriptures, began to be looked at as interpreters, or doctors of Torah. And, in truth, for they did copy the Law by hand so many times that they became more familiar with the letter of the law than anyone else, including many Aaronic priests and the royalty. But they seldom understood the Spirit of the law of Moses; and other scriptures besides the law of Moses they knew not. There came a time when such teaching scribes became emotional commentators and dictators.

The party of Pharisees was a dominant power. They were enemies of everything not Jewish. They adhered to the letter of the law to the extent that they neglected also the Spirit of it. They claimed that there was an oral law, as well as the written law of Moses; and that they were the sole possessors and interpreters of it. And because of this double-mindedness, they were called the hypocrites or the Druj. The Pharisees exercised such great power over the multitude, that anything they said against the king or the high priest, was believed. But the best of the Pharisees were of the Medo-Persian-Elamite, or the Aryan ancestry. They believed that the Soul has an Immortal vigor in it; and that there will be a reward or punishment according to the way one lives virtuously or wickedly. And that there is a spirit prison in which the wicked are detained, but the virtuous or righteous shall have the power to revive and live again. They also believed that the Soul or the Fravashi or the Higher Self is incorruptible, and is resurrected into other bodies; but the souls of the wicked are subject to eternal torment and misery. The Pharisees ascribed all to fate or providence, and to God; and although fate does cooperate in every action, man has the God-given gift of agency, the power to choose right from wrong.

Some of these Pharisees fasted twice a week, and tithed generously; and did not agree with the Sadducees that there is no resurrection, no angels, no Spirits. They obeyed rigidly prescribed rituals, ablutions and ceremonies. (In Jesus' time while they opposed him to test and prove him, such ones of the Sanhedrin as Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea,

Single-minded Pharisees

A painting of a Sadducee

The Sadducees were a small aristocratic and wealthy party. They denied the inspiration of the Scriptures; and did not believe in the resurrection, angels, or Spirits. Although they accepted the writings of Moses as their law, they were opposed to the Pharisees, and their beliefs.

And it came to pass, that circa 175 B.C., Antiochus Epiphanes became the king of Syria, and had determined to stamp out the religion of the Jews. Thereupon the Hasmonean family of Jewish patriots, commonly known as the Maccabees, led or ruled Judea from circa 167 B.C. to 37 B.C. The name Maccabaeus was at first exclusively the surname of Judah (or Judas) son of Mattathias; but later it came to be referred to his followers and descendants. In Jewish tradition, the word consists of the initial letters of the Hebrew words in the phrase: Who is like unto Thee, O Lord, among gods? the motto of this Judah's army; but it also meant hammerer (or zealot).

Initially Mattathias, a priest of Modin, and his five sons, Johanan (or John), Simon, Judah (or Judas), Eleazar, and Jonathan, led the struggle for religious freedom against the forces of the Syrian ruler and Soul-corrupting influences of Hellenism. For Antiochus IV Epiphanes was determined to Hellenize Judea. At first he was quite successful, owing partly to the Hellenizing movement among the Jews themselves; and altars were erected to Zeus in many parts of the Holy Land. Resistance began at Modin, a town near Beth-horon; where an aged Aaronic priest named Mattathias of the family of Hasmon (or Chasmon) in his zeal slew the sacrificers and the king's officers under whose direction the altar had been erected there.

Then Mattathias cried throughout the city with a loud voice, saying: Whosoever is zealous of the law, and maintaineth covenant, let him follow me! So he and his sons fled into the mountains and left all their possessions in the city. And many who sought justice and judgement went also into the wilderness to dwell there; and they took with them their wives and children and cattle, because afflictions increased sore upon them. And when it was told the king's servants and host that were in Jerusalem, in the city of David, that certain men who had broken the king's decree were gone into the secret places in the wilderness, they pursued after them in a large number, and made war against them on the sabbath day. Thousands were slain, for the Jews would not fight on their holy day of the week. Afterwards the zealots decided to disregard the sabbath rule and, if necessary, to fight in self-defense.

After the death of Mattathias, his son Judah Maccabaeus became the leader. He was a good strategist; and after several victories were gained, Antiochus was defeated. The desecrated altar was pulled down, and a new altar was dedicated, and the temple was cleansed, with great rejoicing in 165 B.C. But in the selfsame year a large Syrian army under Lysias invaded Palestine, and the war continued with varying success. Then in 161/160 B.C. Judah died in battle, and was succeeded by his brother Jonathan, who was murdered in 144 B.C. Then Simon his brother became the leader of the Jewish zealots. Under Simon the Holy Land became more prosperous than at any other time after the Babylonian exile. The Jews, in gratitude, put up in the temple a memorial tablet to Simon and his family; and appointed him governor and high priest forever, until there shall arise a faithful prophet.

In 135 B.C. Simon was murdered by his son-in-law Ptolemy; and his son John Hyrcanus became high priest of the Aaronic order. John Hyrcanus defeated Ptolemy and assumed power. His reign, which lasted from 135 B.C. to 104 B.C., was marked by continued prosperity, and territorial expansion; and by growing conflicts between the Pharisees and the Sadducees. He also built the fortress in Jerusalem, which later came to be known as the castle Antonia, and destroyed the Samaritan temple on Mount Gerizim. After his death, Aristobulus became the ruler, and the position of the Maccabees began to decline. Aristobulus reigned for one year, and was followed by Alexander Jannaeus and his widow Salome Alexandra. Thereafter, Alexandra's son John Hyrcanus II and Aristobulus

II vied for the throne; and both sought Pompey's intercession. Roman intercession into Judean affairs ultimately led to Judea's loss of independence. Antigonas, the son of Aristobulus, was the last ruler of the Hasmonean or Maccabean line. After his execution in 37 B.C., Herod, who had been recognized as king of Judea by Rome in 40/39 B.C., became the official ruler. But the Maccabean dynasty ended circa 38 B.C., when Mariamne, a Maccabean princess, was given in marriage to Herod, into the Herodian family of powerful adversaries. Later Herod (the Great) had his wife Mariamne, her brother, her mother, and grandmother killed; then twenty years later he murdered her two sons. Thus the Maccabean line was wiped out. And a few days before his death, Herod had a large number of the most prominent citizens of Judah cast into prison, to be slain on the day of his death, so that there would be great mourning on that day.

Herod succeeded his father Antipater or Antipas about 39 B.C., and was made king of Judea by appointment of the Roman senate; but he was not able to establish himself until three years later when he took Jerusalem and deposed Antigonus, son of Aristobulus. This Herod, the second son of Antipater by his wife Cypros, who is commonly known as Herod the Great, was an unscrupulous, crafty, suspicious, immoral, cruel, murderous, and fully deluded man. He was a man of rough nature, having skill in horsemanship and in the use of javelin and bow. But most importantly, he was a great builder; and thus he was known as Herod the Great. He first distinguished himself as a governor of Galilee by ridding his territory of robber bands. Then certain of the Jews and mothers of the slain robbers stirred up Hyrcanus II, the high priest, to summon Herod before the Sanhedrin, on the charge that he executed the robbers, instead of bringing them first to trial. When Herod appeared before the Sanhedrin, he was disrespectful, proud, and haughty, and came with his bodyguards. For this insult to the Jewish high court, he incurred the anger of the judges. One judge Simeon (or Sameas) stood up and spoke, saying, If Herod escaped punishment, he would in time kill those sitting in judgement there. But Hyrcanus II, a passive and weak-willed man was pressured by Herod and his men, along with a letter from Sextus Caesar, a relative of Julius Caesar and president of Syria, threatening Hyrcanus if he did not dismiss the charges.

Herod Antipas

Then Herod poisoned the mind of Mark Antony of Rome to kill Antigonus, and sought out principal members of Antigonus' party, and put them to death, forty-five men altogether. Thus the words of Simeon the judge were fulfilled, by Herod's slaughtering those who sat in judgement upon him. First he supported Julius Caesar, being a close friend of Sextus, then joined himself with Caesar's assassin Cassius. And he was able to gain favor of Mark Antony, enemy of Cassius and the avenger of Caesar, by means of bribes and intrigues. Later, when Augustus Caesar, or Octavius defeated Mark Antony at the battle of Actium, Herod shrewdly secured Augustus' forgiveness for supporting Antony; and thereafter retained the friendship of Augustus. Through bribes and smoothness of speech, he had won the favors of the Caesars of Rome; therefore, Herod always won out when complaints or charges were brought against him to Rome, by the Jews and others, including the members of his own household.

Herod's first dominion was the governorship of Galilee; later, through Mark Antony's recommendation the Roman senate made him king of Judea. To this emperor Augustus Caesar now added Samaria, Gadara, Gaza, and Joppa; then the regions of Trachonitis, Batanea, Auranitis, and Perea, an area beyond the Jordan; also Idumea was under his dominion.

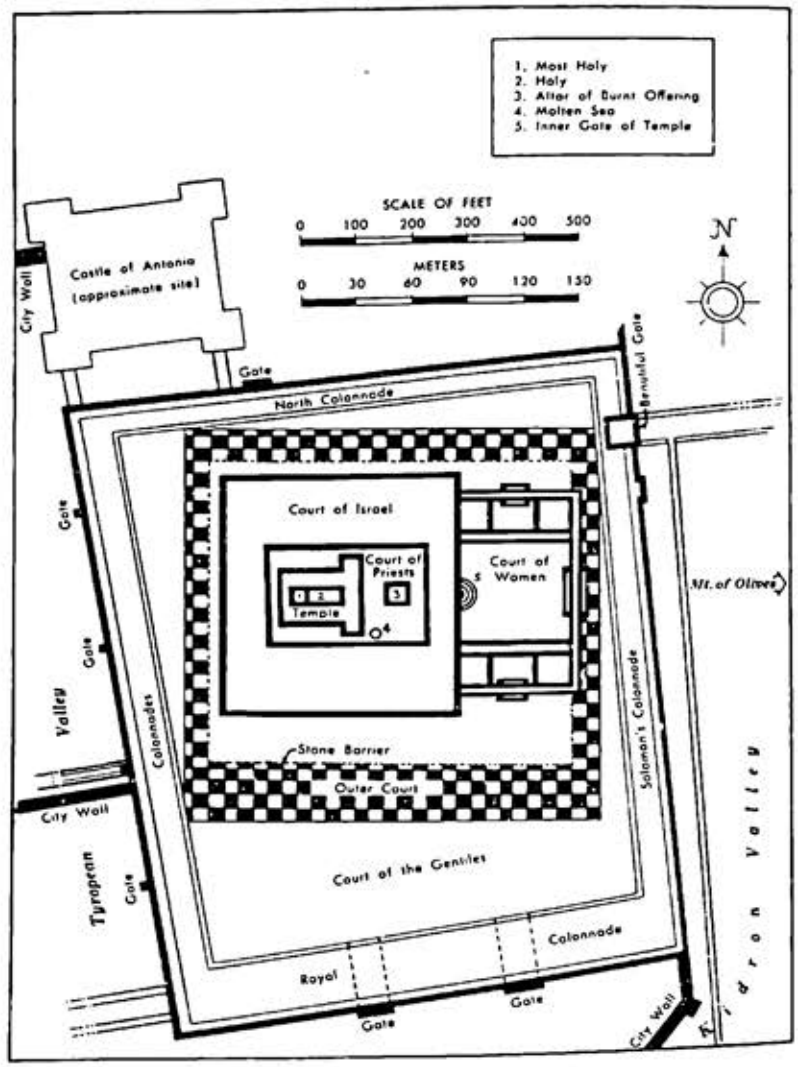
Herod himself was an Edomite, his family was of the Idumeans. They were nominally Jews, for the Idumeans had had circumcision forced upon them by the Maccabean ruler John Hyrcanus in 125 B.C. The progenitor of Herod was Antipater, whom Alexander Jannaeus, the Maccabean or Hasmonean king, had made governor of Idumea. Antipater's son, also called Antipater (or Antipas), was the father of Herod the great builder.

The building works under Herod included the construction of theaters, amphitheatres, hippodromes, citadels, fortresses, palaces, gardens, temples in honor of Caesar, aqueducts, monuments, new aqueducts and monuments; and also new cities. The new cities he named after himself, his kinsfolk, or the emperors of Rome. He built an artificial harbor at Caesarea that excelled the seaport of Tyre. Huge and great stones were laid in twenty fathoms of water to make a mote (as a breakwater) two hundred feet wide. He also reconstructed the fortress of Antonia and Masada, the latter being made most magnificent. And his building achievements spread far away, as far as Antioch in Syria and Rhodes. Herod was Jew in name alone, for his course of life was a complete denial of his claim of being a servant of Jehovah (Yehweh), the Lord.

Among Herod's building works, the rebuilding of the Jerusalem temple, which before was rebuilt under Zerubbabel in 516/515 B.C., was most noteworthy. The construction began in his eighteenth year, circa 22 B.C.; at a great cost, and was truly magnificent. But the Jews, due to their dislike and suspicion of Herod, would not permit him to tear down the existing temple. He, however, had to gather the building materials, and have them stockpiled near the construction site, before the demolition work could begin. The temple sanctuary was built in eighteen months, other main structures were erected in eight years; but the work continued on the complex of courts and other buildings until six years before its destruction in 70 A.D.

Now, the second temple was rebuilt under Zerubbabel, according to the decree of Cyrus; its height being sixty cubits (about 87.5 feet); and its width sixty cubits; with three rows of great stones, and one row of timbers. But it did not contain the Ark of the Covenant, and there was one lampstand instead of the ten that were in Solomon's. The altar of burnt offering was of stone, which in Solomon's temple was of copper. It was this altar which was desecrated (or defiled) by king Antiochus Epiphanes in about 168 B.C., and was rebuilt with new stones under the direction of Judah (or Judas) Maccabaeus. The temple also contained dining rooms, store rooms, roof chambers, and other associated buildings.

Herod's construction work began in the eighteenth year after he was appointed king of Judea by the Roman senate, and in the fifteenth year after he took the city of Jerusalem. He was appointed king circa 39 B.C.; and he took Jerusalem circa 36 B.C.



Grand plan of Herod's Temple.
The construction began circa 22 B.C.; and continued until six years before the Temple's destruction in 70 A.D.

The size of the temple area was doubled in this third temple, after Solomon's and Zerubbabel's, building up the sides of Mount Moriah with great stone walls and leveling off an area 400 cubits square on the top of the mountain. The colonnades were on the outer edge of the area. The temple faced the East, as did the other two; and along this side was the colonnade of Solomon, consisting of three columns of marble pillars. In the North and West were also colonnades, dwarfed by the Royal Colonnade on the South, consisting of four rows of Corinthian pillars, a total of 162 pillars, with three aisles. The circumference of these huge pillars was so great that it took three men with outstretched arms to reach around one of them; and they stood much higher than those of the other colonnades. There were eight to ten gates leading into the temple area; four or five on the West side, two or three on the South; and one each on East and North. The first court or the Court of the Gentiles served as a thoroughfare, through which travellers passed in large number, rather than going around the temple area.

The large area of the Court of the Gentiles was surrounded by the colonnades. Here the Gentiles were permitted to enter. There were several courts from which the worshipper of the Lord proceeded to the central building, the Temple or the Sanctuary. Each succeeding court was of a higher degree of sanctity. Passing through the Court of the Gentiles, one had to pass a wall three cubits (about 4.4 feet) high, with openings through which one could pass. On its top were large stones upon which were inscribed the warning signs in Greek and Latin: Let no foreigner enter inside the barrier and the fence around the sanctuary. Whosoever is caught will be the cause of death following as a penalty upon himself.

The Court of Women was fourteen steps higher. Here women could enter for worship; and deposit their alms or tithings in the treasure chests, which were placed there for this purpose. Then fifteen large semicircular steps led up to the Court of Israel; against the outside wall of this court were storage chambers. Here men who were baptized or ceremonially clean could enter. Then was the Court of Priests, which resembled the courtyard of the ancient tabernacle of Moses' time. In it was the altar, built of unhewn stones, thirty-two cubits (about 46.7 feet) square at the base, which was enlarged later. The priests reached the altar by an inclined plane. Facilities for washings and ablutions were also in this court; and around it also were various buildings.

The main temple building consisted, as in the past, of the Holy and the Most Holy compartments. The floor of the building was twelve steps above the Court of Priests. The entrance was closed by golden doors, fifty-five cubits (about 80 feet) high and sixteen cubits (about 23 feet) wide. The front of the building was wider than the back, having 'wings' or 'shoulders' that extended out twenty cubits on each side. The inside of the Holy Place was forty cubits (c.58 feet) long and twenty cubits (c.29 feet) wide; and forty cubits high. There was an upper chamber over both the Holy and the Most Holy places.

In the Holy Place there were the lampstand, the table of shewbread, and the altar of incense, all of gold. The entrace to the Most Holy was a beautifully embroidered and ornamented thick curtain (or veil). In place of the Ark, however, now there was a stone slab upon which the high priest sprinkled blood on the day of atonement. This compartment was twenty cubits long and twenty cubits wide. (At the time of Jesus' death this self-same curtain was torn in two from top to bottom, exposing the Most Holy without the Ark.)

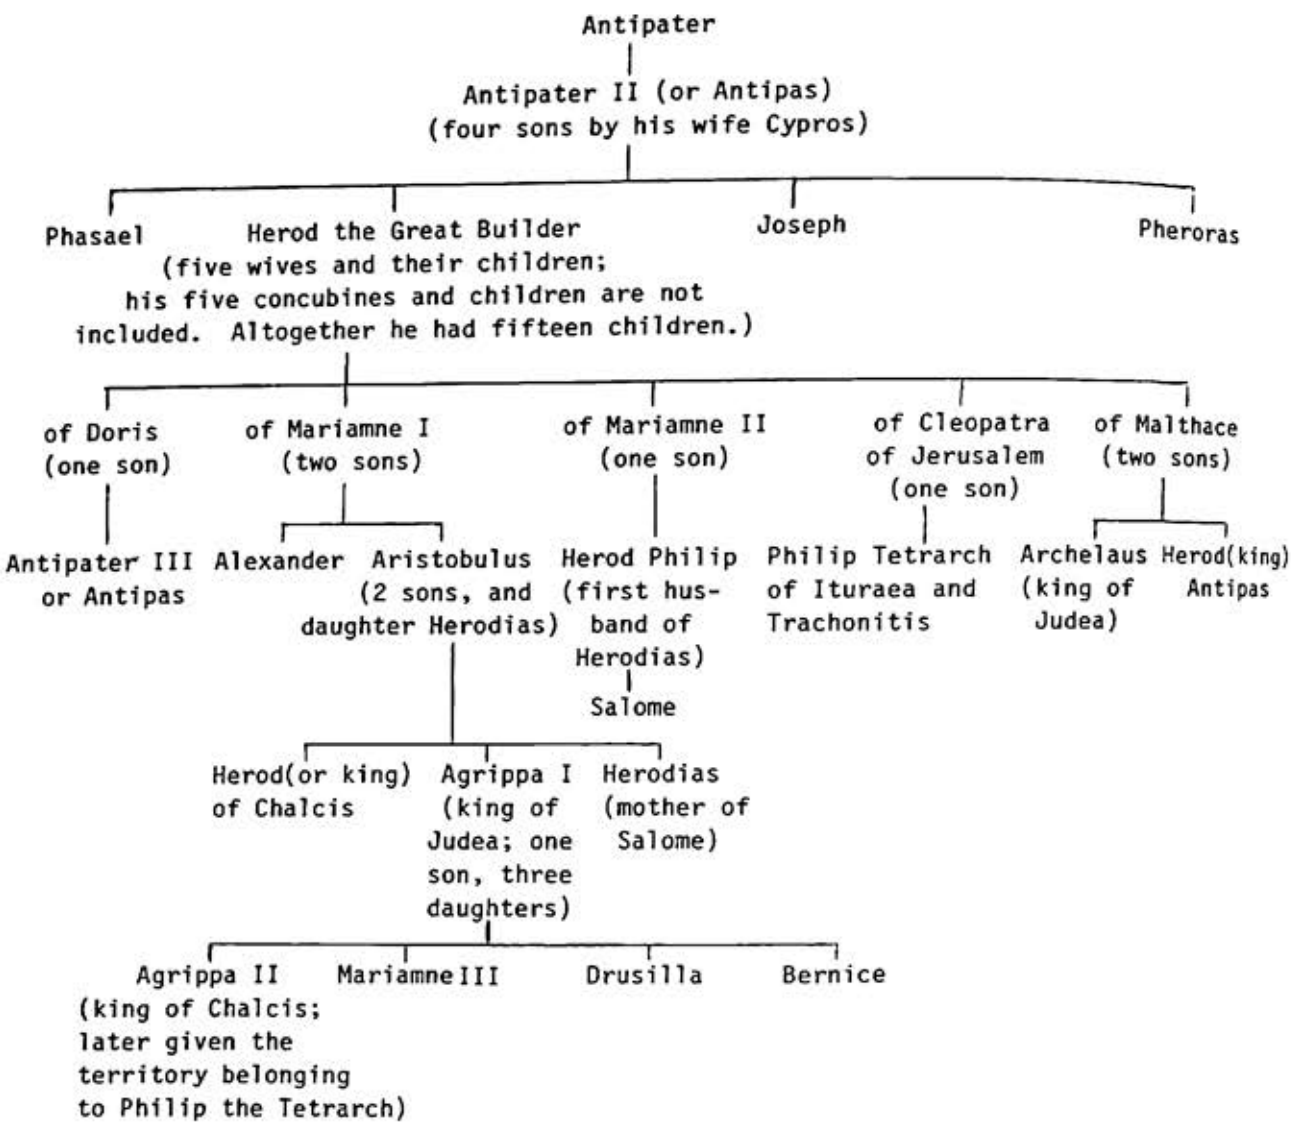
When Herod died after the birth of Jesus, he was afflicted with loathsome disease accompanied by fever; an intolerable itching over all his body, continual pains in the colon, and dropsical tumors about his feet, inflammation of the abdomen, putrefaction of his privy member that produced worms, difficulty in breathing, and other pains and discomforts.

This is a partial genealogy of the Herods, beginning from Antipater, who was made governor of Idumea (Edom) by the Maccabean king Alexander Jannaeus:



And it came to pass, that in the selfsame temple which was built by Herod son of Antipater II, there was a certain Aaronic priest named Zechariah (or Zacharias). He was assigned to the lot of Abijah (Abia), the eighth lot, in the service of the house of God, caretaker and governor of the sanctuary. And Zechariah was married to Elizabeth, one of the daughters of the house of Aaron, and dwelt in Ain Kairim, in the Judean hill country; less than five miles from Jerusalem and some seventy miles south of Nazareth. They were both righteous in the sight of God, and walked in all the ordinances and statutes of the Lord. They had no children, for Elizabeth was barren, and both were well stricken in years. And as he went about performing his regular priestly duties in the order of his course, a multitude of people outside gathered together, and worshipped the Lord, as Zechariah burnt incense in the Holy compartment, in the east side; which contained the seven-branch candlestick, the table of shewbread, and the altar of incense. The space adjacent to the temple was called the Court of the Israelites; and it was in this court, just outside the temple building, that the people waited for Zechariah to appear. And as he was thus engaged in his service, there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of the altar of incense; and when Zechariah saw him he was troubled, and fear fell upon him. But the angel said unto him, Fear not Zechariah, for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife shall have a son, and thou shalt call his name John. And thou shalt have joy and gladness, and many shall rejoice at his birth; for he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink (meaning he will be a divinely blessed Nazarite). And he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb. And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God. And he shall go before the Lord in the Spirit and power of Elijah (or Elias), to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord (to prepare the way for the Son of God).

And Zechariah said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? For I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years. The angel answered, saying: I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God, and I am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings. Behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not be able to speak, until the day these things are fulfilled; for thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their appointed time.

Mount Moriah, upon which stands the Mosque of Omar, or Dome of the Rock, today.

The temple in which angel Gabriel appeared to Zechariah stood on Mount Moriah, on the same foundation upon which stood Solomon's temple, some thousand years before. Today, the Mosque of Omar, or Dome of the Rock, stands there. But in Zechariah's time it resembled a great mountain of snow. And the people who waited outside the temple for Zechariah marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple; and when he came out, he could not speak unto them. And they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple, for he beckoned unto them but remained speechless. When his assigned course of duties at the sanctuary was over, he returned to his house in Ain Kairim, in the Judean hill country.

And it came to pass that his wife Elizabeth conceived, and hid herself for five months, saying: Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men!

And in the sixth month of her pregnancy the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth; to a virgin engaged to a man named Joseph the carpenter, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. The angel came to her door, and said: Hail, thou that art highly favored; blessed art thou among women, for the Lord is with thee. And when she saw him, she was troubled, and cast in her mind what kind of salutation should this be; and the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor in the sight of God. Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus (Jeshua, or Jehoshua). He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered, saying: The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Most High shall overshadow thee; therefore that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. Behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age; and this is the sixth month with her, who was barren, and was mocked by her kinsfolk. With God nothing shall be impossible.

And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word, and the angel departed. Within a few days, Mary arose and went into the hill country in haste, and entered the house of Zechariah, and saluted Elizabeth. And, behold, when Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb, and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost, and in a loud voice uttered these words, by the power of the Spirit, saying: Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb, and how is this to me that the mother of my Lord should come to me? For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in my ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy; and blessed is she that believed, for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

Then Mary spake unto Elizabeth, saying: My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my Spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior; for he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden; for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, and Man of Holiness is his name; His mercy is on all who fear him from generation to generation; He showeth the strength of his arms, and scattereth the proud in the imagination of their hearts; He puts down the mighty from their seat, and exalts them that are lowly and meek; He filleth the hungry with good things, and the rich and haughty are sent away empty handed; He helpeth his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy and his covenant; and keepeth his covenant, which he made with our fathers and with Abraham and his seed, forever and ever. And Mary abode with Elizabeth for about three months, then returned to Nazareth, to her own house.

Now Elizabeth's full time had come, and she delivered, and brought forth a son. When her neighbors and relatives heard how the Lord had showed great mercy upon her, they came and rejoiced with her. On the eighth day they all came to the circumcision of the child; and they called him Zechariah, after the name of his father, but his mother refused, saying, Nay, but he shall be called John. And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name; so they went to Zechariah, and made signs to him, asking what shall he be called? And he asked for a writing tablet, and wrote, His name is John.

(Zechariah wrote on a writing tablet, saying, His name is John; and his tongue was suddenly loosened.)

Then all marvelled, for Zechariah's mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed; and he spake and praised God. And the fear came upon all that dwelt round about them in the hill country of Judea, when they heard all these sayings. And all those that heard pondered in their hearts, What manner of child this shall be! And the hand of the Lord was with them. Zechariah became filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophecied, saying: Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people; to raise up a horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; to fulfill all that which hath been spoken by the mouths of the holy prophets, since the world began; to save his people from their enemies and oppressors, those who hate them; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, to remember his holy covenant; to fulfill the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, to be our God forever; and to grant unto us that having been delivered out of the hands of our enemies, we might serve him without fear or doubt; to live a life of holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our lives. Yea, thou child shall be called the prophet of the Most High; for thou shalt go before the Lord to perform his ways; to give knowledge of salvation and redemption unto his people, by the remission of their sins, through the tender mercy of our God. Whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us; to give light unto them that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet into the way of peace.

Thus the birth of John marks the beginning of the end of an era of Aaronic priesthood which began with Moses, a Melchizedek priest, who ordained Aaron his brother as the temporal high priest of Israel; during a seven-day ceremony, Nisan or Abib 1 - 7, 1512 B.C., in the wilderness of Sinai. This priesthood emphasized the temporal, the ritualistic, the letter of the Law; and was for those who lived not the Spirit of the Law. Now once again the time had come for the Spiritual or the Melchizedek priesthood to save and redeem mankind from their fallen state and Spiritual death. John was to prepare the way for another Savior and Redeemer, Meshiahh (Messiah), the Anointed One, the Christ, the Saoshyant Jesus son of Mary; who was foreordained to become, through grace upon grace, the Son of God. The humble servant's testimony of his birth, ministry, death, and resurrection; including the ministry of his cousin John the Baptist is presented in the next epoch, which begins with Jesus and ends with Mohammed. And Jesus' baptism and ministry marks the beginning of the decrease of John and increase of Jesus, or the decrease of the temporal or worldly and the increase of the Spiritual or the Eternal.

CHAPTER FIVE

The Fifth Epoch: from Jesus to Mohammed (c.2-1 B.C. to c.632 A.D.)

Effraim's Testimony of Christ Jesus, Who Was Sent Forth in the Meridian of Time

We know that the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God existed before the time of Adam, although it was identified by a different name, namely, the Holy Order of Zarathustra. And the kingdom of God consisted of heavenly and earthly archangels, Amesha Spentas and Yazatas, who were known in Arabic and Hebrew as gods (or Elohim, plural of Eloh or Allah), prophets, seers, revelators, saints, priests, and holy men. And the eternal throne of God's kingdom was occupied by the Father and the Son. The Father the Creator, Man of Holiness, the Lord of Paradise, dwelt in the company of the pure and the holy, those who remained obedient to the Spiritual laws of the kingdom. And the Son was raised up unto immortality and eternal life, to save and redeem mankind from their fallen and deathly existence. These are they who lived not the Spiritual law but the temporal, thereby were ensnared unto condemnation until judgement; to remain in the spirit prison of the worldly existence, until through faith, repentance, baptism, and good works they have redeemed and saved themselves, under the everlasting law of the grace and mercy of the Father, through the atoning sacrifice of his Son. The Son was and is the Savior or Meshiahh of the people in all ages. And when the Father became old and weary with the age of eternities, the Son replaced him on the throne; and the office of the Son was filled by another most worthy Son of God; by the unanimous approval of all the gods in the highest council in heaven.

And all such created sons of God come into existence by the decree of the highest council in heaven; and are raised up by the telestial priesthoods, such as of the Magi, of the order of Zarathustra. Thus they were foreordained to become the saviors, Messiahs, prophets, or other heavenly office-holders. And each individual grew according to his true nature, and earned himself a just recompense of glories and blessings of God. The chief of the sons of God was and is the Son of God, or Lord Meshiah Jesus Christ. His titles include: the Anointed One or the Christ, the Savior and Redeemer, the Wise Lord, the Only Begotten Son, Jeshua or Jehoshua, Adhonai Yehweh, Allah Táála, Ahura Mazda. To the Assyrians he was known as God Asshur; and to others by other names, in different times and places.

It was the selfsame primordial Jesus Christ, the God of Israel, who spoke and walked with Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jacob, and manifested himself unto hosts of other nations, kindreds, tongues and people, in various forms, and in sundry times. It was He who blessed the ancient Egyptians, Indians, Persians, and Arabs, with the wisdom of the world; and gave them the gift of dispensations or Scriptures best suited to their needs, wants, desires, and aspirations, according to their capacities and worthiness, and according to his will and purposes. But the knowledge of the Son of God was hid from them, and the world; and was revealed only to the holy and pious priests and kings of the Order of the Son of God, which Order later came to be known as the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood.

Before the nation of Israel was organized and established under the hands of Moses and Aaron, the One God of the Shemitic (Semitic) people was Elloh or Allah, the God of Abraham; and all the Arabs and Hebrews in that time went on pilgrimage or Hajj to Mecca (Becca), to their temple, the House of Allah, now known as the Kaabah, where also preserved are the footprints of Abraham; this shrine was built by Abraham and Ishmael for the worship of the One God or Allah. None knew the sacred name of the One God, save the most pious priests of the Holy Order of the Son of God, in the kingdom of God; only they knew his true nature and power; that there is none other name under heaven by which fulness of salvation and redemption of man is possible, except by the sacred name of Jesus Christ, the Anointed One; and that none can enter the presence of the Father, except by the word of the Only Begotten Son, by his grace and mercy.

Jesus Christ was not only the eternal God of Israel, but is the One God of all the people on the face of the earth; albeit not everyone can be brought to see the light and truth of Christ.

Now, more than fifteen hundred years had passed away since the exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt, which was in 1513 B.C.; and more than 483 years had passed away since the coming of Gautama Buddha and Zoroaster unto man; but the nation of Israel had not yet brought forth their long-awaited Savior. During this time the nation of Israel had been established and destroyed many times, and the prophets and oracles of God in each generation pointed toward the day when a Meshiahh (Messiah) was to be brought forth in the meridian of time; to save Israel and all mankind from their fallen condition, and to redeem them from the consequences of their sins and transgressions. Moses spake thus concerning him, saying: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, and him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul who will not hearken to the voice of that prophet shall be cut off from among my people.

Isaiah the prophet, who served Judah and Jerusalem in the days of kings Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, in the eighth century B.C., prophecied, saying: Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel (meaning, God with us, Salvation of God, or Faith of God). And there shall come forth a rod of the stem of Jesse, of the House of David, and a branch shall grow out of its roots; and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, even the spirit of wisdom, understanding, counsel and might, and the spirit of knowledge, and fear of the Lord. He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes nor reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor and the afflicted, and reprove with equity the meek of the earth; with the rod of his mouth shall he smite the earth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked; righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reigns. And in that day the root of Jesse shall stand as an ensign of his people; to it the Gentiles shall seek, and his rest shall be glorious.

And the voice of him that crieth in the wilderness shall say: Prepare ye the way of the Lord; make straight in the desert a highway for our God. The valleys of the earth shall be exalted and the mountains and hills shall be made low; the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places shall be made smooth. The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. Behold, the Holy Spirit shall be in him, and he shall bring forth judgement in truth unto the Gentiles. He shall not cry, nor lift up his voice to be heard in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and a smoking flax shall he not quench. He shall not fail nor be discouraged, until he have set judgement in the earth, and the nations of the isles have received his law. He shall be despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, he shall bear our griefs and carry our sorrows; yet men of the world shall esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. He shall be wounded and bruised for our transgressions and sins; our chastisements shall be upon his shoulders, and with his stripes men shall be healed. He shall be tried and proven through oppressions, persecutions, calumnies, and temptations, yet his mouth shall bear it. He shall be brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before the shearer; helpless and dumb he shall remain constant and undisturbed. He shall be taken from prison and judgement, for he was cut off from the world of the living; for the transgression of his people, shall he be stricken. He shall make his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death, for he shall not be violent, nor carry deceit in his mouth. Yet it shall please God to bruise him and put him to grief. He shall see the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied; and by his knowledge shall the righteous servants of God justify many, for the Lamb shall bear their iniquities.

The Spirit of the Lord God shall be upon him, because the Lord shall anoint him to preach the good tidings unto the meek and the humble; to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and to open prison doors to them that are bound; to comfort them that mourn, to give them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for grief, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. He shall give his back to the smiter, and cheeks to those who plucked off his hair; he shall hide not his face from shame and spitting, for the Lord God shall help him, that he be not confounded; therefore he shall set his face like a flint and shall not be ashamed. Therefore, his portion shall be meted out with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong. And because he shall pour out his soul unto death, he shall be numbered with the transgressors, to bear the sins of many, and to make intercession for those who are fallen, and dead in the Spirit.

Now, Daniel or Belteshazzar also prophecied, in the sixth century B.C., when he interpreted the dream of king Nebuchadnezzar during Babylonian captivity. His prophecy concerning the five kingdoms, each more inferior than the previous one, which shall come to pass, is found in these passages which Daniel spake unto Nebuchadnezzar:

Thou, O king, sawest and beheld a great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold; his breast and arms of silver; his belly and thighs of brass; his legs of iron; and his feet of part iron and part clay. Thou sawest that a stone cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces; and the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold which were broken to pieces, became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloor, and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the earth. This is the dream which thou dreamt, O king; and we will tell thee the interpretation thereof.

Thou, O king, art a king of kings, for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, strength, and glory; and wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of heaven hath He given unto thine hands, and hath made thee ruler over them all; thou art this head of gold. After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee; and the third kingdom of brass shalt be yet inferior, and bear rule over the earth; then shalt come the fourth kingdom, strong as iron, forasmuch as iron breaketh into pieces and subdueth all things, it shall bruise, break, and subdue all things. And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes of iron and clay, the fifth kingdom shall be divided, the strength of iron shall be separated from the potter's clay; this last kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken; and forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay, this last kingdom, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they shall not cleave one to another, as iron is not mixed with clay.

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven establish his kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, nor be broken into pieces again; but shall confound all the inferior kingdoms, and shalt stand forever. Forasmuch as thou sawest the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which brake into pieces the kingdoms of clay, the iron, the brass, the silver, and the gold; the Great God hath made known unto thee, O king, that which shall befall in the days to come. The dream is certain, and the interpretation sure.

Now never before the coming of Jesus, the Son of God, was it revealed unto the Jewish people of the Holy Land, concerning the true nature of the eternal government of God, and the doctrine of the Father the Creator, His Son the Redeemer and Savior, and the Holy Ghost the revelator, or the purifying and sanctifying Spirit of God. A seed of God was planted in the womb of a mortal woman, to be later delivered unto the womb of the Holy Priesthood of God, to be raised up unto immortality and eternal life; that he might save and redeem those who have faith in him and his word, who repent of their sins and are baptized by full immersion in water, and are given the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. Never before in the history of mankind prophecies were made since the time of Samuel, by the prophets and holy men; and prayers and supplications were sent to heaven, in hopes of the coming of a Meshiahh (Messiah), the Savior, for Israel. It was under the hands of this Jesus Christ, the Son of the true and living God, the eternal kingdom of God was to be established forever, to be established not on the foundation of clay and iron, but on the pure strength of iron, upon which the kingdoms of brass, silver and gold were to be built, until all is achieved.

While in the past, sacrifices of the blood of animals and birds were made upon the altars to atone for the sins of men, with prescribed rituals, Christ Jesus gave his own flesh and blood as a living sacrifice for the sins of the world. And while anciently no man had access to God, except through the Aaronic Priests, or the High Priest Aaron, or through Moses, the Melchizedek Priest, Jesus the Christ, in a manner of speaking, freed every soul to enter the Most Holy of the tabernacle, even to the Mercy Seat, and commune with God.

Within five and a half centuries from the time of Daniel's prophecy, Jesus was born circa 2 - 1 B.C.; and each prophecy was fulfilled every whit; albeit the time for the stone cut out of the mountain without hands had not yet come. After the golden kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar, other Persian kings ruled in an inferior fashion, as silver being inferior to gold; the third kingdom of the Greeks is likened to the brass; then came the Roman kingdom, which is likened to iron; and the fifth and last kingdom of the Edomites, sons of Esau, the Herods, who accepted the religion of the Jews, but in practice were Idumeans, who thrived on intrigues, politics and wars, is likened unto the mixture of iron and clay. It was during the reign of Herod Antipas that Jesus warned his followers, saying: Take heed, beware of the leaven of Herod.

The eternal kingdom of God, founded upon the strength of iron, clay being removed, was prophecied by Daniel to be established during the times of these kingdoms; which did come to pass, when circa 324 A.D., Constantine (Flavius Valerius Aurelius Constantinus) the great Roman emperor declared Christianity as the official religion of the Roman Empire, and built the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem. For the next three centuries, Christians were encouraged to settle in Jerusalem, but Jews were allowed to enter only once a year. Then in 614 A.D., Persians again invaded Palestine, and aided by the Jews, were able to seize it from the Romans. The Persians, as before, favored the Jews, and gave them freedom to dwell and rule the holy city themselves. But in 638 A.D. the Arab-Ishmaelite people, known as the people of the stone cut without hands, the sacred meteorite or the Black Stone, which even to this day survives at the holiest of shrines of the Arabs, known as the Kaabah, conquered Jerusalem. Thus under the sword and banner of Al-Islam, the new covenant people of the Lord, under the apostleship of Mohammed, the Prophet of his people, the stone cut without hands brake into pieces the kingdoms of clay and iron, of brass, of silver and of gold, and filled the earth with its power and might and glory; all in concert with the knowledge and the wisdom of the Jews. Thus every whit was fulfilled, according to the prophecy of Daniel, and according to the will and purposes of the Lord. But the Lord never revealed himself unto Mohammed, but ministered unto him by his angel Gabriel and others; for Mohammed was a man of war and passion, although he was righteous and most trustworthy and faithful. For the kingdom of Heaven is not of war but of peace, not of fear or doubt but of safety, not of chaos and destruction but of salvation. Mohammed and his followers diligently sought after peace, safety, and salvation, but never found it; for Mohammed accepted not the Son of God. Therefore, the Great Council in Heaven and the Lord himself sent forth a decree that for Mohammed and his people war was ordained; and all the passions, vanities, glories and honors of the world, and pride are theirs; and Allah who was known by the most holy priests as Jesus Christ, or the Son of God, was unseen to the believers of Islam. And their scriptures came to be known as the Quran or Koran. Thus, a new covenant people to rule the terrestrial and telestial worlds of the kingdom of God, to reflect the light of the Son (Sun), even as the moon reflects the light, was established, as a powerful cloud between the kingdoms of the Jews and believers of Christ, and the crescent with a star and sometimes more stars within became the symbol of Islam. And, too, the Jews and Christians were glad to see the passion side of man represented through the new faith and zeal of their true cousins, the Moslems (Muslims), their Arab brethren, even the sons of Ishmael, Midian, Esau and others.

Now, with the preceding background into the Fifth Epoch, which begins with Jesus and ends with Mohammed, let us now return to where we left off; to Ain Kairim, where lived Zechariah the priest with his wife Elizabeth, the parents of John the Baptist.

Mary the cousin of Elizabeth had left Nazareth in the first month of Nisan (or April), and she dwelt about three months in Ain Kairim, in the Judean hill country, then returned to Nazareth in the month of Tammuz (or July). Behold, the selfsame Mary was engaged to be married to Joseph the carpenter, and was found with the child of the Holy Ghost in her womb. Therefore Joseph being a just man, and not willing to bring her to shame in public, he was minded to put her away privily; meaning, to release her from the bonds of matrimonial promise secretly. But while he thus pondered, behold, an angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying: Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary to whom thou art espoused to be married; for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. She shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS (Jeshua or Jehoshua), for he shall save his people from their sins. Now this was done, that all might be fulfilled which hath been written of the Lord, by the prophets, saying: Behold, a virgin shall conceive without knowing a man, and shall bring forth a son. And they shall call him Immanuel (meaning Faith or Salvation of the Lord or the Holy Ghost); a Messiah and Savior of mankind shall he be. Then Joseph being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and accepted her as his wife. But he knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn, and the days of her purification were over.

And it came to pass in those days, that Caesar Augustus issued a decree that all the people of the Roman world should be taxed, in the cities of their tribes. Such taxing was first put into effect when Cyrenius was governor of Syria. So all went to be taxed in the cities of their own tribes. And Joseph and Mary also left the city of Nazareth (Nasira) in Galilee, to go unto the City of David, which was called Bethlehem (Ephrath) of Judea; some five miles south of Jerusalem, because Joseph was of the house and lineage of David. Also, Mary's time of delivery was nigh, and they had to travel some seventy-five miles south to the city of David. It was a long rough road, besides being the winter season. But a crowd went down for the same purpose, which made the trip more pleasant. Also they went because it was so decreed in heaven, and it was written by the prophets that the Son of prophecy, Jesus the Savior, was to be born in Bethlehem.

Bethlehem in our generation

Bethlehem was built on a terraced hillside; and at the foot of the hill was a scenic plain stretching far to the east. This field once belonged to Boaz and Ruth, and was inherited by their grandson Jesse. It was in this field that David, his son, was shepherding his flocks when Samuel the prophet came to Bethlehem to anoint him king, to succeed Saul. Since that time this field is called the Shepherd's Field. On this very plain, a thousand years after the time of David, shepherds were still keeping watch over their flocks. And it was while they were thus engaged that they received the announcement that Jesus was born in Bethlehem. To the shepherds there was nothing unusual about this particular winter night, except they knew that a great number of kinsfolk were to be gathered for the taxing of Caesar. But, lo, to their utter astonishment, the angels of the Lord appeared unto them, and said: Fear not, for behold, we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

Now, Jesus was born in the days of Herod Antipas the king. And, behold, there came the wise men of the Magi (of the ancient Order of Zarathustra) from the east to Jerusalem, saying: Where is he that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him. When Herod the king heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. Then he gathered together all the chief priests and scribes, and demanded to know where this Christ was to be born. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea, for this is what is written by the prophets: And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah, for out of thee shall come the Meshiahh (or Messiah) of the Jews, that shall rule over my people Israel.

Then Herod privily called the wise men, and asked them the time at which the star appeared unto them; and after being convinced, he sent them to Bethlehem, saying: Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me a word again, that I may come and worship him also. After hearing the king the wise men departed. And, lo, the star which guided them from the east was no more; for the Spirit made them stop unwittingly at Jerusalem, and immediately they lost sight of it; and they were traveling to Bethlehem according to the words of Herod and his scribes. But when they arrived at this well, which is now known as the Well of the Star, by the roadside, they sighted the star again; and lo, the star went before them and stood over the stable in which the holy infant was; and they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. Then the wise men of the Magi came into the stable, and beheld the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, laid in a manger with his mother; because there was no room for them in the inn (caravansarai). And the wise men opened their treasures, and presented gifts, gold, frankincense, and myrrh. And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way. When Herod saw that he was mocked of the wise men, he was exceedingly wroth; and sent forth a decree to slay all the children in Bethlehem two years old and under, and in all the borders thereof. And angels of the Lord appeared unto the shepherds who dwelt round about the place, and those that kept watch over their flocks during the night. And, lo, as the angels of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone about them, they became sore afraid. And one of the angels said unto them: Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be for all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you, that ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of heavenly host praising God, saying: Glory to God in the highest; and on earth peace and goodwill toward men.

Departure of the Wise Men of the Magi

On this very spot where Jesus was born, now stands the Church of Nativity, which was built some three centuries after his birth. The interior of the church is commodious and fancy; and the altars in various chapels are richly decorated through the gifts of wealthy Christians from all parts of the world, over the past several centuries. Originally the church was built by Queen Helena of Rome, who after her conversion did much in rebuilding the Holy Land. At the east side of the church, the door opens to the top of a circular stairway leading to the grotto, the original ledge of the rock that was once the stable in which the Savior was born in the meridian of time. At the bottom of the stairs under the rocky ledge is the richly decorated grotto of nativity, the place of Jesus' cradle; and the altar in the grotto is one of the most richly decorated of all the venerated places. It consists of solid gold and silver candlesticks and lamps, whose light never goes out. And a guard is on duty day and night, that there may be life and light continuously. At the foot of the altar is a large silver star, inlaid in the marble floor. This is the very spot where Jesus was brought forth into this world. The manger, or the cradle of Jesus, was the feed trough, a little stone trough from which the caravan animals ate their grain. The very trough in which Mary brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, is preserved, framed and decorated with great reverence. At the time of Jesus' birth it was cold and uninviting. Only few were interested in Jesus; but after he proved himself to be the Son of God, thousands from all over the world lavished wealth in beautifying this Church of Nativity.

And it came to pass, that when the hosts of angels withdrew their presence from them, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known to us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known to others which was told them concerning this child; and all those who heard it, wondered at these things which were told them by the shepherds; but Mary kept all these things in her bosom, and pondered them in her heart. Then the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God, for all the things which were told them, and all that they saw and heard.

When the eight days were over for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel, before the child was conceived in the womb. And when the days of her purification were over, according to the law of Moses, they brought the child to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord; to offer a sacrifice according to the custom of the time — a pair of turtledoves or two young pigeons. And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; he was just and devout, waiting for the redemption and salvation of Israel; and the Holy Ghost was upon him; and it was revealed to him by the Holy Ghost that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ. So he was drawn by the Spirit into the temple; and the parents brought Jesus, to do according to the custom of the law, and Simeon took the babe and held him in his arms, and praised God, saying: Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

And Joseph and Mary marvelled at those things which were spoken of him; and Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against; yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also, that the thoughts of many hearts be revealed.

And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher; she was quite old, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity; and she was a widow of about eighty-four years, who departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day. She also came in that instant, giving thanks unto the Lord, and spake of him to all who sought redemption in Jerusalem. And when all things were performed, according to the law of the Lord, Joseph, Mary and Jesus returned toward Galilee, to their own city of Nazareth.

On their journey homeward, they tarried at the inn; and behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream, saying: Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word; for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. When he arose, he took the babe and his mother by night and departed into Egypt. And they remained there until the death of Herod; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son. And it came to pass that after Herod died, the angel of the Lord appeared unto Joseph in Egypt, and said, Arise and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel; for those who sought the young child's life are dead. And when they returned to the land of Israel, and Joseph heard that Archelaus, the son of Herod, now reigned in Judea, instead of his father, he was afraid to go thither; notwithstanding being warned in a dream, he returned to Galilee and dwelt in the city of Nazareth; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, saying: He shall be called a Nazarene.

The Virgin's Tree
Nearby this large oak, is a copious spring. Here the Holy Family dwelt for a season.

And the child grew and waxed strong in the Spirit, filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon him. Now his parents and their kinsfolk and acquaintances went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the Passover. And when Jesus was twelve years old, they took him to Jerusalem, according to the custom of the feast. When they had fulfilled the days, and the company returned to Galilee, Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; they searched for him, and after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of rabbis, the teachers of the law, both hearing them and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished and amazed at his understanding and answers. And when they found him, his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? Behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing. And Jesus replied: How is it that ye sought me? Knew ye not that I must be about my Father's business? But they understood not the saying which he spake unto them. And he returned to Nazareth, and was obedient unto his parents; but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart; and Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man. Now, this is the genealogy of Christ Jesus:

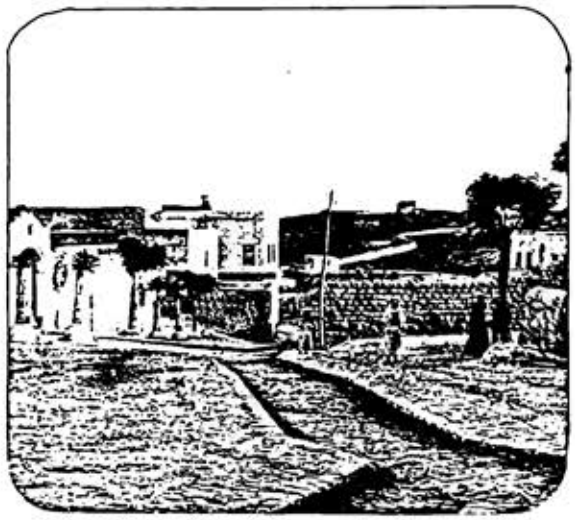
Now it came to pass that John, the son of Zechariah and Elizabeth, and Jesus grew up together in great love, compassion, and understanding toward each other; so much so that the people envied their relationship, and Satan began to work through the Pharisees and Sadducees to bring dissension, strife, and jealousy between the two. For John was older than Jesus, by less than a year, and was first to be foreordained of the Lord, and blessed to do great things for the eternal kingdom of God, by nature he was justified in feeling superior to his cousin Jesus. But John was a natural man of lower intelligence, who preferred nature and things of the world; rather than study, contemplation, reflection, divine love and charity, and the knowledge and understanding of the kingdom of God, which were preferred by Jesus. Both of John's parents were of the priestly family of the line of Aaron, who dealt with rituals and ceremonies, and were responsible for the temporal affairs of the congregation of Israel, and the protection of the sacred and holy things, while Jesus' maternal family, as with many others who dwelt in Galilee, were the descendants of the sons of Moses, who preferred a life of humility, sacrifice, patience, long-suffering, charity, and study of the holy scriptures; and pursued peace, safety, and salvation for themselves and all mankind. This eternal struggle between the two houses, the house of Aaron and the house of Moses, continues unto this day; as the struggle between the terrestrial and celestial, war and peace, hate and forgiveness, passion and virtue, temporal and eternal, continueth forever and ever.

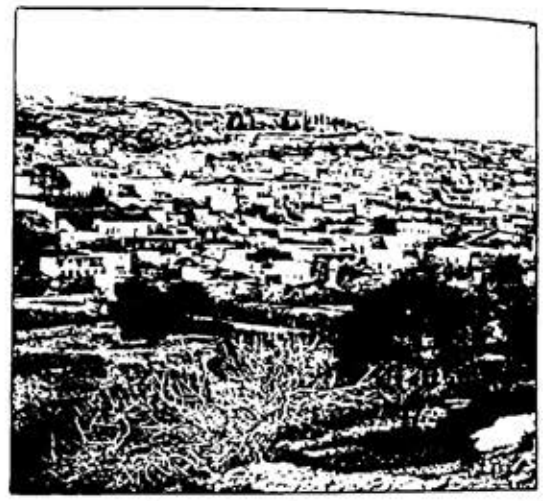
He waxed strong

Jesus and John

And it came to pass that before he was seventeen years of age, the Lord God, the Father, took Jesus unto Himself to bring him to a place which was not known to the people of Judaea, Samaria or Galilee, even to the land of the Americas; where he was to be prepared for his future ministry, crucifixion, and ascension into heaven; and where all the mysteries of the kingdom of God and plans for the future were to be revealed unto him. For, behold, there were those in Jerusalem and Nazareth who said, Now this young lad of tender age is telling us, who are wise and prudent with age, to bow down unto him, and accept him as our God. He even blasphemed the Holy Name by calling him his Father, meaning he was the Son of God. Nay, we shall not allow him to preach his strange doctrine unto us or to our children, but we may slay him, that he speak no more to us concerning who he is and what is yet to come. Indeed we have seen him heal the sick and the afflicted, the lame and the blind and the leprous, the deaf and the mute; which no doubt he did by the power of Beelzebub (Beelzeboul); meaning by the power of the Lord of dung, or Satan the prince of the demons.

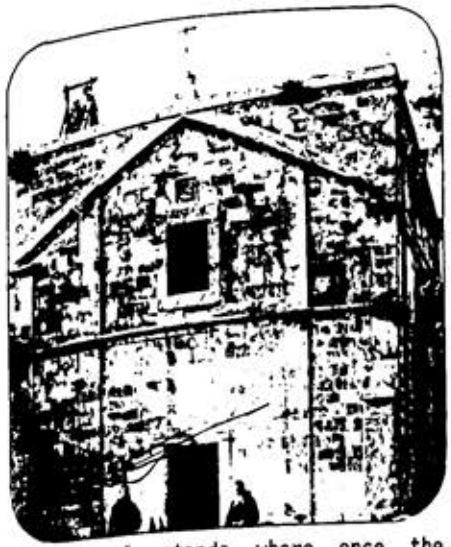


Nazareth
(closeup of one of the buildings)

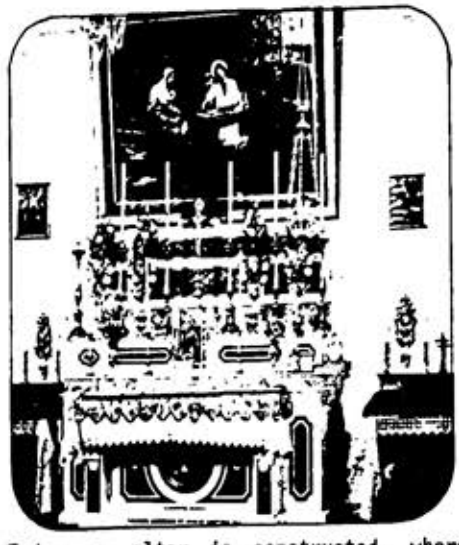


Nazareth (En Nasira) is located in the low mountains, half-way between the south tip of the Sea of Galilee and the Mediterranean coast. Angel Gabriel visited Mary in Nazareth, and Jesus grew up in this city. Joseph was also a resident of Nazareth.

Now the primordial Jesus Christ had already brought settlements from the Tower of Babel, from Jerusalem and other places, unto the land of the Americas, which was the land choice above all other lands on the face of the earth. And some twenty-three years before the birth of Jesus, Samuel the Lamanite prophecied to a fallen remnant of the house of Israel in the Americas, known as the Nephites, saying: Behold, I give unto you a sign: For five years more cometh, and behold, then cometh the Son of God to redeem all those who shall believe on his name. And behold, this will I give unto you for a sign at the time of his coming -- lo, there shall be great lights in heaven, insomuch that in the night before he cometh



This chapel stands where once the carpenter's shop stood. Joseph and Jesus worked there.



Today an altar is constructed, where Joseph and Jesus worked as carpenters.

Jesus and Joseph the carpenter wrought with their hands; by the sweat of their face they ate their bread.

there shall be no darkness, insomuch as it shall appear unto man as if it were day; as if it were one long day without the night. And behold, there shall a new star arise, such an one as ye have never before seen, and this shall also be a sign unto you. This is not all, for behold, there shall be many signs and wonders in heaven. And it shall come to pass that ye shall all be amazed and astonished, insomuch that ye shall fall to the earth; and whosoever shall believe on the Son of God, the same shall be saved.

And behold, thus hath the Lord commanded me, by his angel, that I should come and tell these things unto you; yea, he hath commanded me that I should prophecy unto you, and cry repentance unto them, and prepare the way of the Lord; that ye might know of the coming of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, the Creator of all things from the beginning; that ye might know of the signs of his coming so that ye might believe on his name; that if ye believe on his name and repent of all your sins, ye may have a remission of them through his merits. Now, behold, another sign I give unto you, yea, a sign of his death. For behold, he surely must die that salvation may come; yea, it behooveth him and becometh expedient that he dieth, to bring to pass the resurrection of the dead; that thereby men may be brought into the presence of the Lord. Yea, his death bringeth to pass the resurrection, and redeemeth mankind from the first death, the spiritual death. For all mankind, by the fall of Adam being cut off from the presence of the Lord, are considered as dead, both as to temporal and spiritual things; but the resurrection of Christ redeemeth mankind, and allows them to be brought back to the presence of the Lord; yea, that whosoever repenteth, the same is not hewn down and cast into the fire, but whosoever repenteth not is hewn down and cast into the fire, and there cometh upon them a spiritual death, a second death, for they are cut off again from things pertaining to righteousness.

Now behold, this shall be the sign concerning his death -- Behold, in that day that he shall suffer death, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon and the stars also; and there shall be no light upon the face of this land, even from the time he shall suffer death, for the space of three days, until the time he shall be raised from the dead. At the time he shall yield up the ghost there shall be thunderings and lightnings for the space of many hours, and the earth shall shake and tremble; and the rocks, which are both above and beneath shall be broken up, they shall be rent into pieces, to be found in streams and cracks, and broken fragments on the face of the whole earth, yea, both above the earth and beneath. And behold, there shall be great tempests, and many mountains shall be laid low, and the valleys shall become mountains; many highways shall be broken up, and many cities shall become desolate; many graves shall be opened, and they shall yield up many of their dead, and a host of saints shall appear unto them; and while the thunder, lightning and tempests shall prevail, the darkness shall cover the face of the earth for the space of three days; yea these signs and wonders shall come to pass to the intent that there should be no cause for unbelief among the children of men; and to the intent that whosoever will believe in them, shall be saved; and those who are condemned and believe not might bring upon themselves their own condemnation, for they shall be left alone to kick against the pricks forever and ever.

Now remember, remember, my brethren, that whosoever perisheth, perisheth unto himself; and whosoever doeth iniquity, doeth it unto himself; for, behold, ye are free to choose right from wrong, and this great eternal gift of agency is given unto man; and thus he hath truly made you free. He hath given unto you that ye might know good from evil, to choose life or death, to choose virtue and good or passion and desire, to choose piety or passion, yea, he hath given you these great gifts, and more, that ye may be free.

And it came to pass that in this part of the land of the Americas, people began to look with great earnestness for the signs which were given by Samuel the Lamanite, for the sign that a day shall prevail throughout the night, and a new star shall appear in the sky. And there were some who began to say that the time was past for the words of Samuel the Lamanite to be fulfilled. And they began to rejoice over their brethren, saying: Behold, the time is past, and the words of Samuel are not fulfilled; therefore your joy and your faith concerning this thing hath been vain. And they made a great uproar throughout the land, and the people who believed began to be very sorrowful, lest by any means those things which had been spoken might not come to pass. Now it came to pass that there was a day set apart by the unbelievers, that all those who believed in those traditions should be put to death, except the sign should come to pass, which had been given by Samuel the prophet.

Now, when Nephi, son of Nephi, son of Helaman, who dwelt in this land, saw the wickedness of his people, his heart was exceedingly sorrowful; and he went out and bowed himself down upon the earth, and cried mightily to his God in behalf of his people, those who were about to be destroyed because of their faith in the traditions of their fathers. And as he cried mightily all that day, behold, the voice of the Lord God came to him, saying: Lift up your head and be of good cheer; for behold, the time is at hand, on this night the sign shall be given; and on the morrow come into the world to show that I will fulfill all that which hath been caused to be spoken by the mouths of my holy prophets. Behold, I come unto my own to fulfill all things which I have made known unto the children of men from the foundation of the world; and to do the will of both, the Father and the Son -- of the Father because of me, and of the Son because of my flesh. And behold, the time is at hand, and this night the sign shall be given.

And it came to pass that the words which came unto Nephi were fulfilled, every whit as they had been spoken. For behold, at the going down of the sun there was no darkness, and the daylight prevailed throughout that night, and in the morning the sun did appear according to its proper order. And people began to be astonished because there was no darkness when the night came. There were many, who had not believed the words of the prophets, who fell to the earth and became as if they were dead; for they knew that the great plan of destruction which they had laid for those who believed in the words of the prophets had been frustrated; for the sign which had been given was already at hand.

Now they began to know that the Son of God must shortly be born. For they now knew that to which the holy prophets had testified centuries before, and the sign which had been given by Samuel the Lamanite five years before, was already at hand; and they began to tremble and shake with fear, because of their unbelief and iniquity. And, behold, a new star did appear in the sky, according to the words which were spoken by Samuel. And it came to pass that from this time forward there began to be lyings and evil reports sent forth among the people by Satan, to harden their hearts, to the intent that they might not believe in those signs and wonders which they had already witnessed; but notwithstanding these lyings and deceivings, the more part of the people did believe; and were converted unto the Lord, by means of their repentance and baptism by full immersion in water, for the remission of their sins; and the people dwelt in peace for a season. Then a few began to preach, and endeavoring to prove by the scriptures that it was no more necessary to observe the law of Moses, for they were now baptized unto Christ. And in this thing they did err, having not understood the scriptures; and after their conversion they soon became convinced of the error; for it was made known unto them that the law was not yet fulfilled, that it must be fulfilled in every whit; that the law of God given unto Moses must all be fulfilled, and one yod or tittle shall not pass away till all be fulfilled.

Then it came to pass that the people began to wait impatiently for the appearance of Christ, the Son of God, for the sign of his upcoming birth, given by Samuel the Lamanite, had already come to pass. But because of the wickedness of the unbelievers, and of their tempting the Lord to fulfill the signs, by setting apart the day of massacre for the believers; although the Lord fulfilled the signs, Jesus' birth was decreed not to be until its appointed time, some seventeen years later. For the Lord doth fulfill all that which is spoken by the mouths of His prophets, but His own works, designs, and purposes, no man can frustrate nor comprehend in its fulness. And when they learned of Jesus' birth, they began to wait impatiently for the signs which Samuel gave of his death.

Behold, sixteen more years had passed away, and Jesus was now less than seventeen years of age; and had gained all the knowledge and experience necessary to begin his ministry, when the Lord God took him unto Himself to bring him to the land which is choice above all other lands on the face of the earth, even to the land of the Americas. And when Jesus was brought to this land he had been bruised, and crucified by his own people in Jerusalem, Samaria and Galilee, and his own people accepted him not as the Son of God, but persecuted him. So the Lord God took him out of their presence, and brought him to the land of the Nephites, Lamanites, and Jaredites.

And it came to pass that thirty-three years had passed away from the time the first sign given by Samuel was fulfilled; and now they were waiting with great earnestness for the signs of his prophecied death. And there began to be great doubtings and disputations among the people, notwithstanding so many signs had already been given.

And, behold, and lo, in the first month of the new year, on the fourth day of the month, there rose a great storm, such an one as never before had been known in all the land; and there was also great and terrible tempest, and violent thunder, as if it shook the earth to divide asunder, followed by exceedingly sharp lightnings. Never before was a great and terrible destruction such as this one seen or heard by any man living in the land. The city of Zarahemla was destroyed by fire; the city of Moroni sank into the depths of the sea and the inhabitants were drowned; the city of Moronihah sank below the earth, and the place where stood the city became a great heap of mountain; this was the damage done to the land southward. But there was more great and terrible destruction in the land northward; for, behold, the whole face of the land was changed, because of the tempest, the whirlwinds, thunderings, and lightnings, and a great earthquake; the highways were broken up, level roads were spoiled, and smooth places became rough. And many great and noble cities were sunk, many were burned, and many were shaken till the buildings had fallen to the ground and the inhabitants perished. There were some cities which remained, but the damage was great and many lives perished. Some were carried away in the whirlwind, whither they went no man knoweth, except those who survived to tell their account.

And when the calamities and devastation took their full toll, and the thunderings and lightnings, the storm and the tempest, and the quakings of the earth ceased, which lasted for the space of about three hours, behold, a thick darkness came upon the face of the land, insomuch that ths survivors of the aftermath could feel the vapor of the darkness; and the sunlight could not penetrate the thickness of the dark vapor which covered the land for the space of three days; there was no light to be found anywhere, neither candles nor torches, nor could there be any fire kindled with dry wood. And there was no light seen anywhere, neither fire nor glimmer, nor the sun, the moon, or the stars, for so great were the mists of darkness upon the face of the land. And great was the mourning and howling and weeping among all the people continually for the space of three days, because of the darkness and the great destruction which had come upon them. People were heard crying, and saying: O that we had repented before this great and terrible day, then our brethren and kinsfolk would have been spared, and would not have been burned in that great city of Zarahemla! Or saying: O that we had repented before this great and terrible day, and had not stoned and killed the prophets, and cast them out, then would have not our mothers and fair daughters and children been buried in the heaps of the city of Moronihah.

And it came to pass that there was heard a voice among all the inhabitants of the land, crying: Woe, woe, woe unto this people; woe unto the inhabitants of the whole earth, for they have sinned great sins and repent not; and because of their iniquity and abominations, they are fallen; and the Devil laugheth, and his angels rejoice, because of the slain sons and daughters of my people. Behold, that great city of Zarahemla have I burned with fire, and inhabitants thereof; and, behold, that great city Moroni have I caused to be sunk in the depths of the sea, and the inhabitants thereof to be drowned; and, behold, that great city of Moronihah have I covered with earth, and inhabitants thereof, to hide their iniquities and their abominations from before my face, that the blood of my prophets and saints come no more unto me against them. Behold, the city of Gilgal have I caused to be sunk, and the inhabitants thereof to be buried in the depths of the earth. Yea, the cities of Onihah, and Mocum and Jerusalem, and Gadiani, and Gadionnah, and Jacob, and Gimgimno, all have I caused to be destroyed, and the inhabitants thereof; to hide their wickedness and abominations from before my face, that the blood of my prophets and saints should not come up any more unto me against them. And behold, the great city Jacobugath, which was inhabited by the people of king Jacob, have I caused to be burned with fire, whose wickedness was above all the sins, abominations, and wickedness on the face of the earth; because of their secret murders and combinations; because of their destruction of the peace of my people and the government of the land; therefore I did cause them to be burned, to destroy them from before my face, that the blood of my prophets and saints should not come up unto me any more against them. And behold, the cities of Laman, Josh, Gad, Kishkumen, have I caused to be burned with fire and the inhabitants thereof, because of their wickedness in casting out the prophets and stoning those whom I did send to declare my word. Yea, they did cast them all out, that there were none righteous left among them. Many great destructions have I indeed caused to come upon this land, and upon this people because of their wickedness and abominations, that their wickedness and abominations might be hid from before my face, that the blood of my prophets and saints whom I did send among them might not cry unto me from the ground against them. Now O all ye that are spared because ye didst believe in the words of my prophets, and the signs which were given unto you, but abide not in the law, will ye not return, and repent of your sins, and be converted, that ye may be healed? Behold, mine arm is extended towards you, and whosoever will come, him will I receive; and blessed are those who receive my words.

And after they heard these sayings, there was a silence of several hours throughout the land. For so great was the astonishment of the people that they did cease to lament and mourn for the loss of their kindred. Then, behold, came a voice again unto the people, saying: O ye people of these great cities which have fallen, who are descendants of Jacob, yea, who are of the house of Israel; how oft have I gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and have nourished you; and how oft would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if you would have obeyed my commandments; and how oft will I gather you under my wings, if ye will repent and return unto me with full purpose of heart, O ye people of the house of Israel, who have fallen. O ye of the house of Israel, whom I have spared, your places shall become desolate again, if ye fulfill not the covenants which were made by your fathers, and abide not in the commandments which I give you.

And after hearing these words people began to weep and howl again, remembering the loss of their kindred and friends. And it came to pass that three days of darkness had passed away, and in the morning of the fourth day the darkness dispersed from the face of the land; and the earth did cease to tremble, and the rocks did cease to rend; and all the tumultuous noises did pass away; and the mourning and groaning and crying of the people stopped; and their mourning was turned into joy, and their lamentations unto praise and thanksgiving unto the Lord their God.

Then, a great multitude of the people of Nephi gathered themselves together near the temple, in the land Bountiful; and they were marveling and wondering at one another; and conversing about the great and marvelous change which had taken place, and about this Christ Jesus, of whom signs had been given concerning his death. And while they were thus conversing, they heard yet another voice, as if it came out of heaven, and they cast their eyes round about, for they understood it not; it was not a harsh voice neither was it a loud voice; nevertheless it did pierce them to the core, to the very soul, and cause them to tremble and shake, and their hearts to burn. The same voice was heard the second time, but they understood it not; and again the third time they heard the dreadful voice of the Lord God, the Father; and they opened their ears to hear it and turned their eyes toward the sound; and they all gazed towards heaven, from whence the sound came. Behold, the third time they did understand the voice which said unto them: Behold my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, in whom I have glorified my name -- hear ye him.

And as they stood with their eyes cast up toward heaven, behold, they saw a Man descending out of heaven; clothed in a white robe, he came down and stood in the midst of them; and the eyes of the whole multitude were turned upon him; and they dared not speak one to another, but their mouths were open in awe and amazement; and they knew not what it meant, for they thought it was an angel that had appeared unto them. Then the Man stretched forth his hands and spake unto the people, saying: Behold, I am Christ Jesus, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world. And behold I am the light and life of the world; and I have drunk out of the bitter cup which the Father hath given me, and have glorified the Father in taking upon me the sins of the world; in which I have suffered the will of the Father in all things from the beginning. And when Jesus had spoken these words, the whole multitude fell to the earth; for they remembered that it had been prophecied among them by their prophets Zenos and Zenoch, and others that the Father shall bring His Christ unto this land from Jerusalem, after he is ascended into heaven, to be sent back and crucified again in Jerusalem.

And Jesus spake unto them, saying: Arise and come forth unto me, that ye may thrust your hands into my side and see that I am not a spirit, but a living soul, having flesh and bones; and also ye may feel the prints in my hands and in my feet, the sign of my crucifixion, that ye may know that I am the living God of Israel, and the God of the whole earth, and have been slain for the sins of the world, and shall be crucified unto death and resurrection. And the multitude went forth, and thrust their hands into his side, and did feel the prints upon the skin of his hands and feet; and they all went one by one, and did see with their eyes and touched with their hands; and did bear witness that he was a living soul and not a spirit, of whom it was written by their prophets, that should come to this land. And when they had all gone forth and witnessed his presence, they did cry out with one accord, saying: Hosanna! Blessed be the name of the Most High God! And they did fall down at his feet to worship him.

Then Jesus spake unto Nephi, son of Nephi, who didst cry mightily unto his God in behalf of his people, when the unbelievers set apart the day to put to death those who believed in the words of the holy prophets, for Nephi was among the multitude; and commanded him to come forth. And Nephi arose and went forth, and bowed himself before Jesus, and kissed his feet. And Jesus commanded him to arise; and he arose and stood before him. Then said Jesus unto him: I give unto you power that ye shall baptize this people when I am again ascended into heaven. And he called twelve others, and gave them power and authority to baptize, saying: On this wise shall ye baptize, and there shall be no disputations among you. Verily I say unto you, that whoso repenteth of his sins through your words, and desireth to be baptized in my name, on this wise ye shall baptize them -- Behold, ye shall go down and stand in the water, and calling them by their name, ye shall say: Having authority given me of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. And then shall ye immerse them in water, and come forth again out of the water.

And ye shall baptize in the manner, as I have commanded you; and there shall be no disputations among you, as there have been, nor shall there be any disputations concerning the points of my doctrine, as there have been among you; for behold, verily I say unto you, that the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost are one; and I am in the Father, and the Father in me, and the Father and I are one, and the Holy Ghost beareth record of both.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that hath the spirit of contention is not of me, but is of the devil, who is the father of contention, and stirreth up the hearts of men to contend with anger, one with another. Behold, this is not my doctrine, to stir up the hearts of men with anger, one against another; but this is my doctrine, that such things should be done away. And this is my doctrine, and it is the doctrine which the Father hath given unto me; and I bear record of the Father, and the Father beareth record of me, and the Holy Ghost beareth record of the Father and me. And whoso believeth in me, and is baptized, the same shall be saved, and shall inherit the kingdom of God; and whoso believeth not in me, and is not baptized, shall be damned.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, this is my doctrine, and I bear record of it from the Father; and whoso believeth in me believeth in the Father also; and unto him will the Father bear record of me, and he shall be visited with fire and with the Holy Ghost. And thus will the Father bear unto him record of me, and the Holy Ghost will bear record of the Father and me; for the Father, and I, and the Holy Ghost are one. And again I say unto you, ye must repent, and be baptized in my name, and become as a little child, or ye in no wise inherit the kingdom of God. Verily , verily, I say unto you, this is my doctrine, and whoso buildeth upon it buildeth upon my rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them; and whoso declareth otherwise, and calleth it my doctrine, the same cometh of evil, and is not built upon my rock, but he buildeth upon a sandy foundation, and the gates of hell stand open to receive such when the floods come and the winds beat upon them. Therefore, go forth unto this people, and declare the words which I have spoken, unto the ends of the earth.

And Jesus made an end to his speaking unto the Twelve of his disciples, namely: Nephi, Timothy, Jonas, Mathoni, Mathonihah, Kumen, Kumenonhi, Jeremiah, Shemnon, Jonas, Zedekiah, and Isaiah; whom he had chosen from among the multitude, including Nephi who was visited by the Lord previously; and gave them the authority to baptize in his name, and to confer the gift of the Holy Ghost. Then he stretched forth his hand unto the multitude, and cried unto them, saying: Blessed are ye if ye shall give heed unto the words of these twelve whom I have chosen from among you to minister unto you and to be your servants; and unto them I have given power that they may baptize you with water; then ye shall be baptized with fire and with the Holy Ghost. Therefore blessed are ye if ye believe in me and be baptized, after ye have repented of your sins; and after ye have seen me and know that I am.

And again, more blessed are they who shall believe in your testimony that ye have seen me and that ye know that I am. Yea, blessed are they who shall believe in your words, and come down into the depths of humility and be baptized; for they shall be visited with fire and with the Holy Ghost, and shall receive a remission of their sins. Yea, blessed are the poor in spirit who come unto me, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. And blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted; blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth; blessed are they who do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled with the Holy Ghost; blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy; blessed are all the pure in heart, for they shall see God; blessed are all the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God; blessed are they who are persecuted for my name's sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven; and blessed are they who are reviled and persecuted by men, and all manner of evil is spoken against them falsely, for my sake. For ye shall have great joy and be exceedingly glad, for great shall be your reward in heaven; for so they persecuted the saints and prophets who came before you.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, I give unto you to be the salt of the earth; but if the salt shall lose its savor, it is good for nothing, but to be cast out and be trodden under foot of men. Verily, verily, I say unto you, I give you to be the light of this people; a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Behold, do men light a candle and put it under a bushel? Nay, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light to all that are in the house; therefore let your light so shine before this people, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven.

Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy but to fulfill; for verily I say unto you, one yod or tittle shall not pass away from the law of God given unto Moses, but in me it shall all be fulfilled. Behold, I have given you the laws and the commandments of my Father, that ye might believe in me, and repent of your sins, and come unto me with a broken heart and a contrite spirit; behold, for ye have the commandments of the Father before you, the rituals and ceremonies of the law of Aaron are no longer expedient for those who abide in these commandments of the Father; yet every man is given the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience, that all men may worship how, where, and what they may; for this eternal gift of agency is given unto man.

Therefore come unto me and be ye saved; for verily I say unto you, that except ye keep the commandments which I have given you at this time, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Ye have heard that it hath been said and written by them of old time, that thou shalt not kill, and whosoever killeth shall be in danger of the judgement of God;

but I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of his judgement. And whosoever saith to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council; and whosoever saith, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire. Therefore, if ye come unto me, or desire to come unto me, and carry the guilt of your actions, go ye first unto thy brother and be reconciled, and then come unto me with full purpose of heart, and I will receive you. Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him, lest at any time he shall plot against thee, and get thee to be cast into prison. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, thou shalt by no means come out until thou hast paid thy last senine; and behold, while thou art in the prison, can ye pay even one senine? Verily, verily, I say unto you, Nay. Behold, it is written by them of old time, that thou shalt not commit adultery; but I say unto you, that whosoever looketh upon a woman, to lust after her, hath committed adultery already in his heart, for the lust of the eyes and heart is greater evil than the evil itself. Behold, I have given you commandment that ye suffer none of these things to enter in your heart; for it is better that ye deny yourselves of these things, and take up your cross against all these things, than that ye should be delivered unto Satan, and cast into the fire of hell.

It hath been written that whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement; verily, verily, I say unto you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication or grievous crime, causeth her to commit adultery, and whoso marries her in this state committeth adultery. And again it is written, thou shalt not forswear thyself, but perform unto the Lord all thine oaths. But verily, verily, I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne, nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither shall thou swear by the head, because thou canst not make one hair black or white, save it be by the grace and mercy of God. Verily, verily, I say unto you, swear not at all, but let your communication with men be Yea, yea, and Nay, nay; for whatsoever cometh more than these is evil. And behold, it is written, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, that ye shall not resist evil, but whosoever shall smite you on your right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if a man sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have the cloak also; and whosoever compels thee to go a mile, go with him twain. Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that borrows of thee, turn thou not away. And behold it is written also, that thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy; but behold I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you; and pray for them who despitefully use you and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father who is in heaven, for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good. Therefore those things which were of old time, which were under the law, in me are all fulfilled. Old things are done away, and all things have become new. Therefore, I would that ye should be perfected even as I, or as your Father in heaven who is perfect.

Verily, verily, I say that I would that ye should do alms unto the poor; but take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father who is in heaven. Therefore, ye who do your alms, do not sound a trumpet before you, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may be seen of men and have the glory of men; verily I say unto you, they have their reward. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth; that thine alms may be in secret, and thy Father who seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly. And when thou prayest, thou shalt not do as the hypocrites, for they love to pray, standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men; verily I say unto you, they have their reward. But thou, when thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret; and thy Father, who seeth in secret, shall reward openly. And when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen, for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them, for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him. Therefore after this manner pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name; thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven; give us this day our daily bread; and forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen.

For, if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Father in heaven will also forgive you; but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses. Moreover, when ye fast be not as the hypocrites, of sad countenance, for they disfigure their faces that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily, I say unto you, they have their reward. But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face; that thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father who is in secret; and thy Father, who seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly. For verily I say unto you, that fasting is rejoicing, even unto the purifying of your soul, and sanctifying of your body.

Lay ye not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. The light of the body is the eye; if, therefore, thine eye be single to the glory of God, your whole body shall be filled with light, and the body which is filled with light comprehendeth all things. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. Therefore, if the light within thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot abide in the law of God and the law of Mammon at the same time. And it came to pass that when Jesus had spoken these words, he looked upon the Twelve whom he had chosen, and said unto them: Remember the words which I have spoken this day. For behold, ye are they whom I have chosen to minister unto these people. Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and body more than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into the barn; yet your Father in heaven feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? Which of you by taking thought, meaning worrying about it, can add one cubit unto his stature? And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven or eaten away by the grazing animals; even so he will clothe you, if you are not of little faith.

Therefore take no thought, saying: What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? o, How shall we be clothed? For your Father in heaven knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

And when Jesus ceased to speak these words, he turned and saw the multitude captivated by the Spirit of Holiness and reverence; so he did open his mouth again unto them, saying: Verily, verily, I say unto you, Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with what judgement ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete out, ye shall be meted. Look ye not upon the mote that is in the eye of your fellowman, but first see a beam in your own eye; or else how wilt thou say unto him; Let me pull the mote out of your eyes, while the beam is in thine own eyes? Thou hypocrites of Jerusalem and Nazareth of Galilee, first cast the beam out of thine own eyes, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast the mote out of thy brother's eye. Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

Yea, I say unto this congregation, and all that believe in the Father and his Son, Ask, and it shall be given unto you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened. Or what man is there among you, who, if his son asketh for bread, will give him a stone? Or if he asks for a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being yet imperfect, and some being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your Father who is in heaven give good things to them that ask him? Verily, verily, I say unto you, Enter ye at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, which leadeth to destruction, and many there be who go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life eternal, and few there be who find it.

Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves; ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Therefore every tree that bringeth forth evil fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven. When I return, many who dwell in Jerusalem and in the wilderness round about, will say unto me in that day: Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonders, while thou wast not? And then I will profess unto them: I know ye not; depart from me, ye that work iniquity, and secretly despise those whom the Father hath chosen to establish and build up his kingdom.

Therefore, whoso heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, who builded his house upon a rock, even upon the word of the Father and his Son -- And the rain descended, the floods came, and the wind blew and beat upon the house; and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock. And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who builded his house upon the sand and clay; and the rain descended, the flood came, and the winds blew and beat upon the house; and it fell to the ground, and great was its fall.

And now it came to pass that when Jesus had ended these sayings, he cast his eyes round about the multitude, and said unto them: Behold, ye have heard these things which I have taught you this day, before I ascend again to my Father in heaven. Therefore whoso remembereth these sayings of mine and abides in them, the same will I raise up at the last day. And when Jesus had spoken these words he perceived that there were some among them who marveled and wondered concerning the Law of Moses; for they understood not the saying that Old things had passed away, and that all things had become new. And he said unto them: Marvel not that I said unto you that old things had passed away, and that all things had become new. Behold, I say unto you that the law is fulfilled that was given unto Moses. Behold, it was Christ who gave the law, and it was Christ who covenanted with my people Israel; therefore the law is fulfilled in me, for verily I say unto you that I am the Christ of which it has been written by the prophets; for I have come to fulfill the law in every whit, that not a yod or tittle shall pass away, therefore the law of Moses ends in me; for the law is in me, but I am not in the law. Thus it is all fulfilled, as I have spoken it.

Behold, because I said unto you that old things have passed away, it destroyeth not that which hath been spoken by the prophets concerning the things that are, and that are yet to come. Behold, I am the law and the light unto you. Look unto my lights and truths, and endure to the end, and ye shall be given eternal life. Therefore keep my commandments, for in them all the law and the prophets are fulfilled.

After Jesus had made an end of speaking unto the multitude, he spoke these words to the Twelve, which he had chosen this day as his disciples; and gave them power and authority to do the works of the eternal kingdom of God: Ye are my disciples, a light unto these people, who are a remnant of the house of Joseph; and behold this is your land of inheritance; and the Father hath given you this land, when he brought the remnants of the house of Israel from Jerusalem. And not at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell it unto your brethren at Jerusalem; neither at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell unto them concerning the other tribes of the house of Israel, whom the Father hath led away out of the land. This much did the Father command me, that I should tell unto them: That other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. But they, in Jerusalem, understood not my words, because of their stiffneckedness and unbelief; therefore I was commanded of the Father to say no more concerning this thing unto them.

But, verily, I say unto you that the Father hath commanded me, to tell it unto you, that ye were separated from among them because of their iniquity and unbelief; therefore it is because of their iniquity they know not about you, nor the sheep of which ye know not of. And verily I say unto you, that ye are they of whom I said unto them: Other sheep have I which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd. But they understood me not, for they supposed it meant the Gentiles; and they understood me not that the Gentiles should be converted through their ministry. And they understood me not that I said that they shall hear my voice; and they understood me not that the Gentiles should not at any time hear my voice, that I shall not manifest myself unto them, save it be by the Holy Ghost. Behold, ye have both heard my voice, and seen me; ye are my sheep, and ye are numbered among those whom the Father hath given me.

And, verily, verily, I say unto you that I have other sheep, which are not of this land, neither of the land of Jerusalem, neither in any parts of the land of Galilee, meaning Rome. For of whom I speak are they who have not as yet heard my voice; neither have I at any time manifested myself unto them; but I have received a commandment of the Father that I shall go unto them, and they shall hear my voice, and shall be numbered among my sheep, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them; that there be one fold and one shepherd; and the kingdom of heaven shall be once again founded on the strength of iron, and shall be built upon the lights and truths of my gospel, to last forever.

And I command you that ye shall write these sayings after I am gone; for if it so be that my people in the land of Jerusalem, who have seen me and been with me in my ministry, do not ask the Father in my name that they may receive a knowledge of you and also a knowledge of other tribes, whom they know not, by the Holy Ghost; then these sayings which ye shall write shall be kept, to be manifested unto the Gentiles. That through the fulness of the Gentiles, the remnants of their seed, who shall be scattered upon the face of the earth, because of their unbelief, may be brought to a knowledge of me, their Redeemer, in the fulness of time. And when they will be gathered from the four quarters of the earth, then the covenant which the Father had made unto all the house of Israel shall be fulfilled.

Blessed are the Gentiles, because of their belief in me; for of the Holy Ghost they bear witness of the Father and me, and in the Holy Ghost they believe. Behold, because of their belief in me, and because of your unbelief, O house of Israel, in the last days the fulness of truth shall come unto the Gentiles, saith the Father. But woe, saith the Father, unto the unbelieving Gentiles -- for notwithstanding they have come forth upon the face of this land, and have scattered my people Israel, they are cast out from among them, and have been trodden under feet by them. And because of the mercies of the Father unto the Gentiles, and the judgements of the Father upon my people who are of the house of Israel, verily, verily, I say unto you, after all this, even after my people are smitten, afflicted, and slain; and are cast out from among them, to be hated by them, and to become a hiss and a byword among them, saith the Father, my people Israel will be brought to remembrance of the covenant which was made with the house of Israel.

And thus commandeth the Father that I should say unto you: In the last days when the Gentiles shall sin against my gospel, and shall reject the fulness of my Gospel, and shall be lifted up in the pride of their hearts above all nations, and above all people of the whole earth; and shall be filled with all manner of lyings, deceits, and mischiefs, and all manner of hypocrisy, murders, priestcrafts, and whoredoms and secret combinations and abominations; and when they shall do all these things, and shall reject the fulness of my gospel; behold, saith the Father, I will bring the fulness of my everlasting gospel from among them, unto my people, O house of Israel.

And I will show unto thee, O house of Israel, that in that day the Gentiles shall not have power over you; but I will remember my covenant unto you, O house of Israel, and ye shall come unto the knowledge of the fulness of my gospel. But if the Gentiles will repent and return unto me in meekness, in humility, in long-suffering, in patience, in sincerity of their hearts, in their love and rejoicings, saith the Father; behold they shall be numbered among my people, O house of Israel; and I will not suffer my people, who are of the house of Israel, to go through among them, and tread them down, saith the Father. But if they will not turn unto me, nor hearken unto my voice, I will suffer my people Israel to go through among them, and tread them down; and they shall be as salt that hath lost its savor, which is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of my people, O house of Israel. Verily, verily, I say unto you, thus hath the Father commanded me that I should say unto you; and also to give unto you this land for your inheritance. And then the words of the prophet Isaiah shall be fulfilled, which say: Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with one voice they shall sing, for they shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Therefore break forth into joy, sing together ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem; the Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see salvation of God.

And when Jesus had spoken these words he looked round about again on the multitude, and said unto them: Behold, my time is at hand. I perceive that ye are weak, and cannot understand all my words which I am commanded of the Father to speak unto you at this time. Therefore go ye unto your homes, and ponder upon these things; and ask the Father, in my name, that ye may understand them; and prepare your minds for the morrow, and I come unto you again. But now I go unto the Father, then to show myself unto my other sheep of which I have spoken, even the lost tribes of Israel; for they are not lost unto the Father, for he knoweth whither he hath taken them. And again when he ceased to speak, he beheld that the multitude were in tears, and did look steadfastly upon him, as if they would ask him to tarry a little longer with them. And he said unto them: Behold, my bowels are filled with compassion towards you. Have ye any that are sick among you? Bring them hither. Have ye any that are lame, or blind, or halt, or maimed, or leprous, or that are withered, or that are deaf, or that are afflicted in any manner? Bring them hither and I will heal them; for I have compassion upon you, and my bowels are filled with mercy. For I perceive that ye desire that I should show unto you what I have done unto your brethren at Jerusalem; for I see that your faith is sufficient that I should heal you.

And as Jesus made an end to his speaking, all the multitude with one accord, did go forth with their sick and their afflicted, their lame and the blind, and with all manner of afflictions; and they were all healed, every one, who was brought forth unto him. And the multitude fell down at his feet to kiss his feet and to worship him; insomuch that they did bathe his feet with their tears. And it came to pass that he commanded that their little children be brought forth. So they brought their little children and set them down upon the ground round about him, and Jesus stood in their midst; and the multitude gave way till they had all been brought unto him. And when they had all been brought, Jesus stood in their midst and commanded the multitude that they should kneel down upon the ground; and then he groaned within himself, and said: Father, I am troubled because of the wickedness among the people of the house of Israel, and he himself knelt upon the ground, and prayed unto the Father. The things which he prayed cannot be written, and the multitude did bear record who heard him. And after this manner they bare record: The eye hath never seen, neither hath the ear heard before, so great and marvelous things as we saw and heard Jesus speak unto the Father; and no tongue can speak, neither can there be written by any man, nor can the hearts of men conceive so great and marvelous things as we both saw and heard Jesus speak; and no one can conceive of the joy which filled our souls at the time we heard him pray for us unto the Father. And when he had made an end to his praying unto the Father, he arose; but so great was the joy of the multitude that they were overcome.

Then Jesus spake unto them, and bade them, Arise! And they arose from the ground; and he said unto them: Blessed are ye because of your faith; and now behold, my joy is full. And when he said these words, he wept, and the multitude bare record of it; and he took their children one by one, and blessed them, and prayed unto the Father for them. When he had done this he wept again, and spake unto the multitude, saying: Behold your little ones! And as they looked, they cast their eyes towards heaven, and saw the heavens open and angels descending out of heaven, as it were in the midst of fire; and they came down and encircled those little ones about, and they were encircled about with fire; and the angels did minister unto them. And the multitude did see and hear and bear record, and they knew that their record is true, for all of them did witness, every man for himself; and they were about two thousand and five hundred souls that witnessed, consisting of men, women, and children.

And it came to pass, that Jesus commanded his disciples that they should bring forth some bread and wine of grapes unto him. And while they were gone for bread and wine, he commanded the multitude to sit down upon the ground. And when the disciples had returned, he took of the bread and brake, and blessed it; and he gave unto the disciples and commanded that they should eat. And when they had eaten and were filled, he commanded that they should give unto the multitude. When the multitude had eaten and were filled, he said unto his disciples: Behold, there shall one be ordained among you, and to him I will give power that he shall break the bread and bless it, and give it unto the people of my church, unto all those who shall believe and be baptized in my name. And this shall ye observe to do, even as I have broken bread and blessed it and given it unto you. And this shall ye do in remembrance of my body, which I have shown unto you; and it shall be a testimony unto the Father that ye do always remember me; and if ye do always remember me, ye shall have my Spirit to be with you.

After Jesus had spoken these words, he commanded his disciples that they should partake of the wine of pure grapes, and give also unto the multitude to partake of it. And they did so; they did drink of it, and were filled; and they gave unto the multitude, they too did drink of it, and were filled. When the disciples had done this, Jesus said unto them: Blessed are ye for this thing which ye have done, for this is fulfilling my commandments; and this doth witness unto the Father that ye are willing to do that which I have commanded you. And this shall ye do to those who repent and are baptized in my name; and ye shall do it in remembrance of my blood, which I have shed for you, that ye may witness unto the Father that ye do always remember me. And if ye do always remember me, ye shall have my Spirit to be with you.

But whoso among you shall do more or less than that which hath been commanded, these are not built upon my rock of truth and light, but are built upon a sandy foundation; and when the rain descends, the floods come, and the wind blows and beats upon them, they shall fall and the gates of hell are ready open to receive them. Therefore blessed are ye if ye keep my commandments, which the Father hath commanded me that I should give unto you.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, ye must watch and pray always, lest ye be tempted by the devil, and ye be led away captive by him. And as I have prayed among you, even so shall ye pray in my church, among my people who do repent and are baptized in my name. Behold, I am the light, the life, the way; I have set an example for you. And after Jesus had spoken these words unto his disciples, he turned again unto the multitude, and said unto them: Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, ye must watch and pray always, lest ye enter into temptation; for Satan desireth to have you, that he may sift you as wheat. Therefore ye must always pray unto the Father in my name; and whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, which is right, believing that ye shall receive, behold it shall be given unto you. Pray in your homes with your families unto the Father, always in my name, that your wives and your children may be blessed.

Behold, ye shall meet together oft; and ye shall not forbid any man from coming unto you when ye shall meet together; but suffer them that they come unto you, and forbid them not. Ye shall pray for them, and shall not cast them out; and it so be that if they come unto you oft, ye shall pray for them unto the Father in my name. Therefore, hold up your light that it may shine unto the world. Behold, I am the light which ye shall hold up, those who have seen me; and my words shall give you life, and guide your way; and whoso abideth not in my commandments suffereth himself to be led into temptation, and the captivity of the devil. Then Jesus turned his eyes again upon the disciples whom he had chosen, and said unto them: Behold verily, verily, I say unto you, I give you another commandment; and then I must go unto my Father, that I may fulfill other commandments which he hath given me. And now behold, this is the commandment which I give unto you, that ye shall not suffer any one knowingly to partake of my flesh and blood unworthily, when ye shall minister it. For whoso eateth and drinketh my flesh and blood unworthily eateth and drinketh damnation to his soul; therefore if ye know that a man is unworthy to eat and drink of my flesh and blood, ye shall forbid him from partaking it. Nevertheless, ye shall not cast him out from among you, but ye shall minister unto him, and pray for him unto the Father, in my name; and if it so be that he repenteth and is baptized in my name, then shall ye receive him, and shall minister unto him of my flesh and blood. But if he repents not, he shall not be numbered among my people, that he may not corrupt and destroy my people; for behold, I know my sheep and they are numbered. Nevertheless, ye shall not cast them out of your synagogues, or your places of worship, but continue to minister; for ye know not if they might repent, and come unto me with full purpose of heart, and be healed; and ye shall be the means of bringing salvation unto them. Therefore keep these sayings, that ye come not under condemnation; for woe unto him whom the Father condemneth. Behold, there have been disputations among you, and blessed are ye if ye have no disputations among you.

And it came to pass that when Jesus had made an end of these sayings, he laid his hands upon the twelve disciples (apostles) whom he had chosen, one by one, and blessed them; and gave them power and authority to confer the gift of the Holy Ghost. And when he had laid his hands upon his disciples, there came a cloud and overshadowed the multitude that they could not see Jesus; and while they were overshadowed, he departed from them, and ascended into heaven. And the disciples saw and bare record that he did ascend again into heaven. Then the multitude dispersed, and every man took his wife and children and returned to his home. And it was noised abroad among the people immediately, before it was yet dark, that the multitude had seen Jesus, and that he had ministered unto them, and that he would also show himself tomorrow unto the multitude. Yea, even all that night it was noised abroad concerning Jesus; and an exceedingly great number did labor diligently all night, that they might be on the place tomorrow where Jesus might show himself again.

The following day, when the multitude was gathered together, behold, the Twelve disciples whom Jesus had chosen, went forth and stood in the midst of the multitude; and behold, the multitude was so great that they did cause them to be separated into twelve bodies (groups). And the twelve did teach them to pray in the selfsame words which Jesus had spoken, nothing varying; and caused them to kneel down upon the ground, and to pray unto the Father in the name of Jesus. And the multitude did pray unto the Father in the name of Jesus; and the disciples of Jesus prayed that they be given the Holy Ghost, for this thing they desired most.

And after they finished praying, the Twelve went down to the water's edge, and the multitude followed them. Then Nephi, the brother of Timothy, went down into the water and was baptized in the name of Jesus; and he came up out of the water and began to baptize all those whom Jesus had chosen. When they were all baptized and had come up out of the water, the Holy Ghost did fall upon them, and they were filled with the Holy Ghost and the spirit of prophecy. And behold, they were encircled about as if it were by fire which came down from heaven; and the multitude did witness it, and bare record that angels did come down out of heaven, and ministered unto them.

And, while the angels were ministering unto the multitude, behold, Jesus came and stood in the midst and ministered unto them, and commanded the multitude to kneel down upon the ground; and commanded his disciples also to kneel down and pray. And, behold, they began to pray unto Jesus, calling him their Lord and their God. Then Jesus departed out of their midst, and went a little way off from them, bowed himself down to the ground and prayed, saying: Father, I thank thee that thou hast given the Holy Ghost unto these whom I have chosen; it is because of their belief in me that I have chosen them out of the world. Father, I pray thee that thou wilt give the Holy Ghost unto all that shall believe in their words. Father, thou hast given them the Holy Ghost because they believe in me; and thou seest that they believe in me because thou hearest them, and they pray unto me because I am with them. And now, Father, I pray unto thee for them, and all those who shall believe in their words, that they may also believe in me, that I may be in them; as thou Father art in me, that we may be one.

And it came to pass that after Jesus had thus prayed unto the Father, he returned to his disciples; and behold, they continued without ceasing to pray unto him, not with many words; for they were filled with the Holy Spirit, it was given to them the very moment that which they must say. Then Jesus did bless them as they did continue to pray unto him; and his countenance did smile upon them, and the light of his countenance did shine upon them; behold, they were as white as the countenance and the garment of Jesus, and whiteness thereof exceeded all the whiteness that could be seen upon the earth. And Jesus said unto them: Pray on! And they continued to pray. And he turned from them again and went a little way off and bowed himself to the ground again, and prayed unto the Father, saying: Father, I thank thee that thou hast purified those whom I have chosen, because of their faith, and I pray for them again, that those who shall believe in their words, may also be purified in me, even as they are purified in me. Father, I pray not for the world, but those whom thou hast given me out of the world, because of their faith; that I may be in them as thou Father art in me, that we may be one, and that I may be glorified in them, even as thou art glorified in me.

And after Jesus had thus prayed unto the Father, he returned to his disciples; and behold, they continued to pray unto him unceasingly; and he did smile upon them again, and behold, they were as white as Jesus. And it came to pass that he went again a little off and prayed unto the Father; but the words which he prayed tongue cannot speak, neither can they be written by man; albeit the multitude did hear and do bear record, and their hearts were opened and they did understand in their hearts the words which he prayed. Nevertheless, so great and marvelous were the words which he prayed that they were forbidden to be written or to be uttered by man.

And it came to pass that when Jesus had made an end to his praying, he returned to his disciples,and said unto them: So great faith have I never seen among all the Jews; wherefore I could not show unto them so great miracles, because of their unbelief. Verily I say unto you, there are none of them that have seen so great things as ye have heard in this land. Then he commanded his disciples to cease to pray, but they should not cease to pray in their hearts. And he commanded the multitude to arise and stand upon their feet; and they arose and stood upon their feet. And he brake bread again and blessed it, and gave to the disciples to eat. And when they had eaten, he commanded them that they should break the bread also and bless it, and give unto the multitude to partake of it.

Now there had been no bread, neither wine, brought by the disciples, neither by the multitude. But the angels did minister unto them, and Jesus truly gave the multitude the bread to eat and wine of pure grapes to drink. And he said unto them: He that eateth this bread eateth of my body to his soul, and he that drinketh of this wine drinketh of my blood to his soul; and his soul should never hunger or thirst, but shall be filled. Behold, when the multitude had all eaten and drunk, they were filled with the Holy Spirit; and they did cry out with one voice, Hosanna to Jesus! whom they both saw and heard. And it came to pass that when they had praised and given glory unto Jesus, he said unto them: Behold, now I finish my work here -- now I finish the commandment which the Father hath commanded me concerning this people, who are a remnant of the house of Israel.

Ye remember that I spake unto you, and said that when the words of Isaiah shall be fulfilled; yea, when every whit shall be fulfilled, then the Father shall fulfill the covenant which he made unto his people Israel. Behold, they are written, therefore search ye them, that ye may know what shall befall me when I return to the land of Jerusalem, by the way of visiting the other tribes, of which I didst also speak unto you. And the Father hath also commanded me that I shall give unto you this land for your inheritance; and to bring to remembrance the words of Isaiah and Malachi, for all things spoken by them, and all others from the time of Samuel, every whit, shall be fulfilled; therefore, I shall read unto you their words from this stick (or scroll):

> Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes. For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited. Fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame; for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy Maker is thine husband, the Lord of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer.
>
> For this is as the waters of Noah unto me; for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth, so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.
> O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colors, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones. And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children. In righteousness shalt thou be established;

> thou shalt be far from oppression, for thou shalt not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near thee. Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me; whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake. Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy. No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgement thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.

After he read these words (from Isaiah), he turned towards the multitude, and said: And now, behold, I say unto you, that ye ought to search these things. Yea, a commandment I give unto you that ye search these things diligently; for great are the words of Isaiah. For surely he spake as touching all things concerning my people which are of the house of Israel; it must needs be that he must speak also to the Gentiles. And all things which Isaiah spake have been and shall be, even as they are written. Now I give unto you the words which the Father gave unto Malachi, saying; Thus saith the Father unto Malachi (and he read from these words of Malachi):

> Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap; and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years. And I will come to you to judgement; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless; and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts. For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed. Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts.

Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee? Ye have said, It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts? And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered.

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgements. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.

And now it came to pass that when Jesus had read these things unto the multitude, he expounded all things unto them, saying: Behold, these scriptures the Father commanded that I should give unto you, for this was wisdom in him that they should be passed on to future generations. And when Jesus had expounded all the scriptures, he said unto his disciples: Behold, other scriptures I would that ye should write, that ye have not. And he said unto his disciple Nephi: Bring forth the record which ye have kept in this land; and when Nephi had brought forth the records, and laid them before him, he cast his eyes upon them and said: Verily I say unto you, that my servant Samuel, the Lamanite, was commanded to testify unto this people that, at the day the Father should glorify his name in me, that many saints should arise from the dead, and appear unto many, and should minister unto them. Was it not so? And his disciples answered, saying: Yea, Lord, Samuel did prophesy according to thy words, and they were all fulfilled. And Jesus said unto them: How be it that ye have not written this thing, that many saints did arise and appear unto many and did minister unto them? And it came to pass that Nephi remembered that this thing had not been written; and he was commanded that it should be written; therefore it was written according to his commandment. And when Jesus had expounded the scriptures that were written, he commanded them that they should teach these things unto the people.

Even a hundredth part of all that Jesus had taught and expounded unto his disciples and the multitude could not be written, nor is it included in this book; but it suffices to know that Jesus taught the people for the space of three days; and these are the things which he spake in the third day — And verily, verily, I say unto you, when all will be fulfilled in the last days, then the remnants which have been scattered abroad on the face of the earth, will be gathered from the east and from the west, and from the south and from the north; and they shall be brought to the knowledge of the Lord their God, their Redeemer and Savior, O house of Israel. And I say unto you, that if the Gentiles do not repent, after receiving the blessings which the Father has poured upon them, since the scattering of my people — Then shall ye, who are a remnant of the house of Jacob, go forth among them, and be in the midst of them who are many, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep. Thy hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off. And I will gather my people together as a man gathereth his sheaves into the floor. For I will build my people with whom the Father hath covenanted — yea, I will make thy horn iron, and thine hoofs brass; and thou shalt break into pieces many people; and consecrate their gain and their substances unto the Lord of the whole earth. And, behold, I am he who doeth it.

And it shall come to pass, saith the Father, that the sword of my justice shall hang over them at that day; and except they repent it shall fall upon them, yea, even upon all the nations of the Gentiles, saith the Father. And I will establish my people, O house of Israel; and the people of this land I will establish unto the fulfilling of the covenant which I made with your father Jacob. There shall be a New Jerusalem built in this land, and the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you. Behold I am he of whom Moses spake, saying: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul who will not hearken to the voice of that prophet, shall be cut off from among my people. Verily, I say unto you, even all the prophets from Samuel onward, as many as have spoken on the matter, have testified of me, that I shall come at that appointed day, to redeem Israel and to establish the kingdom of heaven; which shall last forever.

Behold, ye are the children of the prophets, and of the house of Israel; and ye are of the covenant which the Father made with your fathers, and saying unto Abraham: In thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. The Father having raised me up in the land of your fathers, hath sent me hither, to show myself unto you, and to bless you; and to turn every one of you away from ways of sin and transgression, because ye are the children of the covenant. And after ye are blessed, the promise of the Father unto the seed of Abraham is fulfilled, which he made with Abraham, saying: In thy seed shall the kindreds of the earth be blessed; unto the pouring out of the Holy Ghost through me upon the Gentiles; which blessing upon the Gentiles shall make them mighty above all, even unto the scattering of my people, O house of Israel. And they shall be a scourge unto the people of this land. Nevertheless when they shall have received the fulness of my gospel, then if they harden their hearts against me, I will return their iniquities upon their own heads, saith the Father. And at that day I will remember my covenant which I have made with my people, that I would gather them together in mine own due time, and give unto them again the land of their fathers for their inheritance, the land of Jerusalem, which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father.

And it shall come to pass that, when the fulness of my gospel shall be preached to them, and they believe in me, that I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and shall pray unto the Father in my name, then shall their watchmen lift up their voices, and with one voice shall they sing hosannas, for they shall see eye to eye. Then will the Father gather them together, and give unto them again Jerusalem, the land of their inheritance. Then shall they break forth into joy, and sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem; for the Father hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. The Father hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of the Father; and the Father and I are one.

Then shall be brought to pass that which is written: Awake, awake again, and put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city, for thenceforth shall no more come unto thee the uncircumcised and the unclean. Shake off the dust and arise, O Jerusalem; sit down, and loosen the bonds off thy neck, O captive daughters of Zion. For thus saith the Father: Ye have sold yourselves for naught and ye shall be redeemed without money. Verily, verily, I say unto you that in that day, my people shall know my name, and they shall know that I am he that doth speak to them. And then shall they say: How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings unto those who publish (preach) peace; and bringeth glad tidings unto those who publish salvation; and saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! And then shall a cry go forth: Depart ye, depart ye out from thence, touch not that which is unclean, and be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord, go ye out of the midst of her. For ye shall not go out with haste nor by flight; for the Lord your God shall go before you, and the God of Israel shall be your rearward. Behold, in that day, I shall raise up a servant unto myself, saith the Father, who shall deal prudently, and he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. As many were astonished at thee, O Jerusalem, his appearance being so marred, more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men, he too shall sprinkle many nations; the kings shall shut their mouths at him, for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider, saith the Father. Verily, verily, I say unto you, all these things shall surely come to pass, even as the Father hath commanded me. Then shall the covenant which he hath covenanted with his people be fulfilled; and then shall Jerusalem be inhabited again with my people, and it shall be the land of their inheritance forever.

And, verily, I give unto you a sign, that ye may know the time when these things shall come to be; and I shall gather in, from their long dispersion, my people, O house of Israel, and establish again among them my Zion. Behold, I shall give unto you a sign that I shall declare unto you hereafter of myself; and by the power of the Holy Ghost, which shall be given unto you of the Father, shall be made known to the Gentiles that they may know concerning this my people, who are a remnant of the house of Jacob, and who shall be scattered by them. Verily, verily, I say unto you, these things shall be made known unto them of the Father; and shall come forth of the Father from them unto you. For it is wisdom in the Father that they should be established in this land, even in the land which is choice above all other lands on the face of the earth; and be set up as free people by the power of the Father; that these things might come forth from them unto a remnant of your seed; that the covenant which the Father made with his people be fulfilled, O house of Israel.

Therefore, these works and the works which shall be wrought among you hereafter shall come forth from the Gentiles, unto your seed, which shall dwindle in unbelief because of iniquity; and it behooveth the Father that it should come forth by the way of the Gentiles, that he may show forth his power and might and majesty unto the Gentiles; for by their nature they seek after such things; and wars and glory of this world is ordained unto them of the Father. For this cause, if the Gentiles harden not their hearts, and repent and be baptized in my name, and know the true points of my doctrine, they may be numbered among my people Israel; that they too might be redeemed and saved from the consequence of their sins, iniquities, and ways of error.

And when these things come to pass that your seed shall begin to know these things — it shall be a sign unto them, that the work of the Father hath already commenced unto the gathering of the tribes and the establishment of Zion again; and unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the people who are of the house of Israel. And in that day, the kings shall shut their mouths, for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall they consider. For in that day, for my sake shall the Father work a great and marvelous work among them; and there shall be among them those who shall not believe it, although a great and mighty servant of mine shall declare it unto them; and the kings shut their mouths at him in awe and amazement, for he shall sprinkle many nations. But behold, the life of my servant shall be in my hands; therefore they shall not hurt him although they shall be marred because of him; he shall destroy the liars and the wicked, smite them with his two-edged sword. Yea, I will heal him and bless him, for I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil. Therefore, it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not believe in his words, even my words who am Jesus Christ, which the Father shall cause him to bring forth unto the Gentiles, it shall be done even as Moses said, that they should be cut off from among my people who are of the covenant; for the Father shall give him power to bring forth the fulness of my gospel, by the way of the Gentiles. And in that day my people who are a remnant of Jacob shall dwell among the Gentiles; yea, even in the midst of them as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep; who, if he go through them, both treadeth down and teareth into pieces that come in his way, and none can deliver. Yea, in that day the hand of my people shall be lifted up against their adversaries, and their enemies shall be confounded, saith the Father.

Woe be unto the Gentiles except they repent; for it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Father, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots; and I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down thy strongholds; and I will cut off witchcrafts and soothsayers out of thy land. Thy graven images will I also cut off, and thy standing images out of the midst of thee, and thou shalt no more worship the works of thine hands. And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee, and destroy thy cities. And it shall come to pass that all lyings, and deceivings, and envyings, and strifes, and priestcrafts, and whoredoms, shall be done away. For saith the Father, In that day whosoever will not repent and come unto my Beloved Son, I will cut him off from among my people, O house of Israel.

But if they repent and hearken unto my words, and harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them, and shall bring them into a covenant with me; and they shall be numbered among this remnant of Jacob. And they shall assist my people, the remnant of Jacob, and also those of the house of Israel; and together they shall build a city in this land which shall be called New Jerusalem. Yea, in that day when the house of Jacob, and even the house of Israel, shall work together, as two brethren of the same house, one worldly and the other Godly, one natural and the other Spiritual, one of passion and the other of virtue, one of war and the other of peace, then shall the powers of heaven be among them, and I also will be in their midst. Then shall the work of the Father commence in that day; and the fulness of my gospel shall be preached to the remnant of this people. Verily, I say unto you, in that day shall the work of the Father commence among all the dispersed of my people; yea, even among the tribes which have been lost, which the Father hath led away out of Jerusalem.

Yea, the work shall commence among all the dispersed of my people; and the Father shall prepare the way, whereby they may come unto me, and call on the Father in my name. Then shall the work commence, with the Father among all nations in preparing the way for the gathering of my people. And they shall go out from all nations unto the land of their inheritance; but they shall not go out in haste, nor by flight, for I will go before them, saith the Father, and I will be their rearward. Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, and that do wickedly, shall be stubble, shall be burned, saith the Father; that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that believe on my name, the Son of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings, and ye shall be saved and redeemed, and grow up as calves in the barn.

Remember ye the law of my servant Moses, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel with statutes and judgements, for no man can enter the kingdom of heaven, unless every yod and tittle is fulfilled; for it is upon this foundation the kingdom of Christ is built, to save and redeem those who are fallen and dead in the Spirit, as a consequence of their sins and transgressions; for no man can be saved in ignorance, nor in disobedience to God's law given unto a people. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of that great and dreadful day; and he shall turn the hearts of the fathers to their children and the hearts of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse, saith the Father.

And it came to pass that when Jesus had spoken these things and expounded them unto the multitude, he said: These scriptures which ye had not with you, the Father commanded that I should give unto you; for it was wisdom in him that they should be passed on unto your future generations. The lesser part of all that he spake unto the multitude and his disciples has been revealed, to the intent that the fulness thereof might be brought forth again unto this people, in the fulness of times, by the way of the Gentiles. For, when they shall have received the parts of the gospel at first, to try their faith, and believe on these things, then the fulness of the greater things shall be made manifest unto them. And if it so be that they reject the part and not believe in these things, then shall the greater things be withheld from them, unto their condemnation.

Thus for the space of three days Jesus taught and expounded and prophecied and prayed, with the multitude and his twelve disciples whom he had chosen in the land of the Americas, when he was about seventeen years of age. And he gave power and authority to his disciples to baptize with water and to confer the Holy Ghost upon those who were baptized in the name of Jesus, and who had repented of their sins. And he healed their sick and the afflicted, their lame, their blind, and their deaf; and cured all manner of ailments; and he did loose the tongues of their children that they could utter; even babes did open their mouths and utter marvelous things, and the things which they uttered astonished and amazed their parents and kinsfolk. And he ascended into heaven, as before, in a cloud that covered the multitude, and Jesus disappeared in the cloud; and later appeared unto the disciples from time to time for a season, prior to his departure from the land of the Americas; to show himself unto the other sheep (in Rome); for the Father had commanded him to do so, and also to visit the other lost tribes, which are lost to the world, but are known to the Father, in India and Parthia.

Now it came to pass that the disciples whom Jesus had chosen, began from that time forth to baptize and teach as many as did come unto them; and those who were baptized in the name of Jesus were filled with the Holy Ghost; and many of them saw and heard unspeakable things. And they taught and ministered one to another; and they had things in common among them, every man dealing justly one with another. They did abide in the gospel which Jesus gave them, and were obedient to his commandments; and they who were baptized in the name of Jesus were called the church of Christ. And it happened that as the disciples of Jesus were journeying, and preaching the things which they had both heard and seen, and were baptizing in the name of Jesus, they were gathered together, and united in mighty prayer and fasting. Behold, Jesus again showed himself unto his disciples, and stood in the midst of them, and said: What will ye that I shall give unto you? And they said unto him: Lord, we will that thou wouldst tell us the name whereby we shall call this church, for there are disputations among the people concerning this matter. And Jesus said unto them: Verily, verily, I say unto you, why is it that the people should murmur and dispute over this thing? Have they not read the scriptures, which say that ye must take upon yourselves the name of Christ, which is my name? For by this name ye shall be called in the last day; and whoso taketh upon him my name, and endureth to the end, the same shall be saved at the last day. Therefore, whatsoever ye shall do, ye shall do it in my name; therefore ye shall call this church by my name; and ye shall call upon the Father in my name that he will bless the church for my sake. And how be it my church save it be called in my name? For if a church be called in Moses' name then it be Moses' church; or if it be called in the name of a man then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name then it is my church, if they are built upon my gospel.

Verily, I say unto you, that ye are built upon my gospel; therefore if ye call upon the Father, for the church, if it be in my name, the Father will hear you, and he will show forth his own works in it. But if it be not built upon my gospel, and is built upon the works of men, or upon the works of the devil, verily I say unto you they have joy in their works for a season, and by and by the end cometh, and they are hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence there is no return. For their works do follow them, for it is because of their works that they are hewn down; therefore remember these things which I have told.

Behold, I have given unto you my gospel; and this is also my gospel — that I came into the world to do the will of my Father, because my Father sent me. And my Father sent me that I might be lifted up upon the cross; that after I had been lifted up upon the cross, I might draw all men unto me, who are dead in their sins and transgressions, iniquities, and ways of error; that as I have been lifted up by men, even so should the men be lifted up by the Father, to stand before me, to be judged of their works, whether they be good or evil. And for this cause have I been lifted up, that according to the power of the Father I will draw all men unto me, that they may be judged according to their works. And it shall come to pass, that whoso repenteth and is baptized in my name shall be filled with the Holy Ghost; and if he endureth to the end, behold, him will I hold guiltless before my Father in that day when I shall stand to judge. And he that endureth not to the end, the same is also hewn down and cast into the fire, from where they can no more return, because of the justice of the Father. This is the word of the Father which he hath given unto the children of men; and for this cause he fulfilleth all, and lieth not.

And, for no unclean thing can enter his presence, no one entereth into his rest, save those who have washed their garments in my blood, because of their faith, and repentance of all their sins, and their faithfulness unto the end. Now this commandment I give unto you: Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name; that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost; that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day. Verily, verily, I say unto you, this is my gospel. And the works which ye have seen me do, shall ye also do in my church; and blessed are ye if ye do these things, for ye shall be lifted up at the last day. Write the things which ye have seen and heard, and cease not to keep record of this people in all generations; as the records have been kept by our fathers from the time of Seth, son of Adam. For, behold, out of the books which have been written, and which shall be written, shall this people be judged, for by them their works be known unto them. And, behold, all things are recorded such as in the book of remembrance, the book of life, and the book of kings, by the Father; therefore out of the books which shall be written shall the world be judged. And know ye that ye shall be judges of this people; therefore, what manner of men ought ye to be? Verily, I say unto you, even as I am — just and righteous judges ye ought to be unto the end.

Now I go unto the Father; but, verily I say unto you, whatsoever things ye shall ask the Father in my name shall be given unto you. Therefore, ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for he that asketh receiveth; and unto him that knocketh, it shall be opened. And now, behold, my joy is full, because of you, and also this generation; yea, even the Father rejoiceth, and all the holy angels, because of you and this generation; for none of them are lost. But behold, it sorroweth me because of the fourth generation of this people; for they shall be led away captive by him even as was the son of perdition; for they

And it came to pass that the disciples did travel throughout the land, and minister unto all people; uniting them unto the church of Christ, as many as would believe in their words, and baptizing them; behold, as many as were baptized did receive the Holy Ghost.

And now as the disciples of Jesus went about spreading the gospel, they were cast down into prisons by those who did not belong to the church; but the prisons could not hold them, for they were rent in twain; they were cast down into the deep pits, but they did smite the earth with the word of God, insomuch that they were delivered out of the depths of the earth; and they could not dig pits deep enough to hold them. Thrice they were cast into a furnace and received no harm; and twice they were cast into a den of wild beasts, and behold, they did play with the beasts as a child with a suckling lamb, and received no harm. Thus they travelled among the people of Nephi and did preach the gospel of Christ unto all people; and a great majority were converted unto the Lord, and were united unto the church of Christ.

And behold, nine of the twelve disciples were never to taste death again, meaning the gift of eternal life and immortality was sealed upon them; that they may minister unto other saints and prophets in all generations; that while they will be among the Gentiles, the Gentiles shall know them not, and while they shall dwell among the Jews, the Jews shall know them not. But the three were given unto mortality and not to be reborn, to live in the terrestrial world, even the temporal world, forever; they are likened to the angels of God, who were to pray to the Father in the name of Jesus; and they were given power to reveal themselves unto whatsoever man it seemeth them good. And it must needs that a change be wrought upon their bodies, lest they must taste death. Therefore, that they might not taste death, there was a change wrought upon their bodies, insomuch that Satan could have no power over them, to tempt them. Yea, this much was decreed unto these who were to tarry in this world, that they might not suffer pain or sorrow of their afflictions in the flesh; save it were for the sins of the world. Now this change or transfiguration was not equal to that which shall take place in the last days, but it was sufficient to preserve them from the powers of the adversary; and to sanctify them to be holy in the flesh, that they may be freed from the bondage of Satan and their afflictions. And in this condition of their saved state they were to remain forever, until the judgement day of Christ; when those who are judged worthy shall receive a greater change, and shall be received into the kingdom of the Father to go no more out, to dwell with God eternally in the heavens. And woe be unto those that shall reject the Son of God, and deny the Christ and his works; and woe be unto those that shall deny the revelations of the Father and His Son, saying; The Lord no longer worketh by revelation or by prophecy, or by the gifts of the Holy Ghost, or by tongues, or by healings, or by the power of the Holy Priesthood of God; that there can no miracle be wrought by Jesus Christ. Yea, woe unto such for they shall become like unto the sons of perdition, who are left alone to kick against the pricks, curse God, and die; as the bruised reed is not to be broken, and the smoking flax not to be quenched, they are to be left alone, unto whom the mercy of the Christ is not extended. Yea, woe unto them that hiss or spurn or make game of the Jews, or any of the remnants of the house of Israel; for, behold, the Father and His Son shall remember the covenant which they made with their fathers. And woe unto them that suppose that they can turn the right hand of the Lord unto the left, that he may not execute judgement unto the fulfilling of the covenant which he hath made unto the house of Israel, to be their God, their Redeemer and Savior, the Messiah.

Therefore, hearken ye Gentiles and fallen Israel unto the words of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, and turn ye from your wicked ways. Repent of your sins, transgressions, iniquities and ways of error; of your lyings and deceivings; your whoredoms and secret combinations; your idolatries, murders and priestcrafts; your envyings and strifes, from all your wickedness and abomination. Yea take up your cross against all such evils, and be baptized in my name, that ye may receive a remission of your sins, and be filled with the Holy Ghost; that ye may be numbered with my people, who are of the house of Israel.

Then it came to pass that Jesus departed from the land of the Nephites in the Americas, to visit his other sheep of which he had spoken (the Romans, and those in Asia Minor); and the lost tribes in the land of the Parthians; and in the land of the Hindush (India), in Taxila (Takshashila), even across the five waters of the Indus River, unto the Ganges basin, which was at one time the center of Spiritual knowledge, wisdom, and learning. (It was in the land of the Parthians that primordial Jesus Christ revealed himself unto Zarathustra [Zoroaster], during the seventh century before the birth of Christ, in the form of Hormuzd [Ahura Mazda], and to the Indians he manifested himself as the Lord Christna [Kristna, the Anointed One, the Good Shepherd].) And it came to pass that Jesus returned to his homeland of Galilee, when he was about twenty and nine years of age, to begin his ministry in Cana, Nazareth, Capernaum, Nain, Gadera, Bethsaida and Gennesaret, and round about. And during the twelve year absence of Jesus from the land of Palestine, John the son of Zechariah had risen to become prophet of God to this people, and all Israel accepted him as a prophet, and many thought that he was the promised Messiah. For John the Baptist was a natural man, he dwelt in mortality, and himself waited patiently for the day when the promised Messiah shall come to redeem him and bring salvation unto his soul. And at this time Jesus was living in Galilee, and John his cousin was preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and in the country round about Jordan. It was in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, when Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, Herod Antipas was tetrarch of Galilee, Philip the brother of Antipas was tetrarch of Ituraea and Trachonitis, and Lysanius was tetrarch of Abila (Abilene), located near Damascus of Syria, and Annas and Caiaphas were the (Aaronic) high priests; that the word of God came unto John son of Zechariah, to preach baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

Thus John the Baptist was ordained to preach in the wilderness, saying: Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. For it is written by the prophet Isaiah (or Isaias), The voice of one crying in the wilderness shall prepare the way of the Lord, and make his path straight; every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough shall be made smooth; and all flesh shall see the salvation of God. This same John was a man of nature; he wore raiment of camel's hair and a leathern girdle about his loins, ate locusts and wild honey, and dwelt in the wilderness. And many came to him from Jerusalem, Judaea, and regions round about Jordan, to be baptized of him in the river Jordan, confessing their sins. But he spake to many Pharisees and Sadducees, saying: O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth ye hypocrites fruits meet for repentance; and think not within your hearts, we have Abraham to our father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham; and the axe is laid unto the root of trees, therefore, every tree which bringeth forth not good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

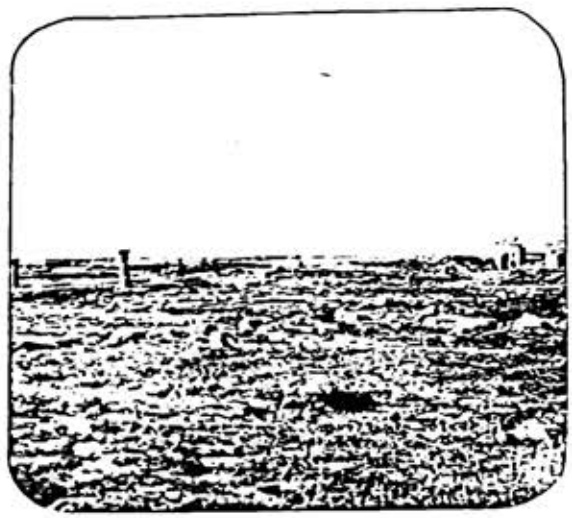
And the people asked John, saying: What shall we do then? And he answered unto them: He that hath two coats, let him impart one to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him give a portion likewise. Then came the publicans (tax collectors under Roman government) to be baptized, saying: Master what shall we do? And he said unto them: Exact no more than that which is appointed unto you. And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying: What shall we do? And he said unto them: Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages (meaning take no bribe). And, for the people had been long awaiting the coming of the Messiah, men mused in their hearts, and asked him if he was the Christ, or not. And John answered unto them: I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire; whose winnowing fork is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner, but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable. And many other things he taught unto them who came to him to be baptized, for the remission of sins, in Bethabara or Bethany, beyond Jordan (a small village in the Decapolis, about twelve miles south of the Sea of Galilee; northeast of Beth-shan).



City of Decapolis

It came to pass that the next day Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee to the place where John was baptizing people, and was baptized of him; but John recognized him not, for he had not seen him for about twelve years, and Jesus was now reaching the age of thirty. And John saw the Spirit of God descending from heaven like a dove, and it rested upon the man, whom he recognized not. Then he remembered the words of him who sent him to baptize with water, saying: Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he that baptizes with the Holy Ghost. And John said unto Jesus: I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus replied: Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. And John bare record that when Jesus was baptized, and came out of the water, praying, the heavens did open, and the Holy Ghost descended in a form like a dove upon him; and a voice did come from heaven, saying: This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased.

Now Jesus being full of the Holy Spirit was led up into the wilderness, to be tried and tempted by the devil. For forty days he neither ate nor drank anything; and after forty days and nights were ended, he continued to hunger. And the devil said unto him: If thou be the Son of God, command this stone to be made bread. And Jesus answered him, saying: It is written, that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God which proceedeth out of His mouth. The devil then took him to a high mountain, and showed all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time, saying: All this power and glory I give unto thee, for it is delivered unto me to be given to whomsoever I will, if thou wilt worship me, and serve my kingdom. And Jesus replied: Get thee hence, Satan, for it is written that thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve. Then the devil took him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said: If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence, for it is written that He shall give His angels charge over thee, to keep thee, and their hands shall bear thee up, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone. And Jesus said: It is also written that thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. Then the devil departed from him for a season, and the angels ministered unto him.

And when Jesus' days of fasting and temptations were over, he returned to Bethabara, where John was yet baptizing, for there was enough water. When John saw him at a distance, he said unto his disciples: Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world, and redeems men. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man who is preferred before me; I know him not, but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, saying: Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he that baptizes with the Holy Ghost; and I bear record that I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

The next day when John and two of his disciples saw him walking in the village, they heard their master say: Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples followed Jesus. When Jesus saw them following, he said unto them: What seek ye? They said unto him: Rabbi (meaning Master), where dwellest thou? He said unto them, Come and see. They came to Nazareth, and abode with him that day, for it was about the tenth hour. One of the two who followed Jesus was named Andrew, a fisherman from Bethsaida, and he went straightway to his brother Simon (Peter), who lived in Capernaum with his wife and mother-in-law, and said unto him: Behold we have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ; and he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus saw him, he said: Thou art Simon the son of Jona (Jonah), and thou shalt be called Kephas (or Cephas, which in Aramaic meant rock or stone; Peter is the Greek and Indian equivalent). The next day Jesus went into Galilee, looking for Philip, who was also of the city of Bethsaida. When he found him, he said: Come follow me. Then Philip found Nathanael, and said unto him: We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. And Nathanael said unto him: Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip said unto him, Come and see. And when Jesus saw Nathanael, he said: Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile! Nathanael said unto him: Whence knowest thou me? And Jesus answered, saying: Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee. Nathanael answered, and said: Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the king of Israel. Jesus said unto him: Because I said unto thee, that I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? Thou shalt see greater things than these; verily, verily, I say unto you, hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

Lamb or goatskin water containers in use today.

And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; both Jesus and his followers were invited to the feast, and Mary the mother of Jesus was already there. And it came to pass that the guests wanted wine; and the mother of Jesus came to him, and said: They have no wine. Jesus said unto her: O the woman of my Father, what wilt thou have me to do? Mine hour is not yet come. So his mother sent the servants of the household unto her son, saying: Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it. Now there were set six waterpots of stone, used for the purposes of purification by the Jews, containing about two or three firkins (lamb or goat skin water containers) apiece. Jesus told the servants to fill the waterpots with water; and they filled them up to the brim. And then he said unto them: Draw out now, and serve it to the governor of the feast; and they did so. When the head of the feast had tasted the water which was made wine, he knew not from where it came, but the servants which drew the water knew. Then the governor of the feast called the bridegroom, and said: Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine and when men have well drunk, then he bringeth that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now!

This was Jesus' first miracle in Cana of Galilee, and the manifestation of his glory; and his followers believed on him. After this he went to Capernaum with his mother, his brothers, and his followers; and they tarried there a few days. And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and found in the temple the vendors of oxen, sheep and pigeons (doves), and the moneychangers.

And when he had made a whip of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, the sheep, the oxen; and poured out the changer's money, and overthrew the tables, and said unto them that sold pigeons and doves: Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise. And Jesus' followers, or his disciples, remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath consumed me. Then the Jews began to bully him, saying: What sign showest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things? And Jesus answered: Destroy this temple (pointing unto himself), and in three days it shall be raised up again. Then the Jews mocked him, saying: Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days? And they understood not that he spake of the temple of his body. And Jesus did many miracles on the day of the feast of the passover, and many believed in his name; but Jesus entrusted not unto them, for he knew what was in man's heart.

Nicodemus

Now, there was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. He came to Jesus by night, and said: Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. And Jesus answered, and said unto him: Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus said unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter into his mother's womb, and be born? Jesus answered: Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God; that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again; the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is everyone that is born of the Spirit. Nicodemus answered and said: How can these things be? And Jesus said unto him: Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things? Verily, verily, I say unto thee: We speak that which we know, and testify that which we have seen, and ye receive not our witness; if ye believe not in the earthly things which have been revealed unto you, how shall ye believe in the heavenly things? And no man in the flesh ascendeth up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man, which dwelleth in heaven. And as Moses lifted up the Serpent in the wilderness, even so the Son of Man must be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son; that whosoever believeth in him shall not perish, but have everlasting life. Behold, God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the Only Begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation — that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil; for everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that abides in truth and doeth good works cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought of God.

After these things Jesus and his disciples sailed down to Salim, on their way to the land of Judaea; and they tarried there, and Jesus gave his disciples power and authority to baptize in his name; and they did baptize many in the springs of Aenon, near Salim, where John was also baptizing. Then arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about the manner of purification; and they came to John, and said: Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, of whom thou barest record, behold, the same baptizes (with the Holy Ghost), and all men go to him. John answered, saying: A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven. Ye yourselves bear me witness that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom; but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice; this my joy therefore is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease; for he that cometh from above is above all, and he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth; yea, he that cometh from heaven is above all. And what he hath seen and heard, and knows to be true, the same he testifieth, but no man receiveth his testimony. He that receiveth his testimony sets to his seal that God is true. For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God, and God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. Therefore, he that believeth in the Son hath everlasting life; and he that despiseth the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth in him.

And John the Baptist also testified of Jesus, saying: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God; all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men; the light shineth in the darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not. And John, a man sent from God, bare witness of the Light; he was not the Light, but was sent to bear witness of the Light, that men through him might believe. Jesus was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He was in the world, but not of the world; the world was made by him, and the world knew him not; he came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him and believed on his name, he gave them power to become the sons of God; to those who were born not of blood, neither of the flesh, nor the will of man, but of God. Yea, the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among men, and angels, and gods, and among the prophets, priests and kings; and people beheld his glory and his powers of miracles, signs, and wonders, and understood his words by the power of the Holy Spirit. He being the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, came after John, but was preferred before him. And the fulness of his Light was received by all his disciples, and those who believed on him, grace for grace; for as the law was given by Moses, grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. No man hath seen God in the flesh, but the Only Begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father. And when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask John who he was, John confessed and denied not, saying: I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he said: I am not. Art thou a prophet? And he said, No. Then they said unto John: Then who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that have sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? He said: I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Isaiah (Esaias). Then said the Pharisees and Sadducees that were sent from Jerusalem unto John, saying: Why then baptize thou, if thou be not the Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet? John answered them, saying: I baptize with water; but there standeth one amongst you, whom ye know not; he it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

Then Jesus and his disciples, after tarrying in Salim, and baptizing a great multitude of people in the springs of Aenon, journeyed down the Jordan river, then unto Jerusalem; where the Pharisees and Sadducees brought dissension among the people, saying, Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John. But Jesus himself baptized none of them with water, his disciples did; and he gave the Holy Ghost unto those who were baptized in his name, and sought him in meekness and humility.

And it came to pass that John the Baptist was shut up in a prison in Tiberius by Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee, the second husband of Herodias; for John reproved him of his sins and transgressions, and for Herodias' sake, his brother's wife, saying: It is not lawful for thee to have her. Although Herod desired to put him to death, he feared the multitude; because they counted him a prophet. And John was shut up for about a year (from passover time 30 A.D. to about the same time 31 A.D.).

After this, Jesus and his disciples left Judaea to return into Galilee, by the way of Samaria; and they reached Sychar, near the parcel of ground which Jacob gave to his son Joseph, near Jacob's well (located between mounts Gerizim and Ebal). Now Jesus being wearied with his journey, sat on this well, while his disciples went to the city to buy food, and it was about the sixth hour. Then came a woman of Samaria to draw water, and Jesus said unto her, Woman, wilt thou give me some water? And the woman replied, saying, How is it that thou being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? For the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans. Jesus said unto her: If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked him to give thee the living water, even the water that giveth life. And the woman understood him not, and said, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep, from whence then hast thou that living water? Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle? Jesus answered, and said: Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall be filled, and shall thirst no more; and it shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. The woman replied, saying, Sir give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw. And Jesus said, Go call thy man, and come hither. The woman answered, I have no husband. Jesus said, Thou hast well said, I have no husband; for thou hast had five husbands, and he with whom thou now liveth is not thy husband. Then the woman said to him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet; our fathers worshipped in this mountain (meaning Mount Ebal), and ye say that Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship. And Jesus said unto her: Woman, I say unto thee, that the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem worship the Father; for ye know not what ye worship, but we know what we worship, for the salvation is of the Jews. The hour cometh, and now is, when the true believers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is of the Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit and in truth. The woman said unto him, I know that the Messiah cometh, which is called Christ; and when he is come, he will tell us all things. And Jesus said unto her: I AM he that speaketh unto thee.

Then returned the disciples of Jesus from the city, and marvelled that he talked with the woman; yet no man said, Why talkest thou with the Samaritan woman. And the woman left her water pot, and went her way into the city, saying, Come ye, see a man which told me all things that I ever did; is not this the Christ? Then the Samaritans of the city began to gather together to come and see him. In the meantime, his disciples begged him, saying, Master, eat; but he ate not, and said: I have meat to eat that ye know not of. Therefore his disciples began to mutter, saying, Hath any man perchance brought him to eat? And Jesus said: My meat is to do with the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh the harvest; for, behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look at the fields; they are white already to harvest; and he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gather-eth fruit unto life eternal; that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together. And herein is the other saying true, One soweth and another reapeth, for I sent you to reap that which whereon ye bestowed no labor; other men labored and ye entered into their labors.

After this, many of the Samaritans came from the city, who heard the woman's testimony, saying, He told me all that I ever did. So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they believed on him, and besought him that he would tarry with them; and Jesus abode there two days. Many more believed on him when he spake unto them, and they said unto the woman, saying, Now we believe, not because of thy testimony, but because we ourselves have seen and heard him; and know for a surety that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world. Then Jesus and his disciples departed thence, and went into Galilee. Although Jesus himself testified, saying, A prophet has no honor in his own country, when he was come into Galilee they received him well, having witnessed all the things that he did in Jerusalem, for many Galileans also went to Jerusalem for the annual feast.

Now when Jesus heard that John was cast into prison, he left Nazareth and came and dwelt in Capernaum, upon the coast of the sea of Galilee, in the borders of Zebulun and Naphtali; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet Isaiah, saying; The lands of Zebulun and Naphtali, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, in the Galilee of the Gentiles, the people which sat in darkness shall see great light; and to those that sat in the regions and shadow of death, the light shall spring up. And from this time forward Jesus began to preach, saying: Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

And Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. When a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum, heard that Jesus had returned from Judaea, he went to him, and besought him that he would come to heal his son, for he was at the point of death. Jesus said unto the man: Wilt thou believe without seeing signs and wonders? The nobleman answered, I believe thou canst heal my son; sir, come down ere my son die. Then Jesus said unto him: Go thy way, thy son liveth; and the man believed the words which Jesus spake, and went his way. And as he was going toward Capernaum (about fifteen miles from Cana, on the northwest shore of the sea of Galilee), his servants met him along the way, saying: Master thy son liveth! Then he inquired of them the hour when he began to recover; and they said unto him, yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him. Now the nobleman knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said to him, Thy son liveth. Thence-forth himself and his whole household believed on Jesus, and worshipped him. This was his second miracle which he did in Cana, and the first after his return from Judaea into Galilee.

Then it came to pass that Jesus was walking by the sea of Galilee; and he saw Simon Peter and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea, for they were fishers; and he said unto them: Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets, and followed him. Going on from thence, Jesus saw other two brethren, James and John, the sons of Zebedee, in a ship with their father Zebedee, mending their nets; and he called them by their names and asked them to follow him; and they immediately left their ship and their father, and followed him.

And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom; and healing all manner of sickness and disease among the people. His fame was heard throughout Syria; and they brought unto him their sick people afflicted with diverse ailments and diseases; there were among them who were possessed of devils, and lunatics, and those who had the palsy; and they were all healed. And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, Decapolis, Jerusalem, in Judaea, and from beyond Jordan.

On one sabbath day Jesus and his disciples entered a synagogue in Capernaum, and Jesus taught the gospel; and they were astonished at his doctrine, for he taught them with authority and knowledge, and not as the scribes. And there was in the synagogue a man with unclean spirit, and he cried out saying: Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying: Hold thy peace; and called upon the unclean spirit to come out of him; and, behold, after the evil spirit had torn him, the man cried out with a loud voice, and the spirit came out of him, and he dropped exhausted to the ground. And the congregation was amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying: What thing is this? What new doctrine is this? For with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him. And when they came out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon Peter and Andrew, with James and John. But Simon's mother-in-law lay sick of a fever, and immediately they told him of her condition. Jesus came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she went about doing her chores, and ministered unto them. In the evening, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and those possessed with devils; and they were gathered together at the door. And he healed many, and cast out devils, and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him. In the early morning, Jesus went out to a solitary place, and there prayed; and Simon and his disciples followed after him. When they found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee. And he said unto them: Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also, for it is for this cause the Father hath brought me hither.

And Jesus preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils; and there came a leper and beseeched him, kneeling down, saying: If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, saying; Be thou cleansed! And as soon as he had spoken, the leprosy left him, and he was cleansed. And Jesus straitly charged, and sent him away, saying: Say thou nothing unto any man; but go thy way, and show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. But he couldn't withhold his emotion, and began to spread it widely unto people; insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter the city, and found refuge in desert places. And he returned to Nazareth, and according to his custom, he went to the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up to read from the Torah; and there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Isaiah; and when he opened the book, he found these words written on that page — The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek, and the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted; to proclaim liberty to the captives and free them from their prisons; to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. He then closed the book and gave it to the minister, and sat down. The eyes of all the congregation were fastened on him; and he was moved upon by the power of the Holy Ghost. He stood up and said: This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. And all bare record, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth; and they said, Is not this Joseph's son? And Jesus said unto them: Ye will surely say unto me this proverb -- Physician, heal thyself; whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country. Verily, I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country. But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elijah, when the heavens were shut up three years and six months, and famine waxed sore throughout the land; but unto none of them was Elijah sent, save unto a woman in Sarepta, a city of Sidon, that was a widow; and many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet, and none of them was cleansed, save Naaman the Syrian (during the reigns of Jehoram of Israel and Ben-hadad of Syria, in the tenth century B.C.).

When the congregation heard these words of Jesus, they were filled with wrath; and rose up and thrust him out of the city. And he returned to Capernaum, and taught there on the sabbath days. They were astonished at his doctrine, for his word was with power. And it came to pass that as he stood by the lake of Gennesaret (near the northwest shore of the sea of Galilee), people gathered from diverse places, and pressed upon him to hear the word of God; and he saw two ships anchored by the lake; and the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets. Jesus entered into one of the ships, which belonged to Simon Peter, and prayed that he would thrust out a little from the land; then he sat down and taught the people out of the ship. When Jesus had finished speaking, he said unto Peter: Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for the haul. And Simon said unto him: Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless, at thy words I will let down the net. And when they had done this, their net was filled with a great multitude of fishes, so much so that their net brake; and they beckoned unto their partners that were on the other ship, to come and help them. They came and together they filled both the ships with fishes, so much so that their ships began to sink. When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down on Jesus' knees, saying: Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord; for he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the haul of the fishes which they had taken; so were James and John, the sons of Zebedee, who were partners with Simon.

And Jesus said unto Simon: Fear not, from henceforth thou shalt catch men; and when they brought their ship ashore, they foresook all, and followed him. And they came to Capernaum, where Jesus was teaching the Pharisees and Sadducees who came to see him from every town in Galilee, from Jerusalem, Judaea and Decapolis; for the power of the Lord was present to heal them. Behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with palsy; and they sought means to bring him in, and lay him before him. And when they could not find their way past the multitude of people, they went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling with his couch into the midst before Jesus. When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the man: Thy sins are forgiven thee. And the scribes and Pharisees began to reason among themselves, saying: Who is this who speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins, but God alone? But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he said unto them: What reason ye in your hearts? Whether is easier to say, Thy sins are forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk? that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power upon the earth to forgive sins. Then he said unto the sick of the palsy: I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go into thine house. And immediately he rose up before them, took up his bed, and departed to his own house, glorifying God. And they were all amazed, and glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying: We have seen strange things today.

Then Jesus saw a publican in Capernaum, named Levi Matthew, son of Alphaeus, sitting at the receipt of custom, and he said unto him: Follow me; and he left all, rose up, and followed him. And Matthew made him a great feast in his own house; and behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat at meat with him and his disciples; but the scribes and Pharisees murmured, saying: Why do ye eat and drink with the publicans and sinners? And Jesus said unto them: They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick; I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. And they said unto him: Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink? And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bridegroom fast, while the bridegroom is with them? But the days will come, when the bridegroom will be taken away from them, then shall they fast in those days. No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto a worn out garment, for that which is put to mend it, even taketh away from the old garment, and the rent is made worse. Neither do men put new wine into decayed bottles, lest the bottles break, and the wine run out, and be wasted; but they put new wine into new bottles, that both be preserved. No man also having drunk old wine, straightway desireth new; for he saith, The old is better.

Shepherd and sheepfold in Palestine (in our generation)

The sheep gate in Jerusalem; and there was a pool called Bethesda nearby. Through this gate sheep were driven into the north end of the temple enclosure, to their stable.

After this there was a feast of the Jews,and Jesus and his disciples went down to Jerusalem. And here, by the sheep market, there was a pool having five porches, called Bethesda. In these porches lay a great multitude of impotent folks, those who were blind, leprous, withered and crippled, waiting for the movement in the water. For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water; and whosoever first, after the troubling of water, stepped into the pool, was made whole of whatever disease or infirmity he had. And a certain man was there, who had an infirmity thirty and eight years. When Jesus saw him lain, and knew that he had been now a long time in this condition, he said unto him, Wilt thou be made whole? The impotent man answered, saying, Sir, I have no man to put me into the pool, for when the water is troubled, another stronger than I am steppeth down before me. Jesus then said unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk. And immediately the man was made whole; he took up his bed, and walked. And on the selfsame day was the sabbath, and the Jews said unto him that was cured: It is the sabbath day, and it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed. And the man answered, saying: He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk. Then asked they him, What man is he who said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk? And he that was healed knew not who it was, for Jesus had disappeared in the multitude which followed him. Afterward Jesus found the selfsame man whom he had cured in the temple, and said unto him: Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon thee. The man departed and told the Jews that it was Jesus who made him whole.

Then the Jews sought counsel among themselves, to persecute him, and to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath day. And Jesus spake unto them, saying: My Father worketh this day, and I work; and the day he shall cease to work and rest, so shall I. Now the Jews were even more angry, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said that God was his Father, making himself equal with God. But Jesus said unto them: Verily, verily, I say unto you, the Son can do nothing of himself, but by the grace of his Father; for whatsoever things he doeth, the Son also doeth likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth him all things, the Son shall show even greater works than these, that ye may marvel and be amazed. For the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them, even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. And for the Father judgeth no man, he hath committed all judgement unto the Son; that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father; he that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which sent him. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that receiveth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life. The hour cometh, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they who receive the word shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and he hath given him authority to execute judgement also, because he is also the Son of Man. Marvel not at these things, for, behold, the hour (Day of Judgement; Yom el-Qiyamat) cometh, that they who have done good, shall be resurrected unto life; and they who have done evil, unto damnation.

I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear and see, I judge, and my judgement is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of my Father which hath sent me. If I bear witness of myself, I do it unto myself and my Father; therefore it shall not be true unto any in the world; but there is one that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he beareth of me is true — ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth; and ye yourselves call him a prophet, yet believe not his testimony. And if ye believe not the truth and light shown unto you by him who was a burning and shining light, likened to the Moon, which reflects the light of the Sun, how can ye believe in the Sun (Son); and if ye believe not in the Son, how can ye believe in the Father, whose light and truth is reflected both in the Son and the Moon. Yea, the Father himself beareth witness of me, as the Holy Ghost shall bear witness to both the Father and the Son. It is for this cause that ye are fallen, and dead in the Spirit; and ye have been visited with cursings, and not the blessings of the Father; because ye believed not in God nor obeyed his commandments, nor kept your vows; it is for this cause ye are given to the buffetings of Satan, to be chastized, and put through the refiner's furnace; to be redeemed and saved from the death which comes from the consequence of sins and transgressions, on the condition of abiding in the covenants which ye shall make, and forsaking evil; and after repentance of thy sins, a remission of thy sins is to be granted by baptism; and the Holy Ghost is to be conferred upon those who are baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the Living God.

Therefore, verily, verily, I say unto you, Search ye well the scriptures, for in them ye shall find eternal life, and in them ye shall find me. The Son of God receiveth not the honor of men, but of the Father; neither doth he glorify himself, but to the Father belongeth all the glory, forever and ever; for only the devil seeketh to glorify himself and seeketh the honor of men. I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you; how can ye believe, who receive honor one of another; and seek not the honor that cometh from God alone? Do not think I accuse you to the Father; but there is one that accuseth you, in whom you trust, even Moses; for had ye believed in the words of Moses, ye would have believed me, for he hath written about me; and if ye believe not in his words, how can ye believe my words? After this Jesus and his disciples departed to the land of Galilee.

On their way to Galilee, it came to pass on the second sabbath of the month Jesus and his disciples went through the corn fields; and his disciples were hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn to eat. And the Pharisees saw it, and said unto him: Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath day. And Jesus answered: Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and all that were with him? How he entered the house of God in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, which was not lawful to be eaten by men, but by the priests alone; and all the many that were with him did eat? Or have ye not read in the law, how on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profaned the sabbath, and they are counted blameless? And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath; therefore, the Son of Man is Lord also of the sabbath.

It came to pass that on the following sabbath he entered into the synagogue to teach, and there was a man whose right hand was withered. And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, if he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him. But Jesus knew their thoughts and spake unto the man whose hand was withered, saying: Rise up, and stand forth in the midst, and he arose and stood forth; then he said unto the congregation, I will ask you one thing — Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good or to do evil? To save life, or to destroy it? What man is there among you that shall have one sheep, and if he fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift him out? How much more then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore, verily, I say unto you, it is justified to do that which is needful and right on the sabbath days. And looking round about upon them, he said unto the man: Stretch forth thy hand, and he did so and his hand was restored whole as the other.

Then the Pharisees went out, and took council with the Herodians against Jesus, how they might destroy him. But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea (of Galilee); and a great multitude followed him from Galilee, and Judaea and Jerusalem, from Idumea, from beyond Jordan, from Tyre and Sidon, when they had heard what great things he did. And he commanded his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the great number of multitude, lest they should throng him. For he had healed many, and many with plagues and afflictions were among the multitude; insomuch that they pressed upon him to touch him, and unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down to the ground before him, saying: Thou art indeed the Son of God, and our Messiah! And during his retreat he healed many, and spake these words unto his disciples: That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Isaiah (Esaias) the prophet, saying, Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved in whom my soul is well pleased; I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall show judgement unto the Gentiles. He shall not strive nor cry for help neither any man shall hear his voice on the streets; a bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgement unto victory; and in his name shall the Gentiles trust; a light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of Israel shall he be.

And now the scribes and Pharisees were filled with madness; and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus. He knew their thoughts and retired into a mountain near Capernaum with many of his disciples; here he prayed all night, and the words which he spake and prayed unto God cannot be written. Then Jesus called unto whom he would, and they came unto him; and he ordained twelve men as his apostles, to be a special witness of the name of Jesus Christ in all the world; the Twelve constituting an administrative council in the work of the ministry; and when a vacancy occurred, another was divinely appointed in his stead. They were empowered with authority to heal sickness and disease, and to cast out devils; and these are the names of the apostles which Jesus chose for the ministry — Simon (whom he surnamed Peter, meaning rock), and his brother Andrew; James and John (the sons of Zebedee), Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Levi Matthew the publican (son of Alphaeus), James (son of Clopas or Alphaeus), Lebbaeus surnamed Thaddaeus, Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot who betrayed him.

These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them to go not into the way of the Gentiles, nor to any city of the Samaritans; but to go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye travel preach the gospel of the kingdom of heaven, saying: Behold, the kingdom of heaven is at hand. And heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses; nor scrip (traveller's bag) for your journey; neither two coats, nor shoes, nor yet staves; for the workman is worthy of his hire, you and your households shall be provided for; and in whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy, and there ye abide till ye go thence. And when ye come into an house, present yourselves with salutation. If the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it, but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet in secret; verily I say unto you, it would have been more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, than for that city, in the day of judgement.

Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. Beware of all men, for they would deliver you up to the councils, and scourge you in their synagogues; and ye will be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles. But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in the very hour what ye shall speak; for it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you. A brother may deliver up his brother to death, and the father his child, and children may rise up against their parents and cause them to be put to death, and ye be hated of all men for my name's sake; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

And if they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another; for verily I say unto you, ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of Man be come. Know ye also that the disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord; it is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household? Fear them not therefore, for there is not covered that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known. What I tell you in darkness, speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, preach ye upon the housetops. Fear them not that kill the body, and not the soul, but rather fear those that can destroy both soul and body. Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? And one of them falleth not to the ground without your Father; and the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not, therefore, for ye are of more value than the sparrows.

Whosoever shall confess me before men, him I will confess also before the Father; but whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven. Think not that I am come to send peace on earth, but to send a sword. For I am come to set the sons of perdition at variance against their fathers, the daughters against their mothers, and daughters-in-law against their mother-in-law; and the foes of transgressors and sinners shall be found in their own household. He that loveth his father or mother, his children or his household more than me is not worthy of me; he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me; and he that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loses his life for my sake shall find it. He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

And it came to pass that he came down with the twelve whom he had chosen, and stood in the plain; and a great company of his disciples and multitude followed him there to see and touch him, and to be healed of their diseases; and many were healed of their afflictions and diseases, and unclean spirits. But the number of the multitude was so great that he and his disciples had to move into a mountain near Capernaum, lest they be crushed by the force of the multitude. Then Jesus lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said:

Blessed are the poor (in pride and possessions), for theirs is the kingdom of heaven;

Blessed are the hungry, for they shall be filled.

Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted.

Blessed are they that are hated by men, and are separated from their company, and are persecuted and reproached, and cast out in my name's sake; for, behold, their reward is great in heaven; for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when they revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven; for so persecuted they the prophets who came before you.

But woe unto them that are rich unto themselves, and impart not of their substance, for they have received their consolation; woe unto them that are full, for they shall hunger; woe unto them that laugh now, for they shall mourn and weep; woe unto them who are accepted of all men, for so were the false prophets who were accepted of their fathers. Verily, verily, I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them that hate you; bless them that curse you, and pray for them that despitefully use you; and unto him that smiteth you on one cheek, offer him also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak, forbid him not to take thy coat also. Give to every man that asketh of thee; and him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again. And do unto others as you would that they do unto you. For if ye love those only who love you, what reward have ye? For the sinners also love those that love them. If ye do good unto those only who do good unto you, what reward have ye? For even the sinners do the same. And if ye lend unto those only from whom ye hope to receive, what reward have ye? For sinners also lend to sinner even the same.

Verily, verily, I say unto you — Love ye your enemies and do good, give generously but expect nothing, let truth be the guiding light and the way unto the end; for everything in the kingdom of Heaven is built upon the eternal lights and truths. Look at evil as evil, and nothing else, and defend yourselves against it, cleanse yourselves, and free yourselves from it. Abide in all righteousness against the tempter's snare unto the end. And your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest. For the Father in Heaven is kind and merciful unto the unthankful and the evil, be ye therefore merciful also as your Father. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive and ye shall be forgiven; give, and it shall be given unto you according to your measure — therefore if ye mete withal a good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, the same shall be meted out unto your portion.

Then Jesus spake a parable, unto his twelve apostles whom he had chosen, saying: Can the blind lead the blind? Verily, I say Nay, lest both fall into the ditch. Therefore let there be no disputations among you. Now I give you a parable: Once there was a certain ruler in the land beyond the Hindush (Indus) River, who called his minister and said, Gather together in one place all the men in this region who were born blind, and show them an elephant. So the man did as he was bidden, and after he had gathered them all together, he proclaimed in a loud voice, Hear ye, O blind, such as this is an elephant. And he presented to one the head of the elephant, to another its ears, to another a tusk, and to others, the trunk, the foot, back, tail and tuft of the tail, saying to each that it was the elephant. Thereupon the ruler of the land went up to the blind men and asked each: Tell me, what sort of thing is an elephant? Behold, those who had been presented with the head, replied: An elephant is like a pot; those who touched the ear replied, An elephant is like a winnowing basket; and others said it was a broom, a pestle, a pillar, or a plough, and so on; then they began to quarrel, shouting, It is such and such, or it is not such and such; it is not so or it is so, and the like, till they began to fight with their fists over the matter. Such are they among the priests, rulers and holy men, who indulge in constant disputations, knowing not anything of the kingdom of God; such are they who abide not in my Law, and wander in unbelief, left alone to kick against the pricks. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that abideth in my words, the same hath seen the elephant, and none other; it is he that shall be the son of the Highest, and in the kingdom of heaven he shall dwell forever.

Remember ye also that the disciple is not above his master; but everyone that is perfect shall be as his master. And why seest thou the mote (chip, splinter) in thy brother's eye, and perceiveth not the beam which is in thine own eye? Or how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote which is in thine eye, when thou thyself seest not the beam in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote which is in thy brother's eye.

For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit, nor doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit, every tree is known by the fruit it bears; of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

And Jesus continued to speak unto his apostles, saying; And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my words, and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is likened: He is like a man that built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock; and when the flood arose, the stream beat upon the house with all its force, and could not shake it, for it was founded upon a rock. But he that heareth my word, and doeth it not, is like a man that without a foundation built an house upon the earth, against which when the stream beat upon it vehemently, the house fell immediately, and the ruin of that house was great.

Ye (meaning the apostles) are the salt of the earth; but if the salt hath lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. Ye are also the light of the world; a city that is set on an hill cannot be hid; neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are there. Therefore, let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. Think not that I am come to destroy the law (of Moses), or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass away, one yod or a tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Therefore whosoever shall break any of the least of these commandments, or shall teach men so, shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever abides in them, and teaches so, shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shall not kill, and whosoever killeth shall be in danger of hellfire and judgement; but I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of judgement; and whosoever shall say to his brother Raca (meaning contempt or derision or you fool), shall be in danger of the council and hell fire. Therefore if thou bringeth thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, first be reconciled to thy brother, then come and offer thy gift. Agree with thine adversary quickly, if possible, while thou art in the way with him, lest at any time he rise up against thee and deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, to be cast into prison; verily, I say unto thee, Thou shall by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

Ye have also heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery; but, verily, I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery in his heart, this being a greater evil than the evil itself. Therefore if thy right eye among you offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and that not thy whole body be cast into hell. And if thy right hand among you offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee, for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members perish, than that thy whole body be cast into hell. Behold, it hath been said, whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement; but I say unto you, that whosoever putteth away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication or adultery, causeth her to commit adultery, and whoso marries her committeth adultery.

Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, that you shall not forswear thyself (meaning not to break your oath or vow), but perform unto the Lord thine oaths; but, verily I say unto you, Swear not at all — neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by earth, for it is his footstool; and not by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great king; and not even shalt thou swear by thine head, because thyself alone canst not make one hair white or black. Therefore let your communication be right and true, be it yea, yea and nay, nay; for whatsoever is more or less than this cometh out of evil.

Ye have also heard that it was said by them of old time, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil, but look the evil straight in the eye; whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also; and if any man sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also; and whosoever compelleth thee to go a mile, go with him twain; give to him that would borrow of thee, but expect not that he should return unto thee that which he has borrowed. Heard ye not also that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good unto them that hate you; and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect.

Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them; otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men; verily, I say unto you, they have their reward. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth; that thine alms be in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly. And when thou prayest be not thou like the hypocrites, for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily, I say unto you, they have their glory and their own reward. But thou, when thou prayest, enter into the closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to the Father which seeth in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly. When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do, for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them, for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, even before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye, as I pray unto my Father:

> Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy Name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory for ever. Amen.

Moreover, if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Father in heaven will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses. And when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance; for they disfigure their faces that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, they have their glory and their own reward; but thou when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face; that thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon the earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up your treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal; for where your treasure is, there will your heart also be.

And Jesus continued to speak unto the Twelve whom he had chosen, saying: Behold, the light of the body is the eye; therefore, if your eye be single to the glory of God, thy whole body shall be full of light; but if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness; therefore if the light within thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! Remember ye also that no man can serve two masters — for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold onto one, and despise the other; ye cannot worship both God and man. Give not much thought for your life, or what ye shall eat, or drink, or put upon your body; is not life more than food, raiment, shelter, and lusts and pleasures of life? Consider the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your Father in heaven feedeth them; are ye not better than they? And behold the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither they spin, yet even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of them. Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature? Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more attend to your needs, O ye of little faith?

Verily, I say unto you, take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or What shall we drink? or How shall we be provided raiment and shelter? For after all such things do the Gentiles seek. Know ye not that your Father in heaven knoweth that ye have need of all these things? Therefore, seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Take no thought for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself; sufficient unto this day is the evil thereof. Judge not, that ye be not judged; for with the same measure with which ye judge others, ye shall also be judged. Give not that which is holy unto the dogs; neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you. Ask, and it shall be given; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh, receiveth; he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. What man is there among you, whom if his son asketh for bread, will give him a stone? Or if he asketh for a fish, will give him a serpent? Therefore, if man being evil knoweth how to give good gifts unto his children, how much more shall your Father in heaven know and care for his children, and how much more marvelous are his gifts unto them who ask him? Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do even the same unto them, for this is the law and the prophets.

Beware ye of the false prophets, that come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so, every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit; a good tree bringeth not forth evil fruit, nor a corrupt tree bringeth forth good fruit. And every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore, by their fruits ye shall know them.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of the Father, and keepeth the commandments. Many will say when the time of their judgement and resurrection is come, saying: Lord, Lord, have we not prophecied in thy name, and cast out devils, and in thy name did many marvelous works? And for they kept not my commandments, verily, verily, I profess unto them, I never knew you; Depart from me, ye that abide in sins and transgressions. Therefore, whosoever learneth my words and doeth them, I liken him unto a wise man, that built his house upon a rock; and the rains descended, the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock. But every one that doeth not the word, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who built his house upon sand and clay; and the rains descended, the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon the house, and it fell, and great was the fall of it.

And when Jesus had made an end to his sayings, his apostles were amazed and astonished at the doctrines and truths he taught unto them; for he taught them as one having authority from God, and not as the scribes and the Pharisees. And he came down from the mountain with his apostles, and a great multitude followed him.

Then a certain centurion of Capernaum, when he heard of Jesus, remembered his servant who was dear unto him, that he was sick of the palsy and ready to die. He immediately gathered up the elders of the town, and sent them to Jesus beseeching him to come and heal his servant. And they came to Jesus and besought him instantly, saying: Lord, the servant lieth sick at home of the palsy, ready to die; and he is worthy of thy blessing, for he loveth our nation, and hath worked on building us a synagogue. And Jesus replied: I will come and heal him. And Jesus went with them; and he was not far from the house, when the centurion sent a messenger unto him, saying: Lord, trouble not thyself, that thou shouldest come under my roof, for I am not worthy of thy presence; but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; to another, Come, and he cometh, and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled on the man, and looked upon the multitude and said, Verily, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And they that were sent by the centurion, when they returned to the house, found that the servant that was sick of the palsy was made whole.

The next day Jesus, and many of his disciples and followers, sailed down the Jordan, then went to a city called Nain or Nein (a distance of about twenty-three miles separating Capernaum from this city). Now when he came near a gate which was in the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out in a coffin upon the shoulders of men; the only son of a mother, who was a widow; and many people of the city marched in the funeral procession. And when Jesus saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, weep not; and he came near and touched the coffin and its stand, while they that bare him stood still, and said: Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak; and he took the lad and gave to his mother. Then came a fear upon all, and they glorified God, saying: A great prophet is arisen among us, and our God hath visited his people! And this news of him went forth throughout all regions of the land and unto many countries.

Nain (Naim, Nein) Here Jesus resurrected the only son of a widow.

Now, John the Baptist at this time was in a prison in Galilee; and when his disciples told him all these things which Jesus did, he sent two of his disciples unto Jesus, saying: Art thou he that should come? Or look we for another? And in the same hour Jesus cured many of their infirmities, and sicknesses, and evil spirits, and unto many who were blind, he gave sight. Then Jesus answered the disciples of John, saying; Go ye your way, and tell John that which ye have seen and heard, and how the gospel is preached unto the poor. Blessed indeed is he, that shall not be offended in me. And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, saying; What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind? But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they that are gorgeously apparelled and live delicately, are in king's courts. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. This is he of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, and he shall prepare the way before thee. Verily, I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violence take it by force; for all the prophets and the law prophecied concerning John, that this is Elijah (or Elias), which was to come; he that hath ears to hear, let him hear. And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, glorified God, being baptized with the baptism of John; but the Pharisees and the lawyers rejected the counsel of God, being not baptized of him. And Jesus said unto the multitude, ye ask me how I should liken the men of this generation, and what they are like? Verily, I say unto you, they are likened unto children sitting in the marketplace, and calling unto one another, saying, We have played pipes unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not wept. And, for John came neither eating nor drinking, ye say, he follows the devil's way; and now the Son of Man is come eating and drinking, and ye say, Behold a man gluttonous, a winebibber, a friend of the publicans and sinners! But wisdom is justified of his children.

Then Jesus began to upbraid the cities, wherein most of his mighty works were done, because the people repented not of their sins, iniquities, and ways of error, and said: Woe unto thee, Chorazin! Woe unto thee Bethsaida; for if the same mighty works would have been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have long ago repented in sackcloth and ashes. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell; for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained unto this day. But, verily, I say unto you, it would be better for Tyre and Sidon and Sodom in the day of Judgement, than for you. After this, Jesus lifted up his hands, and prayed, saying: I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and the prudent, and hast revealed unto the babes and the sucklings. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight. Thou hast delivered all things unto thy Son; and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son; and to whomsoever he would the son revealeth in the name of the Father. Amen.

After this, Jesus looked upon the multitude, and said: Come unto me, O ye heavy laden, and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon yourselves, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for my yoke is easy, and my burden light. And it came to pass that one of the Pharisees named Simon desired him that he would eat with him; and he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat. Then, behold, a woman of the city, who was known to be a sinner, when she heard that Jesus sat down to meat at the Pharisee's house, she brought an alabaster box of ointment; and stood at his feet behind him, weeping, so much so that his feet were bathed in her tears; and she did wipe them with the hair of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment. When the Pharisee who had bidden him saw it, he said in his heart, This man, if he were a prophet, should have known who and what manner of woman this is who toucheth him, for she is a sinner. And Jesus knew the thought of his heart, and said unto him, saying: Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And the man said, Master, say on. There was a certain creditor that had two debtors, the one owed five hundred dinarii, and the other fifty; and when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most? Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And Jesus said unto the Pharisee, Thou hast rightly judged; then he pointed toward that woman, saying; Simon, seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, and thou gavest me no water for my weary feet; but this woman hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head, albeit she is not of the house of Israel; thou offered me no kiss, but this woman since the time I entered thine house, hast not ceased to kiss my feet; my head with oil thou didst not anoint, but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. Wherefore, I say unto thee, her sins which are many, are forgiven, for she loved much; but to whom little is given, the same loveth little. And he said unto the woman: Thy sins are forgiven; and they who sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also? And he blessed the woman, saying: Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace and sin no more.

Then Jesus and his apostles departed, and continued to preach in every city and village of Galilee, showing them the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. And a certain woman called Mary Magdalene, out of her went seven devils, with whom she was possessed; and she was healed of her infirmities and of her evil spirits; and Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others who ministered unto him of their substance, were blessed and healed.

And Jesus began to teach by the sea of Galilee; and there was gathered unto him a great multitude so much so that he entered into a ship, and sat down, and taught from there, while the multitude waited at the seashore. And he taught them many things in parables:

A sower went out to sow his seed; and as he sowed, some fell by the way side, others were trodden down, and devoured by the fowls of the air. Some fell upon stony ground, where it had not much soil. And as soon as they sprung up, they withered away, because when the sun shone upon them they had no depth of earth for the roots to take hold and grow. Some fell among the thorns, and the thorns sprung up with them, and choked the seedlings, and they yielded no fruit. Yet others fell in good ground, and brought forth fruit, some thirty fold, some sixty fold, and some an hundred fold. And Jesus cried, saying, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. When Jesus was alone with the twelve and his disciples, they asked him of the parable, saying: Master, why speakest thou in parables, for we know not what might this parable mean? And he replied: Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God; but unto others who are without, all these things are given in parables; that seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; and in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah (Esaias), which saith, they shall hear and not understand, and they shall see and not perceive. For this people's heart is waxed wicked and their eyes of understanding can not be opened. Therefore both their eyes and ears are given to receiving the sensations only; and are void of all knowledge, and are closed, lest at any time they should see the unseen and hear the unknown, and understand with their hearts, and then turn around to rend the kingdom and trample upon it, to weaken it and to destroy it.

But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear. For, verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men of before times desired to see those things which ye have seen and shall yet see, and to hear those things which ye have heard, and shall yet hear; but they saw them not. Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower — The seed is the word of God, and the sower soweth the seed; those by the wayside are they that hear the word and understand it not; and immediately the devil cometh and snatcheth away the word which was sown in their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. Those on the stony ground are they that when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with joy and gladness, but because they have no root in themselves, for a time they believe, and in the time of temptations, or when afflictions and persecutions are brought upon them for the word's sake, they are offended and fall away. And those that are sown among thorns are they that heareth the word; but the cares of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches and pleasures of life, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful. Albeit he that receiveth seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; and bringeth forth fruit some thirty fold, some sixty, some an hundred.

The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man that sowed good seed in a fertile ground. But while the man slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way; when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth foliage, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the sower asked their master, saying, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? From whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the time of harvest; then I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to be burnt; then gather ye the wheat into my barn.

Another parable Jesus put forth unto them, saying: The kingdom of heaven is likened to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field; which is the least of all seeds; but when it is grown, it becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches, and the fowls of the air lodge under its shadow and upon its branches. And Jesus began to give them parable upon parable concerning the kingdom of heaven; and without a parable he spake not this day; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying: I will open my mouth in parables, and utter things which have been kept hid from the foundation of the world.

And it came to pass that Jesus sent away the multitude, and went into a house to rest; and his disciples came to him, saying: Master, wilt thou declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field? He answered and said unto them: He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom, and the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are angels and holy men. Therefore, as the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of the world. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, the sons of Belial, the seekers of lusts and pleasures who despise their Creator and God, and crave to destroy all that is good, holy, pure, everlasting, and life-giving. And they shall be cast into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth; then shall the righteous and holy shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is likened unto leaven (yeast) which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened; and the kingdom of heaven is likened unto a merchant, seeking goodly pearls; who when he found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it. And again, the kingdom of heaven is likened unto a net, that is cast into the sea, to gather every kind; which when it was full they drew to shore, and sat down to gather the good into vessels, but cast the bad away; so shall it be at the end of the world; the angels shall come forth, and separate the wicked from among the just; and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. And behold, the kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man that cast his seed into the ground; day and night he labors in the hopes that the seed be good and that they sprout up and grow; but he knoweth not how nor how many; for the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself — first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear. And when the fruit is ripe, immediately he putteth forth his sickle and harvests it. Then said Jesus unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick? For there is nothing hid, nor kept secret, that shall not be brought forth, but all shall be revealed. Those who have ears to hear, let them hear. Then Jesus said unto them, Have ye understood all these things? And they replied, saying: Yea, Lord. And Jesus said unto them, Therefore every scribe who has become a disciple in the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is an householder, that bringeth forth out of his treasure good things new and old.

And it came to pass, when Jesus saw a great multitude all around him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side of the sea of Galilee. And a certain scribe came, and said, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. And Jesus said unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head. And another of his disciples said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead.

When he entered into a ship, his disciples followed him. And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with waves, while he lay asleep. And his disciples came to him and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us, we perish. And he said unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose and rebuked the winds and the sea, and the windstorm was stilled, and there was a great calm. But the men began to marvel, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him!

And when he was come to the other side into the country of Gadara (Gadarenes, Gerasenes), southeast of the sea of Galilee, there met him two demoniacs possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceedingly fierce in appearance and manner, that no man might pass by that way. Behold, they began to cry, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the time (meaning before the appointed hour)? And there was a good way off from them an herd of many swine feeding; so the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine. And Jesus said, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine; and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters. And the keepers of the herd fled into the city, and told everything, and that which had befallen the demoniacs. And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus; and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their borders. So he entered into a ship, and returned to Capernaum.

And when he was in the vicinity of Capernaum, they brought to him a man sick of palsy, lying on a bed; and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick man, Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee. And when certain of the scribes began to murmur among themselves, saying, This man blasphemeth; Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For is it not easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, than to say, Arise and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins. Then Jesus said to the sick of the palsy, Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And the man arose and departed to his house. But when the multitude saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such a power unto men.

Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, Why do we and the Pharisees fast often, but thy disciples fast not? And Jesus answered them, saying, Can the children of the bridechamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then they shall fast; no man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse; neither do men put new wine into old bottles, else the bottles crack and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish; but they put new wine into new bottles, that both be preserved.

And while he spake these things unto them, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped him, saying: My daughter is even as if she is dead; but perchance if thou mayest lay thine hand upon her, she may live. And Jesus and his disciples arose and followed him. Behold, as he arose, a woman that was diseased with hemorrhage twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment. For she said in her heart, if I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole. When Jesus looked behind and saw her, he said: Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour. When Jesus arrived at the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and people mourning and screaming, he said unto them: Make room, for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth, and they ridiculed him. And people made room for him to pass; he entered into the house and took her by the hand, and the maid arose. And the fame of this miracle spread throughout the land.

Then, when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him with the multitude, crying and saying: Thou Son of David, have mercy on us. And when he reached his residence, the blind men were brought to him; and Jesus said unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying: According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened; and Jesus sternly warned them, saying: See that no man know it. But they, when they departed, spread his fame in all the country. Then was brought unto him a dumb man possessed with a devil. And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake; and the multitude marvelled, saying: It was never so seen in Israel. But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils, by Beelzebub. And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them: Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand; if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself, how then shall his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you; therefore, your children shall be your judges. Can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first subdue the strong man? Verily, verily I say unto you, he that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me, scattereth. All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree bringeth forth not evil fruit, neither a corrupt tree bringeth forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth forth not good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire; wherefore, by their fruits ye shall know them. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven.

O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. But, verily, verily, I say unto you, That every idle word (gossip, profanity and such) that men speak, they shall give account in the day of judgement; for by their words they shall be justified, and by their words they shall be condemned. Then certain of the scribes and the Pharisees said unto him: Master, give us a sign that we may know! But Jesus said unto them: An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of prophet Jonah; for as Jonah was three days in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days in the heart of the earth. Behold, the men of Nineveh shall rise in judgement with this generation, and shall condemn it; for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

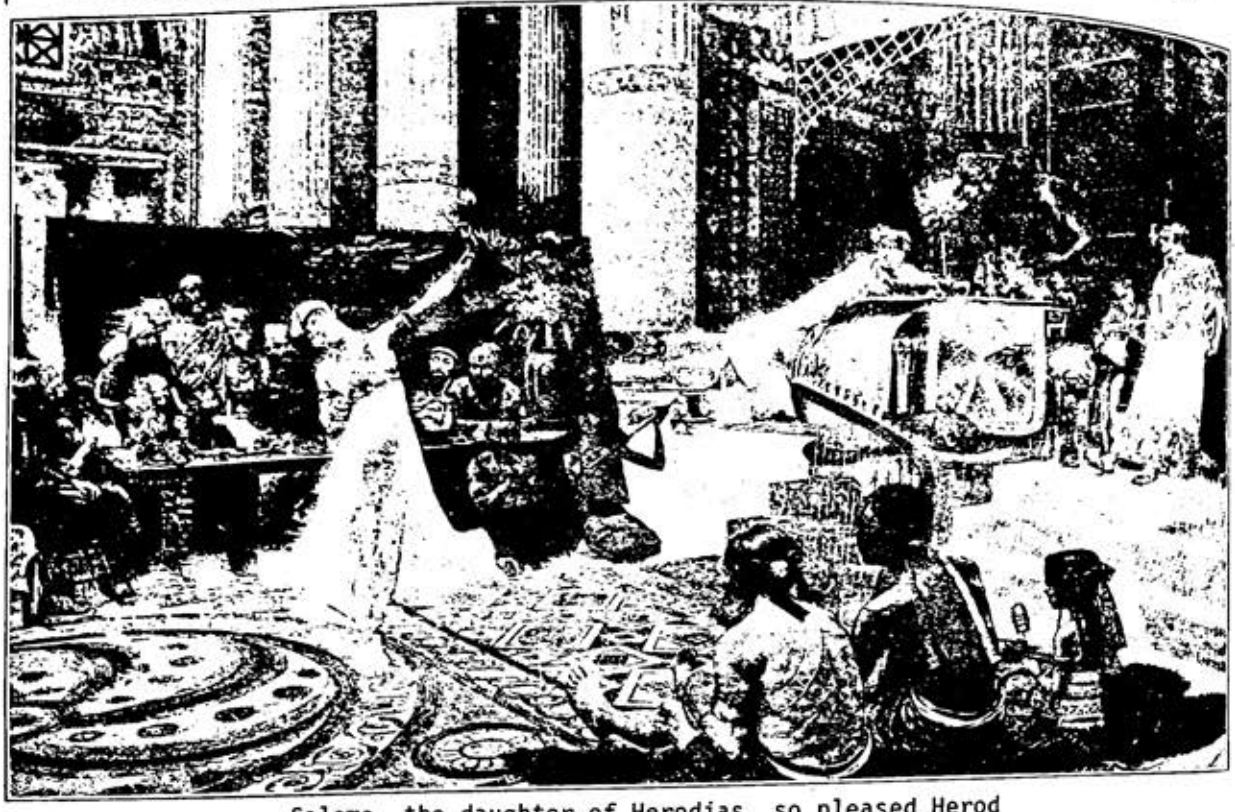
Behold, when the unclean spirit is gone of the man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished; and in disappointment, taketh upon himself seven other unclean spirits more wicked than before, and they dwell there; and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be unto this wicked generation. While he thus spake unto the people, behold, his mother and brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. Then one said unto Jesus, Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered, saying: Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said: Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

And when he was come into his own country, Nazareth, he taught them in their synagogue insomuch that they were astonished, saying, Whence hath this man such wisdom and mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? And they were offended by his presence. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country and in the house of his own kinsfolk. And because of their unbelief, he did not many mighty works in Nazareth.

Then Jesus called the twelve apostles together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases and heal the sick. And he sent them forth two and two to preach the kingdom of God; and commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only, no scrip, no bread, no money in their purse; shod with sandals, but not to put on two coats. And he said unto them, In whatsoever place ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place; and whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgement than for that city. And the apostles went out and preached that men should repent, and be baptized. And they cast out many evil spirits, and anointed many with oil that were sick, and healed them.

In the meantime Herod had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife, for he had married her. For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. Therefore, Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him, but she could not. For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just and holy man, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did it gladly, and did many things for him.



Salome, the daughter of Herodias, so pleased Herod that he promised her up to half his kingdom.

The head of John the Baptist

And when a convenient day was come, Herod on his birthday made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chiefs of Galilee. When the daughter of Herodias (Salome) danced in front of them, and pleased Herod, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom; and he sware unto her. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist. And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist. And the king was exceeding sorry, yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her. And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought; and he went and beheaded him in the prison; and brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel, and the damsel gave it to her mother. So according to the will and purposes of God, he was taken up by the power of the Almighty God, to witness even greater things in His eternal kingdom. And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb. And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done and what they had taught.

And Jesus said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a solitary place in the desert, and rest a while; for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat. So they departed into a solitary place by ship privately. And when the multitude saw them departing, they also ran up thither out of many cities, and gathered themselves together unto Jesus and his disciples. When the day was far spent, his disciples came to him and said, This is a solitary place and the time far spent; send them away into the country round about and into the villages, that they may buy themselves food, for they have nothing to eat. Jesus answered, Give ye them to eat. And they replied, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth (dinars worth) of bread, and give them to eat? He said unto them, How many loaves have ye? Go and see. And when they learned they said, Five, and two fishes. And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass; and they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and fifties. Then he took the five loaves and two fishes, and looked up to heaven, and blessed and brake the loaves, and gave to his disciples to set before them, with two fishes which were also divided among them.

And the disciples took up twelve baskets full of the fragments and of the fishes; and about five thousand were fed. After this he straightway constrained his disciples to get into the ship and go to the other side of the sea of Galilee, to Bethsaida; and sent away his followers, and departed into a mountain to pray. When he had returned, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone in the land. And he saw them toiling in rowing, for the wind was contrary unto them. About the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them. But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been his ghost, and cried out; for they all saw him, and were troubled. Immediately Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I, be not afraid. And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus. But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt? And as he went up unto their ship, the windstorm ceased; and all were sore amazed beyond measure in wonderment; for they considered not the miracle of the loaves, for their heart was hardened.

When they came to Gennesaret, the multitude knew him; and as he came out of the ship, they came running to see him from all regions round about; and they began to carry their sick and afflicted in their beds, and laid the sick in the streets; and besought him that they might touch the border of his garment; and as many as touched him were made whole.

Then came to Jesus certain of the scribes and the Pharisees of Jerusalem, saying, Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands, when they eat bread. And Jesus answered unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? For God commanded, Honor thy father and mother; and he that curseth his father or mother, let him die the death. But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or mother, it is a sacrifice (gift), Qurban (Corban), that thou mightest be profited by me; and honoreth not his father or his mother, is free from the curse; thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition. Ye hypocrites, well did Isaiah (Esaias) prophesy of you, saying, This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me; and in vain they do worship, teaching the doctrines and commandments of men.

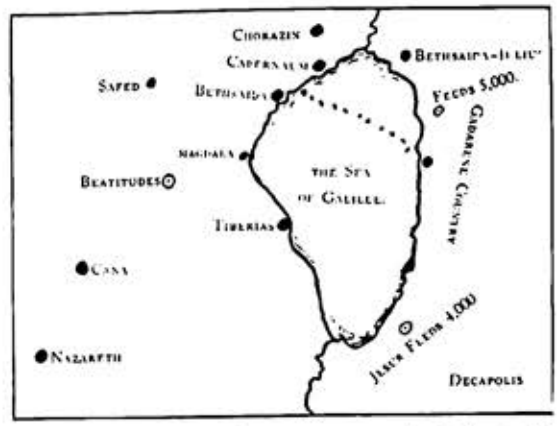
And Jesus called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear ye, and understand: Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man. Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard thy saying? But Jesus continued, saying, Every plant, which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. Ye the blind leaders of the blind, let my disciples alone; for when the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into a ditch. Then came Peter, and said unto him, declare unto us this parable! And Jesus said, Are ye (the apostles) also yet without understanding? Do not ye yet understand, that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught? But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart, and they defile the man; for out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, words, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies, and all other evils; these are which defile man; but to eat prayerfully with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

Then Jesus departed into the borders of Tyre and Sidon. And, behold, a woman of the Canaanites came out, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away, for she crieth after us. Jesus answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then she came again, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me. But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and cast it to the dogs. And she said, Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table. Then Jesus said unto her,

O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt; and her daughter was made whole from that very hour. And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. Here great multitudes came to him, and cast at his feet their lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and others afflicted with diverse diseases; and he healed them; insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be made whole, the lame to walk, the blind to see; and they glorified the God of Israel.

Then Jesus called his disciples, and said unto them, I have compassion on the multitude, for they have continued with me now three days, and have nothing to eat; and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way. And his disciples said unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude? And Jesus said unto his disciples, How many loaves have ye? And they said, seven, and a few little fishes. Jesus then commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground; and he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks and brake them; and gave to his disciples, who gave to the multitude. And they did all eat, and were filled; and they took up the fragments that were left, seven baskets full, after feeding some four thousand men, besides women and children. Then he sent away the multitude and took ship to come into the borders of Magdala (modern Mejdel), about two miles north of Tiberias on the sea of Galilee.

Sea of Galilee



Map of Galilee (during Jesus' ministry)

Here, the Pharisees and the Sadducees came to see Jesus, tempting him that he show them a sign from heaven. But Jesus said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red; and in the morning, It will be foul weather today, for the sky is red and lowering. O, ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the time? A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonah (Jonas). Then he left them, and departed.

When his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to bring bread; and Jesus said unto them, Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. But the disciples understood not the meaning of his words; and they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have brought no bread. When Jesus perceived their thoughts, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread? Do ye not understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up? How is it that ye do not understand that I spake not to you concerning the bread, but that ye should be aware of the leaven of the Pharisees and the Sadducees? Then they understood how he bade them beware not of the leaven of the bread, but of the doctrine, and the falsehood of the Pharisees and Sadducees.

And when Jesus came into the borders of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am? And they replied, saying, Some say that thou art John the Baptist, some Elijah (Elias); and others Jeremiah (Jeremias), or one of the prophets. Then Jesus asked, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Jesus answered and said unto Peter, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona(son of Jonah); for flesh and blood hath not revealed unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter (or Pether, meaning rock), and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the Kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

From this time onward, Jesus began to show unto his disciples how he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke, him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord; this shall not be unto thee. But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art offence unto me; for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

And he said unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what profiteth a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own Soul? For the Son of Man cometh always in the glory of his Father with his angels; and rewardeth every man according to his work. Verily, I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste death, till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom.

And after six days Jesus took Peter, James, and John his brother unto a high mountain, apart by themselves; and there he was transfigured before them. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow, so much so that no fuller on earth could whiten them. And there appeared unto them Moses, and Elijah talking with him. Then Peter approached Jesus, and said, Lord, it is good for us to be here; if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elijah. While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them, and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him. And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their faces, and were sore afraid. And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise and be not afraid. And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only. As they came down the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.

Then his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias (Elijah) must first come? And Jesus replied, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things. But I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed; likewise shall also the Son of Man suffer of them. Then the disciples understood that he spake of John the Baptist.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a man, kneeling down, and saying, Lord, have mercy on my son; for he is a lunatic, and sore vexed; for ofttimes he throws himself into the fire, and oft into the water. And I brought him to thy disciples, but they could not cure him. Then Jesus said unto the man, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? How long shall I suffer you? Bring him hither to me. And Jesus rebuked the devil, and he departed out of him; and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus privily, saying, Why could not we cast him out? And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief; for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall be removed; and nothing shall be impossible unto you; howbeit this kind goeth not out, but by prayer and fasting.

Capernaum (ruins of an old synagogue)

And while they sojourned in Galilee, Jesus said unto his disciples, The Son of Man shall be betrayed into the hands of men; and they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again. And they were exceeding sorry.

And when they were at Capernaum, the tax collectors came to Peter, saying, Doth not your master pay tribute money? He said, Yes. And when Peter came inside the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? Of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? Of their own children or of strangers? Peter replied, of strangers. Jesus then said, Then are the children free. Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money; take that money, and give unto them for me and thee. And Peter did as he was instructed.

At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them; and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven; and whosoever shall receive one such child in my name receiveth me. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it will be better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were drowned in the depths of the sea. Woe unto the world because of offences, for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to the man by whom they come. Wherefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet, and to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes, and to be cast into hell fire. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

How think ye? If a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray? And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray. Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish. Moreover, if a brother of thine shall trespass against thee, go tell him his offence between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he neglect to hear thee, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatosever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. For where two or more are gathered together in my name, there I am in the midst of them.

Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times? Jesus replied, I say not unto thee, until seven times, but until seventy times seven. The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a certain king, which would settle account of his servants. And when he began to reckon, one was brought before him, which owed him ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold; his wife and children, and all that he had, as payment for his debts. The servant therefore fell down, and pleaded, saying, Lord, have patience and mercy, and I will pay thee all. Then the lord of the servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellowservants which owed him an hundred pence, and laid lands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest. And his fellowservant fell down at his feet, and begged for mercy, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. And he would not; instead he had him cast into prison, till he should pay the debt. So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their and his lord all that was done. Then his lord (the king), after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou besought my mercy; shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellowservant, even as I had pity on thee? And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one of your brethren their trespasses.

And John the apostle said unto Jesus, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us. And Jesus answered, Forbid not, for he that is not against us is for us. And it came to pass, that he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem; and sent messengers before him; and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. But they received him not, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. And when his apostles James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did? Jesus rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; for the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. So they went to another village.

And it came to pass, that the Jews' feast of tabernacles (festival of booths or of ingathering; which was held Ethanim 15-21, with a solemn assembly or sabbath on the 22nd) was at hand. His brethren therefore said unto Jesus, Depart hence, and go into Judaea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest; for there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and seeketh himself to be known openly; if thou do these things, shew thyself to the world. And there were many Jews in Galilee that sought to kill him, nor would they believe him. But Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come, but your time is always ready; the world cannot hate you, but me it hateth; because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil. Go ye up unto this feast; I go not up yet, for my time is not yet full come. And he dwelt in Galilee.

But when his brethren were gone up, then he also went to Jerusalem, not openly, but as it were in secret. And when the Jews sought him at the feast, saying, Where is he? some said in murmuring, He is a good man; others said, Nay, but he deceiveth the people; howbeit no man spoke of him openly for fear of the Jews. Now about the midst of the feast

Jesus went into the temple and taught; and the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters (the law) having never learned? Jesus answered them, saying, My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me. If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. For he that speaketh of himself, seeketh his own glory; but he that seeketh the glory of Him that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him. Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me? The people answered, saying, Thou hast a devil, who goeth about to kill thee? And Jesus answered, Moses gave unto you circumcision, not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers; and ye on the sabbath day circumcise a man. If a man on the sabbath day receive circumcision, that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me because I have healed a sick man on the sabbath day? Judge not therefore according to the appearance, nor by the letter of the law, but judge according to the substance, and by the Spirit of truth.

Then said some of the Jews in Jerusalem, Is not this he, whom they seek to kill? But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ? Howbeit we know this man whence he is; but when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is. Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am; and I am not come of myself, but He that sent me is true, whom ye know not. But I know Him, for I am from Him, and He hath sent me. Then they sought to take him; but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come. And many of them believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

When the Pharisees heard that the people murmured such things concerning him, they and the chief priests sent officers to take him. And said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while I am with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find; and where I am, thither ye cannot come. Then said the Jews among themselves, whither will he go, that we shall not find him? Will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles? What manner of saying is this, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

On the last day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. And this he spake of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given unto them, nor was yet Jesus glorified. Many of the people, therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet; others said, This is the Christ. Yet others said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee? Hath not the scripture said, that Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was? So there was a division among the people because of him. And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

Then returned the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him? The officers answered, never have we heard man speak like this man. Then said the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived? Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him? But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed. But Nicodemus, a Pharisee and a member of the Sanhedrin, a ruler of the Jews, who came to visit Jesus one night; and confessed that Jesus must have come from God (it was to Nicodemus that Jesus spoke of being "born again" in order to see the kingdom of God, some two and a half years before); this Nicodemus spoke, saying, Our law does not judge a man unless first it has heard from him, and come to know what he is doing, does it? For this the others ridiculed him. (After the death of Jesus, it was also Nicodemus that came with Joseph of Arimathea, that fearful disciple, bringing a hundred pound roll of myrrh and aloes, with which to prepare Jesus' body for burial.)

After this Jesus went unto the mount of Olives. And early in the morning he came again into the temple. All the people gathered around him, as he sat down and taught them. Then the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery, in the very act; and said, Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned, but what sayest thou? And this they did to tempt him, that they might accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. So when they continued to ask him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her. Again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground. And they which heard him, being convicted of their own conscience, went out one by one, from the eldest to the least; and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman where are those thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more.

Again Jesus encountered the Pharisees, and said, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. Then the Pharisees said, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true. And Jesus answered, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true; for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go. Ye judge after the flesh, judge not, but after the Spirit; and yet if I judge, my judgement is true, for I am not alone, but am with the Father that sent me. It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true; I am one that beareth witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me. Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, Ye neither know me, nor my Father; if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

Then he said unto them, I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins; whither I go ye cannot come. And the Jews said, Will he kill himself? for he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come. And he said, Ye are from beneath, I am from above; ye are of this world, I am not of this world. I said therefore, that ye shall die in your sins; for if ye believe that I am, ye shall die in your sins. Then they said unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus replied, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning. When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am; and that I do nothing of myself, but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. And he that sent me is with me; the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please Him. As he spake these words, many believed on him. Then Jesus said unto those Jews that believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then ye are my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

The Pharisees said unto Jesus, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man, wherefore sayest thou, Ye shall be made free? Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin; and the servant abideth not in the house forever, but the Son abideth forever; the Son therefore shall make you free, and ye shall be free indeed. I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you. I speak of the things which are taught by my Father; and ye do that which you are taught by your father. They answered, Abraham is our father. Jesus answered, if ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham; and ye seek to kill a man that hath told you the truth of God, this did not Abraham. Do ye the deeds of your father.

Then they said to him, We be not born of fornication, we have one Father, the God. Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me; for I proceed forth and come from God; neither came I of myself, but He sent me. Why do ye not understand my speech? because ye cannot hear my word. Ye are of your father, the devil; and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it. And because ye believe the lies, ye believe not the truths which I say unto you. Which of you convicteth me of sin? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me? He that is of God heareth God's words; ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God. Then said the Jews, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hath a devil? Jesus answered, I have not a devil; but I honor my Father, and ye do dishonor me. And I seek not mine own glory, but there is One that seeketh and judgeth. Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

Now the Jews were fully wroth with him, and said, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death. Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? And the prophets are dead, whom makest thou thyself? Jesus answered, If I glory in myself, my glory is nothing; it is my Father that I glorify; of whom ye say, that He is your God. Yet ye have not known Him; but I know Him; and if I should say, I know Him not, I shall be a liar like unto you; but I know Him, and keep His saying (commandment). Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw, and was glad. Then said the Pharisees unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham? Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I AM (Jesus Christ, Jehovah, or Yehweh). Then they took up stones to cast at him; but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, he passed by unnoticed. At this time he was teaching in the treasury of the temple; no man laid hands on him, for his hour was not yet come.

And as Jesus passed by, he saw a man blind from his birth. His disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind? Jesus answered, neither should ye look upon him, nor upon his parents as the cause of his blindness; but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is yet day; the night cometh, and no man can work in darkness. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world. When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay; and said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam (Siloah). The man therefore went thither, and washed, and his blindness was removed, that he could see. When the neighbors saw him, they said, Is not this he that sat and begged? Some said, This is he; others said, He is like him; but he said, I am he. So they asked him, How were thine eyes opened? He answered, A man that is called Jesus made clay and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash; and I went and washed, and received sight. Then they said unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not. Then they brought him to the Pharisees; and it was the sabbath day when Jesus made the clay, and anointed him to open his eyes. The Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight; and he said, the man Jesus put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed in the pool of Siloam, and I do see.

Thereupon, said some Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them. They asked the man that before was blind, saying, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet. But the Pharisees did not believe the man, that he had been blind, and received his sight; so they called his parents, and asked them concerning him. And they answered, we know that this is our son, and that he was born blind. But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not; he is of age, ask him; he should speak for himself. These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews; for the Pharisees agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

Then they called again the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise, we know that this man is a sinner. He replied, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not; one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see. And they said to him again, What did he to thee? How opened he thine eyes? He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear; wherefore would ye hear again? Will ye also become his disciples? Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples. We know God spake unto Moses; as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is. The man then said unto then, Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes. Now we know that God heareth not sinners, but he alone that be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him He heareth. Since the world began, it was not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind. If this man were not of God, he could do nothing. The Pharisees rebuked him, and said, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us? And they cast him out.

When Jesus heard that they cast him out, and when he had found him, he said unto the man that was blind before, Dost thou believe on the Son of God? He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee. And he said, Lord, I believe; and he worshipped him. And Jesus said, For judgement I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see, yet not, might be made blind. And when some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, they said unto him, Are we blind also? Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but ye say, we see; therefore your sin remaineth.

After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city, whither he himself would come; and said unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Go ye your ways; behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves; carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor your shoes, and salute no man by the way. And in whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace to this house. And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it; if not, it shall return to you again. Go not from house to house, but remain in the same house, eating and drinking such things as they provide you; for the laborer is worthy of his hire. And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you; and heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you; notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city. He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth Him that sent me.

And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name. And Jesus said unto them, I beheld Satan a lightning fall from heaven; behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Notwithstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven. In that hour Jesus rejoiced in the Spirit which was there, and prayed: I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and the prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes; even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight. All things are delivered to me of my Father; and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal Him.

Then he turned to his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see things that ye see; for I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them. And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? How readest thou? And he answered, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy Soul, and with all thy might, mind, and strength; and love thy neighbor (meaning fellowman) as thyself. And Jesus said, Thou hast answered right; this do, and thou shalt live. But the man, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbor?

And Jesus answered, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came down a certain (Aaronic) priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side; and likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came close and looked, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came to where he was; and when he saw him, he had compassion on him. And he went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine; and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. In the morning when he departed, he took two pence, and gave them to the innkeeper, and said, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor (fellowman) unto him that fell among the thieves? And the man answered, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

Now it came to pass, as they journeyed, that Jesus entered into a certain village; and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word. But Martha was troubled about her much serving; and came to Jesus, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? Bid her therefore that she help me (with the chores). And Jesus answered, Martha, Martha, thou art worried and troubled about many things. But this thing is needful — that which Mary hath chosen as her good portion, it shall not be taken away from her.

After this, it came to pass, that, as he was finished praying in a certain place, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples. And he said unto them, When ye pray, say:

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil; for Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

And Jesus after speaking many things, said unto them, I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask for a fish, will he give him a serpent for a fish? Or if he asks for an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give his children the Holy Spirit that ask Him?

And it came to pass that, as Jesus was casting out a devil from a dumb man; and when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people marvelled, but some said, He casteth out devils through Beelzebub, the chief of the devils; yet others tempted him, and sought for a sign from heaven. But he knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against itself falleth. If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? Ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub. And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out? But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

Behold, when a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are safe; but when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour, in which he trusted, and divideth his spoils. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth. When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my (old) house whence I came out. And he cometh, and findeth it swept and garnished. Then goeth he and taketh to himself seven other spirits more wicked and evil than before; and they enter in, and dwell there; the last state of that man is worse than the first.

And as Jesus spake these things, a certain woman lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. But he said, Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it. Then the people began to gather thick around him, and he said, This is an evil generation; they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given, but the sign of Jonah (Jonas) the prophet. For as Jonah was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall the Son of Man be to this generation. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgement with men of this generation, and condemn them; for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon (who was an Aaronic priest); and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here. (But Jesus said this not to glorify himself or in unrighteousness, but to make them understand the truth.) And he said, The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgement with this generation, and condemn it. They repented at the preaching of Jonah; and, behold, a greater than Jonah is here, yet they repent not, but seek to kill him.

No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light. The light of the body is the eye; therefore when thine eye is single to God and His glory, the whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body turns also full of darkness. Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not turned into darkness. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give the light.

After this, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine; and Jesus went in, and sat down to meat. And he and all the others were offended that Jesus had not washed before dinner. And Jesus knowing their thoughts, said, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness. Fools, did not He that made that which is without make also that which is within? Give alms of such things as ye have, that ye might make all things clean unto yourselves. But woe unto the Pharisees, that tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over the judgement and the love of God; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Woe unto the Pharisees, that love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets. Woe unto the scribes, and the Pharisees, the hypocrites, for they are as graves which appear not, and as men that walk over, and are not aware.

Then called out one of the lawyers, saying, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also. Then said Jesus, Woe unto you lawyers also, for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers; woe unto such, that build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them; truly ye bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your father, for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres. Therefore saith the wisdom of the Lord also, I will send them prophets and apostles, and of them they shall slay and persecute; that the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation. From the blood of Able, unto the blood of Zacharias (Zechariah son of Jehoiada), who perished between the altar and the temple; verily, I say unto you, it will be required of this generation. Woe unto the lawyers, that have taken away the key of knowledge (of God); ye enter not yourselves, and hinder those that enter in. And as he spake these things, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, provoking him to speak more of such things; laying wait for him and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

And when there gathered together an innumerable multitude of people; insomuch that they trod upon one another, Jesus said unto his disciples, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisee, which is hypocrisy. There is nothing of them covered, that shall not be revealed; or hid, that shall not be known; therefore, whatsoever speak they in the darkness shall be heard in the light, and that which is spoken in the ears and the closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops. And he said to his disciples, I say unto you, my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, for after that no more they can do; but I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear, fear him and trust not who after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him and trust not. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore, for ye are of more value than many sparrows. And verily, I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of Man also confess before the angels of God. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but he that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven. And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall say, or answer; for the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say or do.

Then one of his disciples said unto him, Master, speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me. And Jesus said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you? Take heed, and beware of covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth. And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully; and he thought within himself, What shall I do, because I have no room to store my fruits; therefore, this will I do — I will pull down my barns, and build greater ones; and there will I store my fruits and goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee (meaning, Thou hast ensnared thy soul this night); then whose shall these things be, which thou hast hoarded? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

And he said unto his disciples, Therefore, I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall put on; the life is more than meat, and the body more than raiment. Consider the ravens; for they neither sow nor reap, nor have they storehouse or barns, and God feedeth them; how much more are ye better than the fowls? And which of you by worrying about it can add to his stature one cubit? If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest? Consider also the lilies, how they grow; they toil not, nor do they spin; yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If then God so clothe the grass, which is today in the field, and tomorrow is cast into the oven; how much more will He clothe you, O ye of little faith. Seek ye not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind. For all these things do the nations of the world seek after; and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things. But rather seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Give alms and live righteously; provide yourselves with treasures in heaven that wax not old, nor that faileth; which no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth; for where your treasure is, there will your heart also be.

Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto them that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching in wait; verily, I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if he comes in the second watch or the third watch, and finds them so, blessed are those servants. And, behold, if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through; be ye therefore ready also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speaketh thou this parable unto us, or even to all? And Jesus replied, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give portion of meat in due season? Blessed is the servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath. But if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and begins to beat the menservants and maidens, eat, and drink, and be drunken, the lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him asunder, and will appoint his portion with the unbelievers. And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with fewer stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, much is expected; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

I am come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled? I have a baptism for the faithful to be baptized with (even the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and of fire); and how I am hard pressed till it be accomplished! Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay, but rather division. For henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three; the father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And he said unto the people, When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is. And when the south wind blows, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass. Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth, but how is it that ye discern not the signs of the time? and judge ye not what is right? Then he said unto Peter, When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, in the way give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison. I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite (smallest Jewish coin, worth less than half a penny).

At that time there were also some present that told him of the Galilaeans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. And Jesus answered them, saying, Suppose ye that these Galilaeans were sinners above all the Galilaeans, because they suffered such things? I tell you, Nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. He spake also this parable: A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit, and found none. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none; cut it down, why cumbereth it the ground? And the dresser of his vineyard pleaded, saying, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it; and if it bear fruit, well; and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

And it came to pass that, he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath. And, behold, there was a woman that had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called upon the Lord, and said, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity; and he blessed her with the Holy Spirit by laying on his hands; immediately she was made well, and she glorified God.

And the ruler of the synagogue reproached Jesus with indignation, because he had healed on the sabbath day. And Jesus said unto the people, There are six days in which men ought to work; in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day? Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering? And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day? And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed; and all the people rejoiced in the glorious things which were done by him.

Another time, Jesus said unto the Pharisees, Unto what is the kingdom of God likened? And whereunto shall I resemble it? It is like a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it. Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God? It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and robber. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep; to him the porter openeth, and the sheep hear his voice; and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him; for they know not the voice of the stranger.

But the Pharisees understood not this parable. So Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved; and shall go in and out, and find pasture. The thief cometh not, but to steal, to kill, and to destroy. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep. I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and I am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down my life for the sheep. And other sheep have I, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, one shepherd. Therefore, doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

Therefore there was a division among the Jews. Many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him? Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil, can a devil enlighten the mind, or open the eyes of the blind?

And it came to pass, that in the winter, the festival of dedication was at Jerusalem (Chislev 29 or 30, November-December 25, 32 A.D.); Jesus walked in the temple of Solomon's porch. Then came Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be Christ, tell us plainly. Jesus answered, I told you, and ye believed not; the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me. But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I have told you. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. And I give unto them eternal life; and they still never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one.

Then the Jews took up stones to stone him. Jesus replied, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of these works do ye stone me? The Pharisees and the scribes answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy, and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God. Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, Ye are gods, even the sons and daughters of God. If he called them gods, unto whom the word God refers to, and the scriptures cannot be broken; say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said, I am the Son of God? Behold, if I do not the works of my Father, believe me not; but if I do, though ye believe me not, believe the works; that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in Him. Therefore they sought him again to take him; but he escaped out of their hands, because his hour had not yet arrived.

And Jesus went away beyond Jordan, into the place where John at first used to baptize, and there he abode. And many talked among themselves, saying, John did no miracle; but all things that John spake of this man are true. And many believed on him. After this he went through the cities and villages, teaching and journeying toward Jerusalem. Then said one unto him, Lord are there few that be saved? And he said, Strive to enter in the strait (narrow) gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and shut the door; and ye are left without, and begin to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; he shall answer, I know you not whence ye are. Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and ye yourselves thrust out.

And they shall come from the east and the west, from the north and the south, and shall find their rest in the kingdom of God. And, behold, the last shall be first; and the first shall be last. As Jesus finished saying these things, there came certain of the Pharisees unto him, saying, Get thee out, and depart hence, for Herod will kill thee. And Jesus said, Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils; and I do cures today and tomorrow, and the third day I shall be perfected. Nevertheless, I must walk today, tomorrow, and the day following; for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate; and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time cometh when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

And it came to pass, that as he sat to eat food on the sabbath day, at the house of one of the chief Pharisees; there was a certain man that sat before him that had dropsy. And Jesus spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day? And they held their peace. And he took him and blessed him to be healed, and let him go. But when he saw that some were offended, he said, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day? And they could not answer him again to these things.

And he put forth this parable to those that were bidden, when he noticed how they chose out the chief and the highest room: When ye are bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, lest a more honorable man than thou be bidden of him; but sit down in the lowest room; that he who bade thee come may say unto you, Friend, go up higher; then ye shall have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee. For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.. When ye make a feast, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor rich neighbors; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, and the blind. And ye shall be blessed, for they cannot recompense thee; and ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

When one of them that sat at meat with Jesus heard these things, he said, blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God. Then said Jesus unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many. When only a handful showed up at supper, he sent his servant to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready. And they all with one accord began to make excuse. The first said, I have bought a piece of land, and must needs to go and see it; I pray thee have me excused. Another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to try them; I pray thee have me excused. And the third said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come. So the servant returned to his lord, and showed these things. Then the master of the house was angry at his servant, and said, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind. Then the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room. And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house be filled. For I say unto you, that none of these men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

After this, he said unto a great multitude that was with him, If any of you come to me, and hate not the yoke of your father, mother, wife, and children, brethren, and sisters; yea, and hateth not his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me cannot be my disciple. For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and calculates the cost and resources, to know if there is sufficient to finish it? Lest, haply, after he hath laid the foundation, he is not able to finish it; and all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish it. Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able to meet that which cometh against him with twenty thousand? Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an embassy, and desireth conditions of peace. So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he possesseth, he cannot be my disciple. Salt is good; but if the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be seasoned? It is neither fit for land, nor yet for the dunghill; men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Then drew near unto him the publicans and sinners to hear him; and the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them. And Jesus spake this parable unto them, saying, What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it? And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbors, saying unto them, Rejoice with me, for I have found my lost sheep. I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, who need no repentance. Or what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it? And when she hath found, she calleth friends and neighbors together, saying, Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I had lost. Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

And Jesus said unto them, A certain man had two sons; and the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that belongs to my inheritance; and he divided unto each his portion. Not many days after the younger son had cashed in his inheritance, he took his journey into a far country; and there he wasted his substance in riotous living. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. So he hired himself out to a citizen of that country, to feed the swine in his fields. And he set his heart upon the pods of the carob tree that the swine ate, but no man gave unto him. And when he began to think, he said in his heart, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee, and I am no more worthy to be called thy son; make me as one of thy hired servants. And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion; and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight; and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet; and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat and be merry. For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

Now his elder son was in the field; and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing. And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant. And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound. And he was angry and would not go in; therefore came his father out, and consoled him, and the son said, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandments; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends. But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf. And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine. It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad; for this thy brother was dead (in his sins), and is alive again (for he hath repented and forsaken); he was lost, and is found.

And Jesus said unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, that had a steward; and the same was accused of wasting his goods. And he called him, and said, How is it that I hear this of thee? Therefore, give an account of thy stewardship, lest thou mayest no longer be steward. Then the steward said in his heart, What shall I do? For my lord taketh away from me the stewardship; I cannot dig (ditches); to beg I am ashamed. I am resolved what to do, that when I am put out of the stewardship others may receive me into their houses. So he called every one of his lord's debtors, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord? And he said, An hundred measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty. To another he said, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore. And his lord commended the unjust steward for his shrewdness, because he had done wisely; for the children of this world are wiser in the wisdom of the world, than the children of light.

And Jesus said, I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when ye fail, they may receive you into their everlasting habitations. He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much. Therefore, if ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which belongs to another man, who shall give you that which is your own?

No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. And when the Pharisees, that were covetous, heard all these things, they derided him. And Jesus said unto them, Ye are they that justify themselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God. The law and the prophets were preached until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. And I say unto you, It is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law (of Moses) to fail. And whosoever leaves his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

There was a certain rich man which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and dined sumptuously every day. And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores; desiring to be fed with the crumbs, which fell from the rich man's table; and dogs came and licked his sores. It came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The rich man also died and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment, and saw Abraham afar off, with Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. Between us and thou there is a great gulf fixed; so that they which could pass from hence to thee cannot; neither can they pass to us, from thence. Then said the rich man, I pray thee, therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house, for I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham said unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them. And said he, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. And Abraham said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.

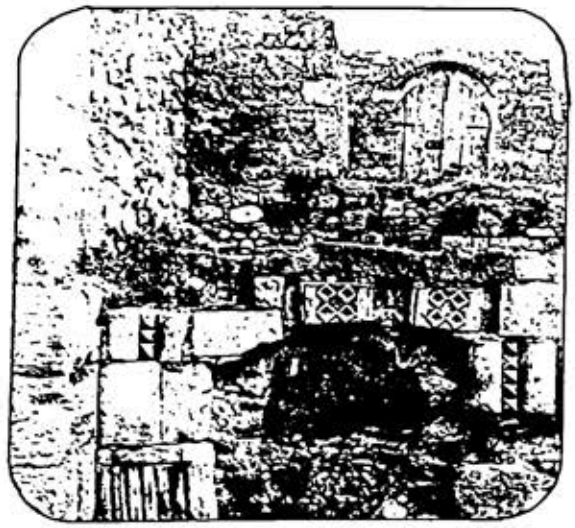
Then said Jesus unto his disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come; but woe unto him, through whom they come. It would have been better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones. Take heed to yourselves; if thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him, and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and turns again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him.

And the apostles said unto Jesus, Lord, increase our faith! And he said unto them, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine (mulberry) tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea, and it should be done according to your words. But which of you, having a servant plowing or tending a flock, will say unto him, Come immediately from the field, and sit down to meat? and will not rather wait till the master has eaten and drunken. Doth he thank the servant because he did the things that were commanded him, for the wages; I think not. So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded unto you, say, We are thy humble servants; we have done that which was our duty to do.



Ruins of house of Martha in Bethany

Now a certain man was sick, namely, Lazarus of Bethany, the town of a certain Mary and her sister Martha. (It was this Mary which later anointed the Lord Jesus with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother was sick.) Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick. And Jesus said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God be glorified thereby. Now Jesus loved the three, Mary, her sister Martha, and their brother Lazarus. And Jesus remained in the same place two days. On the third day he spake to his disciples, saying, Let us go into Judaea again. His disciples said, Master, the Jews lately sought to stone thee, and goest thou thither again? Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours of daylight in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the world through the light; but if a man walk in the darkness of the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him. Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep. Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well. Howbeit Jesus meant, Lazarus is dead. Then said Thomas Didymus unto the fellow disciples of Jesus, Let us also go, that we may die with him. Then when Jesus and his disciples came to Bethany, they found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

Bethany

Tomb of Lazarus in Bethany. (This tomb is not far from Martha's home.)

Now Bethany was about fifteen furlongs (less than two miles) from Jerusalem. And many Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother. Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him; but Mary stayed still in the house. Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee. Jesus said unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha said unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day. Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall have immortality and eternal life. Believest thou this? She replied, Yea, Lord; I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world. And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee. As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him. When Mary was come where Jesus was, she fell down at his feet, saying, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

When Jesus saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping that followed her, he groaned, and was troubled in the spirit. And he said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see. Jesus wept. Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him! And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man his friend should not have died? Jesus therefore again groaning in himself came to the grave; it was a cave and a stone laid upon it. Jesus said unto the Jews, Take ye away the stone. And Martha, the sister of him that was dead, said unto Jesus, Lord, by this time he stinketh, for he hath been dead four days. Jesus said unto her, Said I not to thee, that if thou wouldest believe, thou should see the glory of God?

Then they took away the stone which covered the grave. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me; and I know that thou hearest me always; but because of the people which stand by, I call upon thee, that they may believe that thou hast sent me. Then Jesus cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with gravecloth; and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus said unto them, Loose him, that he may walk. Then many Jews that had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him; but some went to the Pharisees, and told them all that they had seen.

Then the chief priests and the Pharisees gathered together in a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles; if we let him alone, all men will believe on him; and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation. And Joseph Caiaphus, being the (Aaronic) high priest in that year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all; nor do ye consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, that the whole nation perish not; and he prophesied that Jesus should die for the nation. And not for the nation only, but that he should also gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad. Then from that day forth they took counsel together for putting him to death. Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near the wilderness, into the city of Ephraim; and there he continued with his disciples.

And it came to pass, as he went out of Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. When he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off. And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the (Aaronic) priests. And it came to pass, that all were made clean. But one of them, a Samaritan, when he saw that he was healed, returned to Jesus, and with a loud voice glorified God; and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks. And Jesus said unto him, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that return to give glory to God, save this stranger. And Jesus said to the Samaritan, Arise, go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole.

Then he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God was to come; and Jesus answered them, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. Neither should they say, Lo here! lo there! (for it is only its manifestation) for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.

And Jesus said unto his disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man, and ye shall not see it. And the false prophets shall say unto you, See here, or see there; go not after them, nor follow them. For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one under heaven, shineth unto another under heaven; so shall also the Son of Man be in his day. But first he must suffer many things in the world, and be rejected of his generation. And as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the days of the Son of Man. They did eat, and drink, and marry wives, and were given in marriage; until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all. Likewise also, as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat and drink, they bought and sold, they planted and builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed.

In that day, he that shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return. Remember Lot's wife; whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it. I tell you, in that night, if there be two men in one bed, one shall be taken, and the other left; if there be two women grinding, one shall be taken, and the other left; if there be two men in the field, one shall be taken, and the other left. And Jesus' disciples said, Where, Lord? And he answered unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

And he spake a parable unto them, so that men ought always to pray, and faint not; saying, There was in a city a judge, that feared not God, neither regarded man. And there was a widow in that city; and she came to him, saying, Avenge me of my adversary. But the judge would not for a while; then he said in his heart, Though I fear not God, nor regard man, yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me. If the unjust judge heareth so, how much more God. Will he not avenge his own elect, that cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on earth?

Then he spake this parable concerning those that take pride in their self-righteousness, and despise others; saying, Two men went up into the temple to pray, the one a Pharisee and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed in his heart, God I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican; I fast and give tithes of all that I possess. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you, this man went down to his house more justified than the other; for everyone that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee; and came into the borders of Judaea beyond Jordan. A great multitude followed him there, and many were healed. The Pharisees also came to him, tempting him, and saying, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause? And Jesus said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made (created) them in the beginning, made them male and female. And said, for this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and cleave to the spouse; and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh; therefore, that which God hath joined together, let no man put asunder. Then the Pharisees said unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a written divorcement, to put her away? He replied, Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so. I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except for fornication, and marries another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

Then his disciples said unto him, If the case of the man be so, then it is not good to marry. But Jesus said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which are so born from their mother's womb; there are some eunuchs, which are made eunuchs of men; and there are eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive, let him receive.

After this they brought unto him little children, that he may bless them, by laying on of hands; but the disciples rebuked them. And Jesus said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven; and he blessed them, and departed thence. And it came to pass, that a certain man came to him, and said, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good, there is none good save one, that is, God; but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. And the young man said, Which? Jesus said, All the commandments that were given to Moses on Mount Sinai; thou shalt commit no murder, nor commit adultery, nor steal, nor bear false witness; thou shalt honor thy father and mother, and thou shalt love thy neighbor (fellow brethren) as thyself. And the young man said, All these things have I kept from my youth up, and none have I lacked. Jesus said unto him, For that which thou seeketh, go sell that which thou art burdened with, and give to the poor; and thou shall have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me. But when the young man heard this, he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions.

And Jesus turned to his disciples, and said, Verily I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man (burdened with worldly possessions) to enter into the kingdom of heaven. When the disciples heard this, they were exceedingly puzzled, saying, Who then can be saved? And Jesus said unto them, With men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible. And Peter said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye that have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye shall also sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And everyone that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or fathers, or mothers, wives, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life. But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. And when he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard. And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the marketplace. And he said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you; and they went to work. Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and said unto them, Why stand ye here all day idle? They replied, saying, Because no man hath hired us. So he said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right shall ye receive. When the evening was come, the lord of the vineyard said unto his steward, Call the laborers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny. But when the first ones came, they supposed that they should have received more; but they likewise received every man a penny. And after they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house; saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, that have borne the burden and heat of the day. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong; didst not thou agree with me for a penny? Take thine, and go thy way; I will give unto these last, even as it seemeth right unto me. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I do that which is right in my sight? And Jesus said, Likewise, the last shall be first, and the first last; for many be called, but few chosen.

And while travelling towards Jerusalem, Jesus took the twelve of his disciples (apostles) apart, and said unto them: Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of Man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death; and shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock and to scourge, and to crucify him; and the third day he shall rise again. Then at Jericho, came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons James and John, for Zebedee's wife Salome was the sister of Jesus' mother Mary; worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him. And Jesus said unto her, What wilt thou? And she said, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom. But Jesus answered, saying, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They said unto him, We are able. And he said unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup; and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with (meaning the baptism by full immersion, and of fire and the Holy Ghost). But to sit on my right hand, on my left, is not mine to give, but for whom it is prepared of my Father.

And when the ten apostles heard it, they were moved with indignation against James and John the sons of Zebedee. So Jesus called them, and said, Ye know that princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over their people, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you; but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be leader (chief) among you, let him be your servant; even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, Son of David. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace; but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, Son of David. And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you? They said, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. So Jesus had compassion upon them, and touched their eyes; and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him, glorifying God; and the multitude, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

Feast of Zacchaeus (the chief publican of Jericho)

Old Jericho

New Jericho

After this, as Jesus and his followers passed through the outskirts of Jericho, a rich man named Zacchaeus, the chief among the publicans, sought to see Jesus, but could not because of the multitude, because he was short of height. So he ran, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him. And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said, Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down; for today I must abide at thy house. And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully. And when the multitude saw, they murmured, saying, He is gone to be guest at the house of a man that is a sinner. And Zacchaeus stood, and said unto Jesus, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham. For the Son of Man is come to seek and save that which was lost.

And Jesus gave them this parable, saying, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. Before he left he called his ten servants, and handed them each ten pounds, and said, Occupy yourselves in trade till I return. But his citizens hated him, for he was corrupt, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded his servants to be called, whom he had given the money; that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds. And he said unto him, Well done, thou good servant; and because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities. And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds. And he said unto him likewise, Be thou also over five cities. And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin; for I feared thee, because thou art an austere (ungenerous) man, and takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou did not sow. And the nobleman said unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow; wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with interest? He commanded his servants that stood by, saying, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds. And they murmured, saying, Lord, he already has ten pounds! And he said unto them, For I say unto you, Unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall be taken away from him. But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay before me.

And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand; and many went to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves. At the temple people spake among themselves, saying, What think ye, will he come to the feast? And they sought Jesus, for both the chief priests and Pharisees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he were, he should inform them, that they might take him. Six days before the passover Jesus came to Bethany, where Lazarus was, that had been dead, and was raised from the dead. There they made him a supper; Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him, and Martha served. After the supper, Mary took a pound of ointment of spikenard (an East Indian aromatic valerianaceous plant), and anointed Jesus' feet; and wiped his feet with her hair; and the house was filled with the aroma of the ointment. Then said one of the disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son (which later betrayed him), Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor? This he said, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief; and carried a bag, and bare what was put in it. Then said Jesus, Let her alone; for she hath preserved it until this day, to prepare for my burial; the poor ye shall have always, but me ye have not always. Many Jews came there, not only to see Jesus, but also to see Lazarus who was raised from the dead. And many began to believe on Jesus.

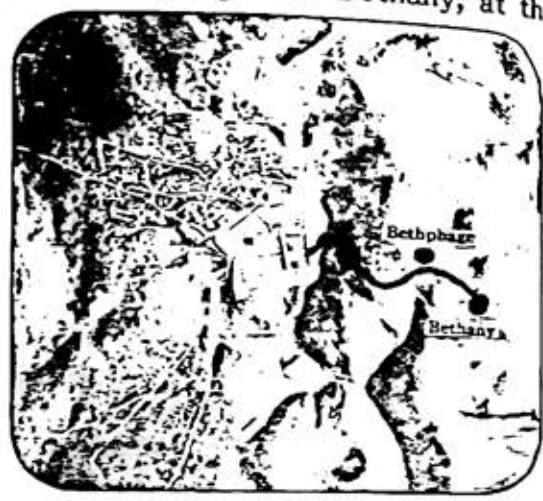
The next day, many people that were come to the feast of the Passover heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, and they took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him; and cried, Hosanna to the Most High; blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord. And when Jesus was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, saying, Go ye into the next village; at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never a man sat; loose him, and bring him hither. And they that were sent went, and found even as he had said unto them. And as they were loosening the colt, the owners said unto them, Why loose ye the colt? And they said, The Lord hath need of him. And they brought him to Jesus; and they cast garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon. And as he went, they spread their clothes and garments in the way. When he was come near the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had witnessed with their own eyes. And the disciples praised God, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven, and glory in the highest. Then some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered, I tell you that, if today these should hold their peace, the stone would immediately cry out. But these things the disciples understood not at first; but when Jesus was glorified, then they remembered that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him. For Zechariah the prophet had written, Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion (Sion); shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, upon a colt of the foal of an ass. And the Pharisees began to say among themselves, Perceive ye how none of us can prevail against this man? Behold, the world is gone after him.

Bethphage



From Bethphage Jesus sent out his disciples to find the ass upon which he rode during his triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

When Jesus reached near Jerusalem, and beheld the city, he wept over it; saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things unto thy peace! But now they are hid from thine eyes. For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and keep thee in on every side. And shall lay thee even on the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation. And he went into the temple, and began to cast out those that bought and sold therein, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of those that sold doves (pigeons); and said unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves. He taught daily at the temple; but the chief priests and scribes, and the chief of the people sought to destroy him; and could not find what they might do, for all the people were very eager to hear him.

And there were also some Greeks (heretics) that came to the feast at Jerusalem; the same came to Philip, of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we are come to see Jesus. Philip then told Andrew, and both Philip and Andrew told Jesus. And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of Man should be glorified. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn (grain, seed) of wheat fall into the ground and die unto the ground, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. For if a man loveth his life he shall lose it; and he that hateth the life of this world shall keep it unto life eternal. If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be; the man that serveth me, the same is honored by my Father.

Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour, but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glory to thy name! Then came a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified, and will glorify again. When the disciples that stood by heard it, they said it was as if it thundered; others said, An angel spake to him. But Jesus said unto them, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes. Now is the judgement of this world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said to remind of his upcoming death. Then the disciples asked him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever; and how sayest thou, The Son of Man must be lifted up? Who is this Son of Man? And Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light (of Christ) with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you; for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. Then Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on Him that sent me. And he that seeth me seeth Him that sent me. I am come a light unto the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness. And if any man hear my words, and believeth not, I judge him not; for I came not to judge the world, but to save it. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my word, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me; He gave me a commandment, what to say, and what to speak. And I know that this commandment is life everlasting; whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the barren fig tree dried up from the roots; which Jesus had cursed, when previously he saw it in the way, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward forever! And Peter calling to remembrance, said, Master, behold, the fig tree which thou cursedst is withered away. And Jesus answered, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, whatsoever things ye ask for when ye pray, believe that ye shall receive, and ye shall have them. And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

And as Jesus was walking in the temple, there came to him the chief priests and scribes, and the elders; saying, By what authority doest thou these things? And who gave thee this authority to do these things? Jesus said unto them, I will also ask of you one question, and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? answer me. And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people, for all men counted John as a prophet indeed. So they answered and said unto Jesus, We cannot tell. And Jesus said, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

And he spake this parable, saying, A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the winefat, and built a tower; and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country. And it came to pass, that at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen the fruit of the vineyard. And the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty. Then he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and he returned shamefully. Again he sent another; and they killed him. In the same manner they kept on beating some, and killing others. Having yet one son, well beloved, he sent him also at last, thinking, They might reverence my son. But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. And they took, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard. What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others. Have ye not read the scripture: The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner; this was the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

Then some of the chief priests, scribes, and elders sought to lay hold on him, but could not, fearing the people; for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them. And they sent unto him certain of the Pharisees and the Herodians, to catch him in his words. And they came to him, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man; for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth; Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not? Shall we give, or shall we not give? But Jesus knowing their hypocrisy, said unto them, Why tempt ye me? Bring me a penny, that I may see. And they brought it. And he said unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said, Caesar's. And Jesus said unto them, Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's; and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

Then came to him the Sadducees (Siddiquis); now these Sadducees did not believe in resurrection nor the ministry of angels; but the Pharisees believed in both. Moreover, the Sadducees denied the working of divine grace and mercy, and fate; maintaining that an individual by his own action alone, was responsible for what befell him; they also denied the immortality of Soul, future punishments or rewards, and divine judgement. But the Pharisees believed in them and publicly declared their belief. And the Sadducees asked Jesus, saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. Now there were seven brothers; and the first took a wife, and dying left no seed. And the second took her, and died leaving no seed; the third likewise, unto the seventh, and left no seed; last of all the woman died also. In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of the seven that had her to wife?

And Jesus said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God? For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven. And as touching the dead, that they rise; have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but of the living; ye therefore greatly err. Then one of the scribes, having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is One Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might, mind and strength; this is the first commandment. And the second is like this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor (fellowman) as thyself.

There is none other commandment greater than these. And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but He. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with the strength; and to love the neighbor as oneself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that asked him any question.

Then said Jesus unto the scribes at the temple, What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he? And they replied, The son of David. Jesus said unto them, How then doth David in Spirit call him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? If David then call him Lord, how is he his son? And the common people heard him gladly. And he said unto his disciples, Beware of the scribes, and their pretentions; for they love to go in long clothing, in the vanities of their heart; and love the salutations in the marketplace, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and uppermost rooms at the feasts; and they devour widows' houses, and make mockery of God by faithless prayers of pretention. These shall receive greater damnation.

And while Jesus sat near the treasury of the temple, he saw how the people cast money into the treasury, which was consecrated unto the Lord; and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites which make a farthing. Jesus called unto him his disciples, and said, Verily I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury. For all did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her sustenance.

As Jesus left the temple, one of his disciples pointed out to Jesus, saying, Master, see what manner of stones, and what great buildings are here! And he answered unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? There shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as he sat upon the mount of Olives over against the temple, Peter, James, John, and Andrew asked him privately, Tell us, when shall these things be? What be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled? And Jesus replied, Take heed lest any man deceive you; for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many with words and intrigue. And when ye shall hear of wars and rumors of war, be ye not troubled; for such things must needs be, but the end is not yet. Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, famines and troubles; these are the beginnings of sorrows.

Moreover, take heed to yourselves; for they shall deliver you up to councils, and in synagogues ye shall be despised; and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them. And when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought before hand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given to you in that hour, that speak ye; for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost that causeth you to bring forth the words. And ye shall be hated of men for my name's sake; but he that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved. The gospel must first be published among all nations. But when ye shall see the abominations of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not, let him that readeth understand; and let them of Judaea flee to the mountains; and let him that is on the housetop not go down into the house, to carry anything out of the house; nor let him that is in the field return back again to take up his garment. And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! For there shall be many offended, and shall betray one another, and hate one another.

And many false prophets shall rise, and deceive many. Because iniquity shall abound, the love of God shall be replaced with selfish love; and there shall be great tribulations upon all men. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake alone those days shall be shortened. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, showing great signs and wonders; so much so, that through intrigue and deception, they shall deceive the very elect, if possible. But, behold, take heed; I have foretold you all things. In those days, after the tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give light to the earth; and the stars shall fall, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And all shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. Then shall he send his angels, and gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

Now learn of the parable of the fig tree; when its branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so ye likewise, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is near at the doors. Verily, I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all these things shall be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. Nevertheless, of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. As the days of Noah were, so shall also be the (second) coming of the Son of Man. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating, drinking, and making merry, until the day Noah entered into the ark, and they knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also be the coming of the Son of Man. Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh. For the Son of Man is likened to a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his task, and commanded the guardsman to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at evening, or at midnight; at the cockcrowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he returns, finds him so doing. Verily, I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and begins to deceive and persecute his fellowservants, and eats and drinks with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of; and shall cut him asunder, and appoint to him his portion with the hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

And at the Mount of Olives Jesus said unto his disciples, The kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, that took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom; and five of them were wise, five foolish. And the foolish took their lamps, but no oil with them. And the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out. The wise answered, go ye rather to them that sell, lest there be not enough for us and you. And while they went to buy themselves oil for their lamps, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut. Afterwards came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open (the door) to us. But he answered, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh.

For the kingdom of heaven is likened to a man travelling to a far country; who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods, to each according to his ability; and straightway took his journey. Unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one. Then he that received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made five more talents; likewise the second also doubled his investment. But the third had digged the ground and hid his lord's money. After a long time the lord of those servants returned, to settle their accounts. So the first came and brought the other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord. He that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents; behold, I have gained two other talents beside them. His lord said unto him; well done good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord. Then came he that had received the one talent, and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed; and I was afraid, and hid thy talent in the earth; lo, thou hast that which is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou slothful and wicked servant; thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed. Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, that at my coming I should have received mine own with interest. And he said unto his servants, Take therefore the talent from him, and give it to him that hath ten talents; for unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

And Jesus said unto his disciples at the Mount of Olives, When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory. Before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from his goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in. Naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

And the King shall say unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then they also shall answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall the King answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these (my brethren), ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.

And it came to pass, when Jesus had finished these sayings, he said unto his disciples, near Jerusalem, Ye know that after two days is (the feast of) the Passover, and the Son of Man is betrayed to be crucified. Then assembled together the chief priests, the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the residence of the high priest Caiaphas; and consulted that they might take Jesus by cunning, and kill him. But they decided against it, saying, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people. Now before the feast of the passover, Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the celestial world of his Father, having loved his own that were in the world unto the end.

After the passover feast was eaten with the Twelve, the apostles of Jesus, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him; and Jesus knowing it, was troubled in spirit. And Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands; and that he was come from God, and was to return to God, arose and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself. After that he poured water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel with which he was girded. When he came to Simon Peter, he said, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter replied, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. Then Simon Peter pleaded, Lord, not my feet only, but my hands and head also. And Jesus said unto him, He that is washed needeth not, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all of you. And after he had washed their feet, and put on his garments, and was set down again, he said unto his apostles, know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well, for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them. I speak not of you all. I know whom I have chosen; but that the scripture may be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth Him that sent me.

When Jesus had thus spoken, he was yet troubled in spirit, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me. Then the apostles looked one toward another, doubting of whom he spake. Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his apostles, whom Jesus loved. Simon Peter beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake. Therefore he that was lying on Jesus' breast asked him, Lord, who is it? Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a sop (morsel, or mouthful), when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped it, he gave to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon. And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then Jesus said unto him, That thou doest, do quickly. But no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him. For some of them thought, that Jesus had said this to Judas to buy the things for the feast, to be given to the poor; for he carried a bag.

When Judas Iscariot was gone out, Jesus said unto the eleven of his apostles, Now is the Son of Man glorified, and God is glorified in him. And if God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him. Little children, yet a little while I am with you. As I said unto the Jews, Ye shall seek me, and whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you. A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you; by this shall all men know that ye are my apostles. The Son of Man goeth as it is written of him; but woe unto that man by whom the Son of Man is betrayed! It had been good for that man if he had not been born. Then Judas, who betrayed him, answered saying, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it; and gave it to his apostles, and said: Take eat; this is my body. Then he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom. And when they had sung an hymn, the brethren and Jesus went out into the Mount of Olives.

Then said Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night; for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered. But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee. Then Simon Peter said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended. And Jesus said unto Peter, Verily I say unto thee, that this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee; and likewise said all the apostles. And Peter said unto him, Lord, thou sayest, Whither I go ye cannot come; whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards. Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake. Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if not so, I would have told you; I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, ye may also be; and whither I go ye know, and the way also. Then Thomas said, Lord, we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way? Jesus said unto him, I am the way, the truth, the life; no man cometh unto the Father, but by me. If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also; but henceforth ye know him, and have seen him. Then said Philip, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus said unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself, but the Father that dwelleth in me, He doth the works. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father. And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, it shall be done. If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you without the Comforter; I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more, but ye see me; and because I live, ye shall live also. In that day ye shall know that I am in the Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, the same loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of the Father; and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Then Judas, not Iscariot, said unto him, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world? Jesus answered, saying, If a man love me, he will keep my words, and the Father will love him; and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him; but he that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings. Behold, the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me. These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, and the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, they shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; and not as the world giveth, give I unto you.

Let not your heart be troubled, neither be ye afraid. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. Now if ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father; for the Father is greater than I. And now I have told you, before it all come to pass; hereafter I will not talk much with you, for the prince of this world (or darkness) cometh, but hath no power over me, but hath power over you. Then said Jesus unto his apostles, Arise, let us go hence.

And while yet in Jerusalem, Jesus spake these words unto his apostles: I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit He taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are cleansed through the word which I have spoken unto you; abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; neither can ye, except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast out as a branch, and is withered; and such are gathered and cast into the fire, and they are burned. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

Herein is the Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you; continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in His love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might be full. This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not the things of his lord.

But I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you; that ye should go and bring fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, He may give it you. These things I command you, that ye love one another.

And if the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; and if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also. Yea, all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not Him that sent me. If I had not come and spoken, they would have remained in the ignorance of sin, hiding it away to justify their wrong; but now they have no cloak for their sin. He that hateth me hateth my Father also; and now they have both seen and hated me and my Father. But, behold, it fulfilleth the word written in their law, They hated me without a cause. And when the Comforter, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father; he shall testify of me. And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

These things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended. Behold, they shall put you out of the synagogues; and the time cometh that they will delight in persecuting you, and whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service. These things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you. But now I go to Him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou? And because I have said these things, sorrow hath filled your heart; nevertheless, I tell you the truth, it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter, even the Spirit of truth which proceedeth from the Father, will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world, of sin, of judgement, and of righteousness. Of sin, because they believe not on me; of judgement, because the prince of this world is judged; of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye see me no more.

I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. But when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, ye will be guided unto truth by him; for he shall not speak of himself, but by the power of the Spirit he shall speak unto you, that which is given to him by me; and he will shew you things to come, and warn the unbelievers. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive of mine, and shew it unto you. All things the Father hath are mine; therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and be my messenger unto you.

A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again, a little while, ye shall see me, because I go to the Father. Then said some of the disciples of Jesus among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again, a little while, and ye shall see me; and because I go to the Father? And Jesus knowing that they were desirous to ask him, said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves that which I have just spoken of? Verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice; and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy. Likewise, a woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come; but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish; for the joy hast replaced it. Ye now have sorrow; but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice; and your joy no man taketh from you. And in that day, ye shall be filled, and ask me no more. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give you. As yet have ye asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

Moreover, these things have I spoken unto you in proverbs; but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in similitudes, but I will shew you plainly of the Father. And in that day, ye shall ask in my name; and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you; for the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me; and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to the Father. Then said his disciples unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speaketh no proverb; now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee; by this we believe that thou camest from God.

Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe? Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. Behold, these things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace; in the world ye shall have tribulation and suffering; but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

After these words, Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; now mayest thou glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him; and this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ (Jesus the Anointed) whom thou hast sent. I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And, now, O Father, glorify thou thine Only Begotten, with the glory which he had with thee before the world was. I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world; thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word. Now they know that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them; and have known surely that I came out from thee, and have believed that thou didst send me. I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine. All mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.

Now I am no longer in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as are we. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in my name; those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled. And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have joy fulfilled in themselves. I have given them thy words, and the world hath hated them; for they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not, Father, that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. Those thou hast given me are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them, I pray, through thy truths, even thy word which is the truth. As thou hast sent me, O Holy Father, into the world, even so have I sent them into the world. And for their sake I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word (testimony). That they all may be one, as thou, O Father, art in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me; that they may be made perfect in one. And that the world may know that thou hast sent thy Son, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

O Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovest the Son before the foundation of the world. O Righteous Father, the world hath not known thee; but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy Name, and will declare it; that the love wherewith thou hast loved me be in them, through thy Son.

Then came Jesus with his disciples unto a place called Gethsemane, a garden of olive trees equipped with a press for squeezing oil from the olives, at the foot of the Mount of Olives, across the Kidron Valley. And here he said unto his disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then said he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death; tarry ye here, and keep awake. And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt. And he returned and found the three asleep. And he said unto Peter, What, could ye not stay awake with me one hour? Stay awake and pray, that ye enter not into temptation; the Spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

Then Jesus went away again, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. And he came and found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy. He left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then he returned to his disciples, and said, Sleep on now, and take your rest; behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise, let us be going; behold, the hour of betrayal is at hand. And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the Twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people. Now, Judas Iscariot, that betrayed him, gave unto them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, the same is he, hold him fast. And immediately he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, master; and kissed him. And Jesus said unto him, Brother, wherefore art thou come? Then came they, and laid hands on Jesus, and took him. Behold, one of them that were with Jesus drew his sword and struck a servant of the high priest, and smote off his ear. But Jesus reproved him, and said, Put away thy sword into its place; for all that take the sword shall perish with the sword. Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall give me more than twelve legions of angels? But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled; therefore this, it must be.

Then Jesus turned around, and spake to the multitude, saying, Are ye come out as against a thief with sword and staves to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me. But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. And as he thus spake, all the disciples forsook him, and fled. And they laid hold on Jesus, and led him away to Caiaphas the high priest (of the Aaronic Order); where the scribes and elders were assembled. But Peter followed him afar off unto the residence of the high priest, and went in; and sat with the servants, to see the end.

Now the chief priests, elders, and all the council sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death; but found none. Though many false witnesses came, yet none they found. At last two false witnesses came; saying, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and build it in three days. And the high priest arose, and said unto Jesus, Answerest thou nothing? what they witness against thee? But Jesus held his peace. And the high priest raised his voice, and said, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus replied, Thou hast said, nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power, and returning in the clouds of heaven.

Counsel to kill Jesus

Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? Behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy. What think ye? And they answered, He is guilty of death. Then they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands, saying, Prophesy unto us, thou Christ, who is he that smote thee? Now Peter sat in the outer chamber with the servants; and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee. But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was with Jesus of Nazareth. And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man. And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech betrayeth thee. Then began he to curse and swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew. And Peter remembered the words of Jesus, when he said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out, and wept bitterly.

When the morning was come, all the chief priests and elders took counsel against Jesus, to put him to death. And they bound him, and led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor. Then Judas Iscariot, who had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought back the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders; and said, I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood. And they said unto him, What is that to us? That is your affair. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and hanged himself. And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful to put these into the treasury, because it is the price of blood. So they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers (and later this potter's field came to be known as the Field of Blood, or Akeldama, on the southern slope of Hinnon valley, just before it joins the Kidron valley). Then was the scripture fulfilled, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom the children of Israel did value; and gave them for the potter's field.

And Jesus stood before the governor; and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said, Thou sayest. And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? Jesus answered not a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly. For some accused him, saying, We found him perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ the King. And others said, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, from Galilee to this place (Jerusalem). And as soon as Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked if the man be a Galilean; and immediately he sent him away unto Herod under whose jurisdiction Galilee was; for at that time Herod was in Jerusalem for the feast of Passover.

When Herod saw Jesus, he was exceedingly glad; for he was desirous to see him for a long season, because he had heard many good things of him; and he hoped to see more miracles done by him. Then he questioned him in many words, but Jesus kept silence, and answered not a word.

And the chief priests and scribes with force began to accuse him. Thereupon Herod and his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him; then arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him back to Pilate. And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together; for before enmity existed between the two.

And Pilate when he had assembled together the chief priests, the elders, and the people; he said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people; and behold, I have examined him before you, and found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him. No, nor yet Herod, although I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. I will therefore chastize him and release him. For of necessity the governor must release one unto the people at the feast. And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this, and release unto us Barabbas, who was cast into prison for sedition, and murder.

Pilate again willing to release Jesus, spake unto them; but they cried, Crucify, crucify him! And Pilate spake to them the third time, saying, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him; I will therefore chastize him and let him go. But they persisted with loud voices, saying, Crucify, crucify him! And the chief priests enticed the multitude into saying that they should ask for Barabbas and destroy Jesus. And as Pilate sat in the judgement seat his wife sent a message unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him. Then Pilate arose, and said unto them, Which of the twain will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ? They said, Barabbas. Pilate said unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? They cried aloud, Let him be crucified. And as the tumult was made, Pilate took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person; be ye my witness: Then answered all the people, His blood be on us, and on our children. Then Pilate gave sentence that it should be done according to the will of the people; and they released the one that caused insurrection in the city, and was accused of murder, and delivered Jesus into the hand of the authorities to be crucified. Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, called Praetorium; and they called together the whole band. And they clothed him with purple, and plaited a crown of thorns, and put it upon his head. And they began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews! And they smote him on the head with a reed (hyssop), and did spit upon him, and bowing their knees worshipped him. Then they began to mock him, and took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him; and led him out to be crucified. And they compelled Simon a Cyrenian, the father of Alexander and Rufus, who passed by, coming out of the country, to bear his cross.

And they brought Jesus unto the place Golgotha, the place of the skull; and gave him vinegar mingled with gall (or myrrh); and when he tasted it, he would not drink. Then they crucified him; and parted his garments, casting lots (meaning they divided his clothes among themselves); that the scripture might be fulfilled, saying, They parted my garments among themselves, and upon my vesture did they cast lot. Moreover Pilate himself wrote a title and put it on the cross, which said: THIS IS JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS; and he wrote it in large letters, in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. For the place where Jesus was to be crucified was near the city. Then the chief priests and the scribes said, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews. Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

And there followed a great multitude, and many women also bewailed and lamented; as Jesus and two thieves (or criminals) were led to Calvary, to be crucified; one of the criminals was to be crucified on his right hand, and the other on his left, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saying, He was numbered with the transgressors. And one of the thieves that was hanged reproached Jesus, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. But the other rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? We indeed justly receive our due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise.

It was the third hour (about 9 a.m.) when they put him upon the cross; and set up over his head this superinscription: THIS IS JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS. And as they passed by him, wagging their heads, they said, Ah, thou that destroyeth the temple, and buildeth it in three days; save thyself, and come down from the cross. Likewise the chief priests and scribes said among themselves, He saved others; himself he cannot save; let the Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. Jesus then said: Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And when the sixth hour (about midday) was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour. And at the ninth hour (about 3 p.m.) Jesus cried: Eloi, Eloi, lama Sabachtani? Which is, being interpreted, My God, My God, Why hast thou forsaken me? (or My God, My God, Why this lesson?)

Then some men that stood there thought he was calling for Elias. And one ran and filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and gave him to drink. And they mocked him, saying, Let us see if Elias will come to save him. There also stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother Mary, and his mother's sister Salome; Mary the wife of Clopas (Cleophas, or Alphaeus), and Mary Magdalene, among other women who followed Jesus from Galilee; to minister unto him. And when Jesus saw his mother and one of his disciples that he loved, standing by, he said unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then he looked at his disciple and said, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her into his own.

After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, said, I thirst. Now there was a vessel full of vinegar, and they dipped a sponge into the vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and gave him to drink. When Jesus had tasted the vinegar, he cried with a loud voice, It is finished; he bowed his head, and yielded up the ghost.

Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour, for the sun was darkened. And it was about the ninth hour when he cried with a loud voice, Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachtani. And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from top to bottom; the earth did quake, the rocks rent, and graves were opened; and many bodies of saints which slept arose. And when the centurion, and his men, watched Jesus, and witnessed all the things that were done unto him, and the earthquake, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God. And the multitude seeing the things which were done, smote their breast and returned.

And certain Jews, because it was the day of preparation for the sabbath, said unto Pilate, that the bodies of the crucified should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day; and besought him that their legs be broken that they might die by hanging, and therefore be taken away. (For according to the law of Moses, if a man has commmitted a sin worthy of death, he was to be put to death, and hanged upon a tree or stake; and his body was not to remain all night upon the stake, but must be buried the selfsame day.) So the soldiers came, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs. Then one of the soldiers with a spear pierced Jesus' side, and at once blood and water gushed forth. And it was done that he that saw bare record, that it was true, that ye might believe. And all these things were done, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saying, A bone of him shall not be broken; and they shall look on him whom they pierced.

After this, Joseph of Arimathaea, being a disciple of Jesus who also waited for the Kingdom, besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus. And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead; and calling the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead; and when he knew of the centurion, he commanded that the body be given to Joseph of Arimathaea. Also with Joseph came Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, a member of the Sanhedrin, bringing with him a hundred-pound roll of myrrh and aloes, with which to prepare Jesus' body for burial. And together they took the body of Jesus, and wound it in fine linen cloth with the spices, in the manner of the Jews to bury; and they laid him in Joseph's own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock; and they rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed. But Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Joses sat over against the sepulchre. And other women also, that came from Galilee, to minister unto him, beheld the sepulchre wherein never a man before was laid, and saw that his body was laid therein.

The next day, that followed the day of preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came to Pilate, saying, Sir, we remember that the deceiver said, while he was yet alive, In three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day; lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto people, He is risen from the dead; so our last error shall be worse than the first. Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch; go your way, make as sure as ye can.

So they went and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

The first day of the week (Sunday), early in the morning, the women from Galilee returned to the sepulchre with Mary Magdalene and the other Mary. Behold an angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and the earth quaked; and he rolled back the stone from the door of the sepulchre, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow. And the guards of the sepulchre trembled with fear, and became as dead. Then the angel said unto the women, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him; lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy.

And when arrived other women of Galilee, that brought with them prepared spices and ointments; and saw the stone rolled away from the sepulchre; they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And as they stood there in amazement, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments. And as the women in fear bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto the women, Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but he is risen; remember how he spake unto you in Galilee, saying, The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. They remembered his words. And they departed from the sepulchre; and Mary Magdalene, Joanna, Mary the mother of James, and other women with them, went unto the eleven apostles, and the rest of the disciples, and told all these things. But their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not. Then arose Simon Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre, and the others didst follow him, and one of the favorite disciples of Jesus outran Peter, and reached first to the sepulchre. Then he stooped down, and looked in; and saw the linen clothes laid by themselves, yet went not in. Then arrived Simon Peter, and went into the sepulchre, and saw the linen clothes lie; and the napkin that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself. Then entered the other disciple also into the sepulchre; and he saw, and believed. For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead. Then the other disciples also went in, and witnessed the resurrection of Jesus.

Now, behold, Mary Magdalene stood outside the sepulchre weeping; and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre. And she saw two angels in white sitting, one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain. And they said unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She replied, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. And when she had thus spoken, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus. And Jesus said unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? Whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardner, said, Sir, if thou have carried him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. Jesus said unto her, Mary. She lifted up her face, and said, Rabboni, which is to say Master. Jesus said unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; to my God, and your God. Then Mary Magdalene went and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord; and that he had spoken these things unto her.

Then the same day, in the evening, being the first day of the week (which was Sunday), the disciples had assembled themselves in a building and shut the door; for the fear of the persecuting Jews; and there stood Jesus in their midst, and spake, Peace unto you! And when he had so said, he showed them his hands and side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord. And Jesus said unto them again, Peace unto you! As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and said, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whosoever's sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever's sins ye retain, they are retained.

But Thomas, one of the Twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when appeared Jesus in the assembly of the disciple. And when the other disciples said unto him, We have seen the Lord; he said unto them, Except that I see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. Behold, after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them; then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace unto you! And said he unto Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand and thrust into my side; and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered in amazement, saying, My Lord and my God. Jesus said unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. After this, Jesus showed himself to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias in this manner: There were gathered together Simon Peter, Thomas called Didymus, Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples. And Simon Peter said unto them, I go a fishing. They said unto him, we all go with thee. They went forth and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing. When the morning was come, Jesus stood on the shore; but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus said unto them, Children have ye any meat? They answered him, No. And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now were not able to draw it for the abundance of fishes. Then recognized the disciple whom Jesus loved, and said unto Peter, It is the Lord. When Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt up his fisher's coat, and dove into the sea, and swam to the shore. Then the other disciples followed in a little boat, dragging the net full of great fishes.

As soon as they reached ashore, they saw a fire of coal there, and fish laid thereon, and bread set aside. Jesus said unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught. And Simon Peter went up and drew the net to the shore, an hundred and fifty-three fishes, yet the net was unbroken. Jesus said unto them, Come dine. And none of the disciples dared to ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord. He then gave them fishes and bread. This was the third time that the Lord Jesus showed himself to his disciples, after he was risen from the dead; meaning, after his resurrection.

When they had dined, Jesus said to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me more than these? He said, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus said unto him, Feed my lambs! He said to him again, Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me? Peter replied, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus said unto him, Feed my sheep! He said to him the third time, Simon, son of Jonah, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved, because he said to him the third time, Lovest thou me? And Peter said, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus said unto him, Feed my other sheep! Verily, verily I say unto thee, when thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, and walkedst whithersoever thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hand, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not. This spake Jesus concerning his later ministry in Rome; and also signifying by what death he would glorify God. And Jesus said unto him, Follow me. Then Peter, turning about, saw John, the disciple whom Jesus loved, following; this was the same disciple (even John) that leaned on his breast at the last supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee? When Peter saw that disciple, he said to Jesus, Lord, what shall this man do? Jesus said unto Peter, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me. Then went his saying abroad among the brethren, that the disciples shall not taste death, till they see the kingdom of God; yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, What is that to thee?

And it came to pass, the eleven apostles went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them; and when they saw him, they worshipped him, but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake to them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. And teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end.

He was also seen by others, by over five hundred brethren at an assembly; and by Peter and James on other occasions. And while he was yet in Jerusalem, two of his disciples Cleophas (or Clopas) husband of Mary, and another, as they travelled to the village called Emmaus, about sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, they talked to each other concerning all the things that had happened, on the first day of the week. And as they talked and reasoned together, behold, Jesus drew himself near unto them; and said, What manner of communications are these that ye have one with another, as ye walk, and are sad? But they recognized him not, for their eyes were restrained, that they should not know him. And Cleophas answered, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass in these days? And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people. And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him. But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel; besides, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre. And when they found not his body, they came, saying they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive. And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found even so as the women had said; but him they saw not. Then Jesus said unto them, O ye simpletons, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken, ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And ought he not to have expounded unto them, beginning with Moses and all the prophets, the things concerning himself?

And as they drew near the village of Emmaus, Jesus made as though he would continue farther; but they constrained him, saying, Abide with us, for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he tarried with them. And as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. Their eyes were now opened, and they recognized him; immediately he vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us by the way; and while he opened to us the scriptures? And the twain rose up, and returned to Jerusalem. There they found the eleven gathered together, and with them other disciples; and they said, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared also to Simon (Peter, or Cephas). And they told them what things were done in the way; and how they recognized him in breaking of bread. And as they thus spake, Jesus stood in the midst of them, and said, Peace unto you! But they were terrified and affrighted; and supposed that they had seen a spirit (or ghost). And Jesus said unto them, Why are ye troubled? And why do such doubts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and feet. And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat (or food)? And they gave him a piece of broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And he took it, and did eat before them.

And Jesus said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which are written in the law of Moses, and the prophets, and the psalms, concerning me. Then was their understanding opened, that they might understand the scriptures. And he said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it was necessary for Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Thus the first principles and ordinances of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ were formulated, and later established, namely: Faith, Repentance; Baptism by immersion (to symbolize the death and resurrection, the agreement or covenant to abide in the gospel, the remission of sins, the confirmation of records that are kept in the Kingdom); and the gift of the Holy Ghost by laying on of hands.

Then Jesus said unto his disciples, And, behold, I send the promise of the Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endowed with the power from on high. Go ye into all the world; and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues (languages); they shall take up serpents; and if they partake of any deadly thing, it will not harm them; and they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

And Jesus said unto his disciples at the Mount of Olives, Behold, John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. Then they asked him, saying, Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power, after the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me; both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, Samaria, and the uttermost parts of the earth. And Jesus led his disciples out as far as to the Mount of Olives, near Bethany; and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them; and when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; and said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so return in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven (referring to the Second Coming of Christ).

And as he parted from them, he ascended into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. His disciples worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy; and were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs which followed. Many other signs and miracles did Jesus truly perform in the presence of his disciples, all of which are not written; but these have been recorded, that all men might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and by believing they might have life through him.

Thus Jesus ascended to heaven, the fortieth day of his resurrected living; and a new era in the history of mankind began ten days later, on the fiftieth day from Nisan 16 (the day when the barley sheaf was offered by the high priest; and Jesus was resurrected); on the day of Pentecost, or the Festival of Harvest, Sivan 6, 33 A.D. It was on this day of Pentecost that the Holy Spirit was poured out on about one hundred and twenty disciples.

Now, many notable events of history are associated with this Mount of Olives; which is a chain of rounded limestone hills, having four summits, located on the eastern side of Jerusalem. The Mount of Olives extends about a mile from northeast to southwest. And anciently this ridge was covered with palm, myrtle, olive trees, and winepresses. For it was here that king David, barefoot and weeping, climbed the mount as he fled from his son Absalom. King Solomon built high places for false (idolatrous) worship there; which king Josiah later brake in pieces, and cut down the groves (asherim). And it was near or on the Mount of Olives that Jesus Christ often met with his disciples in the Garden of Gethsemane. When at Jerusalem, Jesus and his disciples usually spent the night at Bethany, on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, in the home of Martha, Mary, and Lazarus. And from Bethphage, Jesus, seated on a colt of an ass, began his triumphal ride over the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem. It was on this selfsame mount that he explained to his disciples what the signs of his coming, (or Second Coming) shall be. And it was on the Mount of Olives, that after his resurrection, Jesus ascended into heaven.

And it came to pass, that the disciples of Jesus returned to Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, which was a sabbath day's journey (on foot) from Jerusalem. When they were inside the city, they went up into an upper room; where abode Peter, James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, Thomas, Bartholomew, Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus; and with his brethren. And it came to pass, that Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, the number of men that were gathered in that assembly was about one hundred and twenty; and said, Men and brethren, the scripture must needs have been fulfilled, concerning Judas (Iscariot), which was a party to them that took Jesus; for the field Akeldama (or Aceldama), or the Field of Blood, was purchased with the wages of iniquity. For it is written in the book of Psalms (69): Let their habitation be desolate, and let none dwell in their tents; for they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded. And let his bishopric be taken by another. Wherefore, of those men which have accompanied us all the time, that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us; beginning from the baptism of John, unto the day he was taken up from us, one must be ordained to be a Witness with us of his resurrection.

Thereupon, they picked two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus; and Matthias, to fill the vacancy caused by Judas. And they prayed, Thou, Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, shew us which of these two thou hast chosen, to be called of God. And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was chosen to be numbered with the eleven apostles.

Then the day of Pentecost, or the Festival of Harvest, arrived, which was on the fiftieth day after the barley sheaf was offered by the high priest, and Jesus was resurrected; which was fifty days from Nisan 16, or on Sivan 6, 33 A.D. And they were all gathered together with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house of assembly; and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak in other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and they were perplexed, because every man heard them speak in his own language. In amazement they said one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born? The Parthians, Medes, Elamites, Mesopotamians, Judaeans, Cappadocians; and the dwellers of Pontus, Asia Minor, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, Cyrene, and parts of Libya; Cretans (or Caphtorites) and Arabians; Jews and proselytes alike, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God. And they were all amazed; but some doubted, saying, These men are full of new wine!

But Peter stood up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judaea, all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words; for these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day (about 9:00 a.m.). But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel, that it shall come to pass in the last days, said God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions; and your old men shall dream dreams. And on my servants and handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy. And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath — blood, fire, and vapor of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and moon into blood; before that great and notable day of the Lord come.

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles, wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves know. Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain; whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death; because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. For David spake concerning the Lord, saying, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is at the right hand of God, that I shall not be moved. Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover, also my flesh shall rest in hope; because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One (Jesus Christ) to see corruption; thou hast made known to me the ways of life, thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

Men and brethren, let me therefore freely speak unto you of the patriarch David; that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. And being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he didst speak of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul not be left in hell, neither did his flesh see corruption. It is this Jesus the Christ that God hath raised up, of which we all are Witnesses. Therefore being at the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath brought forth all that ye now see and hear. For David was not ascended into the heavens; but said himself, The Lord God said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool. Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made the selfsame Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

Moreover, before his ascension, Jesus not only preached the kingdom of God, but commanded his disciples that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father; for John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. And after the Holy Ghost is come upon you, ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, in all Judaea, in Samaria; and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

Now when the congregation heard this, they were pricked in their hearts, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. And with many other words did Peter testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this crooked generation.

After this they gladly received his word; and the same day about three thousand souls were baptized into the church. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and their fellowship; in breaking bread, and in prayers. And all that believed were together, and had all things common; they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need; and they continued daily with one accord in the temple; breaking bread from house to house, and did eat their meat (food) with gladness and singleness of heart; praising God and having favor with all people. And daily the Lord added to the church such as should be saved. And the fear came upon every soul, as many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

Now the principles of Faith and Repentance; and the ordinances of Baptism by immersion for remission of sin, and the Gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, were utilized by the apostles of Jesus Christ in bringing into the fold new converts. Faith is the assurance of things hoped for; the confirmation of things unseen. It underlies visible conditions, and guarantees a future reward; it is the assured expectation of the things hoped for; the evident demonstration of truths unseen; it is the bringing forth of evidence that demonstrates something contrary to what appears to be. The evident demonstration or the evident conviction is so powerful in righteousness, that faith is said to be it.

Testimony of the Doctrine of Faith

Faith, therefore, is the basis for hope and evidence for conviction concerning unseen or sublime truths. All truths of the holy scripture constitute the true "faith" of the believer or the faithful. Fulness of Faith, therefore, is based on the complete Word of God, including all the truths of God; revealed to man in different dispensations, in different times, in different places, to different people, under different circumstances.

Faith is based on solid evidence; for the visible creative works testify to the existence of an invisible Creator and Maker. The actual events of Jesus' life and ministry identify him as the Son of God; and God's promise and record of providing for his earthly creatures serves as a true basis for believing that he will certainly provide for his servants. Moreover, the reliance on God's Word, and accurate fulfilling of its prophecies, instills confidence in the realization of all His promises. Thus, in many ways, faith follows the thing heard or seen. So faith is not the belief or readiness of belief on slight evidence. For the person who ridiculeth faith, hath faith in someone else, or in himself. In the same manner, the scientist hath faith in the principles of his scientific study; for he baseth new experiments on past findings and discoveries, and looks for new things on the basis of those things which are already established as true. The farmer also prepares his soil and sows the seed; expecting that the seed will sprout, and that plants will grow as they receive the needed care, moisture and sunshine. Therefore it is written, Faith in the stability of the natural laws governing the universe actually constitutes a foundation for man's plans and activities.

Had not Abraham genuine faith in God's divine justice when he offered up his only son of promise Isaac? Were not the reproductive powers of Sarah and Abraham restored? And did not these things strengthen their faith in resurrection? Yea, Abraham had a firm basis for faith in a resurrection. Also, Abraham's family line was to continue through Sarah forever; and Isaac was brought forth into the world for this purpose. In the same manner, those who came or were brought to Jesus to be healed, had genuine conviction in whatsoever they heard about the powerful works of Jesus. On the basis of what they saw or heard, they were confirmed that Jesus could heal them also. Moreover, they were acquainted with God's Word; and were familiar with the miracles performed by the prophets in times past. Upon hearing Jesus, some were convinced that he was the prophet, and others said that he was the Christ. And on occasions, Jesus said to those that were healed, Your faith hath made you well. Had those persons not exercised faith in Jesus, they would not have sought him, and therefore would not have received healing for themselves.

And while the faith healers of the time could not heal, but pretended to heal only those who had strong faith, Jesus, on the contrary, healed all who came to him; without any consideration of the degree of faith one possessed; each was healed according to his disease; for Jesus performed these healings as a witness, to establish faith. But in his home country, where much unfaithfulness and persecution was experienced, Jesus chose not to perform many mighty works, because people refused to listen and were unworthy.

Faith is a fruitage of God's Spirit; and those who lack faith are rejected of the Lord, Jesus Christ. And in order to be acceptable to God, it is necessary to accept Jesus Christ; and only this makes possible a righteous standing with God. The Christian, or true faith, is not static, but grows. Remember the request of Jesus' disciples, when they said, Lord, give us more faith! And Jesus did provide them the foundation for increased faith; for he supplied them with greater evidence and understanding on which to base their faith. By faith man can move mountains; and overcome all obstacles which would hinder his service to God. Faith serves as a shield against the fiery darts of the Devil; and trials result in strengthening faith; and through faith man becomes conqueror of the world.

But faith cannot be taken lightly or for granted, because lack of faith is the sin, which puts a snare upon our Soul, and binds us to the false and deathly ways of the world. Therefore to maintain and sustain a firm faith requires putting up a hard fight to guard it; resisting men and ideas that could plunge one into mortality and works of the flesh; avoiding the snares of the temporal world (materialism); and looking intently at our Savior and Redeemer, Chief Agent, and Perfector of our faith, the Lord Jesus Christ. And no salvation for man is possible without faith in Jesus Christ. Faith is also kindled by hearing the testimony of those who have faith. Miracles do not produce faith, but strong faith is developed by obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Faith comes by righteousness, although miracles do confirm one's faith. The perfect character of the Lord has been revealed unto man; which included the possession in fulness all the attributes of love, knowledge, justice, mercy, constancy, power, glory, and all other things which come out of righteousness; so that man may place confidence in him, without reservation.

Faith is a principle of action and power; and by it one can command the elements, heal the sick, or influence any number of events. It is by faith that one obtains a remission of sins, and eventually can stand in the presence of God. However, all true faith must be based upon correct knowledge and understanding, otherwise it cannot produce the desired outcome. Faith in Jesus Christ is the first principle of the gospel; it is more than a belief, because it moves its possessor to some physical or mental action. A lack of faith leads one to despair, which ariseth out of iniquity.

It is written, that faith is a gift that must be sought after, nurtured, protected; until it grows from a tiny seed to a great tree. The effects of true faith in Jesus Christ include: actual knowledge that the course of life one is pursuing is acceptable to the Lord; qualifying the person to receive all the blessings of the Lord in this life; and assuring the same of personal salvation in the world to come. Where there is true faith there are miracles, visions, dreams, healings, and all the gifts of God which he gives to his saints and holy men. And such is the meaning of the word Faith, as interpreted by the primitive as well as latter-day church of Jesus Christ.

Testimony of the Doctrine of Repentance

The second principle of Christian doctrine, Repentance, denotes a change of mind, or a fresh view toward God, or oneself, or the world. Since all men are born into conditions of mortality, repentance also means a turning of heart and will to God; and renunciation of sin to which we are naturally inclined. There can be no progress in the Spiritual salvation, for all accountable persons are stained by sin; and must be cleansed in order to enter the kingdom of heaven. Repentance is a commandment of God. And it was the preaching of repentance by John the Baptist, which prepared the way for the ministry of Jesus.

Now, the cause making repentance necessary is sin, transgression, iniquity, or error of man; in other words, it is failure to meet God's righteous requirements. And since all mankind is born in Adam, or the natural man, the lower or primeval self, all Adam's descendants have had need of repentance. And repentance, followed by conversion, is a requirement for man's being reconciled to God. What is reconciliation? It is to bring back into harmony, or cause to be friendly again; to adjust and settle differences. Jesus' instructions are that one should first make peace with his brother (fellowman), before presenting an offering on the altar. And one can be reconciled with God by means of the sacrifice of the Only Begotten Son, or Jesus Christ.

It is written, that such reconciliation with God is necessary, because an alienation, a separation, a lack of harmony, and a state of enmity has existed; and mankind has been in a state of enmity toward God. And since God's standard is one of perfect righteousness, he cannot view sin with favor; for it is the violation of his express will. Although he is gracious and merciful, he does not extend mercy toward those who break his law, and repent not; for unless justice is done, mercy cannot be extended. The relationship between God and sinful man can be considered as a legal one, as that of a sovereign in his judicial capacity; and a criminal who has violated his laws, and risen up against his authority; and who is therefore treated as an enemy. And this was the situation into which mankind was brought, due to the inheritance of sin from their father Adam.

Therefore, it is only by and through the ransom sacrifice of Jesus Christ that full reconciliation with God is possible; he is the way, and no one comes to the Father, except through him. His death served as propitiatory sacrifice for the sins of man; and that sacrifice appeased (or satisfied) the demands of God's perfect justice; by providing just and righteous basis for pardoning sins; that mankind be reconciled with God.

Thus, through Christ, God made it possible to reconcile again to himself all other things by making peace, through the sacrifice of Jesus the Christ. Thereby persons once alienated and enemies, due to having their minds on wicked works, could now be reconciled by means of that one great sacrifice by Jesus. The Lord could now declare righteous those whom he had selected to become his spiritual sons and daughters; they would no longer be subject to the powers of the adversary, since they are now fully reconciled with God.

Repentance may be in regard to one's life's path, a path that has been contrary to God's purpose and will, although has been in harmony with the world under the control of the adversary. Or it might be in regard to a particular wrong one has committed; a wrong thought, a wrong word, or a wrong deed. Repentance may also be on the part of those already having cherished a favorable relationship with God, having gone astray and suffered the loss of God's favor and blessings. First Israel became a covenant nation, a congregation of priests and a holy nation, chosen from among all the nations; then came Christianity into a righteous standing before God, through the new covenant mediated by Jesus. In such cases, for those who went astray, repentance led to the restoration of their right relationship with God, and all His blessings thereof. But the Lord's servants need not be in a continual state of remorse due to their errors arising from this imperfection; for the Lord is merciful and recognizes the fleshly weakness of his servants. If they walk in meekness, humility, long-suffering, patience, and in service of God, they may be joyful.

Moreover, repentance may be on a collective as well as individual basis; as we can see that Jonah's preaching caused the entire city of Nineveh, from the king down to the least one of them, to repent; the entire congregation of returned Israelites, under Ezra's prompting, acknowledged collective guilt before God, expressing repentance through their princely representatives. In the same manner, the congregation at Corinth expressed repentance over having tolerated among them a practicer of gross wrongdoing. Ignorance or forgetfulness of the Lord's will and His commandments is a barrier to repentance. For repentance involves both mind and heart, all wrongs must be recognized; and this requires an acknowledgement that God's standard and judgements are righteous. It is for this reason the Lord mercifully sendeth prophets and preachers, calling persons to repentance. God's Word, written or spoken, is the means for persuading and convincing mankind of the rightness of God's way, and the wrongness of their own ways, and calling all men everywhere to repent; for God's law is perfect.

King David spake of teaching the transgressors of God's law that they may repent, and turn to Him. Repentance leadeth to an accurate knowledge of truth, which enables one to return to his proper senses, out of the snares of the Devil. Therefore, the call to repentance may be given to the congregation of God's people, as well as to those who have gone astray. The task of the prophets of Israel has always been to convince and warn the congregation of its sins, transgressions, iniquities, and ways of error. The message of John the Baptist and Jesus also was the call to repentance on the part of the Jews; and Jesus stripped away from their people and priests the cloak of self-righteousness and hypocrisy; of observance of man-made traditions and precepts of man, and brought to their attention their sinful state.

For repentance, then, one must first see and hear with understanding, with receptive heart. It is said that not only does the mind perceive and grasp what the ears hear and the eyes see, but those that repent get the sense of it with their hearts. Therefore, repentance implies not only an intellectual recognition of the wrong, but a heart-felt acceptance of this fact. If there is faith and love for God in that person's heart, there will be a sincere regret and sadness over the wrong which has been committed. And appreciation for God's goodness and greatness will make the transgressor feel keen remorse at having brought reproach on His name. It is confirmed that the repentant feels broken at heart, crushed and lowly, contrite in spirit, and trembling at Word; he comes quivering to the Lord, beseeching Him for His mercy. As did David, when he acted unwisely in the matter of the national census, and his heart began to beat him.

Therefore, there must be definite rejection of the bad course; a heartfelt hating of it, an abhorrence of it. For the ancients have written that the fear of the Lord means the hating of the bad; including, self-exaltation, pride, false belief and perverse mouth. Along with this there must be a loving of righteousness, and a firm commitment to adhere to the righteous course thenceforth. Without this duality of hatred of bad and love of righteousness, there will be no genuine force to repentance, nor following through with true conversion. As in the case of king Rehoboam, son of Solomon, who repented when Shemaiah the prophet told him that the Lord had left Israel in the hand of Shishak king of Egypt; saying, The Lord is righteous! But his heart was not firmly established in the Lord; and he did that which was bad.

The scriptures declare two types of sadness; namely, worldly sadness, and Spiritual sadness. The sadness of the world does not stem from faith and love of God and righteousness; but it ariseth out of failure, disappointment, loss, punishment for wrongdoing, and shame; and is often accompanied by or produces bitterness, resentment, envy, and death; and leads to no lasting reward, improvement, or hope. Worldly sadness mourns the unpleasant consequences of sin, but not the sin itself and its reproach toward God. Was not Cain divinely warned to repent of his evil thoughts, and turn to doing good, so that sin should not win over him? But Cain did not repent of his murderous thoughts toward his brother Abel; which led him to use false words to deceive him, which in turn led him to commit the murderous deed. When questioned by God, he gave devious reply; and only when sentence was pronounced on him did he express regret. But this regret or sadness does not constitute repentance; for his regret was over the severity of punishment, not over the wrong committed. He thus showed that he originated of the Wicked One.

In the same manner this worldly sadness was displayed by Esau when he learned that his brother Jacob had received the blessing of the firstborn, for he had sold his sacred birthright to Jacob, Esau cried out in a loud voice and bitter manner, with tears, seeking change of mind on the part of his father; he regretted his loss, not his ignorance or appetitive life of the natural man, which caused him to despise the birthright. Judas Iscariot also, after betraying Jesus, felt remorse; and tried to return the bribe which he had bargained for, and thereafter committed suicide by hanging. The consequences of wrong done by him, and certainly of divine judgement, overwhelmed him, and caused his death. Although he felt remorse of guilt, despair, and desperation, he expressed not godly sadness that leads to repentance. He sought not God, but the leaders of the Jews to confess his sin and guilt, by returning the money, with delusion of obtaining release from the consequence of his crime. Peter Simon, on the other hand, when he denied the Lord three times before the cock crowed, as Jesus had reprovingly foretold, wept bitterly from a broken heart, and truly repented in his heart for not believing the words of Jesus; therefore his standing with God was restored, and he became reconciled with God. Fasting, weeping and wailing were considered proper, only when combined with true repentance of heart. Therefore regret, remorse and tears are not the measure of true repentance, but the thoughts of the heart determine the matter.

Therefore a repentant person must humble himself, and seek God's forgiveness; and not escape into the snares of self-righteousness and self-justification. And those who say, We have no sin, are deceiving themselves and misleading others; and the truth is not in them. But if they confess their sins in repentance, the Lord doth forgive their sins and cleanse them from all unrighteousness. He that hideth his transgressions will not succeed, but he that confesseth, and forsaketh them shall be saved. This prayer of Daniel serves as an example of a sincere confession:

> And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gotten thee renown, as at this day; we have sinned, we have done wickedly. O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee; let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, thy holy mountain; because of our sins, and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people are become a reproach to all that are about us. Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications; and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake. O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; and open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by thy name; for we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousness, but for thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for thine own's sake, O my God; for thy city and thy people are known by thy name.

The founding fathers of the Church during Jesus' time counselled that Christians may openly confess their sins to one another, and pray for one another. But such is not confession because people serve as mediators for man with God, for Christ alone fills that role by virtue of his great sacrifice. No man, of himself, can actually right the wrong done toward God, on their own behalf, or on behalf of others, being unable to provide needed atonement.

Now, atonement means to be at one with; by satisfactory reparation of an offense or injury; it is the redeeming effect of Christ's birth, suffering, death, and resurrection; it is reconciliation between God and man, through an acceptable sacrifice. Atonement exemplifies man's unity with God, through sacrifice; so that he might be able to cleanse himself from inherited sin. Adam who was cast out from the presence of the Lord for his transgression, bequeathed sin, mortality, and death to his offspring; and Adam's descendants therefore came under condemnation unto death. For God's just law required life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot; or equal compensation thereof. Sin is the cause of estrangement, therefore the purpose of atonement is to correct or overcome the consequences of sin. Jesus Christ, as the Only Begotten Son of God, the least sinful person on earth living in that day, was the only one capable of making an atonement for mankind. By his selection and foreordination in the Grand Council before he was formed; his divine Sonship, his life of purity, the shedding of his blood in the Garden of Gethsemane, his death upon the cross, his resurrection from the grave; all these qualified him to make a perfect atonement for all mankind. It is because of Jesus' great sacrifice that we can claim that, as in Adam all shall die, in Christ shall all be made alive; or as in the lower self all shall die, in the Higher Self all shall live in immortality and eternal life.
